DKS welcomes ECI order on voter-roll re-verification

CM said the directive addresses bulk Form-7 complaints and calls for camps to help first-time voters apply through Forms 6 and 7.

BENGALURU

Chief Minister D.K. Shivakumar on Friday welcomed the Election Commission of India's direction to state election officials to undertake a special exercise to re-verify electoral rolls and ensure that eligible voters left out during the Special Intensive Revision (SIR) are included.

Shivakumar said the ECI's directive covered voters categorised as absent, shifted, deceased and duplicate, besides others requiring verification. He said the move followed the protest staged by him and Congress leaders outside the State Chief Electoral Officer's office on Thursday.

The Chief Minister said the directive would also address complaints concerning bulk filing of Form-7 applications. He said special camps should be organised for first-time voters and to facilitate applications under Forms 6 and 7.

Shivakumar alleged that applications had been filed seeking deletion of votes belonging to vulnerable sections, including Dalits and minorities. These allegations have been rejected by BJP state president B.Y. Vijayendra, who said BJP workers were bringing suspected irreg-

NO ONE CAN ERASE GANDHI'S LEGACY, SAYS CM

Chief Minister D.K. Shivakumar said Mahatma Gandhi's name and ideology could never be erased as they had been accepted across the world. Speaking at Gandhi Jayanti programmes in Bengaluru on Friday, he described Gandhi as the soul of India and a global messenger of peace and non-violence. Shivakumar urged the younger generation to embrace Gandhi's principles of truth, peace, non-violence and self-reliance. Kariyappa, Shivakumar said his example had inspired him to enter politics and dedicate himself to public service.

‘This will be the last push’: Pilot Smit Machchhar tells PM Modi

NEW DELHI

Captain Smit Machchhar, who was seriously injured while fighting off his co-pilot aboard a flydubai flight, told Prime Minister Narendra Modi that he made one final effort to reach the cockpit door after sensing the aircraft was descending.

Speaking to Modi during a 10-minute video call from an Abu Dhabi hospital on Friday, Machchhar said he had been wounded and was lying on the cockpit floor when he realised the aircraft was going down.

“I told myself: this will be the last push, Smit, do it, the door is right there,” he told the Prime Minister.

The Mumbai-based pilot said he had been flying for 17 years and had served as a captain for 11 years. He managed to open the cockpit door, after which passengers entered and helped overpower the attacker.

The flight, carrying 170 passengers, was flying from Dubai to Tel Aviv when the co-pilot allegedly attacked Machchhar and attempted to take control of the aircraft. The plane subsequently plunged about 14,000 feet in 30 seconds before passengers and crew intervened.

A reserve crew later landed the aircraft safely at Tabuk in Saudi Arabia. Machchhar is undergoing treatment in Abu Dhabi for serious injuries.

Modi praised the pilot's courage and presence of mind, saying his actions had saved many lives. Machchhar thanked authorities in Saudi Arabia and the UAE for his medical care.

He also said reciting the Hanuman Chalisa gave him strength during the ordeal.

Congo Ebola outbreak death toll crosses 4,000 amid containment challenges

BUNIA

Congo's Ebola outbreak has claimed more than 4,000 lives, with authorities facing difficulties in containing the rapidly spreading virus, health officials said.

The Health Ministry reported 4,018 deaths among 8,300 confirmed cases, meaning nearly half of those infected have died. The outbreak, declared on May 15, is caused by the rare Bundibugyo virus, for which there is no known treatment or vaccine.

The World Health Organization has raised concerns over the virus spreading rapidly into new health zones, placing additional pressure on already limited medical resources.

The Africa Centres for Disease Control and Prevention said confirmed cases were declining, but cautioned that the reduction could be linked to insecurity and difficulties in reaching communities in some hotspots.

Efforts to contain the outbreak have also been hampered by mistrust of health workers and government authorities. Some residents have reportedly dismissed Ebola as a hoax, while distrust has been fuelled by concerns over the government's handling of previous outbreaks and allegations of corruption.

Tensions escalated this week after Marie-Célestin Karondwa, a local official of Congo's ruling Union for Democracy and Social Progress party, was attacked at his home in Butembo, an Ebola hotspot in North Kivu province. His house was set on fire and he later died in hospital.

Authorities launched a village-centred response last month to improve cooperation with communities and strengthen containment measures. However, insecurity and resistance among residents continue to pose challenges to health workers attempting to trace cases and prevent further transmission.

FIRs filed against BJP leaders over voter deletion claims

BELAGAVI

Police have registered FIRs in Belagavi, Bidar and Mysuru following complaints over alleged irregularities involving Form-7 applications during the ongoing Special Intensive Revision (SIR) of electoral rolls.

In Belagavi, an FIR was registered against Karnataka BJP leader Ravi Patil and others following a complaint alleging an attempt to delete the names of 198 Muslim voters from the electoral roll.

The case was registered at Belagavi Market police station on September 30 based on a complaint by Meerasab Sanadi, who was working as a Booth Level Agent in Ward 12 of the Belagavi North Assembly constituency.

According to the FIR, Sanadi alleged that Patil, Shankar Beerappa Naik, Prashant Deepak Mundinmani and 20-25 others allegedly conspired to target voters belonging to the Muslim community. In Bidar, an FIR was registered on October 1 after Mohammed Ateeq Ahmed alleged that 3,244 voters were falsely shown as shifted or absent through Form-7 applications. The case names 32 accused persons.

In Mysuru, a complaint led to an FIR against local BJP leaders and others over allegations that Form-7 applications containing false information were submitted against the complainant, his family and 28 other voters.

Sacrifices of great leaders must be remembered by everyone: CESC Ramesh

MYSURU

The freedom, rights and dignity we enjoy today are the result of the sacrifices and struggles of countless great leaders and freedom fighters and remembering their contributions is the duty of every citizen, said MLA and CESC Chairman Ramesh Bandisiddegowda.

Speaking at a programme organised at the Chamundeshwari Electricity Supply Corporation (CESC) here on Friday to mark the birth anniversaries of Mahatma Gandhi and former Prime Minister Lal Bahadur Shastri, he said Gandhi played a leading role in organising and guiding the freedom movement. Through the principles of truth and non-violence, Gandhi gave a new direction to India's freedom struggle and became an example for the world. India is the only country to have achieved freedom through the path of non-violence. It was unfortunate that people were forgetting the great leaders who fought for the country amid their busy and self-centred lives.

The chairman said freedom did not come to them easily. They are living as a free nation today because of the sacrifices, struggles and contributions of many freedom fighters. It is their responsibility to carry their ideals forward and pass them on to the next generation. If every person makes even a small contribution to society, the ideals and dreams of great leaders can be fulfilled. "Everyone should perform their duties honestly and work for the welfare of society. This is the true way to pay tribute to great leaders like Mahatma Gandhi and Lal Bahadur Shastri," he added.

Earlier, Ramesh Bandisiddegowda, along with CESC officials and staff, offered floral tributes to the portraits of Mahatma Gandhi and Lal Bahadur Shastri.

"Don't send parents to old-age homes; care for them with love"

MYSURU

Parents should never be insulted or abandoned in old-age homes, but should instead be cared for with love and affection, said Sanjay Kumar Biradar, national award winner for My Name Is Khan.

Speaking as the chief guest on the fourth day of the Yuva Sambhrama programme held at the Kuvempu Open-Air Theatre here, he said mother and the motherland are greater than heaven. Rather than visiting thousands of temples and performing rituals, he said, people could make their lives meaningful by respecting their parents, seeking their blessings and caring for them at home.

Biradar urged the youths not to waste their valuable time on social media, photographs and reels. Mobile phones should be used only when necessary, and youngsters should focus on building their future.

Recalling Swami Vivekananda's message to rise, persevere and never stop until the goal is achieved, Biradar called upon youngsters to work towards nation-building by becoming IAS and IPS officers, engineers, doctors or social workers. The younger generation should develop discipline, determination and a sense of responsibility towards their families and society.

Mysuru bursts into colour as Chitrasanthe opens

Yathindra picks up the brush to launch 2-day art fair

CH NEWS, MYSURU

Mysuru’s Dasara spirit got a colourful artistic touch on Friday as Urban Development and Mysuru District In-charge Minister Dr. Yathindra Siddaramaiah inaugurated a two-day Chitrasanthe (Art Fair) by painting a picture at the venue.

The art fair is being held in front of the Clock Tower at Manasagangothri and features 88 stalls displaying paintings and other artworks by artists from different places.

Dr. Yathindra, along with MLAs and other dignitaries, visited the stalls, admired the artworks and encouraged the participating artists. Traditional Dollu Kunitha and other cultural troupes welcomed the dignitaries. The guests also garlanded the statue of Dr. B.R. Ambedkar before attending the formal programme.

The minister said the Dasara festive atmosphere had already begun in Mysuru, even though the festival is still a few days away according to the traditional calendar. Every artist and art lover should get an opportunity to showcase their talent. “Mysuru is the home of literature, music, dance, painting, sculpture and many other forms of art. Chitrasanthe is an important platform to encourage painting, one of the major art forms, during the Dasara season,” he said.

The minister said Chitrasanthe has been successfully organised in 2023 as well. This year’s event has been planned in a new way with the aim of creating a tasteful art market, rather than simply focusing on the sale of commercial products. The fair gives artists an opportunity to display and sell their creations.

Hundreds of artists from different States and regions have arrived to showcase their works. Dr. Yathindra Siddaramaiah appealed to art lovers in Mysuru to visit the fair in large numbers and support artists by purchasing their artworks.

More Stalls, More Artists, More Colours

Chamaraja MLA K. Harish Gowda said Chief Minister D.K. Shivakumar had entrusted District In-charge Minister Yathindra Siddaramaiah with the responsibility of organising the Dasara celebrations in a grand manner. Yuva Sambhrama had already been inaugurated and the Dasara elephants had arrived in Mysuru. Training sessions were being conducted as part of the preparations.

