CM steps in with aid to distressed growers

- Declares emergency fund for drought-hit farmers
- Approves ₹5,000 drought relief, begins ₹2,500 first instalment

BENGALURU

Chief Minister DK Shivakumar on Thursday said to ensure urgent assistance to farmers in the state facing distress due to drought, the state government has decided to grant drought relief of ₹5,000 per farmer, capped at a maximum land area of 2 hectares.

The process of releasing ₹2,500 as the first installment of this interim relief has been started and started through Direct Benefit Transfer (DBT), while the remaining amount would be released in the coming days, he said, adding that the government aims to bring relief to farmers in distress during Diwali.

"Dasara is over, and Diwali has arrived. Farmers are in crisis, and the government is committed to bringing light into their lives. It has been decided to give drought relief of up to Rs 5,000 to each eligible farmer. In the first phase, Rs. 2,500 will be transferred directly to farmers through Direct Benefit Transfer (DBT). The remaining R. 2,500 will be released in the coming days," he said.

Speaking at a committee room in Vidhana Soudha on Thursday, Shivakumar released Rs 17.43 crore as the first instalment of input subsidy for 1,06,462 farmers in Yadgir district, at Rs 2,500 per farmer.

He said payment files are being prepared for 15 districts, with the first instalment of input subsidy to be disbursed to eligible farmers at the earliest and the second instalment within 15-20 days.

He added that while the assistance may not fully compensate for farmers' losses, it would provide some relief, reiterating the government's commitment to improving their lives.

CM's announcement in a nutshell

Payout structure: The total interim relief is set at ₹5,000. The first phase distributes ₹2,500 via Direct Benefit Transfer (DBT). The remaining ₹2,500 will follow within the next 15 to 20 days.

Immediate implementation: As part of the initial rollout, the CM released ₹17.43 cr directly to 1,06,462 eligible farmers in the Yadgir district.

Next districts covered: Payment pipeline procedures are underway for 15 additional districts, including Kolar, Koppal, Chamarajanagar, Dharwad, Ballari, Bidar, Bengaluru Urban, Haveri, Bengaluru South, Davanagere, Dakshina Kannada, Kalaburagi, Mandya, Vijayanagara, and Uttara Kannada.

Drought severity context: The state govt has officially identified 226 taluks as drought-hit, reporting an estimated crop damage spanning over 57.93 lakh hectares.

> The state is utilising its own immediate resources to back this initial subsidy, it has formally calculated total drought-related damages at ₹62,000 crore and requested ₹22,400 crore in aid from the National Disaster Response Fund.

Payments to other district

"Meanwhile, payment files are being prepared for 15 districts: Uttara Kannada, Kolar, Koppal, Chamarajanagar, Dharwad, Ballari, Bidar, Bengaluru Urban, Haveri, Bengaluru South, Davanagere, Dakshina Kannada, Kalaburagi, Mandya and Vijayanagara. The first instalment of input subsidy will be paid to eligible farmers in these districts at the earliest. The second instalment will be released within 15 to 20 days. The government remains committed to improving farmers' lives. The assistance may not fully make up for their losses, but it will certainly offer some relief," he said.

He said the remaining approved input subsidy would be released in a single instalment after receiving funds from the NDRF, subject to eligibility criteria. He also described the drought as unprecedented, noting that only the Krishna reservoir had filled up despite warnings from the Centre.

"Subject to eligibility criteria, the remaining approved input subsidy, calculated under the revised norms, will be released in a single instalment once the necessary funds are received from the National Disaster Response Fund (NDRF). None of us has ever experienced, or even heard of, a drought as severe as this in our lifetime. Despite advance warnings from the Central Government, none of the dams except the Krishna reservoir has filled up," he said.

Deleted voters should get justice: DKS

BENGALURU

Chief Minister DK Shivakumar on Thursday said all voters whose names had been deleted, except those who are deceased, should get justice, and asserted that the protest will continue until their demands are met.

Speaking at a massive protest organised by KPCC at Freedom Park here against the SIR of electoral rolls, he said, "We don't agree with the way SIR is ongoing. All the voters whose names have been deleted, except for the deceased, should get justice. Until justice is served, we will continue to fight."

Scrap SIR, oust CEC: Siddu

Former chief minister Siddaramaiah demanded that the SIR of electoral rolls, which is against the law and spirit of the Constitution, be scrapped immediately and CEC Gyanesh Kumar resign from his post.

He warned that any attempt to weaken the country's democratic system and infringe on the voting rights of eligible voters cannot be tolerated. "The fight is being waged across the country with two main demands - scrapping of SIR and resignation of the Kumar."

He questioned the appointment process of Kumar, alleging that the Centre changed the composition of the selection committee for appointment of Election Commissioners, which is a serious issue. "Earlier, the selection committee comprised the Prime Minister, Leader of Opposition in Lok Sabha and Chief Justice of India. The Centre enacted a law replacing the CJI with a Union Minister as a member of the committee, thereby increasing the dominance of the central government in the selection process."

Min: Local body polls will be conducted using ballot papers

'There was no question of reconsidering the matter'

BENGALURU

Karnataka's upcoming local body elections will be conducted using ballot papers instead of Electronic Voting Machines (EVMs), Rural Development and Panchayat Raj Minister Eshwar Khandre said after the Cabinet meeting on Thursday.

He added that the State Election Commission will decide whether the elections will be held using the new or the existing electoral rolls.

Briefing the media after the Cabinet meeting at Vidhana Soudha, Khandre said the government had already taken a decision to conduct local body elections through ballot papers, and there was no question of reconsidering the matter.

He clarified that the state government had not taken any decision on whether the new or old electoral rolls would be used for the elections.

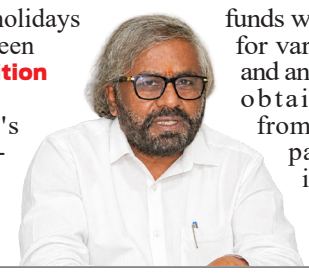

The Cabinet also approved road development projects worth Rs 20,000 crore across the state, including the development of state highways, major district roads and construction of bridges.

Winter session from December 2 to 11

Khandre said the winter session of the Karnataka Legislature will be held from December 2 to 11. The dates had been finalised keeping everyone's convenience in mind, despite holidays falling in between

Financial position strong

On the state's financial position, the minister said the government's finances were strong, and revenue collection was progressing satisfactorily.

> The state government has not taken any decision on whether the new or old electoral rolls will be used for the elections.
> - Eshwar Khandre, RDPR Minister

He said the government had estimated its revenue receipts in the budget and collections through GST and other sources were taking place as expected. All departments were making efforts to improve revenue collection.

He also pointed out that funds were being released for various programmes and announcements after obtaining approval from the Finance Department, indicating that there were no financial constraints.

Bibi loses religious party's support as rival tipped to form govt

JERUSALEM

Gadi Eisenkot emerged on Thursday as the favourite to be tasked with trying to form an Israeli government as an ultra-Orthodox Jewish party long aligned with Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu declined to recommend him.

President Isaac Herzog held a second day of consultations with political parties after the October 27 election, in which neither Netanyahu, a right-winger, nor Eisenkot, a former military chief, secured enough votes for a majority.

Herzog will choose by himself whom to ask to form a new government but traditionally the mandate is given to the person recommended by more parties, which would be Eisenkot.

United Torah Judaism, which backed Netanyahu after the previous five elections, in its meeting with Herzog declined to recommend Netanyahu again as prime minister, although it also did not side with Eisenkot.

The party informed Herzog "that it has decided not to recommend any member of Knesset to form a government," the president's office said in a statement, referring to the 120-member parliament in which United Torah Judaism has won seven seats.

Observers say United Torah Judaism's tactic is likely aimed mostly at punishing Netanyahu and showing that their votes cannot be taken for granted, while they would still serve in a government if he were to form one.

SEAT DISTRIBUTION IN KNESSET

Parliament strength	120
Magic number	61
Netanyahu's party	53
Eisenkot's party	48
Arab-led parties	19

Once Herzog gives his mandate to a lawmaker, the person -- presumably either Eisenkot or Netanyahu -- will have 28 days to form a government, with a potential 14-day extension. If the lawmaker fails, Herzog will then task someone else.

Netanyahu's bloc -- including United Torah Judaism -- has 53 seats in the new parliament, as opposed to 48 for Eisenkot's bloc.

Arab-majority lists jumped to 19 seats, on the back of anger over Netanyahu's hard-right government whose ministers have vowed to treat the Israeli citizens much like Palestinians in war-ravaged Gaza and the occupied West Bank.

People have right to know where you go: Shah to Rahul

NEW DELHI: Union Home Minister Amit Shah on Thursday asked Congress leader Rahul Gandhi to disclose details of his foreign trips, particularly his recent visit to Vietnam, saying the public had a right to know about the activities of the Leader of Opposition in the Lok Sabha.

"You just returned from Vietnam, but you don't talk about that. There should be transparency... Rahul ji, please give the public an account of all your foreign trips. How many days did you stay in Vietnam, whom did you meet, why did you go there, what was the programme..." Shah said at a BJP rally in Haryana's Karnal.

"You hold a constitutional position. The public has a right to know since you are the Leader of the Opposition in Lok Sabha," he added.

Shah also questioned Gandhi's criticism of EVMs, asking why Congress legislators had taken oath in Kerala after winning elections using the same machines. He cited Telangana and Himachal Pradesh, where the Congress is in power, to challenge the party's position on EVMs.

PIL challenges MLA's appointment as KSPCB chief

Bengaluru: The High Court on Thursday issued a notice to the state government regarding a petition challenging the nomination of Anekal MLA B Shivanna as the chairman of the Karnataka State Pollution Control Board. A division bench comprising Justice Anu Sivaraman and Justice KS Bharath Kumar, which heard the PIL filed by advocate Sudha Katwa, issued notices to the state government and the KSPCB, directing them to file their objections.

Union Minister Puri elected unopposed to RS from MP

BHOPAL: Union Petroleum Minister and BJP candidate Hardeep Singh Puri was on Thursday declared elected unopposed in the Rajya Sabha bypoll from Madhya Pradesh, an official said.

On the last day of the withdrawal of nominations, Puri, who was the sole candidate in the fray as the papers of other two nominees were rejected during scrutiny, was declared elected to the Upper House of Parliament by Returning Officer Umesh Sharma. MP BJP president Hemant Khandelwal collected Puri's certificate of election from the returning officer in the presence of party MLA Rameshwar Sharma.

