AFTER MILK-CURD, BUS FARES GO UP

BMTC fares up 35%, KSRTC and others by 23%

- The revised fares will come into effect from November 5.
- Transport Minister Byarathi Suresh attributes hike to rising diesel prices.
- Fare adjustments follow similar hike in Tamil Nadu and Maharashtra.

BENGALURU

A daily bus ride is set to burn a much bigger hole in the pockets of commuters, with the Karnataka government unleashing a steep fare hike across all four state-run transport corporations.

From short city rides to long-distance journeys, passengers will have to shell out more, with BMTC fares hiked by 32% to 35% and those of Karnataka State Road Transport Corporation (KSRTC), North Western Karnataka Road Transport Corporation (NWKRTC) and Kalyana Karnataka Road Transport Corporation (KKRTC) by 23%.

Transport Minister Byrathi Suresh announced the hike at a press meet in Bengaluru and the revised fares will come into effect from Thursday midnight. The steep revision is set to hit lakhs of daily commuters, especially office-goers and low-income groups, who depend on public transport.

Between 2009 and 2025, fare revisions by the four corporations ranged from a modest 3.56% to a maximum of 15%, making the latest hike more than double the highest revision in the last 16 years.

In Bengaluru, even the shortest bus ride will cost significantly more. The minimum fare for BMTC, covering journeys of up to 2 km, has jumped from Rs 6 to Rs 10, a 67% increase. Those travelling between 2 km and 4 km will have to pay Rs 6 more, while fares for longer distances have gone up by Rs 12. A trip Majestic to Shivajinagar trip, which earlier cost Rs 12, will now cost Rs 18. The Majestic-Yeshwanthpur and Majestic-Vijayanagar fares have climbed from Rs 18 to Rs 25, while those travelling to Attibele will have to spend Rs 42 instead of Rs 30.

The pinch will be equally severe for passengers using BMTC's Vajra AC services. The first 6 km will cost Rs 5 more, journeys between 6 km and 18 km will attract a Rs 10 hike, while longer trips will become costlier by up to Rs 15. A journey from Central Silk Board to Hebbal will now cost Rs 65 against Rs 55, while the Majestic-Attibele fare has increased from Rs 60 to Rs 70.

Passengers travelling beyond Bengaluru will also feel the heat. For KSRTC, NWKRTC and KKRTC services, fares have been increased by Rs 9 for the first five stages and Rs 18 for journeys covering up to 10 stages. An ordinary bus journey from Bengaluru to Nelamangala or Hoskote will now cost Rs 44 against Rs 35 earlier. In express services, the Bengaluru-Nelamangala fare has risen from Rs 81 to Rs 100, while passengers travelling to Mandya will have to pay Rs 136 instead of Rs 110.

Core drivers behind revision

Massive deficits: The four public transport corporations operate at a combined annual loss of roughly ₹2,000 crore.
Operating costs: Rising diesel prices, swelling vehicle maintenance overheads, and pending employee wage hikes forced the revision.
Shakti scheme impact: While the government reiterates that it fully reimburses the corporations for the Shakti scheme (free travel for women), outstanding dues and reduced ratios of fare-paying male passengers heavily constrained operational cash flows.

Min Suresh defends hike

Defending the steep increase, Transport Minister Byrathi Suresh cited escalating operational costs, including diesel prices, employee salaries and bus maintenance expenses. He said KSRTC, NWKRTC and KKRTC had revised fares only twice in the past 10 years, while BMTC had effected just one revision during the period.

"The diesel prices alone had surged by Rs 10.47 per litre this year, adding to the mounting financial burden on the corporations. The four transport undertakings have accumulated liabilities of Rs 9,912 crore, including loans amounting to Rs 2,192 crore, Suresh added.

CM defends bus fare hike

Bengaluru: Chief Minister DK Shivakumar on Wednesday defended the bus fare hike, citing rising diesel and petrol prices and mounting losses incurred by state-run transport corporations.

Speaking to reporters here, he challenged the opposition BJP to ask PM Modi to reduce fuel prices instead of protesting against the state government's decision. He said the transport corporations had incurred heavy losses and were even facing difficulties procuring diesel.

He said the fare revision appeared to translate into an increase of Rs 2 to Rs 3 at different stages. "Diesel prices have gone up. Why did they (opposition) not speak when diesel and petrol prices increased? Why did they not speak when gas prices went up?" he asked, taking a swipe at the BJP.

Emphasising the need to ensure the financial viability of the transport corporations, the CM said the government wanted to allow them to function sustainably.

> All of you should tell Modi to reduce the cess collected on petrol and diesel. Let those prices come down, and we can cut prices accordingly.

Democrats sweep US midterms, deal blow to Trump

- Texas and other Republican strongholds fall
- Voters angry at high prices, Iran war
- Democratic Cong puts Trump's agenda in jeopardy

WASHINGTON

Democrats swept back into power in Congress in the 2026 midterm elections, winning control of the Senate and moving toward flipping the House as voters overwhelmingly sought change in Washington amid frustrations over the cost of living and war with Iran.

Democrats took control of the Senate by flipping multiple seats currently held by Republicans, marking a decisive repudiation of President Donald Trump's second term.

Democrats are also favored to retake the majority in the House, overcoming mid-decade redistricting efforts and unseating Republicans in once-safe districts in states across the country. Gains for Democrats extended into deep Republican territory, overturning Senate seats in South Carolina, Ohio, Iowa, Texas and Kansas. Democrats also swept all the battlegrounds, winning Senate seats in North Carolina, Georgia, Minnesota and New Hampshire.

Republicans also lost governorships in Ohio, Georgia and Texas, while Democrats held onto seats in battlegrounds all over the country.

While midterm elections are historically unfavorable to the president's party, the wide-ranging losses by Republicans highlight the depth of discontent voters are feeling about the direction of the country. Trump came into Election Day with approval ratings below 40% and a wide majority of voters saying the country is on the wrong track and in need of significant change.

Major takeaways

Democrats seizes control of both House and Senate
House: Democrats crosses 218-seat majority threshold.
Senate: Democrats secure 54 seats, Republicans - 44, with 2 races uncalled.

Major political setback for Trump
- Democrats make historic gains in Republican strongholds like Texas, Kansas, South Carolina,
- Ohio, Iowa, North Carolina & Maine.

Republican fortresses collapse
- Kansas elects its first Democratic senator in nearly a century.
- Texas elects Democrat James Talarico in Senate race, first time since 1988.

Cost of living emerged decisive issue

BJP defamation case against Cong quashed

BENGALURU

The Karnataka High Court on Wednesday quashed the criminal defamation case filed by the BJP against the Karnataka Pradesh Congress Committee (KPCC), Chief Minister DK Shivakumar and former chief minister Siddaramaiah over the publication of advertisements accusing the previous BJP government of corruption.

Justice M Nagaprasanna allowed the petitions filed by the Congress leaders seeking quashing of the criminal proceedings. The case was registered against KPCC, Congress leaders Rahul Gandhi, Shivakumar and Siddaramaiah over allegations that they were responsible for publishing newspaper advertisements containing derogatory allegations against the BJP-led state government, which was in power between 2019 and 2023 under former chief minister Basavaraj Bommai.

The advertisements had described the then BJP government as a "40 per cent commission sarkar", alleging that commissions were being charged in public procurement, allotment of contract works and supply of COVID-19-related materials, among other activities. The advertisements also alleged that the BJP government had looted ₹1,500 crore from the people of Karnataka through corrupt practices.

The BJP had filed a private complaint in May 2023 against the Congress party, its Karnataka unit and the Congress leaders.

SC to examine lifelong immunity shield for CEC, ECs

New Delhi: The Supreme Court on Wednesday agreed to examine the constitutional validity of the absolute immunity from prosecution granted to the Chief Election Commissioner and Election Commissioners under a 2023 law.

A three-judge bench led by Chief Justice of India Surya Kant and comprising Justices Joymalya Bagchi and V Mohana issued notices to the Centre and the Election Commission of India.

The court directed the respondents to file their counter-affidavits within four weeks and listed the matter for further hearing on December 18.

The petitions, filed by RJD MP Manoj Kumar Jha and activist Arun Agrawal, challenged Section 16 of the Chief Election Commissioner and Other Election Commissioners (Appointment, Conditions of Service and Term of Office) Act, 2023.

They contended that the provision constituted a direct assault on the basic structure of the Constitution by granting lifelong immunity to the poll panel chiefs.

US's first Muslim senator is Karnataka's son-in-law

WASHINGTON: As Democrat Abdul El-Sayed makes history by becoming the first Muslim elected to the US Senate, his wife, Dr Sarah Jukaku, has brought a little-known Karnataka connection into the spotlight, as per reports.

A practising psychiatrist, Sarah was born into an Indian-immigrant Muslim family in Michigan, with roots tracing back to the coastal town of Bhatkal in Karnataka, 140 km from Mangaluru.

Her family boasts a prominent history in the region. Her grandfather, Jukaku Shamshuddin, served as deputy minister for finance in Mysore State under then chief minister BD Jatti. Widely regarded as the first lawyer from the Bhatkal area, he is remembered for driving local development, including bringing electricity to the town.

Sarah's father, Dr Tayeb Jukaku, is a nephrologist who completed his MBBS in Bengaluru prior to immigrating to the US. He has also been active with the Islamic Society of North America, serving on its founders' committee.

Despite Sarah growing up in the United States, her father consciously ensured his children remained connected to their ancestral heritage by arranging visits to Bengaluru and Bhatkal. Although much of the extended family has since settled in Bengaluru, Sarah's immediate family remains primarily in the US.

BENGALURU

A delegation led by ministers, MPs and MLAs from the Pampa Sagar region on Wednesday submitted a memorandum to Chief Minister DK Shivakumar, urging him to take measures to ensure an adequate release of water into the canals until November 30, to help irrigate crops and meet drinking water requirements. Iran exempts Indian vessels from Strait of Hormuz curbs

TEHRAN

Iran has exempted Indian vessels from restrictions on transit through the Strait of Hormuz, a senior Iranian lawmaker said on Tuesday, as attacks on shipping in the region continue to claim the lives of Indian seafarers. The latest exemption comes amid heightened concern over the safety of Indian nationals working aboard vessels in the Gulf, with the death toll from attacks on merchant shipping having risen to 23. Ahmad Hayat-Moghaddam, vice-chairman of the Iranian parliament's national security and foreign policy committee, said India, China, Iraq and Qatar had been granted exemptions and their vessels could pass through the strategic waterway without restrictions. Speaking at a meeting on economic and security conditions, he said Tehran had facilitated the passage of Indian ships to enable imports of medicines from India, while the arrangement with China was intended to secure Beijing's political support. "We have already exempted four countries from restrictions in the Strait of Hormuz — India, China, Iraq and Qatar. They are free to pass through, and the Americans have no issues with them either," Hayat-Moghaddam said.

AGNIPATH SCHEME REVAMP

Agniveers get another shot at permanent military jobs

...grants 2-year extension, opens pathway to permanent recruitment.

NEW DELHI

In a major overhaul of the Agnipath scheme, the government on Wednesday announced that Agniveers set to exit the military at the end of their four-year tenure will be given an additional two-year extension period and subsequently offered permanent recruitment, subject to meeting specific eligibility criteria and individual consent.

The decision was announced by Chief of Defence Staff Gen N S Raja Subramani, shortly after the Union Cabinet approved the changes in the military recruitment scheme as recommended by the three services.

Defence Minister Rajnath Singh said the move is part of "long-term structural reforms" of the defence forces aimed at creating "a younger, fitter, technologically equipped and future-ready military".

Under the revised arrangement, the remaining 75% of Agniveers who were to be let go after 25% absorption, will now be offered an additional two-year engagement period following feedback on the Agnipath scheme. Around 18,000 Agniveers from the first batch were expected to complete their initial tenure and exit in December 2026.

The CDS also said that even after completing the extended two-year period, these 75% Agniveers would also be offered an opportunity to enrol as regular soldiers in the armed forces. The selection will be based on merit. The announcement marks a change to the original four-year engagement framework.

Under the original Agnipath scheme, Agniveers serve for four years, after which 25% of each batch can be retained in the regular cadre based on merit and organisational requirements. The remaining 75% were expected to leave the armed forces after completing their tenure.

However, following feedback on the scheme, the government has decided to offer this remaining group an additional two-year engagement period, Subramani said.

Written exam before physical test

The CDS also announced a change in the Agniveer recruitment process. A written examination will now be conducted before the physical test, reversing the previous order of these selection stages.

Higher remuneration during extended service

Agniveers accepting the additional engagement period will receive higher emoluments than those paid during their initial four-year tenure. The enhanced pay structure is expected to apply during the extended period. However, the detailed financial provisions and implementation arrangements will be governed by the revised service framework. The CDS clarified that the additional engagement would not automatically guarantee permanent enrolment. Agniveers will have to meet the objective selection requirements before being considered for regular service.

Skill certificates

The CDS also said that Agniveers had been granted skill certificates recognising the training and experience they gained during their service. These certificates are intended to formally recognise the skills acquired during their engagement with the armed forces.

What the revised Agnipath scheme offers?

- Two-year service extension
- Pathway to permanent absorption
- Retained core seniority
- Increased remuneration
- Enhanced Seva Nidhi package
- Scheme continuity

What's Agnipath scheme?

The Agnipath Scheme is a military recruitment scheme introduced by the Government of India on June 14, 2022, to induct soldiers below the rank of commissioned officers into the Indian Army, Navy, and Air Force.

Ensure uninterrupted drinking water supply till May: Khandre

CH NEWS, MYSURU

Rural Development and Panchayat Raj Minister Eshwar B. Khandre directed officials to take necessary measures to ensure that there is no shortage of drinking water in villages until May next year, in view of the rainfall deficit caused by the El Niño effect and declining water levels in rivers, lakes and reservoirs.

Chairing a departmental progress review meeting here on Wednesday, he instructed officials to assess the groundwater levels of borewells in every village and estimate the extent of depletion. They must study the availability of surface water, the number of government and private borewells, and the availability of water tankers to prepare a comprehensive plan to ensure water supply for the next seven months. Despite spending crores of rupees on single-village and multi-village drinking water schemes, their purpose would be defeated if water failed to reach the people. Officials must expedite the completion of pending works and ensure water supply. "Water is the elixir of life. People cannot survive without it," Khandre said, directing Panchayat Development Officers (PDOs) and Jal Jeevan Mission engineers to ensure that drinking water complaints were addressed and supply restored within 24 hours.

Observing that villages were the soul of India, he said the country had around 6.4 lakh villages, while Karnataka had approximately 30,000 villages. The country had over 2.68 lakh gram panchayats, while Karnataka had 31 Zilla Panchayats, 239 Taluk Panchayats and 5,927 Gram Panchayats. Officials had a significant responsibility in ensuring the overall development of these villages.

The minister also reviewed the employment generated under the VB-G RAM G scheme in various villages and warned PDOs who had shown negligence and directed them to take immediate steps to ensure timely payment of wages to unskilled workers. Of the 2,822 lakes under the ownership and maintenance of gram panchayats in the district, encroachments had affected 200 acres of land belonging to 82 lakes. Officials were told to take steps to clear the encroachments and protect the lakes. He subsequently held an introductory meeting of the Abdul Nazir Sab State Institute of Rural Development and Panchayat Raj.