Mysuru is a city of artists, Harish Gowda said. This year’s Chitrasanthe has more stalls and more participating painters compared to 2023.

He appreciated the minister for personally visiting the fair and encouraging artists by purchasing their works.

Customised bookmarks, postcards and mini-canvas illustrations are among the popular attractions at this year’s Chitrasanthe. A wide range of creative artworks and products are being displayed and sold.

Mysuru City Corporation Commissioner M.K. Savita delivered the introductory remarks and welcomed the dignitaries.

CH NEWS, MYSURU

The meeting between Suttur Mutt’s Sri Shivaratri Deshikendra Swamiji and Uttaradi Mutt’s Sri Satyatmatirtha Swamiji, who is recuperating in Hubballi while undergoing treatment after an accident, was much more than a simple visit to enquire about his health.

There was no pomp, formality or protocol in the meeting. There were no barriers of position, status, sect or tradition. What remained was warmth, compassion and genuine concern.

The two mutts may belong to different traditions. Their customs and methods of worship may differ. Yet, when another person is in pain, the heart that reaches out remains the same.

Such moments remind one of the deeper meaning of religion. Dharma is not merely about rituals and ceremonies; it is also about understanding another person’s suffering and standing beside them in their hour of need. Sri Deshikendra Swamiji’s visit reflected his simplicity and broad-mindedness. More importantly, it conveyed a beautiful message to society: traditions may be different, but mutual respect and humanity can bring people together.

Renunciation is an important part of a seer’s life, but compassion is perhaps even more important. One seer was on a hospital bed; another stood beside him with concern and affection. At that moment, what was visible was not merely a meeting between two seers, but a beautiful expression of the Indian spiritual tradition of standing by another human being in times of distress.

Words may have ended with the meeting, but its human significance is likely to remain for a long time. The footsteps taken to visit a person in pain are no less sacred than the footsteps taken to seek the blessings of the divine. Sri Deshikendra Swamiji’s gesture has once again reminded us of this profound truth.

Mutt traditions may be different; hearts need not be. Beliefs may vary; humanity remains common to all. Medicine heals an injury of the body. Affection and human warmth heal wounds of the mind. Sri Deshikendra Swamiji’s visit was a moving symbol of that affection. They often look at the lives of seers ture. It carried a larger message for society. Perhaps Sri Deshikendra Swamiji spent only a few minutes at the hospital. Perhaps there were not many words exchanged. But

Suttur seer's visit to Uttaradi mutt Swamiji transcends tradition, sect and boundaries some meetings do not require long conversations.

A visit from the heart is enough. Concern visible in the eyes is enough. A few words of comfort are enough. As Sri Satyatmatirtha Swamiji recovers, the prayers and good wishes of devotees and well-wishers are with him. Alongside those prayers, the warmth shown by Sri Deshikendra Swamiji during his difficult moment will also remain a touching reminder of the power of compassion.

The meeting inside that hospital room may remain in a photograph captured by a camera. But behind that photograph lies a much deeper emotion: One may have to visit a temple to seek the presence of God. But to witness the qualities of God, it may be enough to look at a heart that stands beside a person in pain.

Sri Deshikendra Swamiji’s compassionate gesture offered precisely such a glimpse of humanity.

HDK calls K’taka Cabinet’s sit-in as ‘political drama’

Union Minister H.D. Kumaraswamy slammed Karnataka ministers for skipping cabinet meetings to stage electoral roll protests.

CH NEWS, BENGALURU

Union Minister H.D. Kumaraswamy has launched a blistering attack on the state government, condemning the Chief Minister and his cabinet colleagues for staging a street protest over alleged electoral roll irregularities instead of attending a scheduled cabinet meeting. Speaking outside his J.P. Nagar residence, Kumaraswamy ridiculed the demonstration as a “laughable” political charade orchestrated under instructions from national party leaders in Delhi.

The controversy centers on the ruling party’s public protests against alleged voter list tampering during the Special Intensive Revision (SIR) process. Dismissing the uproar, Kumaraswamy accused the Congress party of hypocrisy, alleging that ruling party members themselves manipulated voter rolls when the revision process first commenced. He claimed that the NDA alliance had previously lodged formal complaints with the Election Commission regarding unauthorized voter gathering centers, but no legal action was taken at the time.

Kumaraswamy further alleged that the sudden focus on electoral roll irregularities is an intentional diversionary tactic designed to pull public attention away from recent explosive political debates surrounding the controversial Nandi Infrastructure Corridor Enterprises (NICE) project land allegations.

“They have brought this SIR issue to the forefront now to divert public attention while that matter is being hotly debated in political and public circles,” Kumaraswamy stated, adding that the state treasury has been heavily depleted by welfare guarantee schemes, leaving insufficient funds to manage large-scale infrastructural buyouts. The Union Minister sharply criticized the unprecedented spectacle of executive leadership abandoning official administrative duties to participate in street demonstrations. He questioned how police authorities permitted a protest by sitting cabinet ministers in apparent disregard of judicial orders regarding public demonstrations.

Concluding his remarks, Kumaraswamy accused the state leadership of lacking administrative autonomy. “He visits Delhi to secure orders and approval from his high command; when they signal him, he dances to their tune here,” Kumaraswamy remarked, adding that the administration is simultaneously sidelining key regional leaders within its own ranks.

Railways announces Bengaluru-Mumbai sleeper service

CH NEWS, BENGALURU

Railway commuters traveling between India’s premier technology hub and its financial powerhouse can finally look forward to a massive upgrade in connectivity. Reports indicate that the highly anticipated SMVT Bengaluru to Mumbai CSMT Vande Bharat Sleeper train service is scheduled to launch by the end of this month, with the Railway Board expected to issue an official notification in the coming days.

Once operational, this service will become the nation’s second Vande Bharat Sleeper train, slashing travel times dramatically between the two major metropolitan centers.

Currently, travelers relying on direct rail connections—such as the daily Udyan Express—must endure a grueling journey averaging around 24 hours. The new high-speed sleeper service is slated to cover the distance in under 16 hours, operating six days a week in both directions.

According to provisional operational drafts, the train is tentatively scheduled to depart from Sir M. Visvesvaraya Terminal (SMVT) Bengaluru at 10:00 PM, arriving at Mumbai’s Chhatrapati Shivaji Maharaj Terminus (CSMT) at 1:50 PM the following afternoon. On the return leg, departures from Mumbai are planned for 10:30 PM, pulling into Bengaluru at 2:50 PM the

DAIRY FINANCIALS SPLIT

BAMUL leads K’taka milk unions in profitability

CH NEWS, BENGALURU

Amid mounting pressure from agricultural cooperatives to authorize an upward revision for popular Nandini milk products, newly released financial disclosures paint a sharply polarized picture of the state’s dairy sector. According to official reports covering the April-to-July fiscal window, 11 of Karnataka’s 16 regional milk unions have posted robust profits totaling ₹39.95 crore, while five unions are grappling with severe financial deficits.

The Bengaluru Milk Union Limited (BAMUL) emerged as the most financially lucrative cooperative in the state, securing the top rank with a net profit of ₹15.73 crore. BAMUL was closely followed by the Hassan Milk Union, which registered a profit of ₹11.72 crore, and the Mandya Milk Union (MANMUL) with ₹10.69 crore.

While major urban and agrarian hubs thrived, other regional cooperatives faced steep economic headwinds. The Chikkaballapur Milk Union recorded the state’s highest deficit, suffering a heavy loss of ₹11.88 crore. It was joined in the red by the Kolar Milk Union (KOMUL) with a loss of ₹5.48 crore, alongside the Vijayapura-Bagalkote, Raichur-Balari-Koppal, and Kalaburagi unions.

Union leaders attribute the widening financial disparities to escalating operational overheads. Surging expenses related to cattle fodder, veterinary pharmaceuticals, transportation fuel, and heavy milk processing overheads have strained balance sheets across the board, fueling urgent demands for state intervention.

Cooperative officials and dairy farmers are intensifying their lobbying efforts for a state-mandated price hike for Nandini milk, arguing that current market rates lag significantly behind neighboring states. Industry representatives warn that maintaining artificially depressed retail prices risks triggering a supply drain, where local milk producers divert their yield across state borders to secure higher profit margins.

Hassan Milk Union President H.D. Revanna has publicly advocated that any approved price hike must distribute revenue streams strategically, allocating a designated share directly to struggling unions to absorb operational deficits rather than channeling the entire financial benefit exclusively to farmers.

The state government remains under intense scrutiny as it weighs these competing pressures. Cabinet ministers have indicated that a comprehensive decision regarding the price hike will be finalized only after a comparative market analysis of neighboring states’ dairy tariffs is formally presented and debated in the upcoming cabinet session.

ED inspects KPSC strong room in probe

CH NEWS, BENGALURU

Intensifying its ongoing investigation into the high-profile Karnataka Public Service Commission (KPSC) veterinary officer recruitment scam, Enforcement Directorate (ED) officials conducted a thorough on-site inspection (panchanama), bringing key accused individuals back to the epicenters of the alleged crime.

The ED team escorted IAS officer Gyanendra Kumar Gangwar—who served as the Controller of Examinations during the contested recruitment cycle—alongside middleman Basavaraj Kannale, directly to the KPSC headquarters in Bengaluru. The spot inspection, which was fully videographed, included a detailed examination of the KPSC office’s secure strong room where examination question papers were originally stored.

According to investigative findings, the scandal centers on a massive breach of confidentiality wherein Gyanendra Kumar allegedly handed over the official question paper to intermediary Basavaraj Kannale a day prior to the examination. Kannale subsequently transported candidates to a resort on the outskirts of Bengaluru and other undisclosed locations, providing them with the test papers to memorize answers ahead of the exam. Following the inspection of the KPSC strong room, ED officers also visited these suburban resorts to recreate the sequence of events and gather physical evidence.

The central financial crimes agency previously secured the custody of both accused individuals after noting a lack of proper cooperation during initial interrogations. Both Gyanendra Kumar and Kannale had earlier been arrested by the Criminal Investigation Department (CID) and lodged in Parappana Agrahara Central Prison before being taken into ED custody.