On the last day for the scrutiny of papers, the nominations of the other two candidates, Kante Sayanna and Rajkumar Lohani, who was backed by the Opposition Congress, were rejected. The bypoll, if necessary, was to take place on November 12. The seat fell vacant after the resignation of former Union minister L Murugan.

As per reports, 12 European flights received bomb threats. An Aer Lingus flight (EI402), travelling from Dublin to Rome, was diverted to Evreux airport, around 100 km west of Paris, where it landed safely. Encourage kids to pursue sports along with academics: Kho-Kho star Chaithra

CH NEWS, MYSURU

Parents should encourage children to pursue sports if they have an interest in them, rather than focusing exclusively on engineering and medicine, appealed B. Chaithra, an outstanding player of the Indian women's Kho-Kho World Cup-winning team.

Speaking after inaugurating the annual sports meet of St. Maria de Mattias School, located at the Srirampura Ring Road Junction, on Thursday, Chaithra observed that many parents discourage children from taking up sports, telling them to concentrate on studies and become engineers or doctors. Many parents believe that sports will not lead to anything worthwhile. But she is living proof of what one can achieve through sports.

Hailing from the remote village of Kuruburu in T. Narasipur taluk, Chaithra said she had participated in 36 national-level tournaments and attended four international training camps, thanks to the encouragement extended by her parents and teacher Manjunath.

She also recalled that she had earned the distinction of being adjudged the best player in the Indian women's Kho-Kho team that brought the World Cup laurels to the country.

"How many people get an opportunity to represent their country at the international level?" she asked.

Honours and job offers

The State government has already honoured her with the Karnataka Kreeda Ratna Award, while she has also been nominated for the Ekalavya Award. Besides, she has received interview calls from the Union Government's Income Tax Department and a bank under the sports quota. "I will choose one of these employment opportunities. Sports offer so many avenues and opportunities. Therefore, parents should encourage children who show an interest in sports," she advised.

Flagging off the sports meet, A.M. Sridhar, Chief Officer of Srirampura Town Panchayat, said that victory and defeat were not important in sports and urged every participant to uphold the spirit of sportsmanship.

Senior journalist Amshi Prasanna Kumar said sports were essential for both mental and physical fitness.

A.S. Anand, Manager of the JP Nagar branch of Federal Bank, said determination and commitment could help one achieve anything, citing Chaithra as an example.

Benjamin said that the Indian cultural tradition regarded the home as the first school and the mother as the first teacher, stressing the need to encourage young talents.

School Principal Sister Mini Pallipadan, Manager Sister Chinnamma, Vice-Principal Sister Christina, Administrative Officer Sister Bincy, teachers, students and parents were present.

The annual sports meet featured a sports torch rally, an impressive march-past, the release of the school's annual magazine, athletic events, Hops-Pomp dance, karate and skating demonstrations, and the felicitation of Class 10 toppers.

The sports meet was organised to foster sportsmanship, discipline, unity, cooperation and leadership qualities among students. Participants enthusiastically took part in various competitions and showcased their sporting talents.

ASG Eye Hospital offers free treatment to kids hurt by firecrackers till Nov 12

CH NEWS, MYSURU

As Diwali celebrations light up the city, ASG Eye Hospital, Mysuru, has launched a special nationwide campaign, 'Safe Eyes, Safe Diwali', to prevent firecracker-related eye injuries and vision impairment among children.

The campaign, launched under the hospital's Corporate Social Responsibility (CSR) initiative, began on Wednesday and will run till November 12. Children below 15 years of age who sustain eye injuries due to firecrackers will be provided free medical consultations, diagnostic examinations and, if required, surgical treatment. The offer excludes spectacles and anaesthesia charges.

Addressing a press conference, Dr. Mahesh Kumar H.M., Medical Director and Senior Retina Specialist at the hospital, expressed concern over the growing risks associated with the careless handling of firecrackers during Diwali. "Although Diwali is the festival of lights, the careless use of firecrackers can cause severe trauma to children. Every year, we come across cases of children suffering permanent vision loss due to firecracker injuries."

'Safe Eyes, Safe Diwali' campaign at ASG Eye Hospital, Mysuru

In all 200 branches

He added that the free treatment facility would be available across all 200 branches of ASG Eye Hospital in the country, making the initiative accessible to children affected by firecracker-related eye injuries.

Dr. Mahesh Kumar cautioned parents against resorting to home remedies, rubbing the injured eye or attempting to remove foreign objects lodged in the eye themselves.

Such practices could aggravate the injury and cause further damage to the delicate eye structures. Parents should instead seek immediate medical attention from an ophthalmologist to prevent complications and safeguard the child's vision, he advised.

The campaign aims to spread awareness about eye safety during Diwali and ensure timely medical intervention for children who suffer firecracker-related injuries, thereby reducing the risk of permanent visual impairment.

Cataract and refractive surgeons Dr. Lucy Kaveri, Dr. Kaveri G., Dr. Pragya Porwal and Dr. Supriya, along with the hospital's Divisional Head Pradeep Prasad, were present at the press conference.

Dasara doll display contest winners felicitated in Mysuru

CH NEWS, MYSURU

Cash prizes and certificates were distributed to the winners of the 'Mane Mane Bombe' (Doll Display at Every Home) contest organised during the Dasara festivities at a programme held here on Wednesday.

The contest was organised jointly by the H.V. Rajeev Sneha Balaga, Vipra Mahila Sangama and Krishna Calling Charitable Trust to encourage households to preserve and promote the traditional practice of displaying dolls during Dasara.

A tradition in decline

Speaking on the occasion, former MUDA Chairman and KPCC member H.V. Rajeev recalled that doll displays were an integral part of Dasara and Navaratri celebrations. Placing dolls in homes and inviting relatives and friends to participate in the festivities had been a cherished tradition. Though Mysuru Dasara has gained global recognition, the number of households displaying dolls has been declining in recent years. The competition was conceived to encourage families to continue the age-old tradition.

Rajeev expressed happiness over the encouraging response to the contest, which has been witnessing an enthusiastic participation year after year.

When Dasara was 'Bombe Habba'

Senior Sugama Sangeetha singer H.R. Leelavathi said Dasara was popularly known as 'Bombe Habba' (Doll Festival) during her childhood. "In those days, every household prepared small chakkulis and sweet balls for children and distributed them as part of the doll festival. Displaying dolls requires the support of several family members. With the decline of joint families, the number of households celebrating the tradition has also come down," she observed.

As part of the prize distribution, 25 participants in the large-scale doll display category were given cash prizes of Rs. 1,000 each, while 25 participants in the medium/general category received Rs. 500 each. Certificates were distributed to all participants.

Vipra Mahila Sangama president Dr. K.V. Lakshmidevi and Krishna Calling Charitable Trust president K.R. Ganesh Rao, among others, were present.

CESC's careless cable work leaves Mysuru residents thirsty

SHYAM SUNDAR VATTAM, MYSURU

Residents in several parts of Mysuru city are being forced to endure severe drinking water scarcity, with water supply disrupted once in two days, not because of dwindling water levels in the Cauvery basin reservoirs but due to the alleged negligence of Chamundeshwari Electricity Supply Corporation Limited (CESC) and its contractors.

The ongoing underground (UG) cable-laying works across the city have turned into a source of misery for residents, with contractors repeatedly damaging the main drinking water pipelines while digging roads. The absence of proper supervision by CESC officials has compounded the problem, leaving several localities without water for hours and, at times, for one to two days.

3-4 pipeline breaks reported in the last eight to 10 days

The cable-laying works, which had been temporarily suspended last month in view of the Dasara festivities, have resumed in several parts of the city. CESC has entrusted the work to multiple contractors, who have deployed machinery and labourers to dig roads and lay underground cables.

However, the workers appear to be digging without taking adequate precautions to identify the existing drinking water pipelines. In the last eight to 10 days alone, such incidents have reportedly occurred three to four times, disrupting water supply to entire localities.

Once a pipeline is damaged, workers from the Vani Vilasa Water Works (VVWW) have to rush to the spot and undertake repairs. The process takes several hours, during which residents are left scrambling for water.

"We are being punished for no fault of ours. There is water in the Cauvery reservoirs, but we are forced to go without drinking water because someone has damaged the pipeline while digging the road. How long should we depend on water tankers?" a resident of an affected locality said.

Another resident expressed frustration over the repeated disruptions.

"This is not an isolated incident. The pipeline gets damaged, water supply stops, and we have to wait for a day or two for normal supply to resume. CESC should take responsibility for the hardship caused to residents," the citizen said.

The issue is not new. A few months ago, the then Mysuru City Corporation (MCC) Commissioner had ordered the suspension of underground cable-laying works across the city following complaints about shoddy execution. The dug-up roads were not being properly restored, causing considerable inconvenience to motorists and commuters.

The works were subsequently resumed after CESC assured the civic authorities that the roads would be properly filled and restored.

Now, the repeated damage to drinking water pipelines has raised fresh questions about the quality of execution and monitoring of the works.

A VVWW official told City Hilights that CESC contractors were digging roads recklessly without slowing down their machinery or exercising caution near water pipelines.

"We are not against CESC or its underground cable project. But the contractors must instruct their workers to exercise caution while digging. Every time a pipeline is damaged, our staff have to rush for repairs, and people suffer for one or two days without water. Proper coordination between the departments is essential," the official said.

Residents have urged CESC to deploy supervisory staff at work sites, ensure coordination with VVWW before digging and hold contractors accountable for damaging essential water infrastructure.

What residents want

1. Supervisory staff at CESC work sites
2. Coordination with VVWW before digging
3. Contractors held accountable for damage

With the city's underground cable project continuing, citizens say that development works should not come at the cost of their basic right to drinking water.

Former DCC president calls for a second freedom movement

CH NEWS, MYSURU

Former Mysuru District Congress Committee President Dr. B.J. Vijayakumar called for a second freedom movement in the country, alleging that the Special Intensive Revision (SIR) of electoral rolls has posed a serious threat to citizens' voting rights.