Department Secretary D. Randeep, Commissioner Y.S. Patil, Mysuru Zilla Panchayat CEO Ukkesh Kumar, Abdul Nazir Sab Institute Director Shaikh Tanveer Asif, VB-G RAM G Director Diddimani and others participated in the meeting.

'What is water budgeting?' Khandre asks engineers

MYSURU: Rural Development and Panchayat Raj Minister Eshwar B. Khandre took Jal Jeevan Mission engineers to task after they failed to explain the concept of water budgeting during a departmental review meeting in Mysuru on Wednesday. The embarrassing moment unfolded at the Mysuru Zilla Panchayat auditorium when the minister himself posed the question, "What is water budgeting?" The engineers were reportedly caught off guard, unable to provide an answer and standing with their heads bowed, exposing their lack of understanding of a crucial aspect of rural water management. Expressing displeasure over the officials' inadequate knowledge, Khandre questioned how they could discharge their responsibilities without even understanding the fundamentals of water planning. He subsequently explained the concept to the engineers, emphasising the need for a scientific and long-term approach to drinking water management. Water budgeting involves assessing the number of borewells and open wells in every village, the prevailing groundwater levels and the availability of alternative water sources. It also requires estimating water demand based on population growth for the next one and five years. The assessment must take into account the water requirements of schools, colleges, anganwadis, hospitals and industries. Officials should also examine whether surface water resources would be sufficient to provide safe drinking water to rural households over the next 30 years and prepare plans accordingly, he explained.

Govt imposed ₹1.5 lakh crore in additional taxes: Sandesh Swamy

CH NEWS, MYSURU

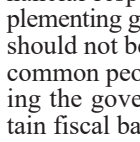

Former Mysuru Mayor Sandesh Swamy has alleged that the Congress government in Karnataka has collected an additional ₹1.5 lakh crore in taxes from the public under the pretext of implementing its guarantee schemes, placing a heavy financial burden on ordinary citizens.

In a press release, Swamy stated that before coming to power, the Congress had announced five guarantee schemes and promised that ₹52,000 crore would be spent annually on their implementation, with the amount being provided over and above the regular budgetary allocations. However, after assuming office, the government had imposed additional taxes amounting to approximately ₹1.5 lakh crore through various sources, he alleged, adding that the move had severely burdened the common people.

More than ₹20,000 crore in additional taxes had reportedly been collected through the Excise Department alone. Besides, taxes and service charges had been increased across various departments, including Revenue, Dairy and KEB, he claimed.

The successive hikes had resulted in an increase in the prices of essential commodities and services, pushing poor and middle-class families into severe financial distress, Swamy said.

He maintained that repeatedly imposing taxes and additional charges on people already struggling to make ends meet was unjustified. The financial responsibility of implementing guarantee schemes should not be shifted onto the common people, he said, urging the government to maintain fiscal balance.

Promised ₹52,000 crore a year for the guarantees, he says

Extra taxes about ₹1.5 lakh crore, he alleges

Swamy also pointed out that the prices of milk and curd had been substantially increased, followed by a hike in bus ticket fares. The successive price increases had left daily wage workers, private-sector employees, shop workers and other working-class people in distress.

Urging Chief Minister D.K. Shivakumar to consider the existing tax hikes sufficient, Swamy called upon the government to refrain from imposing further taxes and take immediate measures to control inflation.

He appealed to the government to safeguard the interests of the poor, middle-class families and the general public by providing relief from the escalating cost of living.

Nrityanveshana students stage 'Panchakanya' dance drama

CH NEWS, MYSURU

The third anniversary of Nrityanveshana Dance School was celebrated in collaboration with Nrityagiri Dance School at Ganabharathi auditorium in the city.

As part of the celebrations, students of Nrityanveshana presented a dance drama depicting the five influential women from Indian mythology, known as the Panchakanyas. These legendary women feature prominently in the Ramayana and the Mahabharata.

The famous Sanskrit verse, "Ahalya, Draupadi, Sita, Tara and Mandodari — remembering these five women every day is believed to destroy even the gravest sins," highlights the significance of the Panchakanyas. They are renowned for their exceptional qualities of courage, patience, purity, self-restraint, perseverance and presence of mind.

Students of Nrityanveshana Dance School present the Panchakanya dance drama

The presentation sought to explore the spirit of womanhood and resilience by drawing parallels between the Panchakanyas and the five elements of nature — earth, water, fire, air and space.

The dance drama was choreographed by renowned Carnatic music exponent R.S. Nandakumar. The performance, lasting around one to one-and-a-half hours, was presented with live instrumental accompaniment without the use of recorded music. The innovative approach aimed at enhancing the students' stage presence and performance skills.

Dr. M.G. Manjunath, Registrar (Evaluation) of the Karnataka State Dr. Gangubai Hangal Music and Performing Arts University, presided over the programme. Carnatic music maestro Vidwan R.S. Nandakumar and Krupa Padki, senior dancer and head of Nrityagiri Dance School, were the chief guests.

Nrityanveshana Dance School founder Vidushi N.S. Lakshmi not only portrayed the characters of the Panchakanyas but also trained a team of around 35 students to make the dance drama a success.

A total of 35 students of Nrityanveshana Dance School participated in the Panchakanya dance presentation.

‘Mysore Palace is private property; our stay is not a government favour’

Pramoda Devi Wadiyar asserts ownership of Ambari and throne; hits out at lapses in Dasara arrangements

CH NEWS, MYSURU

Asserting that the Mysore Palace and other properties of the erstwhile royal family are private assets, Pramoda Devi Wadiyar, widow of the late Srikantadatta Narasimharaja Wadiyar, on Wednesday clarified that the family’s continued residence in the palace was backed by court orders and could not be construed as a favour extended by the State Government.

Addressing a press conference, she sought to put an end to the ongoing controversy over her earlier statements on the cancellation of Vajramushti Kalaga and alleged lapses during Sharannavaratri 2026. She clarified that her October 25 press release was issued in response to media queries and was not a letter addressed to the Government, as reported in certain sections of the media.

Thanking Chief Minister D.K. Shivakumar for expressing willingness to examine the lapses through dialogue, she said she looked forward to meeting him. Her concerns, she maintained, were confined to the lack of coordination among government departments and alleged police high-handedness at two gates that disrupted the royal family’s customary religious rituals. Her earlier suggestions were intended to seek public support and constructive response, not to offend the Government. “At no point have I blamed the State Government,” she asserted.

The illuminated Mysore Palace

Tracing the legal history of the royal family’s properties, Pramoda Devi said Maharaja Jayachamarajendra Wadiyar signed the Instrument of Accession on August 9, 1947, which was accepted by the Union Government on August 16. Subsequent agreements and correspondence with the Centre recognised the Maharaja’s private properties, distinct from State assets. The Mysore Palace and Bangalore Palace were acquired, purchased or constructed using the Maharaja’s private funds.

> Erstwhile Mysore royal family

Referring to a 1972 communication from the Union Home Ministry, she said the abolition of privy purses and recognition of rulers did not affect properties recognised as private under earlier settlements. An arrangement made in 1976 to hand over certain portions of Mysore Palace to the State Government for maintenance and management was violated when gate collections and lease revenues were diverted to the Government Treasury instead of being utilised for palace maintenance and other agreed expenses.

Following her late husband Srikantadatta Narasimharaja Wadiyar’s legal challenge, the Karnataka High Court in 1997 directed the State Government to hand over the palace portions within 30 days. However, the Government subsequently enacted the Mysore Palace (Acquisition and Transfer) Act, 1998, which remains under challenge, she said.

Recalling the hardships faced by the family, including tax liabilities, property auctions and prolonged disconnection of electricity, she said they had endured the difficulties in silence. She also clarified that the 1998 Act pertained only to Mysore Palace and did not affect other private properties.

Pramoda Devi asserted that the royal family’s throne and Ambari remained under its custody. The Government paid royalty, not rent, for the commercial use of the Ambari during Dasara publicity and the Jamboo Savari procession.

Jumbo selection

On the selection of the elephant to carry the Ambari, she said she had every right, as its owner, to know which elephant was entrusted with the responsibility. Though no formal protocol existed, decades of mutual understanding with Forest Department officials and veterinarians had ensured confidence in the elephant’s fitness and temperament.

Citing the Shivamogga Jamboo Savari incident, in which an elephant ran amok and the Ambari fell and broke, she stressed the need for due diligence and safety.

The palace dispute, as she tells it

- AUG 9, 1947 — Maharaja Jayachamarajendra Wadiyar signs the Instrument of Accession; the Centre accepts it on Aug 16
- 1997 — High Court orders the State to hand back the palace portions within 30 days
- 1998 — Mysore Palace (Acquisition and Transfer) Act; still under challenge

She added that the Bangalore Palace Acquisition and Transfer Act, 1996, was also under challenge before the Supreme Court, while the family continued to remain in possession of the property.

Lone dharna seeks ban on pre-wedding shoots near heritage sites

CH NEWS, MYSURU

Aryan Gandhadagudi, State President of the Gandhadagudi Foundation, staged a dharna in front of the old Deputy Commissioner’s office here on Wednesday, demanding restrictions on pre-wedding photoshoots and videography around heritage structures and public roads in Mysuru.

The protest was organised in the wake of a tragic road accident near the northern entrance of Mysore Palace during a pre-wedding photoshoot, in which a grandfather and his granddaughter, who were travelling on a motorcycle, met with an accident. The girl died, while her grandfather is undergoing treatment in a hospital.

Barricades across public roads for photoshoots obstruct traffic and endanger road users

Aryan demanded that the authorities introduce appropriate regulations to prevent pre-wedding photoshoots from causing inconvenience to the public and motorists around Mysore Palace, the old Deputy Commissioner’s office, Dufferin Clock Tower, Silver Jubilee Big Clock and the market area. Placing barricades across public roads for photoshoots obstructed traffic and posed a serious threat to the lives of road users. He urged the authorities to immediately stop such activities that endanger public safety. “Mysuru is our proud cultural city. While preserving the beauty of its heritage structures and tourist destinations, priority must also be given to the safety of the public,” he said.

Citizens break a pumpkin to ward off evil eye from Mysore Palace

CH NEWS, MYSURU

Amid the recent controversies surrounding the iconic Mysore Palace, a group of citizens performed a traditional folk ritual to ward off the evil eye and protect the historic monument from what they described as unwanted attention and sinister designs.

The unique ritual was held in front of the Jayamarthanda Gate of the Mysore Palace on Wednesday, with citizens symbolically invoking traditional beliefs to safeguard the world-famous royal landmark.

In a colourful display of folk tradition, the participants sang, “May the eyes of the dog and the fox perish; may the eyes of those people and these people, and the eyes of the entire town, be destroyed.” They then performed the customary drishti ritual by circling a pumpkin around the Palace before smashing it, symbolically driving away evil influences.

Speaking on the occasion, Mysuru citizen Jayasimha said several people had cast their eyes on the world-famous Mysore Palace in recent days, triggering apprehensions among the public that attempts were being made to take control of the historic property.

“The Mysore Palace is not merely a building. It is the pride of Mysuru, a repository of history and heritage, and an emotional symbol of Kannadigas,” he said.

He added that the ritual was organised in a traditional folk style to symbolically ward off the evil eye and convey a message to those allegedly harbouring ill intentions towards the Palace.

The event was also intended as a symbolic warning to those involved in the ongoing controversies surrounding the royal landmark, he said.

The Mysore Palace, renowned for its architectural grandeur and royal legacy, remains one of Karnataka’s most cherished heritage landmarks and a powerful symbol of the city’s cultural identity.

Jayasimha, Sandesh, Bhairati Lingaraju, Dayananda Nayak and several others participated in the ritual.

Veera Savarkar Yuva Balaga stages protest in Mysuru against ink attack on Addanda Cariappa

CH NEWS, MYSURU

The Veera Savarkar Yuva Balaga staged a protest in Mysuru on Wednesday condemning the attack on renowned theatre personality Addanda Cariappa in Bengaluru, where he was allegedly assaulted and smeared with ink.

The protesters demanded stringent legal action against those responsible and adequate security for the former director of Mysore Rangayana.

The agitators termed the incident highly condemnable, stating that it was not merely an attack on an individual but also an assault on the freedom of expression guaranteed by the Constitution and the values of democracy. “Differences of opinion regarding an individual’s ideology or views should be addressed through debate, reasoning and arguments, rather than physical attacks, threats or acts of humiliation. Everyone has the right to express dissent, but no one has the right to take the law into their own hands,” they noted.

Members of the Veera Savarkar Yuva Balaga protest in Mysuru on Wednesday

They alleged that Congress workers were resorting to such acts under the impression that they would receive protection from the government. They demanded stringent legal action against the culprits. They recalled an earlier attack on Pramod Muthalik by a Congress worker named Srinivas, who was allegedly felicitated by Rahul Gandhi in Delhi and subsequently given a national-level responsibility in the party. They said the statement made by KPCC president B.K. Hariprasad in connection with the attack on Cariappa could further provoke party workers, and reflected the mindset of the Congress.

They maintained that political differences and ideological conflicts should be addressed within the framework of democracy and that respecting freedom of expression was everyone’s responsibility.

Referring to the controversy surrounding the play Gandhi’s Assassination: The Truth Behind Godse’s Reasons, they pointed out that Congress was attempting to intimidate people through its supporters, while the State government was using the police to obstruct the theatrical performance. They termed these developments undesirable.

The Veera Savarkar Yuva Balaga urged the State government to take the matter seriously, provide adequate security to Addanda Cariappa, ensure that the theatrical performance continues without obstruction, and initiate stringent legal action against those involved in the assault.

The protest was led by Veera Savarkar Yuva Balaga president Rakesh Bhat, convenor Sanjay and vice-president Sandesh Pawar.

What the Balaga wants

1. Adequate security for Addanda Cariappa
2. The play to be staged without obstruction
3. Stringent legal action against the attackers

Ashoka blames Congress for transport fare hike

Ashoka claimed bus fares had risen by up to 40%, citing BMTC fares from Majestic, and said everyday commuters were bearing the burden.

CH NEWS, BENGALURU

Leader of the Opposition R. Ashoka has criticised the Congress government over the increase in bus fares, alleging that the government had failed to clear its dues to the state transport corporations.

Addressing a press conference, Ashoka said the fare hike could have been avoided if the government had released the pending funds. He accused the government of making passengers pay for its financial mismanagement and announced a statewide BJP protest on November 5.

Ashoka claimed that bus fares had increased by up to 40%, placing an additional burden on commuters. Citing examples, he said BMTC fares from Majestic to Shivajinagar had increased from ₹12 to ₹18, while fares to Yeshwanthpur had risen from ₹18 to ₹25. He also cited higher fares on several intercity routes.

The BJP will hold statewide protests against the fare hike on November 5.

Government dues and transport losses

According to Ashoka, the government owes ₹2,943 crore to KSRTC, ₹1,306 crore to NWKRTC, ₹1,019 crore to BMTC and ₹999 crore to KKRTC. He argued that clearing these dues would have reduced the need for a fare revision.

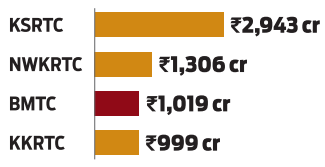

He also alleged that employee provident fund contributions and fuel bills remained unpaid. Referring to incidents involving poorly maintained buses, he questioned the government's handling of the transport corporations.