Investigators are probing deep financial irregularities involving crores of rupees, focusing heavily on alleged hawala transactions, illegal kickbacks, and illicit money laundering networks linked to the recruitment fraud. Having seized crucial documents during simultaneous raids across premises connected to the accused, the ED plans to expand its financial audit to trace the trail of corruption surrounding the rigged recruitment process.

CH NEWS, BENGALURU

In a significant leadership transition for the legal fraternity in South India, Senior High Court Advocate R. Rajanna has been officially elected as the new Chairman of the Karnataka State Bar Council (KSBC). Alongside Rajanna’s election to the state’s apex legal regulatory body, the council concluded its internal office-bearer elections by choosing Shivamurthy as Vice-Chairman and C.M. Dhananjaya as the state’s representative to the Bar Council of India (BCI).

The high-stakes internal elections determined the executive leadership following a rigorous democratic process among the council members. In the contest for the chairmanship, R. Rajanna secured a decisive victory by garnering 15 votes, successfully defeating his nearest challenger, N. Devaraj, by a comfortable margin of six votes.

For the position of Vice-Chairman, Shivamurthy emerged as the frontrunner, commanding the highest individual support with 17 votes. He defeated his nearest rival, Shailaja, by a similar six-vote margin. Meanwhile, C.M. The voter base included 23 members directly elected by advocates across Karnataka, two female co-opted members specifically appointed by the High Court, and the ex-officio member, State Advocate General K. Shashikiran Shetty.

The formation of the new council follows a strict judicial mandate. The election to select the 23 general council members was conducted earlier on March 11, strictly adhering to a directive issued by the Supreme Court of India ordering the completion of the KSBC elections by March 15, 2026.

A notable feature of this election cycle was the implementation of progressive representation mandates, which reserved seven seats specifically for women lawyers, ensuring a targeted 30% female representation quota within the governing body. The election witnessed enthusiastic participation from the legal community, drawing a competitive field of 149 advocate candidates from various districts across Karnataka who vied for seats on the prestigious council.

Heavy traffic slams B’luru arteries amid long weekend

CH NEWS, BENGALURU

Commuters navigating Bengaluru’s extensive transit network faced severe delays as a massive exodus for the Gandhi Jayanti long weekend collided with localized infrastructural bottlenecks and seasonal waterlogging.

The Bengaluru Traffic Police (BTP) issued urgent advisories warning motorists of critical congestion across several high-density corridors, most notably along the Bengaluru-Mysore highway, K. Channasandra Road, and the Goraguntepalya arterial stretch.

The convergence of a mid-week gazetted holiday and an extended weekend prompted thousands of residents to head out of the city toward regional tourist destinations, straining major exit routes.

The heaviest gridlock was reported near the NICE Road junction on Mysore Road, where serpentine queues of outbound private vehicles and KSRTC buses began forming early in the morning.

Compounding the holiday rush, unexpected infrastructural obstructions and weather-related hurdles brought traffic to a crawl in various municipal sectors. On K. Channasandra Road, persistent waterlogging following recent downpours severely restricted vehicular movement, creating frustrating bottlenecks for motorists heading toward Bileshivale. Municipal engineering crews were dispatched to clear blocked drainage paths, but low-lying stretches continued to impede smooth transit.

Meanwhile, northern commuters experienced compounding delays near the Goraguntepalya corridor. A sudden vehicular breakdown right near the Muthyalanagara bridge blocked critical lane capacity during peak transit hours, triggering cascading tailbacks toward major junction networks. Traffic police intervened to tow the disabled vehicle and regulate manual signaling, while issuing active appeals for commuters to utilize alternative arterial bypasses.

With holiday traffic expected to remain elevated throughout the weekend before heavy return surges anticipated on Sunday and Monday, law enforcement agencies have urged citizens to monitor live travel advisories, exercise patience, and adhere strictly to lane discipline to prevent further gridlock.

Former Chief Minister Basavaraj Bommai has criticized the protest staged by the Chief Minister and cabinet colleagues outside the Election Commission office, alleging that it was intended to protect ineligible voters. In a statement issued on Friday, Bommai said that if the Chief Minister had concerns about the Special Intensive Revision (SIR) process, they could have been raised through Booth Level Officers (BLOs) in the respective constituencies.

He argued that submitting Form-7 objections is an authorized part of the electoral-roll revision process and said the Election Commission has permitted individuals to raise objections regarding multiple voter entries. According to Bommai, questioning the use of this provision is therefore unwarranted. Bommai urged election officials to discharge their responsibilities independently and without pressure, strictly following the Election Commission's guidelines and applicable laws. He said action should be taken against anyone found violating electoral rules, while officials and individuals acting within the prescribed regulations should be protected. He also maintained that concerns surrounding the electoral rolls should be addressed through the procedures established by the Election Commission rather than through political pressure or public confrontation.

The Issue: A high-profile protest staged by the Chief Minister and cabinet colleagues outside the Election Commission office concerning voter lists.

The Allegation: Former CM Basavaraj Bommai claimed the protest was dramatic and served as a political ploy to protect fake voters.

The Defense of Rules: Emphasized that Form-7 is legally authorized for objecting to ineligible entries and that proper channels like BLOs exist.

The Administrative Appeal: Urged election officials to follow guidelines strictly, remain immune to political pressure, and ensure lawful actions.

BEYOND THE MARKS: THE SKILLS THAT SHAPE SUCCESS

SHAMIRA SULTANA
“Ultimately, education should not merely prepare children to pass examinations. It should prepare them to face life.”

Mysuru: In the world where academic qualifications are often considered the first measure of success, an important question deserves attention: Are marks alone enough to prepare young people for life and work? Academic excellence certainly provides a strong foundation. Good marks reflect discipline, knowledge, perseverance and commitment. However, as workplaces and society continue to evolve, employers and institutions increasingly value another set of abilities – soft skills.

Communication, teamwork, leadership, adaptability, emotional intelligence, problem-solving and time management are no longer optional qualities. They have become essential life and career skills.

A student may score exceptionally well in examinations, but if he or she struggles to communicate ideas, work with others, handle criticism or adapt to changing situations, academic achievement alone may not translate into success. “Marks can demonstrate what a student knows, but soft skills often demonstrate how effectively that knowledge can be used.” Communication is perhaps one of the most important of these skills. The ability to express thoughts clearly, listen attentively and communicate respectfully can make a significant difference in both personal and professional life. Confidence does not mean speaking loudly or dominating a conversation; it means having the courage to express oneself while respecting others. Similarly, teamwork has become indispensable. Modern workplaces require people from different backgrounds and with different perspectives to work towards a common goal. Learning to co-operate, share responsibilities, resolve disagreements and appreciate the contribution of others is therefore as important as mastering a textbook. Emotional intelligence is another quality that deserves greater attention in education. Understanding one’s own emotions and recognising the feelings of others can help young people deal with stress, disappointment, conflict and failure in a healthier manner. Leadership, too, should not be misunderstood as merely holding a position. True leadership is about responsibility, integrity, decision-making and the ability to inspire others. Students can develop these qualities through school activities, clubs, community service, sports, cultural programmes and leadership opportunities.

The role of parents and teachers is equally significant. Education should not become a race where marks are the only destination. Classrooms must also become spaces where students learn to communicate, question, collaborate, think critically and respect different viewpoints. The good news is that soft skills can be developed at any age. Reading, public speaking, group discussions, volunteering, participating in cultural activities, taking responsibility and even learning from everyday mistakes can gradually build confidence and maturity. The future will belong not simply to those who know the most, but to those who can learn continuously, communicate effectively, adapt intelligently and work compassionately with others.

Academic marks may help a student secure an opportunity, but soft skills often determine what that student does with it.

SCIENTIFIC THINKING: THE FIRST STEP TOWARDS PROGRESS

Scientific thinking is not limited to laboratories, complex experiments or scientific discoveries. It is a way of understanding the world through curiosity, observation, questioning, evidence and logical reasoning. It encourages us to ask not only what happens, but also why and how it happens.

Every major scientific advancement begins with a question. When human beings wondered why the Sun rises and sets, how diseases spread, why objects fall, or how the stars move, they began a journey that gradually transformed human knowledge. Curiosity became investigation, investigation produced evidence, and evidence led to new discoveries.

Scientific thinking teaches us not to accept every claim simply because it is traditional, popular or repeated by others. Instead, it encourages us to examine evidence and distinguish facts from assumptions. This approach is particularly important in an age of misinformation, social media and rapidly circulating unverified information.

Education has a crucial role in developing scientific thinking among young people. Schools should encourage students to ask questions, conduct experiments, analyse observations and learn from mistakes. A student who asks “Why?” is already taking the first step towards scientific understanding.

Scientific thinking is equally valuable in everyday life. It can help us make informed decisions about health, technology, environment, finance and social issues. It promotes rational decision-making while reducing the influence of rumours, superstition and unsupported claims.

Importantly, scientific thinking does not mean rejecting traditions or beliefs without examination. It means developing the habit of asking questions respectfully and looking for reliable evidence. It also requires the humility to change one’s opinion when stronger evidence becomes available.

The progress of a society depends not only on its technological resources but also on the quality of its thinking. Advanced technology without responsible and rational thinking can create new challenges. Scientific temper, therefore, is essential for responsible innovation and sustainable development. From the classroom to the research laboratory, from agriculture to space exploration, progress begins with a questioning mind. When curiosity is combined with evidence and reason, ideas can become discoveries, and discoveries can become solutions.

Scientific thinking is more than a method of studying science – it is a habit of mind. And when a society learns to question, investigate and think rationally, it takes its first meaningful step towards progress.