The protest in Mysuru that Dr B.J. Vijayakumar addressed

Addressing a protest, Vijayakumar alleged that the BJP-led Union government had brought the Election Commission of India under its complete control and was conspiring to deprive eligible citizens of their voting rights to win elections. He said ordinary protests would not be sufficient to correct the prevailing situation, and called upon the Congress to launch a nationwide movement in 2026 to fight authoritarianism and anarchy. "This is not merely a Congress party struggle. It has become an urgent necessity for every citizen of the country to fight for democracy and protect their voting rights," he said.

Recalling Mahatma Gandhi's launch of the Non-Cooperation Movement against the British in 1920, Vijayakumar urged citizens to initiate a similar movement against the SIR process by refusing to cooperate with government officials.

Reacting to Karnataka BJP president B.Y. Vijayendra's alleged use of the derogatory phrase 'Congress Makkalu', Vijayakumar said the remark was an insult to freedom fighters who had participated in the Independence Movement. He demanded that the police take suo motu cognisance of the alleged remark and arrest Vijayendra.

> — Dr B.J. Vijayakumar, Former Mysuru DCC president

Strongly reacting to BJP leader Chalavadi Narayanaswamy's alleged statement that Congress leaders should be cut into pieces and thrown into the Arabian Sea, Vijayakumar said the remark was highly objectionable. He said the Indian National Congress had played a pivotal role in the freedom struggle against British rule, and criticised Narayanaswamy for making such a statement. He described Narayanaswamy as an insignificant person and said his remarks were an affront to the sacrifices made by freedom fighters.

White-topping wipes out Mysuru's cycle tracks

CH NEWS, MYSURU

The ongoing white-topping works on roads in Kuvempunagar have reportedly erased dedicated cycling tracks, raising concerns among cycling enthusiasts over the future of eco-friendly mobility infrastructure in the heritage city.

In a press release, D.V. Dayananda Sagar, convenor of Mysuru Grahakara Parishat (MGP), has appealed to Mysuru City Corporation (MCC) Commissioner M.K. Savitha to restore the cycling tracks by incorporating appropriate safety features and technical standards.

Mysuru had embarked on an ambitious initiative to transform itself into a model cycling city under the Centre's 'Cycles4Change' challenge. The MCC, in association with private partners, had launched the 'Trin Trin' public bicycle-sharing scheme to encourage people to adopt cycling as an affordable and environment-friendly mode of transport.

With the growing number of cyclists, the civic body had also developed dedicated cycle tracks on select roads, including the Lalitha Mahal Road stretch in front of the Administrative Training Institute (ATI).

The city's cycling infrastructure has evolved over the years. The proposal for dedicated cycle lanes was first mooted in 2012, with the objective of reserving road space exclusively for cyclists. The 'Trin Trin' public bicycle-sharing system was launched in June 2017, followed by efforts under the 'Cycles4Change' initiative to expand dedicated cycling lanes across important roads.

> "The purpose of the project is defeated if the tracks disappear during white-topping works"
> D.V. DAYANANDA SAGAR
> Convenor, Mysuru Grahakara Parishat

However, MGP has alleged that the cycling infrastructure created at considerable public expense is now being rendered ineffective due to road development works, particularly white-topping.

"The MCC has spent crores of rupees on developing cycling tracks, but the purpose of the project is defeated if the tracks disappear during white-topping works. The Commissioner should ensure that quality cycling infrastructure is restored in Kuvempunagar and other parts of Mysuru," Dayananda Sagar said in his appeal.

He further pointed out that expanding dedicated cycling tracks would encourage more people to use bicycles for commuting, thereby helping reduce air pollution and promoting a healthier urban environment.

MGP has welcomed the MCC Commissioner's assurance that cycling tracks would be reconstructed after the completion of white-topping works. The Parishat has urged the civic authorities to ensure that the restored tracks adhere to prescribed technical standards and provide safe, uninterrupted access to cyclists.

The appeal comes amid growing concerns over the need to integrate non-motorised transport infrastructure into Mysuru's road development projects, rather than allowing it to be compromised by road upgrades.

Karnataka admits financial constraints over Gruha Lakshmi dues

CH NEWS, BENGALURU

The Karnataka government has acknowledged financial difficulties in releasing pending payments under its Gruha Lakshmi scheme.

In an affidavit submitted to the Karnataka High Court, the government stated that assistance for February and March 2025 had not been released due to financial constraints.

The matter came up during the hearing of a Public Interest Litigation (PIL) filed by R. Ganga and G.D. Pavithra, seeking payment of the pending instalments. Sonal S. Igar, the Stree Shakti Project Officer, submitted the affidavit confirming the delay.

Government says payments are not a legal right

In its response, the government argued that Gruha Lakshmi is a welfare scheme and that beneficiaries cannot claim monthly payments as an enforceable legal right. It also stated that financial assistance cannot be demanded solely on the basis of legitimate expectation when the government faces financial difficulties.

The government requested the High Court to dismiss the PIL. The court reportedly granted the petitioners two weeks to file their objections and postponed the hearing.

The government also said verification was underway to identify and remove ineligible beneficiaries, including income tax and GST payers, from the scheme.

₹7,408 crore released for three other instalments

Meanwhile, the government has released the 34th, 35th and 36th instalments together, amounting to approximately ₹7,408.6 crore. These payments cover August, September and October 2026. However, the February and March 2025 dues remain a separate issue.

Government rejects allegations of duplicate payments

The government denied allegations that money had been transferred twice to beneficiaries through separate bank accounts. It said payments are processed through the Aadhaar-Enabled Payment System, which prevents duplicate transfers.

The Gruha Lakshmi scheme provides ₹2,000 per month to eligible women heads of households. Opposition parties and the petitioners have questioned the status of approximately ₹5,000 crore in pending payments, affecting a large number of beneficiaries.

Hasanamba Temple generates ₹13 cr in 7 days

To manage surging crowds and ensure smoother darshan, authorities are reducing ritual times, including naivedya offerings, to speed up devotee movement.

CH NEWS, HASSAN

1.6 million+ devotees in seven days

₹13 crore+ revenue so far

The annual darshan festival of Goddess Hasanamba in Hassan has witnessed a massive turnout, with more than 1.6 million devotees visiting the temple in just seven days.

The festival has generated revenue exceeding ₹13 crore so far, Deputy Commissioner K.S. Latha Kumari said on Thursday.

The Deputy Commissioner said the district administration and temple management were taking several measures to manage the increasing crowds and ensure smooth darshan for devotees. The time allocated for religious rituals, including the naivedya offering, was being reduced to facilitate quicker movement of devotees.

The administration expected an even larger influx of visitors over the next five days and advised devotees to come prepared to wait patiently in queues, Latha Kumari said. Steps had also been taken to regulate the number of VIPs and other visitors seeking entry through official protocol, she said.

Meanwhile, an incident involving a group of Congress workers from Ramanagara and Kanakapura has triggered discussion after they reportedly argued with Revenue Department staff over special access to the temple.

According to reports, five to six people arrived at the temple from the Pravasi Mandira guest house in a vehicle designated for protocol visitors. Village Accountant Manu accompanied them up to the main entrance but informed them that, as per the Additional Deputy Commissioner's instructions, staff could not escort them inside.

The visitors reportedly objected to the restriction and later complained to Deputy Commissioner Latha Kumari against Manu and another official, Suprith. The Deputy Commissioner initially reprimanded the staff and asked them to treat visitors courteously. She also apologised to the complainants over the incident.

The episode has drawn attention to the challenges of managing VIP access amid the heavy rush of ordinary devotees.

KRS water level falls to 99 feet in November

CH NEWS, MANDYA

The Krishnarajasagara (KRS) Dam's water level dropped to 99 feet, raising water shortage concerns in the Cauvery basin ahead of summer.

The water level at the Krishnarajasagara (KRS) Dam in Mandya district has dropped to 99 feet, raising concerns over a possible water shortage in the Cauvery basin well before the onset of summer.

The reservoir, located in Srirangapatna taluk, has a maximum storage level of 124.80 feet. Its water level has fallen by five feet in just one week, from 104 feet to 99 feet, indicating a sharp decline in water availability.

The continuous release of water to Tamil Nadu, following directions from the Cauvery Water Management Authority (CWMA) on five occasions, has added to the concern. Currently, around 7,884 cusecs of water is being released from the reservoir into the river and canals, of which 3,000 cusecs is being supplied towards Tamil Nadu.

According to the available figures, the reservoir currently holds around 22 TMC of water. However, six TMC is classified as dead storage, which cannot be utilised for regular requirements. This leaves only 16 TMC of usable water for drinking, irrigation and other purposes.

Key points

- → Cauvery water released to Tamil Nadu
- → Current reservoir storage at 22 TMC
- → Usable water restricted to 16 TMC
- → Farmers and residents voice concern
- → Declining levels threaten water supplies

The rapid decline in storage has raised concerns among farmers and residents dependent on the Cauvery river. The drying riverbanks and falling reservoir level have further highlighted the seriousness of the situation.

Bengaluru, Mysuru, Mandya and several neighbouring districts depend heavily on the Cauvery for their drinking water requirements.

Illegal sand mining flourishes across Mundargi taluk

MALINGARAYA PUJAR, MUNDARGI

Illegal sand mining is reportedly continuing unchecked along the Tungabhadra and Malaprabha rivers in Gadag district, particularly in Mundargi taluk, raising serious concerns among residents and environmental activists over the destruction of river ecosystems.

The riverbanks have become hotspots for unauthorised sand extraction, with sand allegedly being transported in tractors and tipper trucks in broad daylight. JCB machines are reportedly being used to excavate riverbeds, damaging the natural structure of riverbanks and disturbing the flow of water. Several streams and ponds across the district are also facing threats from illegal mining.

There are allegations that influential individuals and certain people operating under the guise of social workers are involved in the illegal trade. Questions have also been raised over the alleged involvement or negligence of officials responsible for preventing unauthorised sand extraction. However, these allegations require investigation by the concerned authorities.

Environmentalists warn that uncontrolled sand mining could lower groundwater levels, damage river ecosystems and create serious water shortages in the coming years. The Tungabhadra and Malaprabha rivers play an important role in maintaining the region's water resources, making their protection essential.

Residents and environmental activists have urged the Gadag district administration and the Department of Mines and Geology to take immediate action.