Ashoka recalled his tenure as Transport Minister, claiming that the corporations had performed well during that period and developed assets through their own resources.

He also criticised the government over milk price increases, alleging that consumers were facing additional expenses despite promises of better financial support to dairy farmers.

Demanding transparency, Ashoka sought a white paper on the state's financial position and utilisation of funds. He urged people to join the BJP's statewide demonstrations on November 5 against the fare hike.

High Court allows honey-trap case against Mumbai accused

CH NEWS, BENGALURU

The Karnataka High Court has refused to quash criminal proceedings against four Mumbai residents accused of allegedly trapping a Bengaluru man through a matrimonial website, extorting money and threatening to circulate his private photographs on social media.

Justice H.P. Sandesh dismissed the petition filed by Iram Pathan, Avaiz Pathan, Sumit Pathan and Rashida, allowing the case filed by Bengaluru's Whitefield police to continue before the 1st Additional Chief Metropolitan Magistrate (ACMM) Court.

The accused had challenged the jurisdiction of Bengaluru police, arguing that the alleged incidents took place in Mumbai. However, the High Court observed that the case could be investigated and tried in Bengaluru because the victim received threatening messages and suffered the consequences, including the loss of his job, in the city.

The court referred to Section 179 of the Code of Criminal Procedure (CrPC), which allows a case to be tried where an offence and its consequences occur in different places. It also said the accused could raise their jurisdictional objections before the trial court.

According to the complaint, the incident dates back to 2020, when the man connected with a woman through the Jeevansathi matrimonial website. The accused allegedly used marriage discussions to blackmail him and circulated threats through WhatsApp, Instagram and Snapchat.

The complainant further alleged that he was illegally confined during a visit to Mumbai and forced to pay ₹50,000. False complaints were also allegedly sent to his employer, resulting in the loss of his job.

Following his complaint, Whitefield police registered a case, investigated the allegations and filed a charge sheet. The High Court has declined to stop the proceedings.

Nikhil questions government over ₹2,600 crore funds

CH NEWS, BENGALURU

JD(S) Youth Wing State President Nikhil Kumaraswamy has accused the Karnataka government of diverting around ₹2,600 crore meant for beneficiaries of the Gruha Lakshmi scheme. He has demanded an explanation on how the money was transferred and how it was spent.

Speaking at a press conference in Bengaluru, Nikhil alleged that the funds meant for the February and March 2025 instalments were not paid to beneficiaries but transferred to the Karnataka State Women's Development Corporation.

Under the Gruha Lakshmi scheme, eligible women heads of households receive ₹2,000 every month through Direct Benefit Transfer (DBT). Nikhil said around 1.27 crore women had benefited from the scheme and questioned why payments for the two months remained unpaid.

He also referred to proceedings before the Karnataka High Court, alleging that the government had cited a shortage of funds as the reason for withholding the payments. According to Nikhil, around ₹2,600 crore was transferred on March 31, 2025. He further alleged that the ₹1,111 crore was initially placed with Anekal Taluk Panchayat, while more than ₹900 crore was transferred to the Women's Development Corporation. He further alleged that the ₹1,111 crore held by the panchayat was subsequently transferred to the corporation.

Nikhil questioned why money meant for women beneficiaries was moved to another institution and demanded details of its present status and utilisation.

He also questioned the government's financial management, alleging a contradiction between claims of financial stability and the reported shortage of funds for the scheme. He sought a detailed clarification from the government.

Preventing child marriage, child trafficking, child labour and sexual abuse of children is a collective responsibility of society, Principal District and Sessions Judge and District Legal Services Authority (DLSA) Chairman Biradar Devendrappa N. said.

He was speaking at a legal awareness programme organised at the district level to educate officials and the public about child protection laws, the Prohibition of Child Marriage Act, 2006, the POCSO Act, 2012, and the legal procedures for adoption.

He pointed out that adoption must be carried out strictly through the procedures prescribed by law. Illegal adoption, child trafficking and the exploitation of children are punishable offences. People seeking to adopt a child should follow the authorised legal process rather than approaching unauthorised individuals or agencies.

Kumaraswamy must cooperate with sting probe: Balakrishna

Balakrishna urged Union Minister H.D. Kumaraswamy to cooperate with the police investigation instead of criticising officials.

At a glance

- Cooperation urged with the ongoing police investigation
- Fair probe required to find responsible parties
- Household involvement suggested as a possibility
- Legal channels recommended instead of threats
- Official duties must continue without intimidation
- Truth and clarity expected from impartial inquiries

CH NEWS, RAMANAGARA

Municipal Administration Minister H.C. Balakrishna has urged Union Minister H.D. Kumaraswamy to cooperate with the investigation into the alleged sting operation and clear his name by helping establish the truth.

Speaking to reporters in Bidadi on Wednesday, Balakrishna said that Kumaraswamy, who has served twice as Karnataka Chief Minister and is currently a Union Minister, should cooperate with the investigation rather than make statements against police officials.

Reacting to Kumaraswamy's name being mentioned in connection with the sting operation, Balakrishna remarked that such an incident was unlikely to have been carried out by a prominent political leader. He said a proper investigation was necessary to identify those responsible.

Balakrishna sarcastically remarked that Kumaraswamy might not even be aware of the incident, although it had reportedly taken place at his residence. He suggested that someone within the household might have been involved and said the investigation should establish the facts.

He also criticised Kumaraswamy for allegedly threatening police officers over their statements concerning the case. Referring to the Police Commissioner's remarks, Balakrishna said that if Kumaraswamy believed the officer's statement was incorrect, he should challenge it through legal channels instead of issuing threats.

He also recalled an earlier incident involving the Hassan Deputy Commissioner, who had responded to Kumaraswamy's alleged threats. Balakrishna questioned the purpose of intimidating government officials and said they should be allowed to discharge their responsibilities.

He further asked whether the Police Commissioner should face consequences merely for expressing his position on the matter.

Balakrishna maintained that cooperation with the investigation was the appropriate way for Kumaraswamy to establish his position and remove doubts surrounding the controversy. He stressed that the truth should emerge through a fair and impartial investigation.

Manjunath challenges Balakrishna over Puttanna's defeat

CH NEWS, RAMANAGARA

Former MLA A. Manjunath has launched a sharp attack on Minister H.C. Balakrishna over the defeat of Congress Legislative Council candidate Puttanna, challenging the Minister to take an oath that he had sincerely worked for the candidate's victory.

Speaking to reporters at his residence in Bidadi on Wednesday, Manjunath questioned Balakrishna's role in the election campaign. He said that despite being a Minister and having the support of several other Ministers in Bengaluru, Balakrishna had failed to ensure the victory of his party's candidate.

"Come forward and take an oath that you worked sincerely for Puttanna. You failed to put in the required effort during the election. What moral right do you have to criticise others?" Manjunath asked.

Manjunath criticised Balakrishna for failing to secure his party's victory despite ministerial support during the election campaign.

> "Come forward and take an oath that you worked sincerely for Puttanna."
> — A. Manjunath, Former MLA

Referring to senior Congress leader Rajanna's statement that everyone in the region shared responsibility for Puttanna's defeat and should resign, Manjunath questioned Balakrishna's response. He asked whether the Minister's reported suggestion that Rajanna leave the Congress had been made at the direction of the Chief Minister.

Manjunath also made allegations against Balakrishna over his political conduct and questioned his authority to criticise leaders, including JD(S) state leader H.D. Kumaraswamy. He alleged that Balakrishna had not worked effectively for party candidates in previous elections, including the Lok Sabha election involving D.K. Suresh.

Claiming that he had secured an additional 35,000 votes in the Magadi constituency during an earlier election, Manjunath said Balakrishna lacked the political strength to ensure electoral victories.

Asked whether Rajanna would join the JD(S), Manjunath said the political developments would become clear when the next election season begins. He added that several leaders were interested in joining the JD(S).

Appreciating the successful completion of the first phase, House Listing and Housing Census, he said 4,69,235 households and a population of 17,90,422 had been recorded in Mandya district. He directed officials to ensure that no household or individual identified during the first phase was left out of the population enumeration.

He said census data would help the government formulate welfare schemes, development programmes and future policies. It would also be important for electoral delimitation. As the exercise is being conducted digitally, officials must become familiar with the mobile application and encourage people to use the self-enumeration facility. He stressed the need for zero errors.

Additional Deputy Commissioner B.R. Roopa urged officials to work with commitment and strive for recognition through outstanding performance. Every citizen and government official must work together with honesty and commitment to eradicate corruption and build a transparent society, said Principal District and Sessions Judge T.P. Ramlinge Gowda.

He was speaking at the inauguration of 'Awareness Week-2026' held at the Zilla Panchayat hall in Chikkaballapura on Wednesday. The programme was jointly organised by the District Legal Services Authority, District Administration, Zilla Panchayat, Police Department and Karnataka Lokayukta.

He said government welfare schemes should reach eligible beneficiaries without delays, difficulties or corruption. He further stated that the objective of Awareness Week was to create public awareness against corruption and strengthen ethical values among government employees. Every official and staff member should take an oath to discharge their duties honestly and safeguard public interest.

KRS water level drops back to 100 feet

CH NEWS, MANDYA

The water level at the Krishnarajasagara (KRS) reservoir in Srirangapatna taluk of Mandya district has dropped to 100 feet following the continuous release of water to Tamil Nadu.

The reservoir, which had recorded a water level of 104 feet a week ago, has witnessed a steady decline over the past several days. The reduction in storage has drawn attention to the reservoir's current water position and the gap between incoming and outgoing water.

According to the latest figures, the inflow into the reservoir stands at just 548 cusecs, while the outflow is considerably higher at 7,871 cusecs. As a result, the water level has fallen to 100.12 feet, with the total storage estimated at 22.904 TMC.

The substantial difference between inflow and outflow is contributing to the continuing decline in the reservoir's storage. Within a week, the water level has dropped by nearly four feet from its earlier mark of 104 feet.

The KRS reservoir is one of Karnataka's important water sources and plays a significant role in meeting irrigation and drinking water requirements in Mandya and neighbouring districts. Water released from the reservoir also forms part of the Cauvery river system, which is shared by Karnataka and Tamil Nadu.

The declining storage has brought renewed attention to the importance of monitoring reservoir levels, assessing available inflows and managing water distribution carefully.

With the inflow remaining relatively low compared to the outflow, the reservoir's water position continues to be closely watched.

The latest figures highlight the pressure on storage levels amid the ongoing release of water to the neighbouring state.

Rural Development and Panchayat Raj Minister Eshwar B. Khandre held a review discussion with Mandya Zilla Panchayat CEO K.R. Nandini while travelling by car from Mandya towards Mysuru, issuing several directions to strengthen rural infrastructure and improve public services.

The Minister directed the construction of well-equipped bus shelters in 50 villages with high passenger movement under the VB-G RAM G scheme. He also suggested opening more Akka Cafes, which provide income opportunities for women, and assigning their management to women's self-help groups.

Emphasising the effective utilisation of government grants and tax revenue, Khandre called for creating permanent public assets in villages. He said 375 projects could be undertaken under the scheme.

On e-Swathu property records, he instructed Panchayat Development Officers to conduct immediate field inspections after receiving applications, verify documents, invite objections and issue certificates without unnecessary delays.

He also ordered the cancellation of property records issued using forged documents. Referring to allegations of 1,881 illegal e-Swathu records in Indavalu Gram Panchayat, he warned officials against corruption and irregularities.

Reviewing lake conservation, he said Mandya district had 417 lakes under Gram Panchayat limits. Of the 319 acres encroached upon across 155 lakes, 162 acres had been recovered from 133 lakes. The remaining 158 acres across 22 lakes must be cleared, excluding residential houses. He also directed officials to remove obstructions in stormwater channels, protect government land and improve groundwater recharge.

Khandre instructed officials to organise Gram Sabhas to identify beneficiaries for cattle sheds, sheep and goat shelters, borewell recharge pits and farm ponds under the scheme.

The Zilla Panchayat CEO was asked to visit at least four villages twice a week and resolve public grievances concerning roads, drinking water, streetlights, sanitation and property records.

Citing the possibility of summer water shortages due to El Niño-related rainfall deficits, he ordered village-level water budgeting and advance identification of alternative water sources. He also directed officials to ensure that wages for unskilled workers under the scheme were paid within 15 days.

Monthly Task Force meetings mandatory to curb child labour

CH NEWS,Chitradurga

Additional Deputy Commissioner B.T. Kumaraswamy has directed officials to conduct monthly taluk-level Task Force Committee meetings without fail to review measures for eradicating child labour and protecting children's rights.

He was speaking while chairing a meeting of the District-level Task Force and Executive Committee at the Deputy Commissioner's office on Wednesday.

He observed that some taluks had conducted only two or three meetings in the past eight months and warned that disciplinary action would be taken against Labour Inspectors who failed to hold meetings regularly.

He instructed officials to conduct frequent inspections at hotels, dhabas, garages, workshops, construction sites and bakeries. Children found working illegally must be rescued immediately, rehabilitated and provided access to education. Cases should also be registered against employers violating the law.

Kumaraswamy stressed that rehabilitation should extend beyond producing rescued children before the Child Welfare Committee. Officials must visit their homes, assess family conditions and ensure their return to education. Eligible children should be admitted to residential schools under the 10 per cent reservation provision, with parental consent.

He directed the District Labour Officer to review the performance of Labour Inspectors every 15 days and submit reports on inspections and cases registered. School authorities were also instructed to identify children absent for 15 consecutive days or those who had dropped out.

BJP leader demands withdrawal of bus fare hike

CH NEWS, Koppal

BJP leader Dr. Basavaraja Kyavatar has strongly criticised the Congress-led state government's decision to increase bus fares, demanding its immediate withdrawal.

In a statement, he said the fare hike would impose an additional financial burden on ordinary people, who are already struggling with rising prices of essential commodities and increased electricity tariffs. He described the decision as unjustified and alleged that the government was indirectly recovering the cost of its guarantee schemes by increasing public expenses.

He said the fare increase would particularly affect students, employees, daily wage workers, women and residents of rural areas who depend on public transport for their daily needs. People travelling by bus for work, education and other essential purposes would have to spend more, adding to their regular household expenses.

Kyavatar pointed out that poor and middle-class families would face greater financial pressure due to the additional travel costs. He questioned the government's claim of providing a pro-people administration, saying that increasing transport fares while promoting its guarantee schemes contradicted that commitment.He also said public transport was an essential service for thousands of families, particularly those who cannot afford private vehicles. Any increase in fares would directly affect their monthly budgets and make daily commuting more expensive.

The BJP leader urged the state government to reconsider its decision and withdraw the fare hike without delay. He called upon the government to find alternative ways to address the financial difficulties of state transport corporations instead of transferring the burden to passengers.

CH NEWS, Vijayapura

Deputy Commissioner Dr. Anand K. has directed officials to complete ongoing drinking water supply projects in the Nikhundi and Basavanabagewadi areas within the stipulated time and maintain construction quality.

During a visit to the Nikhundi and Basavanabagewadi areas on Wednesday, the Deputy Commissioner reviewed the progress of various development works being implemented under the Jal Jeevan Mission and its updated version 2.0. He inspected pipeline installation works and instructed officials to ensure that the projects were completed without delay.