Urgent Action for Climate

The recent surge in extreme weather events worldwide serves as an unmistakable warning. Communities across continents are suffering from devastating floods, intense heatwaves, and prolonged droughts. Nations can no longer afford to delay ambitious environmental policies or ignore carbon reduction

MELTING GLACIERS, UNSTABLE MOUNTAINS AND A GROWING DISASTER RISK

The Himalayas are far more than a snow-covered mountain range. They are the foundation of life, water, agriculture, energy and ecological security for hundreds of millions of people. Yet climate change, combined with development that often ignores the carrying capacity of mountains, is pushing the Himalayan region into an increasingly dangerous phase. Natural disasters are no longer merely sudden, isolated events; behind many of them lies a long process of environmental instability. The devastating rock–ice avalanche and subsequent debris flood in Nepal on 26 August 2026 brought this danger into sharp focus. Initial scientific assessments and subsequent reporting indicate that more than 1,300 people were killed and thousands remained missing. Scientists have described the catastrophe not simply as a weather event, but as the outcome of interacting climatic, geological and cryospheric factors.

Understanding the Nepal disaster is important because it was not a conventional Glacial Lake Outburst Flood (GLOF). On 26 August, a massive section of rock and ice detached from the Langtang Lirung massif at an altitude of around 5,000–5,200 metres. The falling material rapidly transformed into a highly mobile debris flow and flood. Scientific investigations indicate that long-term warming, glacier retreat, changing ice conditions, freeze-thaw processes and pre-existing geological weaknesses contributed to the instability, although climate change cannot be regarded as the sole cause.

The avalanche travelled with extraordinary speed, devastating areas and infrastructure downstream. Scientific reconstruction indicates that the debris flow travelled roughly 22 kilometres within minutes before reaching the Gyirong border area, while the resulting flood propagated much farther through the Bhothe Koshi–Trishuli–Narayani river system. The catastrophe is particularly significant for the Himalayas because glacier retreat is creating new glacial lakes while enlarging many existing ones. If the natural barriers holding these lakes back are breached by ice, rock, landslides, debris or water pressure, destructive floods can reach downstream valleys within a very short time.

For India, this warning is particularly relevant. Recent assessments in Sikkim have identified high-risk glacial lakes, while government agencies are strengthening remote sensing, field surveys, water-level and discharge monitoring and early-warning systems. The challenge, however, is not limited to glacial lakes. A rapidly changing Himalayan landscape demands a much broader understanding of mountain hazards. The situation in Himachal Pradesh is equally concerning. An IIT Mandi study mapped 2,076 glacial lakes above 3,500 metres in 2025 – 710 more than in 2015. During the same period, their cumulative area increased by 28.45 per cent. These figures demonstrate how rapidly Himalayan water geography is changing and underline the growing risk of Glacial Lake Outburst Floods.

The problem is not confined to melting glaciers. Rising temperatures are weakening snow, ice and permafrost, while roads, tunnels, dams, hydropower projects, tourism facilities and unplanned construction are adding pressure to the natural structure of the mountains. Mountains are not plains that can simply be cut, excavated and reshaped according to human requirements. This does not mean adopting an anti-development approach. The real issue is to rethink the definition and methodology of development in fragile mountain regions. Roads and electricity are necessary; tourism and employment are necessary too. But nerable valley should have clearly identified evacuation routes, safe zones, alternative roads and emergency communication systems. Local residents, tourists and project workers should receive regular training through mock drills.

Climate change has another serious dimension: today’s crisis may become tomorrow’s water crisis. Accelerated glacier melt may initially increase river flows, but as the long-term ice reserves all of these must be planned according to the carrying capacity of the Himalayas. Development that weakens the very ecological system on which communities depend cannot remain sustainable for long.

For India, the most important requirement now is an integrated Himalayan monitoring and early-warning system. It is not enough to examine hazards within the administrative boundaries of individual states. A glacier may be located in one region, a glacial lake in another, and the potential flood path may extend into a completely different district or state. Satellite imagery, drones, remote sensing, automated water-level sensors, weather stations and ground-based monitoring should therefore be integrated into a common digital network. And issuing a warning is only the beginning. Communities must know what to do after the warning arrives. Every vulshare interconnected Himalayan and Hindu Kush ecosystems.

The Nepal tragedy must not be dismissed as merely another natural disaster. It demonstrates how climate change, glacier retreat, geological vulnerability and cascading mountain processes can combine to produce events that conventional disaster-management systems may struggle to handle. At the same time, scientists have rightly cautioned against attributing the disaster to climate change alone. Geological structure, slope conditions and other physical factors were also important. The more deeply we understand the Himalayas, the better we will be able to protect them. Development and environmental protection should not be treated as opposing ideas. India needs a development model in which mountain ecology, carrying capacity and the safety of local communities are integral to every major decision.

The Nepal disaster is a stern warning: development that challenges the natural limits of the mountains cannot remain development for long. Before constructing every road, tunnel, dam, hydropower project, tourism facility or major structure in the Himalayas, we must ask a fundamental question: How much pressure will this project place on the mountain, and who will bear the cost if an extreme natural event occurs? Timely monitoring, scientific risk assessment, carefully regulated construction, stronger local preparedness and regional cooperation can save countless lives. But if repeated warnings are ignored, future Himalayan catastrophes may no longer be described simply as natural disasters. They could also be seen as consequences of our failure to understand the limits of the mountains and to respect them.

ADVERTISING, NEWSPAPERS AND THE QUESTION OF ACCOUNTABILITY

Any content published on a newspaper’s front page evokes a certain credibility in the reader’s mind. This is why, when a full-page advertisement in support of a controversial individual or organization appears, presented as news or factual investigation, the issue derive any commercial benefit from it.

This raises a significant question about the media’s responsibility. If, after publishing a piece of content, the publisher himself admits that the content was seriously objectionable, the obvious question is: what kind of system right to publish advertisements. However, clearly marking an advertisement as an advertisement and informing the reader that its claims are those of the advertiser is only part of a media organization’s responsibility. When the same content is presented on the front page, directly below the newspaper’s name and reputation, with news-like headlines and statistics, the question of its impact naturally arises in the reader’s mind.

The disclaimer on the advertisement is also a significant aspect of this controversy. The publications concerned stated that the newspaper had no editorial or journalistic role in the advertisement’s creative content. However, media experts understandably question whether a disclaimer alone is sufficient, especially when the paid content is published in a prominent location and its language appears newsworthy.

According to photographs and reports that surfaced on September 13th, the same advertisement also appeared on the front page of Dainik Jagran. This fact, in itself, is not sufficient to draw a definitive conclusion about a newspaper’s editorial policy, but it does raise an important public question: should major newspapers have clear ethical standards for determining the acceptability of sensitive advertisements?

This isn’t just a question of Dainik Jagran, Dainik Bhaskar, or The Hindu. Tomorrow, any other newspaper could find itself in a similar situation. If media organizations simply abdicate their responsibility by saying, “This was was in place to vet and evaluate it before publication? Institutional distance between the advertising department and the editorial department is essential, but does this distance alone completely insulate a newspaper from the social impact of its published content?

The issue is serious because the advertisement wasn’t simply promoting a product or service. According to available reports, it addressed the legal cases involving the Dera chief, the allegations against him, and the organization’s social activities. The advertisement also presented statistics related to the Dera’s activities related to drug de-addiction, blood donation, tree planting, and other social activities. Independent verification of these statistics was not provided in the advertisement.

It’s important to understand an important distinction here. An individual or organization has the right to present its point of view. Newspapers also have the commercial an advertisement, not news,” the line between advertising and news could gradually blur for readers.

Journalism’s greatest asset is its reader trust. Advertising revenue is crucial, as newspapers require financial resources to operate. However, striking a balance between commercial needs and public credibility is equally important. Particularly in cases involving court cases, serious allegations, or convicted individuals, the language and presentation of advertisements require extra caution.

There may be a practical solution for the media here. Independent pre-screening should be in place for controversial or sensitive advertisements. Special permission should be required for such advertisements to be published on the front page. Content related to factual claims and judicial matters should clearly state which claims are the advertiser’s. If a court judgment exists against a person, advertising should not conceal that fact or create confusion. And if a serious error is later discovered, not only should an apology be provided, but readers should also be informed of how the mistake occurred.

Asking questions of the media is not anti-media. Rather, independent journalism means demanding accountability from all government, political parties, business institutions, and the media itself. Just as journalists demand transparency from the government, readers can also demand transparency from journalistic institutions.

The need today is more for a broader debate on media ethics than for a single newspaper to be put on trial. Advertisers have a right to express their views, but readers have an equal right to know whether they are reading news, opinions, or paid-for promotional material.

The front page of a newspaper isn’t just a sheet of paper. It’s the embodiment of credibility earned over the years. Therefore, every piece of content published on it carries with it both financial gain and social responsibility. Publishing content for money isn’t a journalistic offense in itself; the question is how responsible the publisher is “Advertisements can be published, sides can be taken, but readers’ trust must not be compromised. This is the true accountability of the media.”

Bridge the Digital Divide

As artificial intelligence and rapid technological advances reshape society, millions across developing nations remain completely disconnected from basic digital infrastructure. This widening gap severely restricts equal access to quality education, modern healthcare, and vital economic opportunities. International organizations and wealthier governments must prioritize building inclusive technology systems. Bridging this digital divide is essential for fostering true global equality and ensuring no vulnerable community is left behind in today’s automated world.

NEW ZEALAND OPENS ARMS, WORLD COMES HOME

There is a country that recently decided to close itself to the world. Then there is a country that decided to do the exact opposite. While the world is building walls, visa restrictions, and hate speeches against immigrants, New Zealand is building a welcome mat. And the world is noticing.

Last week, New Zealand announced a new set of changes that make it one of the most foreigner-friendly nations in 2026. More work visas, faster residency for skilled workers, special welcome for Indians, Filipinos, and Pacific workers, and a clear message from Prime Minister Christopher Luxon: “If you have skills and good intent, you have a place here.”

Why is New Zealand doing this when every other developed nation is becoming strict? The answer is simple. New Zealand understands demography.