They have demanded the formation of special vigilance teams, regular inspections and strict enforcement measures across Mundargi and Ron taluks.They have also called for special checkposts to prevent illegal transportation of sand. Jarkiholi announces Rs 3,600 sugarcane price

Belagavi sugar factories agreed to pay Rs 3,600 per tonne of sugarcane, excluding harvesting and transportation costs, District In-charge Minister Satish Jarkiholi said.

CH NEWS, BELAGAVI

District In-charge Minister Satish Jarkiholi has announced that sugar factories in Belagavi district have agreed to pay Rs 3,600 per tonne of sugarcane, excluding harvesting and transportation charges.

However, farmer leader Chunappa Pujeri had called for a 'Jail Bharo' agitation on Thursday, opposing the settlement and demanding better prices for growers.

Following discussions with sugar factory owners and various farmers' organisations on Wednesday night, Jarkiholi appealed to farmers to accept the announced price and allow factories to begin crushing operations immediately. Prohibitory orders were in force in Belagavi on Thursday in view of the proposed agitation.

The minister said factory owners had earlier agreed to pay Rs 3,500 per tonne, but the government had persuaded them to increase the rate to Rs 3,600. He said the amount would be paid in a single instalment, apart from harvesting and transportation costs. Farmers would effectively receive Rs 300 more than last year.

Farmers divided

Farmers from Kittur, Bailhongal and Khanapur have accepted the announced rate and expressed willingness to begin harvesting. However, another faction led by farmer leader Ravi Patil rejected the announcement, arguing that the same offer had been discussed for nearly a month without any meaningful improvement.

Zilla Panchayat CEO Rahul Shinde explained that under the proposed profit-sharing arrangement, 75 per cent of additional earnings would go to farmers and 25 per cent to factories if sugar prices reached Rs 50 per unit.

Of the projected additional profit of Rs 250, farmers would receive Rs 190 and factories Rs 60.

Farmer leader Raghavendra Naik said his group had accepted the Rs 3,600 rate and wanted factories to begin operations immediately as sugarcane crops were drying up due to inadequate rainfall.

However, he said the struggle for an additional Rs 1,000 incentive and an increase in the minimum selling price of sugar would continue.

Digital census must ensure accuracy, integrity: DC

CH NEWS, RAICHUR

Deputy Commissioner Poovitha S. has urged officials and staff entrusted with Census 2027 duties to acquire complete knowledge of the process and discharge their responsibilities with sincerity, accuracy and integrity.

Poovitha highlighted the census's vital role in national development and planning, noting it will use digital technology for the first time in India.

She was speaking after inaugurating a two-day district-level training workshop for district officials, charge officers and staff at the Deputy Commissioner's office auditorium in Raichur.

Poovitha said the census played a crucial role in providing essential data for the country's development and planning. For the first time in India, the population census would be conducted using digital technology.Unlike the 2011 Census, when information was collected manually, the upcoming exercise would follow a digital system.As the process involved new technology and procedures, everyone, from field-level enumerators to senior officials, must understand their responsibilities and perform their duties carefully. Although the new system might appear challenging initially, proper training and experience would make the process easier, she said.

The Deputy Commissioner stressed that there should be no confusion, negligence or errors during data collection. Officials must ensure that information is gathered accurately and transparently. She instructed participants to make full use of the two-day training programme and carefully record details of every member of each household.

Zilla Panchayat Chief Executive Officer Eshwar Kumar Kandoo said the decennial census provided officials with a valuable opportunity to gain experience in an important national exercise.

He urged them to carry out their responsibilities systematically and report any difficulties to the Deputy Commissioner or himself well in advance.Census nodal officers Sudarshan and Begum explained the census procedures and implementation methods during the workshop.

Additional Deputy Commissioner Somaling Gopal Gennur, Lingasugur Assistant Commissioner Nagendra Prasad, Zilla Panchayat Chief Planning Officer Dr T. Roni, District Urban Development Cell Project Director Basavanneppa Kalashetty, District Census Training Officer Sadashivappa, taluk tahsildars and other officials attended the programme.

Lokayukta conducts surprise raid at Ballari RTO office

CH NEWS, BALLARI

A team of Bengaluru Lokayukta officials conducted a surprise raid on the Regional Transport Office (RTO) in Ballari on Thursday following complaints that bribes were allegedly being demanded from the public and middlemen were involved in getting official work completed.

A team of around 15 Lokayukta officials, led by Bengaluru Lokayukta Deputy Superintendent of Police Srinivas, arrived at the RTO office in three vehicles and began the inspection at around 11 am. The sudden operation created activity on the office premises as officials examined various sections and questioned employees.

During the raid, the Lokayukta team conducted a detailed verification of files, official documents and administrative records relating to the functioning of the transport department. The officials also collected information from several staff members and officers, including RTO Nizamuddin, ARTO Rafiq and Santhosh Kompi.

The inspection followed allegations from members of the public that obtaining services at the RTO had become difficult without approaching middlemen. People reportedly complained that they were being asked to pay additional amounts for processing applications and clearing files. There were also allegations that specific sums were demanded for different services, forcing applicants to depend on intermediaries to complete their work.

The complaints raised concerns over transparency and accountability in the functioning of the office. Taking note of the allegations, the Lokayukta officials carried out the surprise inspection to examine the records and gather information about the alleged irregularities.

During the operation, officials checked whether applications and other official procedures were being handled according to prescribed rules. They also sought explanations from employees regarding the functioning of different sections.

The inspection was continuing at the time of reporting. However, the Lokayukta authorities had not yet released an official statement regarding the findings of the raid or confirmed whether any irregularities had been established.

Students showcase talents at Pratibha Karanji competition

CH NEWS, VIJAYAPURA

The event provided a platform for children to demonstrate their abilities in cultural, literary and artistic activities.

Addressing the gathering, education officials highlighted the importance of identifying and encouraging students' talents from an early age. They said such competitions help children develop confidence, creativity and communication skills while providing opportunities to excel at school, district and state levels.

Speaking on the occasion, Rajju Kuriyavar, a member of Ward 35, said organising Pratibha Karanji competitions at the school level was important for nurturing young talent.

He emphasised that children should be encouraged to participate in different activities according to their interests and abilities. Teachers also play a significant role in identifying students' talents and motivating them to perform better.

Chinmayi School Principal Pratibha Patil said students who participated in the competitions had put in considerable effort to prepare for the events. She encouraged them to participate enthusiastically and reminded them that winning was not the only objective. Learning from participation and improving their abilities were equally important.

Students from around 30 schools took part in various competitions conducted in three categories: Classes 1 to 4, Classes 5 to 7 and Classes 8 to 12.

The competitions included speech, Kannada, Hindi and English recitation, religious reading, light music, storytelling, fancy dress, acting, devotional songs, mimicry, quiz and other cultural activities.

Students also presented folk and classical dance performances, while some displayed their artistic abilities through colourful drawings and paintings.

Pak's repeated devaluations fail to deliver economic performance

NEW DELHI

Pakistan's recurring currency devaluations have failed to produce lasting improvements in exports and economic performance because the country's deeper structural problems remain unresolved, according to a report. An analysis by The Friday Times argues exchange rate adjustments alone cannot fix underlying economic weaknesses. It describes Pakistan's economy as a vehicle whose performance depends on four key pillars: macroeconomic stability, foreign exchange flows, governance and economic freedom, and productivity and competitiveness. Persistent fiscal deficits, high inflation, excessive government borrowing and weak tax collection have undermined economic stability and placed continuing pressure on the rupee.

Starlink India delay due to approvals, not corporate pushback

NEW DELHI

The delay in the launch of Elon Musk's Starlink satellite internet services in India stems primarily from pending regulatory and security approvals due to legitimate reasons rather than efforts by domestic telecom companies to block its entry, a new report has said. The report from Europinion said Starlink obtained its licence to operate in India in June 2025 but remains unable to begin commercial services because it is still awaiting security clearance, spectrum allocation and foreign investment-related approvals. Musk alleged in October that powerful business interests were obstructing Starlink's entry into India.

IMG recommends asset monetisation proposals worth over Rs 1,100 cr

NEW DELHI

The government on Thursday said the Inter-Ministerial Group (IMG) has recommended asset monetisation proposals involving assets valued at over Rs 1,100 crore for consideration and approval by the Alternative Mechanism (AM).

The proposals primarily relate to surplus land and building assets of Central Public Sector Enterprises (CPSEs) identified for monetisation. The recommendations mark an important milestone in the Government of India's efforts to unlock value from surplus and underutilised public assets and facilitate their productive utilisation, according to a Finance Ministry statement.

The IMG was chaired by the Secretary, Department of Public Enterprises (DPE), and co-chaired by the Secretary, Department of Telecommunications (DoT).

The National Land Monetization Corporation (NLMC) is a wholly owned Government of India company under the administrative control of the Department of Public Enterprises, Ministry of Finance.

India's renewable energy capacity crosses 300 GW

Vice-President CP Radhakrishnan highlights country's renewable energy achievements and their potential to inspire developing nations worldwide.

NEW DELHI

Vice-President CP Radhakrishnan on Thursday said India's renewable energy achievements have emerged as a model for the Global South, highlighting the country's growing transition towards clean and sustainable power.

Addressing the valedictory session of the Bharat Renewable Energy Summit and Expo 2026, he said India's non-fossil fuel-based installed capacity had crossed 300 gigawatts (GW). The country also achieved 50 per cent of its installed electricity capacity from non-fossil fuel sources in 2025, five years ahead of its target.

Highlighting the expansion of solar energy, Radhakrishnan said India's solar power capacity had grown from under 3 GW to over 170 GW in a decade.

He attributed this transformation to sound policies, private enterprise and collective efforts by states and citizens.

The Vice-President said more than 65 lakh households had joined the solar movement through the PM Surya Ghar Muft Bijli Yojana. Additionally, nearly 30 lakh farmers had benefited from the PM-KUSUM scheme, with solar pumps helping reduce diesel expenses and generate additional income.

He also highlighted the PM-JANMAN and the Dharti Aaba Janjatiya Gram Utkarsh Abhiyan, which aim to extend electricity access to remote tribal communities.

Green energy milestones

- Non-fossil capacity: over 300 GW
- Clean share: 50% of installed capacity in 2025
- Solar: under 3 GW to over 170 GW
- PM Surya Ghar: 65 lakh+ households
- PM-KUSUM: nearly 30 lakh farmers

Emphasising innovation, research and industry-academia collaboration, Radhakrishnan expressed confidence in India's hydrogen energy potential. He said the renewable energy transition could support economic growth, generate employment, reduce import dependence and strengthen energy security.