Reviewing the construction of the Nikhundi market, the Deputy Commissioner instructed the concerned officials to complete the work within the next month. He stressed that construction quality should not be compromised and that technical inspections must be conducted regularly to ensure the durability of the structure.

He also inspected the quality of food grains supplied through the Indira Canteen. Officials were instructed to ensure that beneficiaries received food prepared according to prescribed standards, including chapatis and rotis, along with other food items. Cleanliness and hygiene at the canteen premises must also be maintained.

The Deputy Commissioner further reviewed the progress of drinking water pipeline works in Nikhundi and Basavanabagewadi, including projects requiring Forest Department permission. He directed officials to expedite pending administrative procedures and obtain necessary approvals without delay so that the drinking water schemes could be implemented on schedule.

Officials from various departments, including the Vijayapura sub-division, municipal administration, rural drinking water supply and other concerned agencies, accompanied him during the inspection.

LET EXAM SEASON TEST STUDENTS, NOT BREAK THEM

DR. THEJAS GIGY

November has arrived, and with it the annual tightening of households across the country. Timetables are pinned to walls, social plans are shelved, and a single question hangs over the dinner table: how will it go? For millions of students, a few hours at a desk now seem to carry a verdict on their entire future.

Some of that pressure is healthy. Exams remain a broadly accepted way to measure learning fairly at scale, and the discipline of preparing for them builds habits that last well beyond the results. No one serious argues for lowering standards or abolishing assessment.

But there is a line between pressure that motivates and pressure that corrodes, and exam season crosses it too often. Students trade sleep for extra study hours, skip meals, abandon exercise and put friendships on hold until "after the exams." Comparison spreads quickly through classrooms and group chats, where everyone appears to be working harder than you. The anxiety that results does not always end when the last paper is handed in.

The adults around students share the responsibility. Parents, with the best of intentions, can reduce every conversation to a progress report. Schools, judged on results, pass their own pressure down the line. A thriving coaching industry stacks extra classes onto an already full day until a teenager's week has no gaps left. We say we want young people to be curious, resilient and balanced, then design a season that rewards none of those qualities.

It is worth stating plainly what an examination is. It captures a narrow slice of ability on a particular morning, under particular conditions. A bad night's sleep, an illness or a nervous start can distort the outcome. Plenty of people who stumbled in the exam hall went on to do excellent work, and plenty who topped their classes discovered that life asks different questions. A student who believes a mark defines their worth is carrying a burden no examination board ever intended.

The remedy does not require reforming the system overnight. Rest should be treated as part of revision, not a reward for finishing the syllabus, because memory and concentration depend on sleep, food and movement. A rested student will often outperform an exhausted one who studied longer. At home, the first question should be how a student is feeling, not how many chapters they have covered. Many need reassurance more than supervision.

Schools, for their part, should make counselling and calm communication standard in the weeks around exams, not optional extras reserved for those who ask loudly. Realistic study schedules and an honest message that effort matters more than ranking would ease a great deal of strain.

> To the adults who surround them, the task is simple, if not always easy: help them do their best and make sure they know that their best is enough.

And all of us should learn the warning signs: persistent sleeplessness, withdrawal, constant dread, or talk of hopelessness. These deserve attention and, where necessary, professional help. Seeking support is a sensible step, not a sign of weakness.

Exams will not disappear, and the effort students put into them should be respected. But the purpose of education is to prepare young people for life, not to teach them that life is a series of ordeals to be endured. If November produces strong grades and a damaged sense of self, the system has traded something precious for something temporary.

To every student facing a paper this month: prepare well, rest properly, and remember that you are far more than a number on a result sheet.

KERALA'S VISION FOR ELDERLY DIGNITY AND SECURITY

LALIT GARGG

India's cultural ethos has always regarded parents as worthy of the highest reverence. The timeless Vedic injunction, "Matru Devo Bhava, Pitru Devo Bhava" (revere your mother and father as divine) reflects a civilisational belief deeply embedded in the Indian way of life. Yet, if parents in the twilight of their lives are forced to endure neglect, humiliation, loneliness and insecurity within their own homes, it is not merely a sign of family disintegration; it is a profound indictment of our collective conscience. When those who sacrificed their present to secure their children's future find that their children no longer have the time, tenderness or affection to care for them in old age, the moral darkness beneath the glitter of material progress becomes painfully evident.

Against this troubling backdrop, the Kerala Legislative Assembly's passage of a comprehensive bill for the protection of senior citizens in October 2026 represents a promising and potentially transformative initiative. It is more than a legislative addition to the statute book; it offers the prospect of a new dawn of dignity, security and reassurance for older people. India is estimated to have nearly 150 million citizens aged 60 and above. This number is projected to rise to approximately 230 million by 2036 and exceed 340 million by 2050. These demographic shifts present both a warning and an opportunity. Advances in medical science and improved healthcare have extended human longevity, but an essential question remains: have we prepared ourselves to make those additional years dignified and fulfilling? Longevity alone is not an achievement. The true measure of progress lies in ensuring that longer lives are accompanied by respect, independence, emotional security and a sense of belonging.

> "A society whose roots remain firmly connected to the wisdom and experiences of its elders is far better equipped to withstand the storms of change and uncertainty. That, in the truest sense, will be the hallmark of a compassionate, culturally grounded, prosperous and developed India."
> — Lalit Gargg

Kerala's initiative assumes particular significance because it refuses to treat the problems of older people merely as private family matters. Instead, it recognises their protection as a wider social and institutional responsibility. The proposed legislation provides for penalties for physical and psychological abuse, cruelty and the abandonment of senior citizens against their will. It also emphasises the establishment of protection units, the regulation of care facilities, the training of caregivers and accessible mechanisms for resolving complaints. Provisions addressing cyber fraud and recognizing the rights of older people in healthcare-related decision-making reflect an understanding of the challenges of a rapidly changing society. The message is unequivocal: caring for older people may begin as an expression of affection and goodwill, but safeguarding their dignity and security is an indispensable obligation of an organized and civilized society.

One of the most compassionate concepts underpinning this initiative is "Ageing in Place", the principle that older people should, wherever possible, be able to live with dignity in their own homes and familiar surroundings. The need for old-age homes cannot be denied, but even a single room in one's own home can be infinitely more precious when it is warmed by affection and a sense of belonging. Older people need more than food, medicines and a bed. They need a companion with whom they can converse, an attentive ear that listens to their concerns, a sensitive mind that values their experiences and a family that acknowledges their worth. At this stage of life, emotional deprivation can often cause deeper suffering than financial hardship. When the voices of older people go unheard within their own homes, the walls may remain intact, but the very soul of the family begins to weaken.

The disintegration of joint families, the relentless pace of metropolitan life, migration overseas and the growing dominance of individualistic attitudes have made old age increasingly difficult for millions. Once, grandparents were the living schools of family life. Their stories preserved history, their experiences imparted wisdom, and their blessings constituted an invaluable inheritance. Today, however, this reservoir of experience and insight is too often dismissed as irrelevant or outdated. Pressuring parents over property, wrongfully claiming control over their savings, abandoning them during illness or repeatedly wounding their emotions are all stains on the conscience of a civilized society. What a painful irony that the very hands which once taught children to walk should, in old age, be left yearning for a hand to hold!

Kerala's proposed legislation offers a comprehensive approach to addressing these concerns. It provides for imprisonment of up to three years and fines of up to ₹50,000 for abuse of senior citizens and abandoning them in circumstances covered by the legislation. It also envisages provisions for registering care facilities, training caregivers, resolving complaints and protecting older people against cyber fraud. Recognition of advance healthcare decisions, access to legal assistance and the ability to navigate digital services are additional measures that respond to the realities of contemporary life. Notably, the Kerala Legislative Assembly passed the bill unanimously on October 26, 2026. It must, however, receive the Governor's assent before it can become law. Its ultimate significance will depend not merely on its legislative provisions, but on the sincerity and effectiveness with which those provisions are implemented.

Another far-sighted dimension of this initiative is the concept of the Silver Economy. Older people must not be viewed merely as recipients of assistance, but as active contributors to society. Their experience, knowledge, skills and mature perspectives can be meaningfully channeled into education, mentorship, social service, entrepreneurship and community development. Retirement need not signify the end of one's productive life; it can mark the beginning of a valuable second innings. What society needs is a fundamental shift in perspective: older people must be regarded not as a burden, but as an invaluable asset. An ageing tree does not lose the value of its shade. Similarly, the wisdom accumulated over a lifetime can provide direction and stability to a nation's development journey.

The time has come for the Union Government and other states to draw inspiration from Kerala's initiative. The effective implementation of the Maintenance and Welfare of Parents and Senior Citizens Act, 2007, should be reviewed, and the law strengthened wherever necessary. States should establish dedicated protection units for senior citizens, accessible grievance-redressal mechanisms, free legal assistance, home-based healthcare services and safe community centers. Police stations, hospitals, banks and local authorities should have systems to address the concerns of older people promptly and sensitively. At the same time, schools and colleges should promote intergenerational dialogue, while sustained public campaigns should encourage greater empathy and responsibility within families. The law can punish an offence after it has occurred, but values and upbringing can prevent the circumstances that lead to such wrongdoing in the first place.

Ultimately, the protection of senior citizens is not merely a welfare issue concerning one age group; it is a question that will help determine the future direction of India itself. Those who are young today will be senior citizens tomorrow. Every compassionate system created to protect older people is, therefore, also an investment in our own future. The vision of a Viksit Bharat (a developed India) and India's aspiration to emerge as a Vishwaguru, or a global leader in wisdom and values, can become meaningful only when economic prosperity is accompanied by human compassion, technological advancement by ethical consciousness, and modern lifestyles by enduring family bonds.

Kerala's initiative signals the possibility of a brighter future, but extending that light to every household in the country is our collective responsibility. We must build an India where old age is not a period of helplessness, but one of dignity; where older people never feel like strangers in their own homes; and where their eyes do not remain fixed in anxious anticipation of their children's arrival, but shine with the warmth of their love and presence.

PLASTIC PARTICLES FOUND IN MILK SAMPLES: A SCIENTIFIC CONCERN

DR. VIJAY GARG

Milk is considered an important part of a healthy diet. From supporting the physical growth of children to meeting the nutritional needs of older adults, milk and dairy products play a significant role in human nutrition. However, scientific studies reporting the presence of microplastic particles in some milk samples have raised new concerns about food safety. This raises an important question: Is the milk we regard as a source of nutrition completely safe from plastic pollution?

What Are Microplastics?

Microplastics are tiny plastic particles generally smaller than five millimetres. They can enter the environment through the breakdown of larger plastic objects, fibres released from synthetic clothing, industrial processes and other sources. Even smaller particles are known as nanoplastics. These particles can be found in air, water, soil and food. Since many of them are invisible to the naked eye, specialised scientific techniques are required to identify and measure them.

How Do These Particles Enter Milk?

There are several possible pathways through which microplastics may enter milk. Plastic particles present in animal feed, drinking water or the surrounding environment may enter the bodies of dairy animals. In addition, contamination may occur during milk collection, storage and transportation through contact with plastic materials. Plastic pipes, containers, packaging materials and other equipment are also potential sources that require investigation. However, the source of contamination may vary from one sample to another, and no single cause can be held responsible in every case.

Why Is the Scientific Community Concerned?

Detecting microplastic particles in milk is itself a matter of scientific investigation. An even more important question is how these particles may affect human health. Some laboratory and animal studies have investigated possible effects of microplastic exposure, including inflammation, oxidative stress and changes in certain biological processes. However, these findings do not establish that the quantities of microplastics consumed through milk cause any particular disease in humans. Direct evidence regarding the effects of microplastics on human health remains limited. Therefore, it is important neither to ignore the potential risks nor to create unnecessary fear based on incomplete information.

The Need for Careful Testing

Comparisons between studies measuring microplastics in milk require considerable caution. The methods used to collect and store samples, the analytical techniques employed and possible contamination from airborne plastic particles in laboratories can influence the results. Reliable findings require standardised testing methods, appropriate control samples and confirmation of results by independent laboratories. It would be scientifically incorrect to conclude that all milk is contaminated on the basis of findings from only a limited number of samples.

What Can Consumers Do?

Consumers can take several practical steps to reduce avoidable exposure to plastic contamination:

- Purchase milk from clean and reliable sources.
- Ensure that containers used for collecting and storing milk are properly cleaned.
- Do not assume that heating or boiling milk provides complete protection against microplastics. Ordinary boiling cannot be relied upon to destroy plastic particles completely.
- Avoid storing hot milk for prolonged periods in unsuitable plastic containers. Use food-safe containers designed to withstand the relevant temperatures.
- Reduce unnecessary use of single-use plastics and ensure that plastic waste is disposed of responsibly.

These measures may help reduce certain opportunities for contamination, but they cannot guarantee complete protection from microplastics.

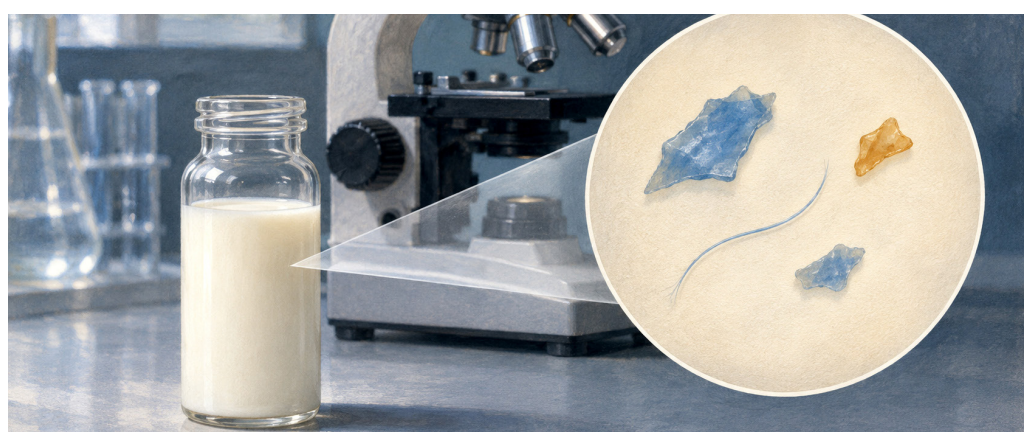

The Role of Government, Industry and Scientists

Authorities responsible for monitoring milk quality should promote standardised testing methods and assess milk samples where appropriate. The dairy industry should identify potential sources of contamination throughout production, packaging, storage and transportation. Scientists also need to determine the types, sizes and quantities of particles found in milk and investigate how they behave in the human body. Further research is required to understand their possible long-term effects, particularly on children and other potentially vulnerable groups. Public communication is equally important. Findings should be reported transparently, with clear explanations of the limitations of existing evidence. This would help consumers make informed decisions without unnecessary alarm.