New Zealand is a small country – just 52 lakh people, less than Bangalore’s population. Its youth are moving to Australia for bigger salaries. Its population is ageing. Its farms, hospitals, construction sites, and tech startups have jobs but no people to do them. In 2024-25, New Zealand faced a shortage of 80,000 workers in healthcare, dairy, construction, and IT.

Instead of seeing this as a problem, they saw it as a strategy. Instead of begging locals to have more children – which takes 25 years to create a worker – they decided to welcome foreigners who are already ready to work.

This is smart economics. Every immigrant is not a cost. An immigrant is a taxpayer from day one. They rent a house, they buy groceries, they send kids to school, they pay GST. A study from Victoria University of Wellington showed that every skilled migrant family adds NZD $35,000 per year to the economy. That is not charity. That is investment.

But what makes New Zealand different is not just visas. It is attitude.

If you go to Auckland today, you will see a government campaign called “Maanaakitanga”, a Maori word meaning hospitality, kindness, respect for strangers. Airports have staff speaking Hindi, Tagalog, Mandarin. Banks allow you to open accounts before you land. Children of work visa holders can study in public schools free. Partners get open work rights. This is not just immigration. This is inclusion.

Compare this to the US, where H1B is a lottery; to the UK, where student dependents are banned; to Canada, where housing crisis is blamed on Indians. New Zealand is saying, don’t blame foreigners, plan for them. Build more houses, yes, but also welcome more hands to build them.

For Indians, this is a golden window. India is New Zealand’s fastest-growing source of skilled migrants. Over 35,000 Indians got residency in the last year alone – nurses from Kerala, IT professionals from Bangalore and Hyderabad, dairy managers from Punjab, chefs and students. New Zealand needs exactly what India produces: English-speaking, young, skilled, family-oriented workers.

There are lessons for India here too. We often think only about people going out. But what about people coming in? If New Zealand, with 5 million people, can think globally, India with 140 crore can also design better policies to attract global talent to our GIFT City, our startups, our universities.

The world is divided today between “We First” and “All Together.” New Zealand has chosen the second path. It knows that in a lonely corner of the Pacific, you cannot survive alone. You survive by welcoming.

History shows, countries that welcome foreigners grow. America grew because it welcomed. Dubai grew because it welcomed. New Zealand is now doing the same – not with tall buildings, but with a big heart.

And maybe that is why everyone wants to go there. Because at the end of the day, every foreigner just wants one thing: to not feel like a foreigner.

HOW LEADERS SHAPE FOLLOWERS WITHOUT SAYING MUCH

We think leadership is about orders. It is not. Leadership is about influence. A manager gives orders and people obey because they have to. A leader influences and people follow because they want to.

History proves this. Mahatma Gandhi never had an army, never had a position, never had money. Yet when he said “Let’s make salt,” crores walked to the sea. Why? Because he influenced. When Narendra Modi says “Mann Ki Baat,” lakhs switch off lights. When a CEO like Narayana Murthy says “Come early to office,” Infosys employees don’t ask for overtime, they just come.

So how does a leader actually influence his followers? It is not magic. It is a process.

First, leaders influence by example, not by lecture. If you tell your team “Don’t use phone in meeting” but you yourself check WhatsApp during meetings, nobody will listen. If you tell your child “Don’t smoke,” but you smoke, the lecture fails. People watch feet, not lips. Gandhi spun khadi, so India spun khadi. If you want punctuality, you come first. If you want honesty, you return the extra change. A leader’s life is the loudest speech.

Second, leaders influence by clarity of vision. People are lost. In a world full of noise – Instagram, targets, EMI, politics – people want someone who can say, “This is where we are going.” A leader gives that North Star. When John F Kennedy said “We will go to the moon,” NASA engineers worked 16 hours not because of salary, but because they had a story bigger than themselves. A good leader does not say “Do this work.” He says, “This work will change someone’s life.” Followers follow vision, not instructions.

Third, leaders influence through trust and listening. A leader who only talks never influences. A leader who listens influences deeply. When a team member feels, “My boss hears me,” he gives loyalty. When a follower feels, “My leader knows my name, my pain, my family,” he gives blood. Trust is built in small moments – remembering a birthday, saying sorry when wrong, sharing credit when right. Influential leaders don’t say “I did it.” They say “We did it.” That word change creates 1000% more loyalty.

Fourth, leaders influence by consistency in crisis. Anyone can be nice in good times. Influence is tested in bad times. When a company is losing money, when a team fails, when elections are lost – what does the leader do? Does he blame? Does he hide? Or does he stand in front and say, “I take responsibility”? People never forget who stood with them when they were down. The leader who stays calm during a storm makes followers believe that the storm will pass.

Fifth, leaders influence by creating more leaders. A boss wants followers who obey. A true leader wants followers who grow. He teaches, he delegates, he gives chances even when they might fail. Because he knows, the biggest influence is not when people say “He was a great leader,” but when people say “Because of him, I became a leader.”

In Bangalore, you see this every day. In a startup, one toxic manager can make 20 engineers resign. One inspiring team lead can make the same 20 work on Saturday without complaining. The difference is not salary. It is influence.

So if you want to be a leader in your home, office, or society – don’t try to control. Try to influence. Wake up early, speak clearly, listen more, stand firm in crisis, and lift others.

Followers don’t follow your post. They follow your character.

WHY EVERY PARTY NOW NEEDS A DJ

Ten years ago, a party meant a music system, a pen drive, and someone’s cousin handling the volume. Today, no party starts without a poster that says “DJ Night.” From weddings in Jaipur to birthdays in Bangalore, from college fests to corporate launches to Sunday brunches – the DJ has become as essential as food and lights.

Why is India suddenly dancing to the DJ’s beat? The demand for DJs has exploded by over 300% in the last five years. And this is not just a trend. It is a cultural shift.

First reason: Experience economy. Today’s generation does not want just a function – they want an experience. They don’t want to just sit and eat. They want lights, bass, Instagram Reels, that moment when the beat drops and everyone screams. A DJ gives that. A DJ is not a person playing songs. A DJ is a person creating energy. In the age of Instagram, a party without a drop is a party without a story. And no one wants to post a boring story.

Second: Weddings have changed. The big Indian wedding used to be about rituals and relatives. Now it is about sangeeet, cocktail, after-party, pool party, mehendi bash. One wedding now needs 4-5 DJs. Families budget Rs 50,000 to 5 lakhs just for DJs. In Delhi, top DJs charge 10 lakhs per night. Why? Because the bride and groom want their entry to feel like a concert, not a procession. The DJ is the new pandit of celebration – he decides the mood.

Third: Technology made it easy and aspirational. Earlier, DJ meant huge equipment, vinyl records, foreign training. Now a laptop, a controller, and YouTube tutorials can start your career. Youngsters from small towns – Ranchi, Indore, Coimbatore – are learning mixing in 3 months. For them, DJing is not just passion, it is profession. It is cooler than an office job, pays better than entry-level IT, and gives fame. When a 19-year-old sees DJ Chetas playing for 10,000 people at Sunburn, he thinks “I can be that.”

Fourth: Brands and businesses need DJs. Every pub, brewery, cafe in Bangalore, listen more when there is music.

Fifth: The pandemic effect. After two years locked at home, people are hungry to dance together. Psychologists call it “collective effervescence” – the joy of moving together on same beat. We missed it. Now we are over-compensating. We don’t want silent dinners. We want loud nights.

But there is a dark side too. Everyone is becoming a DJ, but not everyone is learning music. Good DJing is not just pressing play. It is reading the crowd, understanding sound, mixing beats, knowing when Mumbai, Gurgaon has a weekend DJ. Every brand launch – from Nike to a new phone – needs a DJ to keep crowd. Even gyms have “DJ workout mornings.” Real estate builders do DJ evenings to sell flats. The corporate world discovered that people to slow down and when to blast. Many untrained DJs play only loud bass, damaging ears. Noise pollution complaints have risen 40% in metro cities. And with high demand, drugs and late-night culture also creep into some circuits.

“The bride and groom want their entry to feel like a concert, not a procession. The DJ is the new pandit of celebration – he decides the mood.”

— CHIRU

What should we do? We need to respect DJs as artists, not just button-pushers. Colleges should have certified courses. Societies should set sound limits. And clients should pay on time – many DJs still wait 3 months for payment after weddings. The truth is, demand for

AUTO FARES RISE, COMMON MAN SUFFERS SILENTLY

In Bangalore, you don’t argue with the weather and you don’t argue with an auto driver about the meter. Because the meter never works. Last week, the government announced a hike in auto fares – minimum fare from Rs 30 to Rs 40, per kilometre from Rs 15 to Rs 19. For auto drivers, it is relief. For the common man who takes an auto every day to work, it is another cut on a salary that never increases.

Why are auto fares increasing? Ask any auto driver near Majestic, Silk Board or KR Market and he will give you a list longer than his waiting queue. Petrol price is Rs 107 per litre. In 2020 it was Rs 82. Gas price up. Spare parts up. Engine oil up. Tyre up. Even a simple brake wire that cost Rs 150 now costs Rs 300. And on top of that, he pays Rs 500 daily rent if auto is not his own, or Rs 800 loan EMI if it is. After driving 12 hours, many take home just Rs 600-700. So, when they say “fare increase is needed,” they are not lying.

But the other side of the story is the passenger. The same passenger who is also struggling with same petrol, same inflation, same rent. A girl working in Koramangala earning Rs 25,000 who travels from BTM Layout – her daily auto fare was Rs 200. Now it will be Rs 260. Monthly Rs 6,500 just for auto. Add Metro last mile also. How will she save? A senior citizen going to Victoria Hospital, a student going to college – they don’t have Ola Uber luxury. Auto is their only option. When auto fare increases, their freedom to move decreases.

The real problem is not the hike. The real problem is the system. Auto fares in Karnataka are decided by a committee that meets once in 3-4 years. Last hike was in 2021. After that, everything became costly, but fares stayed same.