Centre urges states to accelerate watershed projects

NEW DELHI

The Centre has urged states to ensure effective and speedy utilisation of funds allocated for science-based watershed development programmes, stressing the need to strengthen agricultural resilience and improve the livelihoods of farmers and rural communities.

Addressing a national-level consultation meeting on the draft National Technical Guidelines (NTG) for improved watershed management in Nagpur, Secretary of the Department of Land Resources Dilip Kumar emphasised the importance of establishing essential parameters to be followed uniformly across states. He added that flexibility should be maintained to accommodate additional parameters based on local requirements.

Kumar called for robust baseline data and comprehensive impact assessments to evaluate the outcomes of the Watershed Development Component of Pradhan Mantri Krishi Sinchayee Yojana (WDC-PMKSY) 2.0. Such assessments, he said, would help identify implementation gaps and provide lessons for designing and executing the next phase, WDC-PMKSY 3.0.

He stressed that watershed development initiatives must deliver tangible benefits to farmers through scientific interventions translated into practical, location-specific solutions. He also called for recognising well-performing states and field-level officers to encourage institutional commitment and improve implementation.

Participants also highlighted the need to accelerate implementation under WDC-PMKSY 2.0, with project timelines reduced from seven years under the first phase to five years in the second phase.

Four nations launch network to study Bay of Bengal fisheries

KOCHI

India, Sri Lanka, Bangladesh and the Maldives have joined hands to establish a regional research network to study the impact of changing weather patterns and ocean conditions on fish stocks in the Bay of Bengal.

The initiative, named the Bay of Bengal Network of Ocean Researchers for Fisheries (BOB-NOR), was launched in Kochi during an international meeting at the ICAR-Central Marine Fisheries Research Institute (CMFRI).

Union Fisheries Joint Secretary Surabhi Rai said the initiative could emerge as a model for science-based fisheries management in other parts of the world.

The network will bring together ocean scientists, marine researchers and fisheries experts from the four participating countries to understand the reasons behind changing fish populations and assess the consequences for fishing communities.

Researchers will examine the influence of rising sea temperatures, changing monsoon patterns, variations in salinity, ocean currents and marine biodiversity on fish populations. The study will also focus on changes in fish migration, breeding patterns, growth and population levels across different parts of the Bay of Bengal.

The initiative aims to integrate information from satellite observations, ocean surveys, climate studies and fisheries research to develop a comprehensive understanding of marine ecosystem changes.

Officials and experts from India, Sri Lanka, Bangladesh and the Maldives participated in the meeting.

6G could add $1.24 trillion to global economy by 2040: GSMA

NEW DELHI

Sixth-generation mobile technology or 6G could generate an additional $1.24 trillion for the global economy by 2040, but inadequate spectrum allocation could put nearly half of that potential at risk, a report by an industry body showed on Thursday.

However, the mobile industry body warned that as much as $520 billion, or 42 per cent of the projected economic value, could be lost if governments do not make enough spectrum available to support large-scale 6G deployment.

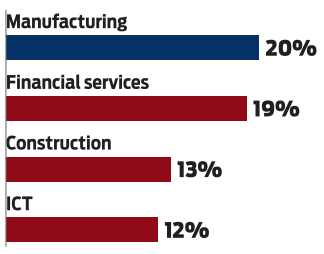

"Decisions on spectrum policy taken over the next few years would play a critical role in determining how much of that value can ultimately be realised," said GSMA Chief Regulatory Officer John Giusti.

In addition, manufacturing and financial services are likely to be the biggest beneficiaries of 6G, accounting for 20 per cent and 19 per cent of its projected economic contribution, respectively, according to the industry body.

Figures: GSMA

The report comes ahead of key international spectrum discussions scheduled for the World Radiocommunication Conference in 2027 where policymakers are expected to determine future spectrum allocations for emerging technologies.

"6G is expected to differ significantly from previous mobile generations by being designed around artificial intelligence capabilities, enabling networks to support intelligent decision-making, integrated sensing functions and seamless connectivity across terrestrial and satellite networks," according to the industry association.

The report also identified AI-driven connectivity, industrial robotics, advanced broadband services, integrated sensing technologies and non-terrestrial networks as key drivers of future economic gains.

Adani Ports to buy Europe's Evos in 2.56 billion euro deal

AHMEDABAD

Adani Ports and Special Economic Zone Limited (APSEZ) on Thursday announced the acquisition of Evos BV of the Netherlands, Europe's second-largest independent liquid storage operator, in an all-cash transaction valued at an enterprise value (EV) of 2.56 billion euro.

Under the agreement, APSEZ will acquire a 100 per cent stake in Evos from Igneo Infrastructure Partners. The deal values Evos at an equity value of 1.18 billion euro and implies an acquisition multiple of 11.7 times CY25 EV/EBITDA.

The transaction will be funded through debt and remains subject to regulatory approvals and works council consultation.

"APSEZ, India's largest and one of the world's fastest growing Integrated Transport Operator, agrees to acquire 100 per cent stake in Netherlands-headquartered Evos B.V. (Evos) from Igneo Infrastructure Partners. The proposed transaction is an all-cash deal at an enterprise value of 2.56 bn euro," the official statement said.

For calendar year 2025, Evos reported revenue of 392 million euro and EBITDA of 219 million euro, a robust EBITDA margin of 56 per cent.

Following the acquisition, the combined entity's pro forma net debt-to-EBITDA ratio is expected to be 2.76 times, declining to around 2.5 times by FY27.

"Evos marks an important milestone in APSEZ's trajectory towards handling 1 billion tons of cargo and building a truly global, integrated transport platform. We are delighted to welcome Evos into our portfolio, giving us significant presence across key global liquid storage and energy hubs," Karan Adani noted.

Blinkit introduces Rs 2,500 fee for non-emergency ambulance rides

42,000 cases in two years

20,000 emergency runs, free

Rs 2,500 non-emergency fee

NEW DELHI

Quick commerce platform Blinkit on Thursday introduced a flat fee of Rs 2,500 for non-emergency ambulance bookings, while continuing to offer emergency transfers free of charge, as the company seeks to ensure greater availability of its fleet for critical medical situations.

Announcing the change, Deepinder Goyal, founder of Eternal, said the move was prompted by growing instances of ambulances being used for routine purposes such as doctor consultations, regular check-ups and hospital-to-home transfers that could otherwise be handled by conventional transport services.

"I started Zomato with a spirit of service. Blinkit Ambulance is what that spirit of service looks like today. In the last 2 years, we have served 20,000 emergency cases (42,000 cases in total). We haven't charged a single rupee for any of them. And we want to keep it that way," Goyal noted.

However, the company said a significant share of bookings were for non-emergency needs, putting pressure on the availability of ambulances for urgent cases.

"With everything free, a growing share of bookings are for routine checkups, hospital visits and hospital-to-home transfers, trips that an Uber or private transport could have handled just as easily. Every such booking keeps a fully equipped emergency ambulance with paramedics off the road when someone's life may depend on it," he stated.

"So we are making a change from now onwards: Emergency transfers – free, as always. Non-emergency transfers – Rs 2,500, charged after the trip. Broadly in line with what private ambulances charge. This money goes to Eternal Foundation, which runs these ambulances and will help us scale them even further," Goyal added.

He said the company expects the fee to substantially reduce non-emergency usage and help maintain the availability of its 10-minute ambulance service for life-threatening situations.

SEMICONDUCTOR PUSH

India approves 12 semiconductor manufacturing projects

NEW DELHI

India's semiconductor strategy has moved beyond policy formulation towards building a comprehensive manufacturing and technology ecosystem, with 12 approved projects and five already in commercial production, Amitesh Kumar Sinha, Additional Secretary at the Ministry of Electronics and Information Technology (MeitY) and CEO of the India Semiconductor Mission (ISM), said on Wednesday.

Speaking on the final day of the ISIG Executive Summit India 2026, Sinha said the country's next phase of semiconductor development would focus on expanding the broader ecosystem, including design companies, materials, chemicals, gases and equipment, alongside manufacturing, research and development and talent development.

Sinha identified India's large domestic market, skilled talent pool and government incentives as key advantages in attracting semiconductor investments.

The summit, organised under the theme 'Enabling the Intelligent Future: Advanced Semiconductors, AI, Data Centers and Power Electronics', marked the first ISIG Executive Summit held in India. It brought together global technology leaders, investors, researchers, senior executives and government representatives to discuss opportunities in the semiconductor industry.

Discussions covered advanced packaging, outsourced semiconductor assembly and test (OSAT), power electronics, silicon carbide and gallium nitride technologies, artificial intelligence and data-centre demand.

ISIG also signed an agreement with the Bihar government to support the development of the state's semiconductor and electronics ecosystem.

Dr Shalu Agarwal, General Manager of India and Head of Power Semiconductor at ISIG, said the summit demonstrated the opportunities emerging through collaboration between global industry, investors and government.

AVOID CONFRONTATION, CHOOSE CONSENSUS

SHYAM SUNDAR VATTAM

The ongoing war of words between the Congress government in Karnataka and the Mysore royal family is an unfortunate development that has hurt the sentiments of Mysureans. At a time when the government should be celebrating the rich heritage and traditions of Mysore, its leaders appear to be indulging in needless confrontation with the erstwhile rulers who played a pivotal role in shaping the city.

The recent outburst by Urban Development and Mysore District In-charge Minister Dr. Yathindra Siddaramaiah against the Mysore royal family has not gone down well with the people. Responding to a letter from Dr. Pramoda Devi Wadiyar, who had highlighted the alleged mismanagement of this year's Dasara celebrations and the police obstruction of palace rituals, the minister reportedly stated that the palace and the Golden Howdah belonged to the government, while the royal family had been provided only a small space to reside.

Such a statement has understandably triggered widespread resentment among Mysureans. The Wadiyars are not merely a royal family; they are an integral part of Mysore's history, identity and cultural heritage. Their contributions to the development of the region are immeasurable. From promoting education, healthcare and infrastructure to supporting irrigation projects, the rulers of Mysore left behind a legacy that continues to benefit generations.