Conclusion

The reported presence of microplastic particles in milk samples represents an important scientific and food-safety concern. The issue extends beyond milk and highlights the growing connection between plastic pollution and everyday human life. Instead of responding with fear or speculation, society should prioritise scientific evidence, transparent testing and responsible action. The nutritional value of milk should not be dismissed; rather, efforts should focus on ensuring its safety through research, monitoring and the reduction of plastic pollution.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Make Our Footpaths Safer

I urge our municipal authorities to repair broken footpaths near schools, markets and bus stops. Uneven paving forces pedestrians onto busy local roads, where children, older residents and people with disabilities face particular danger. The city should inspect the busiest routes, publish a repair schedule and keep a clear path around construction sites. Residents could also report damaged stretches through a dedicated phone number. A continuous, accessible footpath would make everyday journeys safer for everyone who walks around our neighbourhood. – Evan

More Shade for Parks

Our neighbourhood park needs more trees and better care for the ones already growing there. On hot afternoons, families crowd around the few shaded benches while much of the park sits empty. The municipality could plant suitable native trees along paths and near seating, with a watering plan for the first few summers. Local volunteers could help track which saplings survive. Even a modest planting programme would give residents more places to rest, play and meet outdoors during warmer months. – Velu

Make Bus Arrivals Predictable

Buses on our neighbourhood route often arrive in pairs after long gaps, leaving commuters unsure when to leave home. Students miss classes, workers arrive late and older passengers stand for extended periods. The transport authority should review actual arrival times and adjust schedules where delays regularly occur. Posting service updates at major stops would also help passengers without smartphones plan their journeys. A printed timetable that reflects road conditions would make the bus a more dependable choice for everyday trips. – Naveen

Keep Hospital Streets Quiet

Traffic noise near our hospital makes it harder for patients to rest. Drivers frequently honk at the main entrance, especially when taxis and private cars queue for space. Hospital management and traffic officers should mark a clear drop-off area, keep the ambulance entrance free and put up signs asking drivers to avoid unnecessary honking. An attendant during peak visiting hours could help vehicles move promptly. These simple measures would ease congestion and give patients a quieter place to recover indoors. – Suman

Keep Libraries Open Later

Extending library hours on one weekday evening would help residents who work or attend classes during the day. Many people need a quiet place to study, access the internet or read with their children. The library could try a three-month pilot and record how many visitors use the extra hours. It could then use those figures to decide whether to continue. A single late opening each week would give more residents a chance to use the library after regular hours. – Gowri

AI WILL NOT STEAL YOUR JOB

Artificial Intelligence has become the most talked about technology of our generation. Every day we read that AI can write poetry, create logos, diagnose diseases and even drive cars. For lakhs of young Indians sitting in engineering colleges, BPOs and design studios, this creates a genuine fear: Will AI take my job?

This anxiety is natural but history suggests it is misplaced. Every major technological shift destroyed some jobs but created many more. When computers entered Indian banks in the 1980s, unions protested for months fearing mass unemployment. What actually happened? Banking expanded to every town and created millions of new jobs. When ATMs arrived, people said bank tellers would vanish, but India today has more bank branches than ever before. Technology does not destroy work, it transforms it.

What AI will really steal is not your job but the boring, repetitive part of your job. The first draft of an email, the summarising of a 50-page report, the entry of data from one sheet to another, the making of a basic presentation. If a machine can do it, why should a human waste life doing it? This is actually liberation.

Consider a teacher in a government school in Karnataka. She earlier spent six hours making question papers in two languages. Now with AI she can do it in ten minutes and use the saved five hours to actually sit with weak students and mentor them. A small saree shop owner in Surat can use AI to write product descriptions for his website and spend time talking to customers. A young lawyer can use AI to find relevant case laws in seconds and spend time arguing better in court.

The real competition is not between human vs AI, but between human with AI vs human without AI. The employee who knows how to use AI tools effectively will replace the one who does not. This is the challenge for India. Our skilling system is still stuck in the past. Our ITIs and many colleges still teach MS Word and Excel as computer education. We need to urgently teach prompt engineering, data verification, critical thinking and AI ethics in every college. The National Education Policy 2020 talks about this, but ground level implementation in government schools and rural colleges is painfully slow.

There are also serious risks that we must address. AI can create deepfake videos of a politician, clone a singer's voice without permission, or steal an artist's design. We need strong laws for copyright, data privacy and labour protection. We must ensure that gig workers whose data trains AI models are compensated.

But banning or fearing AI is not the answer. The loom did not kill the weaver. The weaver who used the loom killed the one who refused to learn it. India missed the industrial revolution. We caught the IT revolution. We must lead the AI revolution.

The future does not belong to the most intelligent machine. It belongs to the most humane, creative and adaptable human who knows how to make the machine work for him. Let us learn, not fear. Let us build.

BENGALURU TRAFFIC NEEDS A PUBLIC TRANSPORT REVOLUTION

If you live in Bengaluru, you have already lost two years of your life in traffic without realising it. A recent global mobility report found that an average Bengalurean spends over 260 hours every year stuck in traffic jams, the highest for any Indian city. We joke about Silk Board junction and post memes about Outer Ring Road, but this is no longer funny. It is a public health emergency, an economic disaster and a mental health crisis rolled into one.

The problem is simple but our solution is wrong. For 20 years we believed more roads, more flyovers and wider roads would solve traffic. We built the Hebbal flyover, the Electronic City flyover, and are now talking about tunnel roads. Yet traffic has only become worse. Why? Because of a well-proven principle called induced demand. When you build more roads for private cars, more people buy cars and fill those roads within two years. You cannot solve traffic by building for cars.

The only solution that has worked in every major city in the world, from Tokyo to London to Singapore, is world-class public transport. Bengaluru needs buses, thousands of them. One BMTC bus carries 60 people in the road space of just three cars. It is the most efficient use of road. Yet in the last five years, while private cars have doubled to over 22 lakh, BMTC's fleet has actually shrunk to less than 6,500 buses. This is policy failure.

> "Bengaluru built India's IT future. Now it must build India's mobility future. Otherwise we will have the best companies in the world, but no way to reach them."

> IVANIA

We need at least 10,000 electric buses with dedicated bus lanes that no car can enter. We need Metro feeder buses that come every five minutes and are tracked by an app that actually works. We need footpaths that are walkable, where a woman with a child or an old man with a stick can walk without fear of falling into an open drain or being hit by a bike.

We must make driving costly and public transport cheap and dignified. Impose a congestion tax in central areas like MG Road and Koramangala, charge high parking fees in commercial complexes, and offer a common monthly pass for BMTC and Metro at Rs 1,000. Let people have a real choice: pay Rs 300 to drive to office or Rs 30 to take an AC bus that is on time.

DAUGHTERS OF INDIA ARE WINNING GOLD

When Manisha Bhanwala stood on top of the podium in Astana last week, the national anthem playing and the tricolour going up, she made history. At 29, in the 59 kg category, she became India's first-ever women's world champion in wrestling. For Indian sports, this is a watershed moment bigger than one medal.

For years, Indian women's wrestling lived with near misses. We won bronze at the Olympics, we won silver at the World Championships, we celebrated fighting spirit, but the gold always eluded us. Manisha broke that mental wall. Coming from a small akhara in Rohtak, Haryana, where she was often the only girl among 30 boys, training on mud floors, facing taunts from relatives for wearing shorts, her journey is the journey of every Indian girl who chooses a difficult dream.

This gold is not isolated. In recent years, Manu Bhaker won two Olympic medals in shooting, Nikhat Zareen became world champion in boxing, and our women's cricket team has become world-beaters. We are in the middle of a silent revolution led by our daughters. But behind the glory is a harsh reality.

Our daughters still fight for basics that male athletes take for granted. Safe hostels with locks that work, women coaches who understand their bodies, hygienic toilets in stadiums, sanitary pads, and most importantly, safety from harassment. The courageous protest by our top women wrestlers in 2023 at Jantar Mantar showed how unsafe even our champions feel. Medals cannot hide that truth.

Manisha's victory must become policy. Every district in India must have a girls-only sports hostel with proper nutrition allowance of at least Rs 500 per day, not the current Rs 250. Every SAI centre must have a woman physiotherapist and psychologist. Panchayats should be rewarded not just for stopping child marriage but for supporting a girl who wants to become an athlete. Haryana's sports policy gives cash awards, but what we need is monthly stipends for 10,000 young girls between 12 and 18 years so their parents do not pull them out of training due to poverty.

When a boy wins, his family celebrates. When a girl wins, an entire village changes its view of its daughters. A girl who wrestles delays marriage, completes school, becomes financially independent, and inspires ten more. The return on investment on women's sports is not just medals. It is social transformation.

Let us not just post Manisha's photo on Instagram for one day and forget. Let us build 1,000 more Manishas. Give them mats, coaches, safety and respect. They will give us gold and a better India.

NORTH INDIA IS CHOKING EVERY WINTER

Every November, North India disappears. Not because of fog, but because of smog so thick that you cannot see the building across the road. This week again, Delhi's AQI crossed 400, which is severe, schools were shut, construction banned and flights delayed. The Supreme Court had to intervene. We go through this drama every single year, yet nothing changes.

It is easy to blame farmers of Punjab and Haryana for burning stubble. It is partly true that stubble burning spikes pollution in November. But blaming only farmers is convenient dishonesty to hide our own contribution. Scientific studies by IIT Kanpur show that vehicles contribute 40 percent of PM2.5 in Delhi throughout the year, dust from construction and roads contributes 20 percent, and industries contribute 15 percent. Stubble is seasonal, but Delhi's air is toxic for 12 months. Even on days when there is zero stubble burning, Delhi's AQI is 180, which is three times the safe limit prescribed by WHO.

This slow poison is killing us. Doctors at AIIMS Delhi report a 40 percent jump in asthma, eye infections and heart complaints every winter. A study found that children growing up in Delhi have lungs 30 percent smaller and weaker than children in coastal cities like Mangaluru. And it is not just Delhi anymore. Kanpur, Patna, Lucknow, Jaipur and even Bengaluru now see AQI above 200 in winter months. Air pollution has become a national health emergency.

The solution is not gimmicks like odd-even or spraying water from helicopters. It needs political will and enforcement. First, dust control must be made mandatory at every construction site. Any builder violating dust norms must be fined Rs 5 lakh per day and his site sealed. Second, we must accelerate public transport. Delhi needs 10,000 electric buses, not 1,000. Diesel vehicles older than 10 years must be scrapped with no exception for anyone. Third, we must help farmers, not punish them. A Happy Seeder machine costs Rs 1.5 lakh. Give it free on rent to cooperatives and pay farmers Rs 2,500 per acre not to burn. This is far cheaper than the health cost of treating millions for respiratory diseases.

As citizens, we must also change. Stop burning garbage in your lane: it is illegal, but we all do it. Demand that your municipal councillor show monthly AQI data of your ward. Wear N95 masks when AQI is above 200, but do not accept it as normal.

During COVID we wore masks to protect from a virus. Now we wear masks to protect from our own cars, our own construction and our own apathy. Clean air is not a luxury for the rich. It is a fundamental right under Article 21 of our Constitution. We must fight for it every day, not just every winter.

PHONES ARE STEALING OUR CHILDREN'S CHILDHOOD

A 14-year-old boy in Kota recently told his school counselor that he feels his heart beating fast and gets anxious if his phone battery drops below 20 percent. A mother in Hyderabad complained that her 8-year-old daughter screams and throws things if she is not allowed to watch Instagram Reels during dinner. These are not stories of bad parenting. These are symptoms of an addiction that has been deliberately designed by some of the richest companies in the world.

India has over 700 million smartphone users, and according to a recent report, an average Indian teenager spends 7.5 hours daily on screen, mostly watching short videos. This endless scroll is silently destroying their attention span, sleep, mental health and relationships. NCERT's latest survey of 10,000 students found that 45 percent of Class 10 students sleep less than six hours because they stay up late on phones. Teachers across the country say the same thing: students cannot read one page of a book without getting distracted. They want everything in 30 seconds.

Why is this happening? Because these apps are not neutral tools. They are designed to be addictive. Teams of psychologists and engineers in California work day and night to make the algorithm stickier. They know that a 13-year-old girl who watches one makeup video is insecure about her looks, so the algorithm shows her 100 more videos telling her she is not fair enough, not thin enough. A boy watching one gaming video is pushed towards gambling and violent content. The young brain, which is still developing till age 25, cannot fight this manipulation.

Parents feel helpless because banning phones completely does not work. Schools that collect phones at the gate see children using them for five hours at home. What can work is conscious control and community action. No phones in bedrooms after 9 pm for anyone in the family, including parents. No social media accounts before age 16. At least one hour of compulsory outdoor play every evening. Schools must have phone-free periods and teach digital literacy as a subject: how algorithms manipulate you, how to spot fake news, how to protect privacy.

The government must also act strongly. Like tobacco companies, social media companies must be forced to carry warnings and must be fined heavily if they use addictive designs for children. Australia has recently banned social media for children under 16. We in India must at least have a national debate on it.

Childhood is very short. It should be spent climbing trees, fighting with friends, reading Amar Chitra Katha, getting scolded by grandparents, not scrolling endlessly in a dark room.

Technology is a good servant but a bad master. Let us take control back before the screen steals our children completely.

EATING ORGANIC IS NO LONGER A LUXURY

For a long time, when we heard the word organic food in India, we imagined expensive shops in South Delhi or Koregaon Park where rich people buy small packets of dal at triple the price. This perception was wrong and dangerous. Eating organic is no longer a luxury fad for the elite. It is a necessity for every Indian family who cares about health, farmers and the future of our soil.

The facts are alarming. India today uses over 60,000 tonnes of chemical pesticides every year, many of which are banned in Europe and America. Studies by the Indian Council of Medical Research have found pesticide residues in our daily vegetables like spinach and cauliflower, in pulses, in wheat flour and even in mothers' breast milk. These chemicals do not just wash away with water. Long-term exposure is directly linked to cancer, hormonal disorders, infertility, birth defects in children and chronic asthma.

Anyone who has visited Punjab's Malwa belt would have seen the tragedy. The area, which fed India during the Green Revolution, is now called the cancer belt. Farmers who sprayed pesticides with bare hands for 30 years are now travelling by the famous cancer train from Bathinda to Bikaner for treatment. This is the hidden cost of cheap food. We saved money on food but are now spending lakhs in hospitals.

Organic farming offers a clear alternative. It does not use synthetic pesticides, chemical fertilizers or GM seeds. It uses compost, cow dung, neem and traditional crop rotation. Research published in the British Journal of Nutrition found that organic crops have 20 to 60 percent higher antioxidants, which fight disease, and organic milk has 50 percent more omega-3 fatty acids, good for the heart.

More importantly, organic farming saves our soil, which is dying. In Punjab, soil organic carbon has fallen below 0.2 percent, making soil dead like dust. Chemical fertilizers killed earthworms and good bacteria that make soil fertile. Organic farming brings them back. It uses 40 percent less water, stores more carbon in soil and helps fight climate change. Sikkim became India's first fully organic state in 2016 and its farmers' incomes, soil health and tourism have all increased.

People say organic is costly and cannot feed 140 crore Indians. This is half-truth. Organic is 20 percent costlier now because chemical farming hides its real costs. The government gives Rs 2 lakh crore as fertilizer subsidy, taxpayers pay to clean polluted rivers, and families pay hospital bills. If we add all this, chemical food is actually more expensive. And yields? After 2–3 years of transition, organic yields become stable and more resilient in floods and droughts.

Start small. Grow tulsi, mint and coriander at home without chemicals. Buy organic for leafy greens and grapes where pesticide is highest. Visit your local organic santhe on Sundays and buy directly from farmers. And demand that mid-day meals in government schools use organic millets.

Our grandmothers never called it organic, they just called it food. It is time to return to that wisdom.