EXPENSIVE CREAMS CANNOT BUY REAL GLOW

Open Instagram and you will see it. A girl in a white robe, 10 bottles on the table, each costs more than your monthly groceries. Hyaluronic acid, retinol, niacinamide, vitamin C serum, toner, essence, eye cream, night cream – a routine that takes 45 minutes and Rs 15,000 per month. And then a caption: “Invest in your skin.” But is expensive skincare really an investment, or is it just intelligent marketing?

India’s skincare market was Rs 15,000 crores in 2020. Today it is over Rs 45,000 crores. The reason is not that Indians suddenly got more skin problems. The reason is we were told to have more problems. A pimple is no longer a pimple; it is a sign you need a salicylic acid cleanser.

Dull skin is no longer tiredness; it is a sign you need a vitamin C serum from Korea that costs Rs 3,500. We have gone from using a single cold cream in winter to a 10-step routine every night.

The truth nobody tells you is simple: Expensive does not mean effective. Dermatologists across Bangalore, Delhi and Mumbai will tell you the same thing – 90% of good skin is just three things: cleanser, moisturizer, and sunscreen. That’s it. Everything else is extra. A good sunscreen costing Rs 400 protects your skin more than a Rs 7,000 serum that claims to “reverse ageing.” Ageing cannot be reversed by a cream. If it could, rich people would never get old.

So why do we buy expensive routines? Because fear sells. Brands sell fear. Fear of wrinkles at 25, fear of dark spots at 30, fear of not looking like a filter. When a 20-year-old girl sees a 35-year-old actress with flawless skin saying “I use this cream,” she believes it. She doesn’t know there are lights, makeup, Botox, filters, and a dermatologist on call behind that flawless skin. She just buys.

Second reason is social media performance. Skincare is no longer private care; it is public content. A shelf full of luxury products is a status symbol, like an iPhone. When you put La Mer and Dyson on your shelf, you are telling the world “I can afford to care for myself.” Skincare became a class marker.

But ask your grandmother. She used coconut oil, besan, haldi, curd, and water. She drank more water, slept early, ate home food. And she had better skin at 60 than many 30-year-olds today who use 10 chemicals. Why? Because skin glows from inside, not from outside.

Expensive routine also has a side effect: damaged skin barrier. Many young girls in India today have sensitive skin not because of pollution, but because of overuse. Retinol every night, AHA BHA every morning, scrub twice a week – skin is confused. Dermatologists are seeing more cases of redness, burning, acne caused by too many products. We are paying to damage our own face.

Does this mean you should not care for skin? No. Care for it. But care smartly. Wash your face twice, not five times. Use a simple moisturizer that suits you, not the one that went viral. Wear sunscreen every day, even in Bangalore monsoon. Drink 3 litres of water. Sleep 7 hours. Eat fruits. That routine costs Rs 1,000 and works more than a Rs 20,000 shelf.

The real glow is not bought. It is built by good food, good sleep, less stress, and less comparison.

The next time someone says “Invest in your skin, it will represent you for a long time,” remember your kindness, your confidence, your health will represent you longer than your serum.

Don’t let a 10-step routine make you feel like you are not enough with 3 steps. Your skin is not a project. It is a part of you. Keep it clean, keep it protected, and then leave it alone.

Delhi HC limits writ jurisdiction in disputes

NEW DELHI

The Delhi High Court has held that its writ jurisdiction under Article 226 of the Con stitution is extraordinary in nature and cannot be used as a forum to settle personal dis putes or pursue collateral objectives against an adver sary. Justice Amit Mahajan made the observation while dis missing a petition filed by a man seeking action against a private firm. The petitioner had alleged that the company was involved in several anti-national activities, including hacking the Indian Railway Catering and Tour ism Corporation (IRCTC) system, attempting to trigger communal riots and engaging in cyber terrorism. The court found no merit in the petition and granted the petitioner liberty to pursue appropriate legal remedies against the firm in accordance with law. Justice Mahajan passed the order on September 29.

The petitioner had earlier worked for the private com pany for a short period before leaving. He alleged that the firm had obtained copies of his confidential emails through undisclosed sources and subsequently used them to harass him by filing a con tempt case against him. Justice Mahajan said the High Court's writ jurisdiction cannot be invoked merely because a representation made by a litigant has not resulted in the action sought by that person.

CPI(M) alleges cash distribution to voters ahead of Tamil Nadu bypolls

CHENNAI

The Communist Party of India (Marxist) has alleged that cash is being distributed to voters ahead of the October 6 bypolls in two Tamil Nadu Assembly constituencies, with party state secretary P Shanmugam claim ing that the ruling Tamilaga Vettri Kazhagam (TVK) was allegedly offering more money than other parties. The CPI(M), which extends outside support to the TVK-led Tamil Nadu government, is contesting the bypolls sepa rately. The elections are sched uled in the Madurantakam and Dharapuram Assembly con stituencies, both reserved seats. The party has fielded P Sugan thi in Madurantakam, while the CPI has nominated P Lakshmanan in Dharapuram. Shanmugam said he visited several villages in the Madu rantakam constituency on Sep tember 30 while campaigning for the party. He said CPI(M) workers were distributing pamphlets explaining the party's policies and seeking sup port. According to him, some voters told party workers that other parties were distributing money and claimed that TVK was allegedly giving the high est amount. Shanmugam also referred to statements made by TVK chief and Chief Minister C Joseph Vijay during the April 2026 Assembly elections, when Vijay had said his party would not distribute money for votes. The CPI(M) leader claimed that similar assurances had been given during the current bypoll campaign but alleged that feedback from villages suggested otherwise. The CPI(M) leader urged election authorities to examine the allegations and take action against any attempt to influ ence voters through monetary inducements. Maharashtra faces water crisis, says Basavraj Patil

MUMBAI

Maharashtra is likely to face a difficult water situation in the coming months amid def i cient rainfall in several parts of the state, former minister Basavraj Patil has said, stress ing the need for careful con servation and use of available water resources. Patil said drinking water must remain the government's priority as the state prepares for a challenging period.

The water situation is going to be bad in the days to come. We have to conserve and judiciously use water. Supplying drinking water will be the priority.

Basavraj Patil

His remarks come as Marathwada, one of Maha rashtra's most drought-prone regions, faces a significant rainfall deficit. The region received only about 65.5 per cent of its normal rainfall during the June-September monsoon period, according to recent official data reported by The Times of India. The eight districts received around 445 mm of rain against the normal 679.5 mm.

Authorities have deployed hundreds of water tankers and acquired private wells to strengthen supplies. Latur has emerged among the worst-af fected districts, receiving about 51.4 per cent of its nor mal rainfall during the mon soon season. Officials in Marathwada have been directed to prepare micro-level plans for distrib uting water from small, medium and major dams so that supplies can be main tained until August 2027. Drinking water has been given priority, while irrigation from several smaller reser voirs is expected to face restrictions.

ECI orders re-enrolment of left-out voters in a month

NEW DELHI

The Election Commission of India has directed Chief Elec toral Officers in States and Union Territories where the Special Intensive Revision (SIR) has been completed or is underway to identify eligi ble voters left out of the elec toral rolls and ensure their re-enrolment within one month. In a letter to the Chief Electoral Officers, the ECI instructed Booth Level Offi cers (BLOs) to compare pre-SIR electoral rolls with the current lists. They have been asked to prepare a list of electors whose names are missing and conduct door-to-door visits to establish their present status. The Commission said eligi ble people left out of the rolls should be enrolled again through Form 6. The exercise is intended to ensure that vot ers who qualify for registra tion are not excluded from the electoral process after the revision of the rolls. The ECI suggested that BLOs may cover at least 20 to 25 electors every week to complete the verification and enrolment exercise within about one month. The field visits will allow officials to verify whether the individuals concerned remain eligible for inclusion. The Commission's instruc tions place responsibility on BLOs to identify eligible elec tors omitted from the current rolls, verify their status through household visits and facilitate their re-enrolment using the prescribed Form 6 application. The exercise is aimed at completing the process within the one-month period. The move follows the Commis sion's emphasis on checking omissions and giving eligible electors an opportunity to have their names restored to electoral rolls through the pre scribed procedure.

Adhikari says TMC name, symbol erased in Bengal

The poll body stated that the dispute required substantive resolution under the Election Symbols Order of 1968

KOLKATA

West Bengal Chief Minister Suwendu Adhikari has said the Trinamool Congress’ original name and election symbol have effectively been removed from the electoral contest ahead of the October 6 Assembly bypolls, following an Election Commission decision amid a dispute between two factions of the party.

The Election Commission had barred both the Mamata Banerjee-led faction and the rival group led by Arup Roy from using the name ‘All India Trinamool Congress’ and its traditional ‘Flowers and Grass’ symbol for the upcoming bypolls. The poll panel said the dispute required substantive determination under the Election Symbols (Reservation and Allotment) Order, 1968.

Subsequently, the Commission allotted the name ‘Mamata All India Trinamool Congress’ and the ‘Football Player’ symbol to the faction led by Banerjee. The Arup Roy-led group was assigned the name ‘Democratic Trinamool Congress’ and the ‘Envelope’ symbol. The interim arrangement applies to the October 6 bypolls in Nandigram and Rejinagar and will remain in force until the Commission makes a final determination in the factional dispute.

Reacting to the development, Adhikari said the Election Commission had acted according to its rules and after hearing both sides. He also rejected suggestions that the BJP had any direct role in the poll panel’s decision.

The dispute over the TMC’s identity comes after a political split in the party, with the two groups staking competing claims to the original name and symbol. The Election Commission has said it will undertake a substantive process under the relevant provisions before making a final decision on the dispute.

Key highlights
MAMATA FACTION NAME Mamata All India Trinamool Congress	RIVAL GROUP NAME Democratic Trinamool Congress (led by Arup Roy)
MAMATA FACTION SYMBOL Football Player	RIVAL GROUP SYMBOL Envelope
SCOPE OF ORDER Interim arrangement for the October 6 bypolls	SUPREME COURT DEADLINE Final dispute resolution mandated within three months

The Supreme Court has also directed the Election Commission to resolve the dispute within three months. The court granted the parties time to submit documents and affidavits before the poll panel begins the process of deciding the competing claims.