The generosity of the Wadiyars, particularly during periods of financial crisis, remains a matter of pride. The contribution of the royal family towards the construction of the Krishna Raja Sagara (KRS) dam, including the reported donation of the queen's jewellery, is a reminder of the sacrifices made for the welfare of the people. Such historical contributions cannot be brushed aside by political statements.

The Congress leaders appear to have lost sight of this legacy while responding to the royal family's criticism of Dasara arrangements. Instead of addressing the concerns raised by Dr. Pramoda Devi Wadiyar, the government chose to engage in a war of words. The reaction from Mysureans has clearly demonstrated that the people value the contributions of the Wadiyars and expect the government to acknowledge them with dignity.

This is not the first occasion on which the Congress government has found itself at odds with the royal family. Following the sudden demise of Srikantadatta Narasimharaja Wadiyar, the royal family had requested the government to cancel entertainment programmes inside the palace as a mark of respect. The then Chief Minister Siddaramaiah

"The message to the Congress government is clear: Avoid confrontation and go for consensus. Mysore's heritage deserves harmony, not hostility."
SHYAM SUNDAR VATTAM

initially refused to accept the request and favoured continuing the scheduled programmes. However, the then Revenue Minister and Mysore District In-charge Minister V. Srinivas Prasad strongly opposed holding entertainment events inside the palace during the period of mourning. Eventually, the Chief Minister agreed to the request.

Siddaramaiah also drew criticism when he reportedly remarked that the Mysore maharajas had constructed palaces and other buildings using public money rather than their personal wealth. The statement hurt the sentiments of Mysureans, who regard the Wadiyars' contributions as an important chapter in the city's history.

The legal dispute over the acquisition of the Mysore Palace by the State government, along with the ownership of the Golden Howdah and the golden throne, adds another dimension to the controversy. The royal family has challenged the State's claims in the High Court. The outcome of the litigation will have implications for the government's future conduct of the annual Dasara celebrations. If the court rules in favour of the royal family, the government may have to reconsider its arrangements. This possibility makes it all the more important for the government to adopt a conciliatory approach.

The government of the day cannot afford to undermine the contributions of the Mysore rulers merely because they belong to a different historical and political era. Nor should criticism of administrative arrangements during Dasara be viewed as an affront to the government. The royal family's concerns deserve to be examined objectively and addressed in a spirit of mutual respect.

Dasara is not merely a government-sponsored festival. It is a celebration of Mysore's cultural heritage, traditions and identity. The Wadiyars, the government, the administration and the people have all played a role in sustaining its grandeur. Any attempt to diminish the contribution of one stakeholder will only create unnecessary bitterness.

Instead of crossing swords with the royal family, the Congress government would do well to choose the path of consensus and dialogue. Political differences and administrative disputes can be resolved through mutual understanding. Respecting history does not diminish the authority of an elected government; rather, it strengthens its credibility.

GOA'S TOURISM GROWTH LOSES MOMENTUM: RISING COSTS, GLOBAL COMPETITION AND INFRASTRUCTURE GAPS RAISE CONCERNS

ADAM MANIYAR

Despite crossing the one crore tourist mark, Goa faces a changing tourism landscape as foreign arrivals struggle to recover, hotel occupancy comes under pressure and travellers increasingly compare the state with affordable international destinations.

Panaji, Goa, traditionally regarded as one of India's most attractive holiday destinations, is facing a significant shift in its tourism industry. Although the state continues to attract millions of domestic visitors, the pace of growth in tourist arrivals has slowed, raising concerns among hoteliers, travel operators, restaurant owners, taxi operators and other tourism-dependent businesses. The issue is not simply whether tourists are visiting Goa, but whether the state is continuing to offer the affordability, convenience, hospitality and overall experience that travellers expect. Recent tourism figures indicate that Goa's challenge is increasingly about maintaining its competitive position rather than merely attracting visitor numbers.

The future of Goa's tourism industry will depend not on how many visitors enter the state, but on how many leave with a positive experience and choose to return.

Tourist numbers tell a different story

According to the Goa Tourism Department, the state recorded 1,08,02,410 tourist arrivals in 2025, crossing the one crore mark for the second consecutive year. However, the latest figures suggest that the momentum is weakening. Between January and September 2026, Goa received 76,90,149 tourists, compared with 76,32,100 during the corresponding period in 2025. This represents growth of just 0.76 per cent. Domestic tourist arrivals increased by 1.72 per cent, reaching 74,21,709. The figures indicate that domestic tourism continues to support the industry, but overall growth remains almost stagnant. The more worrying trend is in international tourism. Goa received 8,90,459 foreign tourists in 2017, while the figure fell to 5,17,802 in 2025, a decline of approximately 42 per cent. This suggests that the state has not fully regained its traditional international tourism market, despite improvements in airport infrastructure and promotional campaigns.

Goa is becoming an expensive holiday destination

One of the major concerns raised by tourism stakeholders is the rising cost of holidays in Goa. Hotel tariffs, private villas, restaurants, beachside establishments and transportation can make a holiday significantly more expensive, particularly during the peak season. Travellers are increasingly comparing the cost of a holiday in Goa with destinations such as Thailand, Vietnam, Sri Lanka and Indonesia. These destinations compete through attractive holiday packages, organised transportation, international connectivity and comparatively affordable accommodation. A holidaymaker who once considered Goa an affordable international standard beach destination may now find better value elsewhere. The hotel tariffs and property rental rates in Goa had undergone a correction of approximately 15–20 per cent, with industry representatives pointing to oversupply and competition from international destinations.

Transportation remains a major concern

Transportation is another issue affecting Goa's tourism experience. Unlike many established international tourist destinations, Goa continues to face challenges in providing convenient, transparent and affordable local transport options. Tourists frequently raise concerns about taxi fares, limited transport choices and the difficulty of arranging last-mile connectivity from airports, railway stations and hotels to popular beaches. The debate surrounding app-based taxi services and traditional taxi operators has also affected perceptions of convenience. A tourist arriving in Goa should be able to travel from the airport to a hotel or beach without uncertainty over fares and availability. Tourism is not limited to hotels and beaches; convenient mobility is an equally important part of the visitor experience.

Declining foreign tourist arrivals

Foreign tourists have traditionally played an important role in Goa's hospitality and local business ecosystem. Unlike many domestic visitors, international travellers often stay for longer periods, explore different parts of the state, hire two-wheelers, participate in local excursions and spend at beach shacks, restaurants and cultural establishments. However, international arrivals have not recovered to their earlier levels. According to reporting by the BBC in May 2026, foreign tourist arrivals declined from nearly nine lakh in 2017 to approximately five lakh in 2025. Among the reasons identified were expensive airfares, visa-related difficulties, geopolitical uncertainty, reduced direct flight connectivity and competition from destinations offering easier travel arrangements. The discontinuation of direct London to Goa connectivity was also identified as a setback for British visitors.

Social media perception and changing tourist expectations

Goa's image as a relaxed, welcoming and affordable destination has been one of its biggest strengths. However, concerns about cleanliness, traffic congestion, tourist safety, service quality, inflated prices and the treatment of visitors have increasingly become part of online discussions. Social media has transformed the way people choose holiday destinations. A negative travel experience can reach thousands of potential visitors within hours. In September 2026, the Goa government acknowledged that it monitors online feedback and public sentiment concerning complaints involving taxi fares, tourist harassment, touts, cleanliness, congestion, public conveniences, beach conditions and safety. The government also stated that negative online comments had reduced significantly, although the recurring concerns continue to require attention. The challenge is not simply to counter negative publicity but to ensure that the actual tourist experience matches the image being promoted.

Oversupply and pressure on the hospitality sector

The rapid expansion of hotels, private villas, serviced apartments and holiday homes has increased accommodation choices in Goa. While this expansion is beneficial in terms of investment and infrastructure, demand has not necessarily grown at the same pace as supply. As a result, several hospitality businesses are facing increased competition, pricing pressure and uncertainty over occupancy. This indicates that the challenge extends beyond attracting visitors: Goa must also ensure sustainable business conditions for its hospitality industry.

What needs to change to bring Goa's tourism back on track?

Goa does not necessarily need more hotels or more commercial establishments. It needs a stronger and more coordinated tourism strategy that focuses on visitor satisfaction, international marketing and sustainable development.

Some important measures that deserve immediate attention include:

- Affordable transportation: Establish transparent taxi fare mechanisms and improve last-mile connectivity.
- International connectivity: Restore and expand direct international flight connections, particularly with traditional markets such as the UK, Russia and Europe.
- Visa facilitation: Work with the Central Government to make travel to India easier for international visitors.
- Clean beaches and public facilities: Improve sanitation, waste management, public toilets, parking and beach infrastructure.
- Responsible pricing: Encourage transparent pricing across hotels, restaurants, taxis and tourist activities.
- International marketing: Promote Goa in emerging markets instead of depending heavily on domestic seasonal tourism.
- Beyond beach tourism: Develop heritage tourism, wellness retreats, village tourism, adventure activities, cultural festivals and destination weddings.
- Tourist grievance redressal: Establish an effective mechanism to address complaints and protect visitors against fraud, harassment and overcharging.

Goa needs to protect its tourism identity

Goa's greatest strength has never been limited to its beaches, nightlife or luxury hotels. Its identity is built around its culture, hospitality, heritage, natural beauty, food and relaxed way of life. The state has enormous potential to attract domestic as well as international visitors. However, tourism cannot survive on promotional campaigns alone. The experience delivered on the ground must justify the money tourists spend. The government, tourism department, hospitality industry, transport operators and local communities must work together to address the issues affecting the sector. The latest statistics do not establish that Goa is witnessing an absolute collapse in tourist arrivals. Instead, they reveal a more concerning structural challenge: growth has almost stopped, while the international tourism segment remains significantly below its pre-pandemic level. Goa does not need to compete merely by attracting more tourists. It needs to become a destination where tourists want to return.

TWO HARVESTS FROM ONE FIELD: COMBINING SOLAR POWER WITH AGRICULTURE

DR. VIJAY GARG

"The future of farming may not require choosing between food and electricity. With appropriate technology, suitable crops and farmer-centred policies, one field could produce two valuable harvests, strengthening rural livelihoods while helping India move towards a cleaner and more sustainable energy future."
— Dr. Vijay Garg

Agriculture is the backbone of rural India, while solar energy is emerging as an important source of clean electricity. Traditionally, farming and solar power generation have competed for land. Solar installations occupy large areas that could otherwise be used for growing crops. However, an innovative approach called agrivoltaics offers an opportunity to combine both activities on the same land. It allows farmers to cultivate crops beneath or between elevated solar panels while generating electricity above them.