UP offers free LPG cylinders on Diwali, Holi

Uttar Pradesh's festival relief initiative aims to ease household expenses for Ujjwala beneficiaries while promoting shared celebrations and social unity.

LUCKNOW

Uttar Pradesh Chief Minister Yogi Adityanath announced that Pradhan Mantri Ujjwala Yojana families will receive one free LPG cylinder on Diwali and Holi. He made the announcement at a programme distributing refill subsidies to more than 1.89 crore beneficiaries in the state. The government has allocated Rs 1,500 crore for the subsidy distribution.

Adityanath said a domestic gas cylinder costs Rs 983.45, of which the Government of India pays a subsidy of Rs 335, and families pay the rest. He said the state would provide one cylinder to poor Ujjwala families on the two festivals. "With the money you save, you can buy Diwali sweets and lamps," he said.

The Chief Minister compared LPG access under the present government with the Congress government's tenure. He said people had faced difficulties obtaining gas connections earlier, while the current government had provided free connections to poor families. Adityanath described this as good governance.

In focus

- LPG subsidy allocated: ₹1,500 crore.
- Over 1.89 crore Ujjwala beneficiaries covered.
- Free LPG cylinders announced for Diwali and Holi.
- Deepotsav described as a symbol of social unity.

Earlier on Tuesday, Adityanath called Ayodhya's Deepotsav, scheduled for November 7, a symbol of social unity. He is scheduled to visit Ayodhya to review preparations. In a post on X, he said the festival brings people together through shared faith and culture. He said caste divisions had been used for politics, while Deepotsav, launched in 2017, had made Ayodhya's cultural heritage a celebration for all. "Lamps burn in different hands, but their light unites the entire society. This is the message of Deepotsav," he said. Adityanath added that shared faith and culture unite society, and the initiative had transformed Ram Nagari's heritage into a festival for all.

Madras High Court orders closure of abandoned borewells

CHENNAI

The Madurai Bench of the Madras High Court has directed the Tamil Nadu government to close abandoned borewells and quarry pits across Thoothukudi district within six weeks.

Justices P Velmurugan and KK Ramakrishnan passed the order on Tuesday while disposing of a public interest litigation filed by SMA Pon Gandhimathinathan of Thoothukudi. The matter is listed after six weeks for a compliance report.

The petitioner sought directions to secure unused wells, borewells and stone quarry pits, saying many had been left uncovered, particularly along public roads. He said the openings posed serious public safety risks and could endanger cattle and other animals.

He also said representations seeking a district-wide field inspection and necessary safety measures had not led to effective action. The case focused on ensuring that dangerous openings are not left exposed, especially in places where residents, road users and animals may encounter them unnoticed.

The petitioner cited a Supreme Court order dated August 6, 2010, which laid down measures to prevent fatal accidents involving abandoned borewells. He also referred to 2023 guidelines issued by the Tamil Nadu Chief Secretary, directing District Collectors to identify and secure abandoned wells, borewells and stone quarry pits.

What the SC directions require

1. Fill abandoned borewells from the bottom to ground level with clay, sand, boulders, pebbles or drill cuttings
2. Fill mud pits and channels once the work ends
3. A certificate from the department that the borewell has been filled to ground level
4. Random inspections to check

The Supreme Court directions require abandoned borewells to be filled from the bottom to ground level with clay, sand, boulders, pebbles or drill cuttings. Mud pits and channels must also be filled after work ends.

For a borewell or tubewell abandoned at any stage, the concerned department must issue a certificate confirming it has been properly filled to ground level. The directions also provide for random inspections. The state must submit its compliance report when the matter returns to the bench after six weeks.

Bengal Police Seize Cash In Land Probe

KOLKATA

The South 24 Parganas district police on Wednesday seized over ₹1.02 crore in cash from a party office in Sarisha during an ongoing land grab investigation involving Sumit Roy, personal assistant to Trinamool Congress national general secretary Abhishek Banerjee.

Roy was arrested on September 10 by the West Bengal Criminal Investigation Department after the Supreme Court rejected his anticipatory bail plea. Additional Superintendent of Police Abhishek Majumdar stated that the search was conducted based on disclosures made by Roy during custodial interrogation, adding that the tenancy and ownership of the premises remain under active investigation.

The All India Trinamool Congress denied any connection to the seized funds, alleging the cash was planted to malign the party. Party representatives noted that the rented premises were vacated and surrendered to the property owner following vandalism on May 21, citing a complaint filed at Diamond Harbour police station on May 23.

TMC counsel Arka Nag claimed Roy was coerced during late-night questioning and threatened with a staged encounter at Diamond Harbour Women's University before being taken to where officers were counting money. Police officials declined to comment on the allegations.

Nine-year-old girl dies after collapsing inside classroom

NEW DELHI

A nine-year-old Class 3 student died after suddenly collapsing inside her classroom at a school in Mayur Vihar, Delhi, on Wednesday. Police are examining CCTV footage and other evidence to establish the circumstances surrounding her death.

According to police, a PCR call was received at around 9.52 am. The girl was taken to Malik Redix Health Care in Nirman Vihar, where doctors declared her dead.

Preliminary examination of classroom CCTV footage reportedly showed the child entering the room, placing a hand on her waist and suddenly falling to the ground. The teacher immediately lifted her and attempted to place her on a chair before rushing out and returning to take the girl away.

Preliminary information has suggested a possible heart attack, but the exact cause of death has not been established.

Police said statements from the girl's parents and school authorities are yet to be recorded.

Class 8 student found dead in lake after disappearing

A Class 8 student was found dead in Talkatora Lake in Jaipur on Wednesday morning, hours after she went missing from her home. Local residents spotted her body around 7.30 am and alerted the police control room.

According to police, the girl had spoken to her mother on Tuesday night before going to sleep. When her mother woke up around 4 am, the child was missing from her room, prompting the family to search for her.

Police personnel from Manak Chowk and a Civil Defence team reached the lake and recovered the body. Her family later identified her.

Police said the family had initially reported that the student was upset over her low examination marks. However, the circumstances surrounding her death remain under investigation.

The body was taken to the mortuary at Sawai Man Singh Hospital. Police said there were no visible external injuries. It was later released to the family without a post-mortem examination at their request.

Welfare payments to be based on voter IDs, not Aadhaar

The Centre plans to introduce voter identity cards and biometric verification for welfare payments, reducing Aadhaar's role in beneficiary identification.

Voter IDs and biometric checks would replace Aadhaar as the main basis for these payments (representational image).

NEW DELHI

Union Panchayati Raj Minister Rajiv Ranjan Singh, also known as Lallan Singh, said voter identity cards and biometric authentication will be used to identify beneficiaries and process payments under welfare schemes administered by his Ministry. The announcement marks a proposed shift from Aadhaar, which currently serves as the primary identification basis for these payments.

Speaking to reporters on the sidelines of an event at the Sikkim Cooperative Milk Producers' Union in Gangtok on Tuesday, Singh reiterated remarks he had made at a Ministry workshop in Delhi on Friday. The workshop focused on the People's Plan Campaign 2026-27. His statement comes amid Opposition allegations of "vote chori" and wrongful deletions from electoral rolls.

"Aadhaar is currently the basis for payments to beneficiaries, but it will no longer be considered the primary means of identification," Singh said. He argued that Aadhaar cards were easily available and could potentially allow fraudulent beneficiaries to enter welfare schemes. In Delhi, he had said a person could obtain an Aadhaar card in five minutes.

Under the proposed process, beneficiaries would provide their Electors Photo Identity Card (EPIC) number along with biometric authentication to establish their identity. Singh said payments would be made using those credentials, rather than relying primarily on Aadhaar.

The Minister said the change was intended to ensure welfare benefits reach only eligible people and remove fraudulent entries. He said the revised verification process would improve transparency in the delivery of benefits. The proposed identification changes concern schemes falling within the Panchayati Raj Ministry's jurisdiction, Singh said.

How it would work

1. EPIC number: beneficiaries give their Electors Photo Identity Card number
2. Biometrics: their identity is confirmed by biometric authentication
3. Payment: made on those credentials, not mainly on Aadhaar

> "Biometric authentication along with EPIC will serve as their identification credentials, and payments will be made based on that information."

Cabinet expands fast track courts for rape, child abuse cases

NEW DELHI

The Union Cabinet on Wednesday approved the continuation and expansion of the central scheme supporting Fast Track Special Courts (FTSCs) for the speedy trial of rape and child sexual abuse cases. The number of courts will increase from 779 to 850, with the programme extended for another five years until March 2031.

Launched on October 2, 2019, following a Supreme Court directive, the scheme currently operates across 29 states and Union territories. Since its introduction, the special courts have disposed of more than 4.02 lakh cases involving rape and offences under the Protection of Children from Sexual Offences (POCSO) Act, 2012.

The scheme will receive a total financial allocation of ₹3,788.04 crore to strengthen judicial infrastructure and improve case disposal. Of this amount, the Centre will contribute ₹2,353.15 crore through the Nirbhaya Fund, while states and Union territories will provide ₹1,434.89 crore.

Each court will have a dedicated judicial officer, a special public prosecutor and six support staff members. The Department of Justice under the Union Law Ministry will oversee implementation in coordination with state governments and Union territory administrations. Additional districts will be considered based on the pending number of rape and POCSO cases.

Union Minister Ashwini Vaishnaw said the decision reflected the government's commitment to addressing crimes against women and children through effective implementation of existing laws and new legislative measures.

The scheme also aims to provide a victim-friendly environment through vulnerable witness deposition centres and child-friendly court facilities.

Construction ban, 50% office attendance ordered amid pollution

GURUGRAM

The district administration has prohibited dust-generating construction and demolition activities from November 5 to 20 and directed government and private offices to restrict physical attendance to 50%, as air pollution levels continue to rise. Deputy Commissioner Uttam Singh issued the orders on Tuesday in compliance with directions from the Commission for Air Quality Management (CAQM).

The construction ban applies across the district and covers work on roads, highways, flyovers, overbridges, pipelines and other linear public infrastructure projects. All dust-generating demolition and outdoor construction activities must remain suspended during the 16-day period.

The restrictions come after Gurugram's air quality deteriorated to the 'very poor' category for the first time this season on Tuesday. The Air Quality Index (AQI) reached 319. The administration's measures seek to address pollution by stopping activities that generate dust and limiting the number of people physically present at offices.

Under the order, government and private offices have been asked to cap in-person attendance at half their workforce. The directive applies alongside the construction and demolition restrictions and follows the CAQM's instructions to the district administration.

The specified dates run from November 5 through November 20. The administration linked the curbs to the rise in pollution levels across Gurugram.

Tamil Nadu CM seeks Supreme Court bench in Chennai

CHENNAI

Tamil Nadu Chief Minister C. Joseph Vijay on Wednesday urged Prime Minister Narendra Modi to take steps to establish a Bench of the Supreme Court in Chennai, reviving a long-standing demand aimed at improving access to justice for people across southern India.

In a letter to the Prime Minister, Vijay described the proposal as an important and long-pending demand of the State. He pointed out that the issue was first raised by Tamil Nadu in 1980, highlighting the difficulties faced by litigants from southern States who must travel to New Delhi to approach the country's highest court.

Chief Minister C. Joseph Vijay.

The Chief Minister's appeal focuses on reducing the geographical and financial burden on people seeking legal remedies. Establishing a Supreme Court Bench in Chennai could make access to the apex court more convenient for litigants from Tamil Nadu and neighbouring southern States.

The demand has remained under consideration for decades, with concerns over distance, travel expenses and accessibility forming key arguments in favour of regional benches. For many litigants, travelling to the national capital for hearings can involve considerable time and expenditure.

Vijay urged the Centre to take the necessary steps to examine and advance the proposal. The request places renewed attention on the broader question of decentralising access to the country's highest judicial institution.

The proposal, if approved, would mark a significant development in judicial accessibility for southern India. However, the establishment of a Bench would require further consideration and appropriate action at the national level. No decision on the request was announced in the statement.

SC questions relevance of two-child election rule

NEW DELHI

The Supreme Court has questioned the continued relevance of laws disqualifying people with more than two children from contesting local body elections, citing India's falling fertility rate and changing demographic conditions.

The observations came while the court set aside the disqualification of Mangala Bhimrao, former sarpanch of Kakoda Gram Panchayat in Maharashtra. She had been barred from contesting elections after the birth of her third child. The court allowed her appeal and decided to reconsider its earlier position on the issue.

The Bench referred the 2003 judgment in Javed versus State of Haryana to a larger Bench for reconsideration. In that ruling, a three-judge Bench upheld provisions of the Haryana Panchayati Raj Act, 1994, which disqualified people with more than two living children from contesting panchayat elections.

The Supreme Court in New Delhi.

The Supreme Court noted that India's total fertility rate (TFR) was around three children per woman when the Javed judgment was delivered. At the time, population control was a policy concern. The rate has since declined and now stands at 1.9, below the replacement level of 2.1.

The court said the demographic shift raises concerns about an ageing population. A larger Bench will now examine whether electoral disqualification provisions remain constitutionally valid and relevant amid slower population growth and emerging ageing-related challenges.

ED raids 11 sites in BLM money laundering probe

KOCHI

The Enforcement Directorate (ED) on Wednesday conducted searches at 11 locations in Keralam and Tamil Nadu in connection with an investigation into alleged money laundering involving Bharath Lajhna Multi State Co-operative Society (BLM). The searches covered Kochi, Kozhikode and Chennai, according to agency sources.

ED sources said the locations were linked to R. Premkumar, BLM's founding member and de facto chairman and managing director, and others. The action under the Prevention of Money Laundering Act comes amid an ongoing separate Crime Branch investigation in Keralam.

Crime Branch case

Premkumar is accused of diverting crores collected from public depositors into relatives' accounts for personal use. The Crime Branch arrested him at his Chennai residence on October 29 and produced him before a Judicial First-Class Magistrate Court in Kozhikode. He was later granted bail citing procedural lapses. Police have sought permission to arrest him again.

The case began with a complaint by BLM's former chief executive officer at Nadakkavu police station in Kozhikode, alleging physical assault by Premkumar and others. Although the complaint was withdrawn, the Crime Branch said it found evidence of alleged fund misappropriation and registered a first information report under Sections 316(5) and 318(2) of the Bharatiya Nyaya Sanhita.

After Premkumar's release, another cheating case was registered against him for allegedly defrauding a woman of ₹1.6 crore in Kothamangalam. The Crime Branch has reportedly examined 320 bank accounts linked to the alleged scam.

Jharkhand official suspended over alleged SIR bribery

RANCHI

A Jharkhand government employee in Hazaribag district has been suspended for allegedly accepting a bribe to verify voter identity documents and correct errors during the Special Intensive Revision (SIR) of electoral rolls, an official said on Wednesday. The action followed a video purportedly showing the official accepting money that circulated on social media.

An order issued by the Hazaribag deputy commissioner-cum-election officer stated that the Barhi Sub-Divisional Officer had reported the video. It allegedly showed an assistant administrative officer accepting ₹100 for voter ID verification and rectifying errors in an affidavit submitted during the SIR exercise.

The order said the allegation was prima facie established and violated provisions of the Government Servants' Conduct Rules, 1976. The administrative officer has been suspended, and the Chalkusha Block Office in Hazaribag has been designated as his headquarters during the suspension, the official said.