The Nandigram and Rejinagar bypolls are scheduled for October 6, with counting set for October 9.

The outcome of the Commission’s separate proceedings will determine the longer-term status of the competing factions and the original party identity.

WHEAT STOCKS BLOCK STORAGE

Mann seeks urgent grain lifting from Punjab

CHANDIGARH

Punjab Chief Minister Bhagwant Mann has urged the Centre to urgently facilitate the movement of 15 lakh metric tonnes (LMT) of wheat and 6 LMT of rice from the state, citing a shortage of storage space ahead of the peak paddy procurement season.

In a letter to Union Minister for Consumer Affairs, Food and Public Distribution Pralhad Joshi, Mann requested the movement of 6 LMT of rice between October 1 and 10 and 15 LMT of wheat during October.

Mann said Punjab had earlier sought the movement of 15 LMT of rice and 10–12 LMT of wheat during September. However, only 8.30 LMT of rice and 4.30 LMT of wheat were moved out between September 1 and 29. He said only 99.50 LMT, or 94 per cent, of the 105.64 LMT Custom Milled Rice (CMR) due for KMS 2025-26 had been delivered by September 29, leaving nearly 6 LMT pending.

‘Continued delays could affect procurement and milling operations and create difficulties for farmers, rice millers and other stakeholders.’

The Chief Minister also highlighted the wheat stocks occupying rice mills and mandi yards.

SBI Research sees inflation at 5.65% in September

NEW DELHI
SBI Research has projected India's retail inflation at 5.65% in September, with CPI inflation expected to cross 6.5% in October and November, before easing below 6% in early 2027.
In its pre-Monetary Policy Committee report, SBI Research said the Reserve Bank of India (RBI) may raise the repo rate by at least 25 basis points at its October 5-7 meeting, citing rising inflation, global risks and pressure on the rupee.
The repo rate currently stands at 5.25%. SBI Research attributed the inflation risks to broader price pressures, weak monsoon conditions and global economic uncertainties.
It noted that 43% of districts received deficient rainfall, while the 2026 southwest monsoon was at 87% of the long-period average. The research house warned that weak rainfall and El Niño conditions could affect Rabi crops and increase food inflation.
The RBI's current FY27 projections put GDP growth at 6.7% and CPI inflation at 5%.

Tourism sector may face 11 million worker shortage

NEW DELHI
India's tourism industry could face a workforce shortage of around 11 million by 2035, as demand for trained workers struggles to keep pace with the sector's expansion, according to a CBRE Research report.
The report said tourism is growing across pilgrimage, wellness, MICE, cruise and sustainable travel, creating demand for specialised skills.
Tourism's direct and indirect employment rose to 84.6 million in FY2024, while its contribution to GDP increased to 5.2%. CBRE also highlighted a mismatch between training centres and emerging tourism markets, particularly in tier-II and tier-III cities. Worker retention remains another challenge due to long working hours, modest pay and limited career prospects.
The report noted government skilling initiatives, including plans to upgrade hospitality education and train 10,000 tourist guides across 20 sites.

India growth may slow to 5.5-6% in H2 FY27: CLSA

NEW DELHI
India's economic growth could slow to 5.5-6% in the second half of FY27, compared with 7-7.5% in the first half, as government capital spending moderates, CLSA said in a report.
The report said fiscal spending was front-loaded during the first five months of FY27, with combined fiscal capital expenditure rising 13.2% year-on-year. It expects combined capex growth to moderate to about 4% between September 2026 and March 2027.
The Centre's fiscal deficit reached 41.9% of the full-year budget estimate in the first five months, while total government spending grew 10.5%. CLSA also cited weakness in the rural economy, an adverse base effect and broader economic uncertainty as factors that could weigh on growth. Defence spending is expected to increase, while railway and road spending may remain stagnant or decline.

“Global conditions have turned unfavourable again”: Finance Minister

THE FINANCE MINISTRY PROJECTS 7.3% GROWTH IN THE SECOND QUARTER, DESPITE GLOBAL UNCERTAINTIES, RISING OIL PRICES AND PRESSURES ON FINANCIAL MARKETS.

NEW DELHI

India's economic growth momentum continued into the second quarter, although at a more measured pace, with the Finance Ministry estimating that the economy could expand 7.3% during July-September. The assessment was included in the ministry's latest Monthly Economic Report, which cited several high-frequency indicators to indicate that growth remained sustained.
The report, however, flagged concerns over worsening global conditions. Oil prices increased sharply in September, while global bond yields also moved higher and continued to rise. India's bond yield increased by a smaller margin, but the ministry said pressure from the lower risk premium could weigh on the Indian rupee.

The ministry also warned of possible short-term pressure on Indian financial assets and the rupee. It noted that capital flows were increasingly being directed towards geographies associated with artificial intelligence, adding another chal-

According to the report, developed countries are competing to attract investments to finance renewed manufacturing ambitions as global sup-

Despite these challenges, the ministry indicated that foreign direct investment in-flows could perform better on a net basis during the current financial year compared with the previous year.

Goyal rejects U.S. claims of excess capacity

NEW DELHI

Union Commerce and Industry Minister Piyush Goyal has told G20 Trade Ministers that India does not have structural excess capacity in the sectors identified by the U.S.-led discussions, while asserting that the country has taken steps to prohibit imports of goods produced using forced labour.

India does not have structural excess capacity in the sectors identified by the G20 presidency.”
— Piyush Goyal, Minister of Commerce and Industry of India

His remarks came amid ongoing U.S. trade investigations involving India.
Speaking at the G20 Trade Ministers' Meeting in Milwaukee, Goyal said India's manufacturing sector serves both domestic and global demand. He argued that industrial capacity by itself should not be treated as evidence of trade distortion and stressed that trade remedies should be based on evidence and remain consistent with World Trade Organization rules.
The remarks come after the United States imposed an additional 10% tariff on imports from India under its Section 301 action related to forced-labour concerns. The U.S. Trade Representative had initially proposed a 12.5% rate, but the final additional duty was set at 10% after India amended its Foreign Trade Policy to prohibit imports produced using forced labour.

Goyal said India's commitment to eliminating forced labour was absolute and pointed to the country's Foreign Trade Policy amendment in July. He also argued that measures at the border should rely on specific, verifiable evidence rather than assumptions covering entire countries, regions or sectors.
Separately, the U.S. is investigating structural excess capacity involving India and other economies. The investigation could lead to additional trade measures. Goyal also defended the Most-Favoured-Nation principle and called for restoration of the WTO dispute settlement mechanism. His comments came as India and the U.S. continue discussions on an interim bilateral trade agreement, with trade issues including forced labour and excess capacity remaining part of broader economic negotiations.

NEW DELHI

The government has extended the Remission of Duties and Taxes on Exported Products (RoDTEP) scheme by three months until December 31, 2026, while keeping existing reimbursement rates and value caps unchanged. The extension is aimed at providing continuity to exporters facing uncertain global demand, higher logistics costs and geopolitical disruptions.

The extension covers exports by Domestic Tariff Area units, Advance Authorisation holders, Special Economic Zone units and Export Oriented Units, according to the Department of Commerce.
RoDTEP reimburses exporters for embedded central, state and local duties, taxes and levies that are not refunded through other mechanisms.
Operational since January 1, 2021, the scheme covers a wide range of merchandise exports. Advance Authorisation holders, EOUs and SEZ units were brought under broader RoDTEP coverage in 2024. Government data released in 2025 showed that the scheme covered more than 10,700 tariff lines, while cumulative disbursements crossed Rs 57,976 crore as of March 31, 2025.

The government also extended RoDTEP benefits to eligible exports through the postal channel from January 2026, expanding access for MSMEs, artisans, start-ups and smaller exporters. The latest extension follows the outside party was involved.

Trump said that if Iran was found to be connected to the copilot, the country would face a severe response.

His comments came while authorities continued their inquiry and had yet to establish the circumstances behind the alleged attempt. The incident has drawn international attention because of the number of people aboard the flight and the danger created by the cockpit altercation. Investigators are examining why the copilot attacked the captain and what led to the aircraft's descent before passengers and others intervened.

The flight was ultimately brought under control and landed in Saudi Arabia, while questions remain over the motive and any possible links behind the incident.

Trump's warning adds an international dimension to an investigation that is still underway.

Putin says Modi has ‘good ideas’ to end Ukraine war

MOSCOW

Russian President Vladimir Putin has praised Prime Minister Narendra Modi's efforts to help end the Russia-Ukraine conflict, saying the Indian leader has "good ideas" for finding a mutually acceptable solution.

Speaking during an interaction on Thursday, Putin said Modi has consistently raised the need to end the conflict despite India's close relations with Russia. He described Modi's approach as neutral but focused on achieving peace and thanked him for his efforts.

"Prime Minister Narendra Modi is one of those world leaders who constantly raises the question about putting an end to the conflict in Ukraine," Putin said.

Putin praised Modi's peace efforts, saying the Indian Prime Minister has good ideas for finding a mutually acceptable solution to the Ukraine conflict.

Modi has repeatedly called for dialogue and diplomacy to resolve the war.

Putin and Modi most recently met on the sidelines of the 18th BRICS Summit in New Delhi in September, where they discussed bilateral cooperation in trade, energy, defence, infrastructure, technology and culture.

Starbucks faces US call over Xinjiang stores

WASHINGTON

A US lawmaker has called on Starbucks to close its newly opened stores in China's Xinjiang region, citing concerns over reported repression of Uyghurs.

Starbucks opened its first two outlets this week in Xinjiang's capital, Urumqi, including one at the city's Grand Bazaar and another at the international airport.

John Moolenaar, chairman of the House of Representatives' Select Committee on China, urged the company to "immediately reverse course and close its stores". He criticised Starbucks' decision to operate in the region, citing allegations of rights abuses against Uyghurs.