The concept raises an important question: can Indian farmers harvest food and solar energy from a single field without reducing agricultural productivity?

Agrivoltaics is the practice of integrating agricultural production with solar photovoltaic systems on the same land. Solar panels are installed at suitable heights and spacing to allow farming operations beneath or between them. Depending on the design, farmers can grow vegetables, fodder, medicinal plants and certain shade-tolerant crops while producing renewable electricity.

Unlike conventional solar parks, which may replace agricultural activity, agrivoltaic systems aim to preserve farming alongside energy generation. This approach could be particularly valuable in India, where agricultural land is essential for food security and rural livelihoods.

One of the most significant advantages of agrivoltaics is the possibility of earning income from two sources. Farmers may receive revenue from agricultural produce and electricity generated on their land. Depending on the ownership model, electricity can be sold to the grid, supplied to nearby consumers or used for irrigation pumps and other farm operations.

Solar panels also provide partial shade, which can reduce excessive exposure to sunlight and lower soil moisture loss under certain conditions. In hot and dry regions, this may help some crops withstand heat stress. However, the benefits depend on crop variety, local climate, panel height, spacing and the amount of sunlight reaching plants.

Agrivoltaics may also support more efficient water use. Reduced evaporation can help conserve moisture, although the effect varies with soil conditions and panel arrangement. Rainwater distribution must also be managed carefully because panels can concentrate rainfall in particular areas.

The greatest challenge is balancing electricity production with agricultural productivity. Plants require sufficient sunlight for photosynthesis, growth and grain formation. Excessive shading can reduce yields, particularly in crops that need abundant sunlight.

Therefore, agrivoltaics cannot be introduced uniformly across all farms. Crop selection is essential. Leafy vegetables, certain fodder crops and shade-tolerant plants may perform well under appropriately designed systems, while wheat, rice and other sun-demanding crops may require more careful evaluation.

For Punjab, where wheat and rice are major crops, large-scale adoption should follow local field trials rather than assumptions. Researchers must measure crop yields, grain quality, water consumption, electricity generation and farmers' profits over several growing seasons.

The initial investment in elevated solar structures can be substantial. Farmers may also face difficulties operating tractors, harvesters and irrigation equipment beneath panels. Installation must therefore accommodate farm machinery, drainage, crop height and routine agricultural activities.

Government support, affordable financing, cooperative ownership and partnerships with renewable-energy companies could make these systems more accessible. Agricultural universities and research institutions should develop region-specific models and demonstrate their performance through pilot projects.

Farmers must also receive clear agreements concerning electricity prices, maintenance costs, land ownership and responsibility for repairing damaged equipment. Small farmers should not be excluded because they lack the capital required for installation.

Agrivoltaics represents an opportunity to connect India's agricultural heritage with its clean-energy ambitions. It could diversify farm incomes, improve land-use efficiency and contribute to lower-carbon electricity generation. Nevertheless, its success depends on scientific planning rather than simply placing solar panels over cultivated land.

The way forward is to begin with carefully selected pilot projects, compare crop yields with conventional farming, and expand only where economic and environmental benefits are demonstrated.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Fix Pothole Death Traps

Through your esteemed paper, I want to highlight the dangerous condition of roads in the city. After every rain, potholes appear on almost all major roads and residential streets. Two-wheeler riders are the worst affected and many have lost lives trying to avoid them. The civic body fills them with loose mud which washes away in one shower. This is negligence. Citizens pay high road tax and property tax and deserve safe roads. I urge the authorities to use scientific methods, fix accountability for contractors and publish daily repair status online for transparency.

– Hepsiba

Save Our Lakes Now

I write about the shocking state of garbage and lakes in the city. The lakes that once supplied drinking water now foam with toxic waste and even catch fire due to untreated sewage and industrial dumping. Surrounding residential areas stink throughout the day. Garbage collection is irregular and segregation is not enforced at all. Despite court orders, encroachments continue unchecked. This is not just an environmental issue but a public health emergency with rising breathing problems. I request the government to stop sewage inflow, penalize violators and restore lakes before it is too late.

Water Crisis Needs Action

The city's water crisis is worsening every year and needs urgent action. Borewells in many residential areas have dried up completely despite going down to great depths with no water. Private water tankers charge exorbitant rates, exploiting helpless residents in summer. The official water supply is highly irregular and many new apartments have no connection at all. Rainwater harvesting is mandatory on paper but never enforced in reality. The government must speed up new water supply projects, enforce harvesting, revive lakes to recharge groundwater and regulate private tankers before the city becomes unlivable.

OUR ELDERS ARE DYING OF LONELINESS

India has always prided itself on joint families and respect for elders. That India is disappearing. With urban migration, nuclear families, and children moving abroad, lakhs of parents are left behind in big houses that feel like jails. We think giving them money, medicines and a video call once a week is enough. It is not. What they need is presence, not presents.

Loneliness is not just an emotion. In India, the elderly in cities feel lonely, and many said they felt abused or neglected, not physically but emotionally.

Why does this happen? Because we built cities for cars and careers, not for community. Earlier, an elder could sit in the verandah and talk to neighbours, go to the temple and meet friends, walk to the park where others gathered. Now our apartments have no verandahs, our parks have no benches, our streets are unsafe to walk. We have WhatsApp groups but no one to have chai with.

The solution is not just old-age homes, which many elders hate. The solution is intergenerational living. In Japan, they have started daycares inside old-age homes where children and elders spend time together. Both heal. In India, we can start simple things. Resident Welfare Associations must create Senior Addas in every colony with newspapers, carrom and a volunteer who talks to them. Schools must give credits to students who spend two hours a week with lonely elders, reading to them or teaching them to use phones. Corporates must give employees two days' leave per month to stay with parents.

Government must also act. The Maintenance and Welfare of Parents and Senior Citizens Act exists but is never used. We need a national loneliness helpline for elders, like Childline. Pension and health insurance must be universal, so elders are not dependent on children for money.

Most importantly, we as children must understand that our parents do not need our success as much as our time. A 10-minute call without looking at another screen, a monthly visit without a laptop, listening to the same story for the tenth time without getting irritated. That is their medicine.

Let us build a world where no window has to wait so long.

SINGLE MOTHERS DESERVE MORE THAN SYMPATHY

Some women are widowed, some divorced, some separated, some chose to be mothers alone. All of them face the same invisible battle. Our society worships the mother as goddess but punishes the woman who becomes a mother without a man by her side.

The problems are brutal and practical. A single mother cannot get a house on rent easily. Landlords ask uncomfortable questions. She cannot get a loan easily because banks want a husband's signature. If her child is sick, she cannot take leave, because if she does not work, there is no food. Schools call her for parent-teacher meetings but the forms still make the father's name mandatory. Her children face taunts in school and society asks her character questions.

Yet these women show a resilience that would shame many of us. Single mothers work more hours than married mothers but spend almost all their income on children's education and health. They are the most efficient welfare scheme India has, yet we have almost no welfare scheme for them.

What can we do? First, the law must change. Make the mother's name alone enough for all school admissions, passports and Aadhaar. Many states have started but implementation is slow.

Second, economic support. Tamil Nadu's scheme giving Rs 1,000 per month to women heads of families is a good start but not enough. We need hostels for single working mothers in every district with childcare inside, like the Amma hostels once planned. We need skill training timed when their children are in school, not during work hours.

Third, society must change its language. Stop calling them bechari. They are not helpless. They are heroes. Companies must give flexible hours and work-from-home options to single parents without cutting salary. Schools must include stories of single mothers in textbooks, not just stories of kings and wars.

Single mothers are not asking for charity. They are asking for a fair chance. And it is the duty of a civilized society to give it to them.

DELIVERY BOYS ARE HUMANS, NOT MACHINES

India's 10 million gig workers, the Swiggy, Zomato, Zepto, Blinkit and Amazon boys, have become the backbone of urban India. We call them partners, but we treat them like machines.

The gig economy promised freedom: work when you want, be your own boss. The reality is different. Algorithms control them like invisible masters. They must chase incentives that are designed to make them work 14 hours. If they take a day off, their rating falls. If they have an accident, which is common on our roads, there is no insurance, no sick leave.

They are humans with families. Most are migrants from Bihar, UP, Bengal who came to cities dreaming of jobs. They live in one room shared by six, sleep on footpaths, and send money home. They face abuse daily, from customers who shout, from restaurants that make them wait, from traffic police who fine them.

Yet we depend on them completely. During the COVID lockdown, they were our lifeline. Today we cannot imagine life without 10-minute delivery. But convenience has a cost, and they are paying it.

What should be done? First, the law must recognize gig workers as workers, not partners. Companies must give Rs 10 lakh accident insurance and Rs 2,000 health allowance per month, which is less than 2 percent of their marketing budget.

Second, we as customers must be humane. Stop demanding delivery in rain, storms and extreme heat unless necessary. Tip Rs 20, not as charity but as respect. Give five stars by default, unless there is a real problem. Say thank you and offer water. That small kindness means a lot when you are on the road for 12 hours.

Third, city planning. Bengaluru, Mumbai, Delhi must build shaded waiting zones with drinking water and toilets for delivery workers near high-demand areas. Right now they wait under flyovers.

Next time your phone says delivery boy has arrived, remember he is someone's son, someone's father, riding through traffic so you can eat hot food.

He is not a machine on two wheels. He is a human. Let us treat him like one.

GOVERNMENT SCHOOLS CAN CHANGE INDIA'S DESTINY

For years we have built a narrative that private is good and government is bad. Middle-class parents, even those earning Rs 25,000 a month, put children in low-fee private schools that have leaking roofs and untrained teachers, because government schools have a bad image. The truth is different. Data from ASER shows that government schools have more qualified teachers, with B.Ed degrees, than budget private schools. They have free mid-day meals, free uniforms and a better student-teacher ratio. What they lack is trust, attention and autonomy.

India has 10 lakh government schools where 13 crore children study, mostly the poorest. If these schools work, India works. If they fail, inequality becomes permanent. A child born to a maid should have the same chance to learn science as a child born to a software engineer. Only government schools can give that equal chance.