The SIR process is underway in Jharkhand, with claims and objections being received until November 23. The Election Commission is scheduled to publish the final electoral rolls on November 30. The draft rolls were published on August 5 after 43.61 lakh names were deleted.

Jharkhand had 2.64 crore electors before the revision. The draft electoral roll now contains 2.21 crore voters, including 1.08 crore women and 260 third-gender electors.

INDIGENOUS AI MODELS

IndiaAI releases 3 new indigenous foundation models

NEW DELHI

The IndiaAI Mission under the Ministry of Electronics and Information Technology has released three indigenous foundation models, EKA-1, Dhīr 2B and Dhīr 5B, marking a step in India's effort to build homegrown artificial intelligence capabilities for practical, locally relevant applications. EKA-1 was developed by Soket Labs Technology and Research, while ZenteiQ AiTech Innovations developed Dhīr 2B and Dhīr 5B.

At the launch of the three foundation models in New Delhi.

The models were unveiled at an event attended by IT Secretary S. Krishnan, ministry and IndiaAI officials, and leaders of both companies. The government said subsidised access to national AI computing infrastructure and support for research expenses helped enable their development.

EKA-1, SOKET
26.3 billion parameters, 7.5 trillion tokens; 22 Indian languages and English

TWO MODELS, ZENTEIQ
Open source, 2B and 5B; English and 10 Indian languages; run offline

EKA-1 has 26.3 billion parameters and was trained on about 7.5 trillion tokens. It supports all 22 scheduled Indian languages and English. Soket describes it as an open, sparse hybrid language model designed for mathematics, coding, reasoning and agentic applications. It can perform some inference locally on smartphones without mobile data or Wi-Fi.

Soket CEO Abhishek Upperwal said EKA-1 was tailored to India's banking, financial services and cybersecurity sectors. ZenteiQ's open-source Dhīr models support English and 10 Indian languages and can be deployed as secure, on-premise multilingual assistants. Their offline-capable tools support document-grounded automation and knowledge retrieval in government, defence, industry and education, especially in low-connectivity or sensitive settings.

ZenteiQ CEO Prof. Sashikumar said the models can run on GPUs and TPUs, while their lightweight design enables deployment on mobile devices without cloud connectivity. Local access keeps data on devices, supporting privacy and security. Krishnan said indigenous models strengthen India's technological and strategic autonomy and can improve productivity across sectors.

Cabinet clears energy, minerals and statistics reforms

NEW DELHI

The Union Cabinet approved a 92 gigawatt-hour (GWh) grid-scale energy storage scheme, alongside plans for critical minerals and an overhaul of the national statistical system.

Union Minister Ashwini Vaishnaw announced the decisions at a Cabinet briefing. The storage plan includes 30 GWh of battery storage, 60 GWh of pumped storage and 2 GWh for emerging technologies.

Pumped storage uses electricity, including solar power, to move water uphill. Water is later released to generate electricity. The scheme is expected to support renewable power and improve use of transmission lines.

He said non-fossil sources account for nearly 52 per cent of India's power generation.

Sugar prices rise despite govt measures

NEW DELHI

Sugar prices have increased by more than Rs 4 per kg in a month, despite government steps to improve supplies during the festive season.

Average retail sugar prices have reached Rs 59.50 per kg, while wholesale prices stand at Rs 55.40 per kg, according to Consumer Affairs Ministry data.

Compared with last year, retail prices have increased from Rs 46.50 to Rs 59.50 per kg. Wholesale prices have also risen from Rs 43.23 to Rs 55.40 per kg.

Among major cities, Kolkata recorded the highest retail price at Rs 65 per kg on November 3. Delhi followed at Rs 64, while Mumbai recorded Rs 61 per kg.

The rise is mainly linked to lower-than-expected sugar production during the 2025-26 season.

The government has introduced stock limits, arranged imports and increased market monitoring to control prices.

Meanwhile, India produced 8.45 lakh tonnes of sugar in the first month of the 2026-27 season, according to the National Federation of Cooperative Sugar Factories Ltd.

The crushing season began on October 8. By October 30, a total of 152 sugar mills had started production, adding to domestic supplies during the festive period.

TSMC to list $450 million green bonds

The world's largest contract chipmaker said it had completed pricing for the bond issue in a filing with the Taiwan Stock Exchange. The sale is part of TSMC's planned NT$60 billion bond programme for 2026 and is its third green bond issue this year.

'India needs long-term plan to boost shipbuilding'

NEW DELHI

India needs a long-term pipeline of vessel orders and better financing to strengthen its shipbuilding and ship-repair industries, according to a report by EY and the Federation of Indian Chambers of Commerce and Industry (FICCI).

The report said India repaired 418 vessels in 2023-24. Private shipyards handled 227. It has 42 dry docks, but its share of the global market remains small.

India accounted for about 0.075 per cent of delivered shipbuilding gross tonnage worldwide in 2025. Its share of the ship-repair market was below one per cent in 2024. Shipbuilding output reached 72,137 gross tonnes in 2021, before falling to 57,637 tonnes in 2025.

To improve the sector, the report recommended a national system to collect vessel requirements from public sector companies, ports, coastal shipping operators and inland waterway agencies. It called for a rolling 10-year procurement plan to give shipyards information about future orders.

The report recommended standard vessel designs and regular orders. These steps could improve productivity, attract investment and make loans easier to secure. It said international partnerships could bring technology and skills in design, engineering, automation and marine systems.

Revolt bags Bihar Police order for 1,100 e-bikes

MUMBAI

Revolt Motors, an electric motorcycle maker and wholly-owned subsidiary of RattanIndia Enterprises, has received an order from Bihar Police to supply 1,100 units of its BlazeX commuter electric bike.

The company announced the order on Wednesday. The motorcycles are intended for police teams, including those involved in patrolling duties. Revolt Motors said the vehicles are scheduled to be delivered in Patna by January next year. However, the company is working to complete the supply as early as this month.The order marks a supply agreement between the electric vehicle maker and Bihar Police.

Revolt Motors said the needs of patrolling teams go beyond the road performance of a motorcycle. Charging options, the ability to carry essential equipment and the distance a bike can travel on a single charge are important for daily police work.

These factors can affect how officers plan patrols, manage equipment and keep vehicles ready for use.

The BlazeX is described by the company as a commuter electric motorcycle. The supply is expected to take place in Patna, with January as the stated deadline and an earlier delivery targeted by the company.

Punjab raises DA by 3% to 53%

CHANDIGARH

Punjab Chief Minister Bhagwant Mann on Wednesday announced a three per cent increase in dearness allowance (DA) for state government employees and pensioners. The decision is expected to benefit around eight lakh people across the state.

With the latest revision, the total dearness allowance rate has reached 53 per cent

Addressing the media in Chandigarh, Mann said the increase would provide financial support to government employees and retired staff. With the latest revision, the total dearness allowance rate has reached 53 per cent.

The increase will cover eligible serving employees and pensioners receiving benefits from the Punjab government. The announcement is expected to bring relief to families facing rising expenses on food, housing, healthcare and other daily needs.

Dearness allowance is paid to government employees to help them manage the impact of rising prices. It is calculated as a percentage of basic pay. Pensioners receive a similar benefit through dearness relief, which is linked to their pension.

The three per cent increase will raise the amount received by beneficiaries, depending on their basic salary or pension.

The announcement comes as state government employees and pensioners look for financial support amid changing living costs. The revised rate of 53 per cent will apply to eligible beneficiaries under the decision of the state government.

Indus Towers expands solar power across India

NEW DELHI

Telecom tower companies are turning to solar power to reduce energy costs, improve supply and lower their environmental impact. Indus Towers has installed solar systems at 50,000 sites across India, with a total capacity of about 300 megawatts.

The company said it is the first passive telecom infrastructure provider to reach this milestone. It aims to power 100,000 sites through solar energy.

Indus Towers estimates its solar network will cut carbon emissions by about 420,000 tonnes a year. It said this reduction is equal to the benefit of planting nearly two crore trees.

420,000 tonnes of carbon cut a year

The company has introduced digital monitoring systems at solar-powered sites. These track power generation and performance in real time and help teams plan maintenance, improving efficiency and network reliability.

Managing Director and Chief Executive Officer Prachur Sah said the company accelerated its solar programme in 2024 and built one of the largest distributed solar networks in the telecom infrastructure sector.

"This milestone reflects our commitment to responsible growth," Sah said. He added that the company would continue towards its target of 100,000 solar-powered sites while reducing energy costs.

Indus Towers is exploring the use of its renewable energy model abroad, particularly in Africa. Sah said its experience, technology and operating methods developed in India could support similar projects there.

The company said solar power and digital monitoring would reduce diesel use, strengthen energy security and support cleaner telecom services as demand for digital connectivity grows.

South Africans vote to elect local councils

More than 29 million registered voters can help decide who oversees water, electricity and road repairs in their local communities.

JOHANNESBURG

A voter at a polling station as South Africans elect their local councils

South Africans began voting on Wednesday to choose the local councils that will oversee services such as water, rubbish collection and road repairs for the next five years. Polls opened at 7 am and were due to close at 9 pm local time.

More than 29 million people are registered to vote, with nearly 23,700 polling stations open across the country. The Independent Electoral Commission will announce the final results after counting and checking the ballots. This is South Africa's sixth local election since its transition to democracy in 1994, the commission said.

The commission approved 2.65 million applications for special voting on Nov. 2 and 3. Election staff visited voters who could not leave home, while other eligible voters cast their ballots early at designated polling stations.

Nearly 137,000 candidates and 546 political parties are contesting 10,526 council seats, according to the commission. Voters choose a candidate to represent their ward and cast a separate ballot for a party.

Seats set aside for parties are allocated according to their share of the vote. Outside the eight major metropolitan municipalities, voters also receive a third ballot to choose representatives for district councils.

Municipal councils make decisions that residents feel in their daily lives. They help keep taps running, collect rubbish and maintain local roads.

They also have a role in distributing electricity to homes, although some services are shared with other levels of government or public utilities.

Where one party wins a majority, it can form the local administration on its own.

Iran warns of wider war if US attacks

TEHRAN

A man at a stall decorated with Iranian flags

Iran's supreme leader warned on Wednesday that fresh US attacks could spread the war across the Middle East.

Mojtaba Khamenei said in a written statement that the defeat of President Donald Trump's Republicans in the US midterm elections gave Tehran little reason to expect a change in Washington's approach, AFP reported.

Republicans are set to lose control of both chambers of Congress, a setback that could make it harder for Trump to push through his plans. He can still order new strikes. Trump told media that the war may have contributed to the election losses.

The United States struck Qeshm Island in the Strait of Hormuz on Tuesday. Iranian state media reported five explosions in quick succession. Trump said the strike targeted a newly built air defence site and described it as minor. He has also named a site in central Iran as a possible target. Tehran denies the site is a nuclear facility.

Trump told the Financial Times that a full return to fighting might be unnecessary. Iran's president, Masoud Pezeshkian, said his government was still seeking a solution through talks. He said Khamenei had given officials permission to negotiate on issues that were previously off limits.

> Qatar is pushing for a temporary deal as Washington weighs further strikes and Tehran says it remains open to talks.

Qatar, which has been helping the two sides talk, said both governments were reviewing its proposals for a temporary deal.

The war began in February with US and Israeli strikes on Iran and has been at a standstill for months.

India and Nepal review ties as Misri holds talks in Kathmandu

KATHMANDU

India and Nepal review their ties in Kathmandu

India and Nepal reviewed their relationship on Wednesday as officials prepared for a possible official visit to New Delhi by Nepal's Prime Minister Balendra Shah later this month.

Indian Foreign Secretary Vikram Misri met his Nepali counterpart, Amrit Bahadur Rai, in Kathmandu, as per reports. The talks covered a wide range of issues between the two neighbours. Misri also called on Nepal's Foreign Minister Shisir Khanal, and they discussed ways to strengthen ties.

Misri travelled to Kathmandu at Rai's invitation for an official visit scheduled to run through Thursday. Nepal's foreign ministry announced the visit on Monday, saying the two foreign secretaries would hold talks. India described the trip as part of regular meetings between senior officials from both countries.

The Kathmandu Post reported that officials were expected to review projects backed by India in Nepal and consider new areas where the two countries could work together. Nepal's proposed economic package with India was also expected to come up. Those issues could help shape the agenda if Shah travels to New Delhi.

Wednesday's meetings gave both governments a chance to review work already under way and decide which issues need attention at a higher level. Shah's visit remains a proposal. If it goes ahead, it would give leaders in New Delhi and Kathmandu a chance to follow up directly on the issues their officials raised this week.

? HOW THE TWO KEEP TALKING

Their joint commission brings foreign ministers together to review work across the relationship, while officials also meet in smaller groups to deal with specific issues. In August, for example, a joint group met in Dehradun to review how the countries manage their shared border and work together on security.

Shin Bet's funding claims spark election dispute

JERUSALEM

Israel's Shin Bet security agency told election officials that its intelligence points to an effort to influence last week's vote with money from abroad. Leaders of the opposition Change bloc accused the agency's chief of helping Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu cast doubt on the results.

Shin Bet told the Central Elections Committee that some of the money came from foreign countries and from people or groups whose interests were hidden or potentially hostile. The agency said it needed to investigate further before it could establish how widespread the activity was.

Yair Golan, who leads the Democrats party in the Change bloc, accused Shin Bet chief David Zini of turning the agency into a political tool for Netanyahu. Another opposition leader, Yair Lapid, said a unity government led by Netanyahu was no longer possible.

Gadi Eisenkot, who leads the Change bloc, said its parties would defend the results and coordinate their next steps when the new parliament meets. Neither Netanyahu's bloc nor the Change bloc won enough seats to govern alone, leaving Arab parties with a potentially decisive role.

The election committee's leadership voted to approve the results. Its chair, Noam Sohlberg, said the investigation would continue and would not change the outcome.

Bangladesh sends reinforcements as garment protests continue

DHAKA

Bangladesh deployed more paramilitary forces on Wednesday as garment workers demanding higher wages took to the streets for a fifth day, according to a PTI report. Workers say their pay has failed to keep up with rising living costs, with inflation at around 8 per cent.

The Bangladesh Garment Manufacturers and Exporters Association said 50 factories in Gazipur shut over fears of further unrest after a worker died from injuries suffered during the protests. In Savar, local media reported that protesters set a police van on fire during clashes that blocked the Dhaka-Aricha highway.

Protests spread to Dhaka's Uttara neighbourhood on Wednesday. Clashes were also reported in Mirpur and industrial areas outside the capital. State news agency BSS said 24 Border Guard Bangladesh platoons were deployed across industrial areas including Savar, Ashulia, Gazipur and Narayanganj.

- A wage board plans to recommend new pay rates within a month. The new rates are due to take effect on Dec. 1.

Activists from the ruling Bangladesh Nationalist Party took to the streets carrying bamboo sticks. The party claimed that supporters of former Prime Minister Sheikh Hasina's disbanded Awami League had joined the protests to stir unrest. A government adviser also accused Hasina of fuelling the protests.

A six-member wage board met for the first time on Wednesday and agreed to recommend new pay rates within a month. The government had initially said the new rates would take effect in January. BSS reported that the start date had been brought forward to Dec. 1. Workers are still waiting to learn how much their pay will rise.