"There is no justifiable reason for an American company to do business in a region where the CCP (Chinese Communist Party) has detained more than a million Uyghurs and is stripping them of their faith, language, and culture," he said.

China denies widespread accusations of abuses against Uyghurs, a mainly Muslim ethnic group, saying its policies in Xinjiang are aimed at combating terrorism, separatism and religious extremism.

Starbucks has not indicated plans to close the new outlets.

SÃO PAULO

Brazil's ethanol industry is expanding beyond conventional road transport, with new applications in agriculture, aviation and maritime transport expected to drive demand for the biofuel, according to Henrique Berbert de Amorim Neto, president of the Local Productive Arrangement for Alcohol (APLA).

Speaking at the Global Agribusiness Forum in São Paulo, Amorim said ethanol-powered agricultural machinery could become an important source of future demand. Manufacturers are developing tractors and sugarcane harvesters that run on ethanol, while other technologies are exploring flex-fuel systems that can incorporate ethanol into diesel engines.

Brazil has a long history with ethanol-based transport, dating back to the launch of the Proálcool programme in 1975. The country is now exploring applications for ethanol in aviation and maritime transport, including Sustainable Aviation Fuel and marine bunker fuel.

Amorim said APLA, in partnership with ApexBrasil, is working to promote Brazilian sugar, ethanol and energy technologies in international markets.

Corn-based ethanol is emerging as a major driver of this expansion. Amorim said corn ethanol could account for nearly 30 per cent of Brazil's total ethanol production this year, up from about 25 per cent last year.

India, Bulgaria push for early EU trade pact

NEW DELHI

India and Bulgaria have called for the early implementation of the India-European Union

Free Trade Agreement (FTA), saying the pact could further strengthen economic and commercial ties between the two countries.

The issue was discussed during the India-Bulgaria Foreign Office Consultations, co-chaired by Sibi George, Secretary (West) in the Ministry of External Affairs, and Christo Polendakov, Deputy Minister of Foreign Affairs of Bulgaria.

The two sides reviewed the full range of bilateral relations, including trade and investment, defence, artificial intelligence, science and technology, space, connectivity and people-to-people exchanges. They also discussed regional and global developments of mutual interest.

India and Bulgaria established diplomatic relations in 1954. Their cultural and people-to-people links, however, predate formal diplomatic ties, with historical contacts between the two societies dating back centuries.

Pentagon religious office sparks constitutional concerns

WASHINGTON

US Defence Secretary Pete Hegseth's announcement of a new Office of Religious Affairs at the Pentagon has drawn criticism over concerns about religion and military policy.

Hegseth announced the office during his State of the Force address at Marine Corps Base Quantico in Virginia on September 30. The office will report directly to the defence secretary and coordinate religious and spiritual resources across the Defence Department.

The Pentagon said the office would not compel religious participation, favour one faith over another or diminish the rights of service members with or without religious affiliations.

However, critics have questioned the initiative's implications for the constitutional separation of church and state.

Hegseth used explicitly Christian language while announcing the initiative. "Our department is, you might say, putting on the full armor of God, because while we wage physical war, we all know the real battle is spiritual," he said. He also told military chaplains: "Live your calling. Stand firm. Preach truth. Minister to the flock."

The leader of the new office has not yet been named.

ISLAMABAD PROTEST TALKS

Pakistan government, Imran Khan's PTI hold talks ahead of Islamabad protest

ISLAMABAD

Pakistan's government and the Pakistan Tehreek-e-Insaf (PTI), the party of jailed former prime minister Imran Khan, held talks on Friday ahead of a planned demonstration in Islamabad seeking his release.

The negotiations were held ahead of Sunday's proposed protest and are scheduled to continue on Saturday, according to Pakistan's state broadcaster. The demonstration was earlier postponed from September 27.

Authorities have stepped up security in the capital and placed shipping containers along major highways and key entry points to prevent protesters from entering Islamabad. Containers were also stacked two-high at several locations, blocking access to the heavily fortified Red Zone, which houses important government buildings and institutions.

PTI said it remained prepared to proceed with the protest but indicated that the negotiations could make progress if the government showed flexibility on its demands.

Party leader Halcem Adil Sheikh said the release of Khan's sisters, who were arrested last month, was among the issues being discussed.

"We are talking to the government today in a positive spirit," Sheikh said.

Khan, 73, has remained in prison since August 2023 and faces multiple cases, including charges related to corruption, treason and inciting violence following widespread unrest in May 2023. Khan and his legal team have rejected the allegations and described the cases as politically motivated.

The planned protest has also caused disruption to the transport sector.

Imdad Hussain Naqvi, senior vice-president of the All Pakistan Goods Transport Owners Association, said more than 2,500 containers had been stopped by police in Islamabad and surrounding areas.

"The government doesn't even pay us for the containers."

Our containers have been stuck for almost 25 days," Naqvi said.

The use of containers as roadblocks has affected the movement of goods and raised concerns among transport operators whose vehicles and equipment have been held for security purposes.

Meanwhile, residents and commuters have urged the government and political parties to resolve their differences through dialogue, amid preparations for Sunday's demonstration.

The talks between the government and PTI are expected to continue on Saturday as authorities maintain heightened security across the capital ahead of the planned protest.

India face Pakistan for Asian Games cricket gold

NISSHIN

India and Pakistan will meet for the first time at the Asian Games when the two men's cricket teams clash for the gold medal at Karogi Sports Park on Saturday.

India reached the final after a dominant 124-run victory over Sri Lanka in the semi-final. Ishan Kishan led the batting effort with a superb 80 off 46 balls, hitting five sixes and four fours. Teenager Vaibhav Sooryavanshi provided another attacking contribution with 38 off 21 balls as India posted 169/7.

India's bowlers then dismantled Sri Lanka for just 45. Jasprit Bumrah struck twice in an opening spell that removed Sineth Jayawardena and Sohan de Livera without scoring. Bumrah finished with 2/7, while Axar Patel took 2/8 and Abhishek Sharma claimed 2/2.

Pakistan, meanwhile, defeated Bangladesh by six wickets in a rain-affected semi-final. Bangladesh scored 111/7 after Pakistan's bowlers kept the batting side under pressure. Saim Ayub was particularly effective, conceding only three runs in his two overs and taking a wicket.

Pakistan's chase suffered an early setback when Sahibzada Farhan was dismissed by Mahedi Hasan. However, Maaz Sadaqat, Usman Khan and Saim Ayub made useful contributions to keep Pakistan on course. With Pakistan at 76/4, Abdul Samad and Hasan Nawaz accelerated the chase, taking 23 runs from Mustafizur Rahman's over.

Pakistan eventually needed 13 runs from 18 balls and completed the chase in the 12th over, with Hasan Nawaz hitting the winning boundary. Saturday's final will therefore mark the first Asian Games cricket encounter between the two teams, with the gold medal at stake.

Sujeet reaches wrestling final, Dipanshi eyes bronze

NAGOYA

Indian freestyle wrestler Sujeet Kalkal stormed into the men's 65kg final at the Aichi-Nagoya Asian Games after defeating reigning Olympic champion and home favourite Kotaro Kiyooka of Japan in a thrilling semi-final on Friday.

Sujeet recovered from an early 0-2 deficit to force a 3-3 draw and advance on criteria, producing one of the biggest victories of his career. The Asian Championships gold medallist will face Tajikistan's Abdulmazhid Kudiev in the gold-medal bout later in the day.

He then defeated Iran's Abbas Ebrahimzadeh 10-0 in the quarterfinals to set up his semi-final against Kiyooka. The Japanese wrestler raced to a 2-0 lead, but Sujeet responded with successive scoring moves to move ahead 4-2. Following a review, his score was reduced to three, but he held on after Kiyooka levelled the contest at 3-3, advancing because he had registered the higher-scoring move.

In the 50kg category, India's Dipanshi lost 11-0 to four-time world champion and Tokyo Olympic champion Yui Susaki of Japan. However, Susaki's progress to the final gave Dipanshi a repechage opportunity. Dipanshi defeated Cambodia's Samnang Dit 10-0 by technical superiority and earned a chance to fight for bronze against Kazakhstan's Zeinep Bayanova.

India women win historic recurve archery gold

NAGOYA

India's women's recurve archery team created history at the Asian Games on Friday, defeating the Republic of Korea 5-3 to win the country's first-ever gold medal in the event.

Ankita Bhakat, Kirti Sharma and 17-year-old Kumkum Mohod overcame the reigning champions at the Okazaki Chuo Sogo Park Multipurpose Square, ending South Korea's seven successive women's team titles dating back to the 1998 Bangkok Games. The Korean team included Olympic team gold medallist and reigning individual world champion Kang Chae-young, along with Lee Yunji and Oh Yejin.

The final was closely contested, with both teams drawing the opening two sets 54-54 and 56-56. India then produced a decisive third set, scoring 55 against South Korea's 51 to move 4-2 ahead. South Korea scored 54 in the fourth set, but Kumkum's final arrow landed a 10, helping India match the score and secure the gold.

India had qualified sixth with 1,962 points. The team then defeated Mongolia 6-0 and Chinese Taipei 6-0 before beating China 5-1 in the semi-final.

Earlier, Kumkum and Dhiraj Bommadevara won silver in the mixed recurve team event after losing 5-3 to China's Zhu Jingyi and Li Mengqi. China won the first two sets 38-34 and 37-35 before India took the third 37-36. The fourth ended 37-37, giving China the title. The result meant India missed the mixed-team opportunity to secure one of the men's and women's recurve quota places available for the Los Angeles 2028 Olympics.

India also claimed silver in the men's recurve team event. Dhiraj, Neeraj Chauhan and Yashdeep Bhogre lost 5-1 to South Korea in the final. India had beaten the Philippines, China and Iran on its way to the final.

India will have further opportunities for Olympic quota places in the individual recurve events, with Kumkum, Dhiraj and Neeraj competing in the quarter-finals on Saturday.