ATTACKERS TARGET PAK MILITARY CONVOYS ACROSS BALOCHISTAN

QUETTA

Armed men attacked Pakistani military convoys in three districts of Balochistan this week, local media reported on Wednesday. The reports said several people were killed or wounded, but did not give a confirmed toll for the attacks in Kech, Mastung and Kharan.

In Kech district, unidentified gunmen attacked a convoy of two vehicles in the Noduz area on Wednesday. Initial reports said members of the security forces were among the casualties. On Monday, attackers ambushed an army convoy near Madina Hotel on the main road between Quetta and Karachi, in Mastung district. Another convoy came under attack that day at Nauroz Kalat, near Zomi in Kharan.

The Balochistan Post reported that armed men also blocked the Quetta–Taftan highway in the Pashuk area of Dalbandin on Monday. They stopped a vehicle and set it on fire.

Local media reported other attacks earlier in the week. Armed men targeted security personnel travelling on foot and in vehicles near Ahmad Wal in Nushki. In Kharan's Lijay area, eight military personnel were reportedly killed or wounded after a blast hit a military vehicle and fighting followed.

Separately, the Baloch-istan Liberation Front said it carried out 25 operations across the province in October.

The armed group claimed it killed more than 129 military and intelligence personnel and seriously injured more than 30. Those figures could not be independently verified. No group had claimed responsibility for the latest convoy attacks by Wednesday, according to reports.

CRIME BILL CHALLENGE

Sri Lanka court hears crime bill challenges

COLOMBO

Sri Lanka's Supreme Court began hearing 26 petitions on Wednesday challenging the Prevention of Organised Crime Bill aimed at tackling organised crime. The petitioners argue that parts of the bill, which the government has presented to Parliament, would violate rights guaranteed by the Constitution.

Chief Justice Preethi Padman Surasena is hearing the case with Justices Achala Wengappuli and Sampath Abeykoon. The Bar Association of Sri Lanka is among those challenging the proposed law.

The petitions raise questions about how the bill would allow authorities to prevent and investigate organised crime. They also challenge some of the new powers it would give law enforcement officials. The court must consider whether the disputed sections are consistent with the Constitution.

The petitioners say that if the disputed sections stay in the bill, Parliament should have to pass it with a two-thirds majority. They also argue that voters should have to approve it in a national referendum. That would put the final decision before the public after a vote in Parliament.

The case is drawing attention from lawyers and civil society groups because the bill could affect both criminal investigations and the rights of people subject to them. The judges' ruling will tell lawmakers whether they can pass the bill as written through the usual process or whether it needs a higher level of approval. For now, the court is hearing why the petitioners believe Parliament should have to seek the public's consent.

Three die in highway crash in Balkh

KABUL

At least three people died and four were injured when two cars collided on a highway in northern Afghanistan's Balkh province, police said on Wednesday. The road links Kabul with the country's northern provinces.

Provincial police said both cars were travelling at high speed and blamed reckless driving for the crash. Three people died at the scene. The four injured were taken to nearby health facilities, and most remained in critical condition, Xinhua reported.

The collision followed two other deadly crashes in Afghanistan in less than a week. On Nov. 1, a truck struck a rickshaw travelling in the opposite direction in eastern Laghman province. Police said at least two people died and three were injured. The injured were taken to the provincial hospital.

On Oct. 30, a passenger bus collided head-on with an oil tanker on the Salang Highway in northern Baghlan province. Five people died and 20 were injured, the state news agency Bakhtar reported. The agency said an investigation was underway.

Police also blamed reckless driving for the Laghman crash.

Kohli surpasses Tendulkar in ODI run chase record

AUCKLAND

Virat Kohli added another remarkable achievement to his illustrious career on Wednesday, surpassing Sachin Tendulkar to become the highest run-scorer in One-Day International (ODI) run chases. The Indian batting star reached the milestone during the first ODI against New Zealand in Auckland, producing an impressive 74 off just 51 deliveries, including 13 fours and a six, at a strike rate of 145.10.

Kohli has now accumulated 8,741 runs in 169 innings across 180 matches while batting in ODI run chases, maintaining an average of 66.21 and a strike rate of 95.03. His tally includes 30 centuries and 46 half-centuries. Tendulkar previously held the record with 8,720 runs from 242 innings, including 17 centuries and 52 half-centuries, at an average of 42.33.

Kohli's record in successful run chases is equally impressive. He has scored 6,477 runs in 108 innings across 114 matches at an outstanding average of 89.95, registering 25 centuries and 30 half-centuries. He also equalled Australian batting legend Ricky Ponting's record for most ODI runs against New Zealand, reaching 1,971 runs in 37 innings at an average of 57.97.

The veteran batter further became the first player to cross 13,000 ODI runs while batting at number three. He has accumulated 13,062 runs in 251 innings at the position, including 48 centuries and 70 half-centuries. In 10 ODIs this year, Kohli has scored 626 runs at an average of 69.55, with two centuries and four half-centuries.

Meanwhile, India's bowling attack played a decisive role in securing a five-wicket victory in the rain-affected contest. Arshdeep Singh claimed four wickets, while Gurnoor Brar and Anshul Kamboj contributed three and two wickets respectively.

India Secure Five-Wicket Victory Over New Zealand

India defeated New Zealand by five wickets in the rain-affected first One-Day International, taking a 1-0 lead in the three-match series.

New Zealand was restricted to a modest total after India's bowlers delivered a disciplined performance. Arshdeep Singh led the attack with four wickets, while Harshit Rana and Harshit Kamboj provided crucial support. Kamboj claimed two wickets for 22 runs, helping India maintain control of the innings.

Chasing a revised target of 143 runs in 23 overs, India completed the task in 22.4 overs, losing five wickets. Virat Kohli anchored the chase with a valuable 74, guiding the team towards victory. His composed innings ensured India remained on course despite losing wickets at regular intervals.

India's bowlers laid the foundation for the win by restricting New Zealand's scoring opportunities, while the batters handled the revised target effectively. The victory gave India an early advantage in the series and strengthened the team's position ahead of the remaining matches. The second ODI is scheduled to be played in Wellington on November 7, with New Zealand looking to level the series and India aiming to extend its lead.

Tendulkar urges patience for New Zealand batting

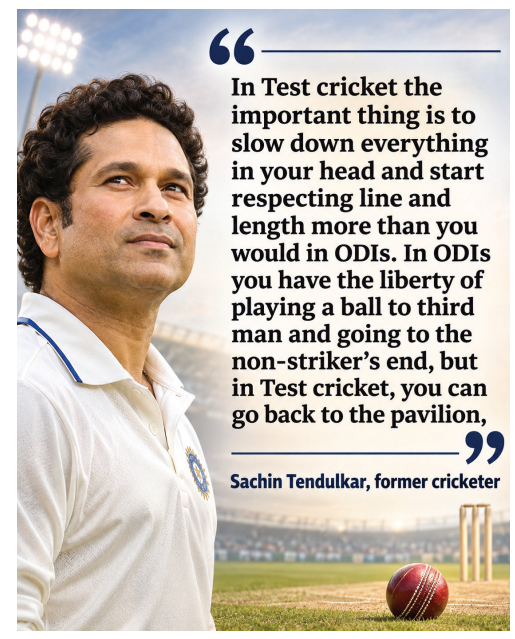

NEW DELHI

Cricket legend Sachin Tendulkar has advised batters touring New Zealand to rely on patience, technique and adaptation, explaining how conditions favour fast bowlers and why Test cricket requires a different mindset from One-Day Internationals. India begins a five-match ODI series in Auckland on Wednesday after winning the T20I series 3-2.

During a Reddit Ask Me Anything session, Tendulkar answered why New Zealand is considered one of the toughest SENA countries for Test batters. He said cooler temperatures keep the surface fresh, while grass and wind can assist fast bowlers, particularly those maintaining an upright seam. "The wind also favours fast bowlers," Tendulkar said.

He urged batters to stay close to the ball, play it late and trust their front-foot defence. Hitting on the rise, he noted, can be challenging, so players should remain patient and wait for suitable scoring opportunities. "As a batter, you need to keep the ball close to your body, play it late and trust your front-foot defence. Hitting on the rise can be challenging, so patience and waiting for the right scoring opportunities are key," he said.

Tendulkar also highlighted the adjustment needed when switching between ODI and Test cricket. In Tests, he said, players should slow their thought process and pay attention to line and length. "In Test cricket the important thing is to slow down everything in your head and start respecting line and length more than you would in ODIs. In ODIs you have the liberty of playing a ball to third man and going to the non-striker's end, but in Test cricket, you can go back to the pavilion," he said. India's two-Test series against New Zealand begins November 19.

Hardik Pandya, Arshdeep Singh in potential IPL trade

MUMBAI

Punjab Kings (PBKS) and Mumbai Indians (MI) are in advanced discussions over a potential player trade involving all-rounder Hardik Pandya and left-arm pacer Arshdeep Singh ahead of the IPL mini-auction next month. The proposed deal could become one of the biggest moves of the trading window, although no agreement has been finalised.

The discussions could see Arshdeep move to Mumbai in exchange for Hardik, who has emerged as a major talking point during the trading season. If Punjab secure Hardik, the franchise may look to acquire another left-arm fast bowler from a different team or target one at the auction. A source tracking development said the negotiations were progressing, but the deal remained uncertain.

Hardik's future has also attracted interest from Rajasthan Royals, Kolkata Knight Riders and Lucknow Super Giants. However, Mumbai is unlikely to release the star all-rounder without receiving established players in return. A source said the outcome of the discussions could influence several other trades, as franchises attempt to address gaps created by major player movements.

Punjab could also consider releasing Marcus Stoinis and Nehal Wadhera as part of their efforts to secure Hardik before the mini-auction scheduled for December 16. Hardik would join Punjab only as a player, while Shreyas Iyer is expected to continue as the team's captain. The potential trade could therefore reshape the squad without changing its leadership.

The Board of Control for Cricket in India has extended the trade window deadline to November 17, giving the franchises additional time to reach an agreement. With several teams reportedly interested in Hardik, his destination could influence the wider trade market. The discussions remain ongoing, and the proposed exchange involving Arshdeep and Hardik has yet to be confirmed.

YAMAL OVERTAKES MBAPPÉ IN CHAMPIONS LEAGUE SCORING RECORD

BARCELONA

Barcelona forward Lamine Yamal created history by surpassing Kylian Mbappe to become the highest-scoring teenager in UEFA Champions League history. The 19-year-old achieved the milestone during Barcelona's convincing 3-0 victory over Aston Villa at Spotify Camp Nou on Tuesday, taking his tally in the prestigious competition to 14 goals.

Yamal opened the scoring in the seventh minute after capitalising on a defensive mistake by Aston Villa. The Spanish winger curled a precise finish past goalkeeper Zion Suzuki to give Barcelona an early advantage. Brazilian forward Raphinha then took charge in the second half, scoring twice to complete a comfortable victory for the Spanish champions.

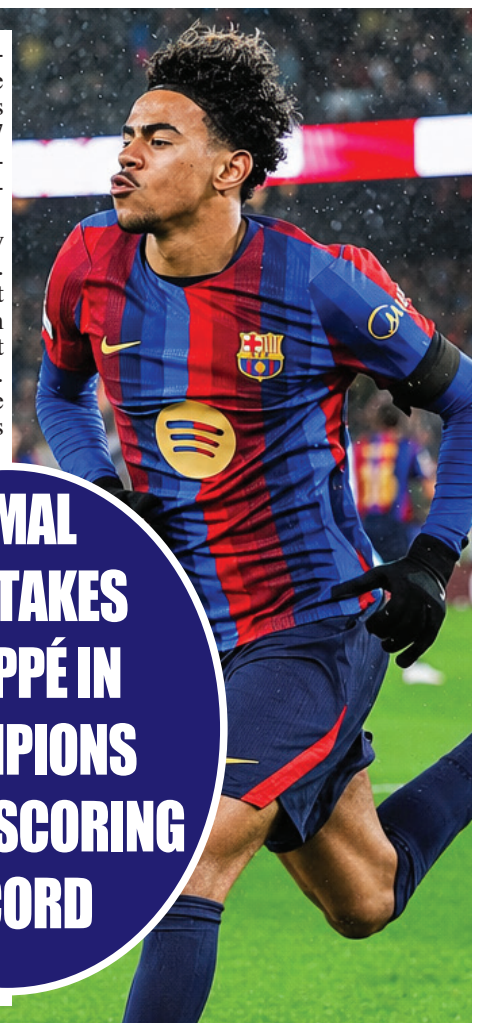

The defeat marked Aston Villa's first loss in the Champions League league phase, while Barcelona provisionally moved into second place in the standings.

With his latest goal, Yamal moved ahead of Mbappe, who had previously held the teenage scoring record with 13 Champions League goals. The French forward has since continued his impressive career, reaching 72 goals in the competition. Yamal, meanwhile, has achieved the new milestone in just 37 appearances, highlighting his remarkable progress at the highest level of European football.

The Barcelona youngster already holds several records in the tournament. He became the youngest player to start a main-stage Champions League match after making his full European debut against Porto at 16 years and 83 days. He is also the youngest player to score and provide an assist in a Champions League match, as well as the youngest to find the net in a semi-final.

Yamal's achievement further strengthens his growing reputation following his third-place finish in the latest Ballon d'Or rankings, behind Harry Kane and Mbappe. This season, he has scored 13 goals and provided 11 assists in 15 appearances across all competitions, becoming an increasingly influential figure under Barcelona manager Hansi Flick.

Starc reclaims top spot in latest ICC rankings

Mitchell Starc reclaimed the ICC Men's Test Bowling No. 1 ranking after a sensational nine-wicket performance against South Africa in Cape Town.

DUBAI

Australian fast bowler Mitchell Starc has reclaimed the number one position in the latest ICC Men's Test Bowling Rankings following an outstanding performance against South Africa in the third and final World Test Championship match in Cape Town. Starc climbed one place after taking nine wickets in the match, moving ahead of South African left-arm pacer Marco Jansen to regain the top position.

Starc had first reached the summit in August after ending Indian pacer Jasprit Bumrah's reign. However, Jansen subsequently overtook him following an impressive six-wicket performance in the second Test at Gqeberha. Jansen managed only three wickets in the Cape Town encounter, allowing Starc to return to the top with a career-best rating. Meanwhile, South African spinner Simon Harmer made significant progress, climbing nine places to seventh after taking six wickets in Australia's second innings. He now sits ahead of teammate Kagiso Rabada.

Jansen, despite losing his position among Test bowlers, strengthened his lead in the Test all-rounders' rankings after achieving a career-high rating with a half-century in the final match. Teammates Wiaan Mulder and Harmer also climbed to third and fifth respectively. Several players, including Ryan Rickelton, made notable gains in the Test batting rankings.

The latest ODI rankings also witnessed changes following the tri-series in Pakistan. Pakistan captain Shaheen Afridi moved to fifth among ODI bowlers, while Haris Rauf climbed to 24th. Fakhar Zaman advanced to 37th among batters.

In the T20I rankings, India's Shreyas Iyer gained two places to reach seventh among batters following his team's series triumph in New Zealand. New Zealand's Glenn Phillips also climbed to 24th. Afghanistan's Azmatullah Omarzai moved to third among T20I all-rounders after an impressive series against Zimbabwe, completing a significant round of changes across international cricket rankings.