> "That is how change happens. Not through big speeches, but through one good teacher, one good school, one child at a time."
>
> SHARON FAUSTINA J.

How to fix them? Three things actually work. First, give them the freedom to teach, and do not force them to do election duty, census and endless paperwork. In Delhi, when teachers were freed from non-teaching work and trained, government school results beat private schools.

Second, involve mothers. When mothers were made part of school monitoring committees, attendance and learning improved dramatically. A mother who cooks the mid-day meal cares if her child learns.

Third, make schools beautiful. Children love to go where there is colour, clean toilets, drinking water, a library and a playground.

If India wants to become Viksit Bharat by 2047, we cannot do it with only 3 crore private school children. We need 13 crore government school children to lead it. Let us start by trusting their schools.

FARMERS' MENTAL HEALTH CRISIS NEEDS ATTENTION

Farmers and farm labourers in India are dying by suicide. We talk about crop prices, loan waivers and MSP, but we never talk about the mental health of the farmer who grows our food. This silence is killing them.

Farming today is the most stressful profession in India. The farmer has no control over anything. Monsoon fails, then crop fails. When crop is good, price crashes. He borrows for seeds at 24 percent interest from private lenders because banks ask for documents he does not have. He looks at his phone and sees other people in cities earning lakhs, while he cannot pay school fees of Rs 2,000. He feels shame that he cannot provide for his family. In our villages, a farmer is still seen as annadata, but he himself feels like a failure.

The Green Revolution taught farmers to depend on borewells, chemical fertilizers and single crops like paddy and sugarcane. When the water table fell from 100 feet to 800 feet, he spent lakhs digging deeper. When it failed, he felt it was his fault, not the system's fault.

We have agriculture officers who tell farmers what seed to use, but we have no counselors who ask how he is feeling. Farmers show signs of depression and anxiety but 90 percent never seek help because they think it is weakness.

What must be done? First, we must bring mental health to the farm. A farmer who comes to ask about fertilizer must also be asked, how are you sleeping?

Second, we need farmer support groups, like self-help groups. Talking heals.

Third, we must de-link farmer honour from crop success. Government schemes must give direct income support, like PM Kisan, but doubled and guaranteed even if crop fails. Crop insurance must be made simple and payouts must come within one month, not one year.

Next time you eat rice, remember the farmer. He did not want to die. He just wanted someone to listen. Let us be that someone before another note is written.

Failure of crop is not failure of life.

STREETS BELONG TO FOOTPATH VENDORS TOO

The vendors are the most hardworking entrepreneurs we have. They sell vegetables, clothes, chai, flowers, and fix punctures with zero loan, zero shop, zero support. They provide cheap goods to the poor and fresh food to the middle class. Yet our cities treat them as criminals.

We want clean footpaths like Singapore but we forget Singapore has hawker centres for vendors. We build malls but we have no space for a woman selling mangoes. Every city must have vending zones, identity cards and no eviction without notice. Ten years later, most cities have not implemented it.

Street vendors are not a problem. They are the solution for unemployment and food security. During COVID, when big shops shut, it was these vendors who supplied vegetables door to door. They are climate-friendly too: they sell local produce with no packaging, no air conditioning.

> "Streets do not belong only to cars and malls, but even to the vendors."
>
> — MANI

What should cities do? First, implement the law. Give every vendor an ID card and a fixed spot with shade and water. Charge Rs 500 per month as legal fee, not bribe. In Indore, they did this and vendors' income increased by 30 percent and footpaths became cleaner because vendors themselves keep the area clean.

Second, we as citizens must support them. Buy from them instead of always ordering from apps. Bargain less. That Rs 10 you bargain hard for is her child's notebook.

Third, design cities for people, not just cars. A footpath should have two parts: one for walking, one for vending. Both can co-exist, as in Bangkok and Mexico City.

— MANI

AUTO DRIVERS KEEP CITIES MOVING FORWARD

In every Indian city, there is a presence that is so common that it becomes invisible. It is the sound of a three-wheeled engine, the yellow and green or black and yellow vehicle that weaves through traffic, that waits at corners, that appears when all other modes of transport have disappeared. This is the auto rickshaw. And the person who drives it is more than a driver; he is a vital part of the urban system, a lifeline that keeps the city moving.

The auto rickshaw holds a unique place in the life of a city. It is neither a private vehicle nor a large public bus. It is something in between. It offers personal mobility without the cost of owning a car. It provides door-to-door service without the rigidity of a bus route. It can enter narrow lanes where cars cannot go and can stop instantly where buses cannot. In this sense, it fills a gap that no other form of transport can fill. For students going to college, for office workers going to work, for families going to a market, for patients going to a hospital late at night, the auto becomes the most dependable option.

The life of an auto driver is a life of hard work and endurance. The work begins early in the morning and continues late into the night. It requires constant alertness, because city roads are unpredictable and crowded. It requires physical strength, because sitting in one position for long hours in heat, rain and cold takes a toll on the body. It requires mental patience, because dealing with traffic, noise, and different types of passengers is not easy. The driver is exposed to pollution, to weather, and to the stress of earning enough to support a family, to maintain a vehicle, and to meet daily expenses. Yet, despite these difficulties, the service continues every day without a break.

There is also a social dimension to this profession. Auto drivers often form a community among themselves. At auto stands, they share information, help each other, and create a small support system in a large, anonymous city. For many passengers, especially those who are new to a city, the auto driver becomes the first guide, the person who tells them which way to go, which area is safe, and which market is good. In moments of emergency, when someone needs to reach quickly, it is often an auto driver who helps without hesitation.

However, the profession is often misunderstood. There is a common perception that auto drivers are rude or dishonest. This perception ignores the larger reality of their working conditions. The cost of fuel, vehicle maintenance, rent, and daily living has increased sharply, while fares have not kept pace in a fair manner. The pressure of working through aggregator platforms, which take commissions, adds to the strain. When a driver asks for a little extra, it is often seen as cheating, but it is actually a reflection of the economic pressure he faces to make a dignified living.

Cities need to think more deeply about this form of transport. Urban planning often focuses on big projects like metro lines and flyovers, which are important, but it often forgets the small, informal systems that actually make daily life possible. Proper resting places with shade, drinking water and toilets, fair and regularly revised fare structures, and access to health care and social security would not only help drivers but would also improve the quality of service for passengers.

As citizens, our attitude also needs to change. Respect is as important as money. A polite conversation, a simple thank you, not bargaining harshly for a small amount, and understanding the risk and effort involved in late-night or rainy-day rides can make a big difference. The relationship between a passenger and a driver should be one of mutual respect, not suspicion.

In conclusion, the auto rickshaw is not just a vehicle. It is a symbol of accessible mobility, of self-employment, and of the hard work that keeps our cities alive. The drivers who operate them are an essential part of our urban life. They deserve not only our fare but also our fairness.

A city that respects its auto drivers is a city that respects the dignity of labour and the true spirit of public service.

2 women arrested with 10 kg marijuana at Gaya airport

GAYA

Two women were arrested at Bihar's Gaya International Airport on Wednesday for allegedly smuggling 10 kilograms of marijuana from Thailand, officials said. The consignment, concealed in four separate bags, is estimated to be worth approximately ₹10 crore in the international market. The accused, identified as Simranjeet and Kulvinder, are reportedly residents of Punjab. They arrived from Chiang Mai International Airport aboard a Thai Airways flight. During security screening, an X-ray scan raised suspicion, prompting customs and CISF personnel to search their luggage. The drugs were subsequently recovered. Officials said six people had travelled to Thailand, while the whereabouts of the remaining four are being investigated.

Elderly couple die as fire engulfs house in Hathras

HATHRAS

An elderly couple died after a fire engulfed their house in Mohalla Kahran, within the limits of Sadabad police station in Uttar Pradesh's Hathras district, at around 2 am on Thursday. The victims were identified as 65-year-old Sahjad and his 62-year-old wife, Salma.

The couple were asleep when the fire broke out and reportedly could not escape as the flames spread rapidly. The house also housed a clothes shop, where a large stock of garments stored ahead of Diwali is believed to have intensified the blaze.Neighbours noticed flames and thick smoke rising from the building and alerted the police and fire brigade. Firefighters, assisted by local residents and police personnel, worked for nearly two hours to bring the fire under control. Hathras Superintendent of Police Chiranjeev Nath Sinha said the couple were alone inside the house when the incident occurred. Police said a short circuit was suspected to have triggered the fire, although the cause was yet to be conclusively established.

Delhi notifies slum policy for 4-5 lakh families

Delhi's 2026 slum rehabilitation policy promises permanent housing for four to five lakh families, prioritising dignity, security and essential facilities for eligible residents.

NEW DELHI

The Delhi government has notified its Slum and Jhuggi Jhopri Relocation and Rehabilitation Policy, 2026, paving the way for nearly four to five lakh families to receive permanent homes. The initiative is expected to benefit around 20 lakh people living in Delhi's slums.

Chief Minister Rekha Gupta said the policy was designed not simply to clear slums but to ensure families could live safely and with dignity. "Our objective is not just to remove slums, but to give every eligible family a permanent home where they can live safely and with dignity with their children," she said. Settlements established before January 1, 2025, will be covered, including previously excluded families.

No eligible family will be evicted without alternative accommodation. The government aims to provide homes at the same location or within a three-kilometre radius, to limit disruption. Each eligible household will receive a one-bedroom, hall and kitchen flat. Colonies will also have schools, Anganwadi centres, healthcare facilities and playgrounds.

Separate families living independently on different floors of one jhuggi structure may qualify for separate flats if eligible. Persons with disabilities will receive priority for ground-floor homes, while married couples will receive joint allotments. Allotments will be made through a computerised lottery, with a grievance system and GIS-based platform to prevent duplicate claims.

Each eligible household will get a one-bedroom, hall and kitchen flat

For public-private partnership redevelopment, developers must arrange temporary accommodation or rental assistance during construction. Gupta said Delhi's working poor had helped build the city and deserved secure housing. She said the policy followed Prime Minister Narendra Modi's Antyodaya and Garib Kalyan vision, adding that no eligible poor family in Delhi should remain homeless.

Bengal announces subsidies and insurance for farmers

West Bengal Chief Minister Suvendu Adhikari

West Bengal announces farmer welfare measures, including subsidised electricity, free crop insurance, transport aid and potato price support to strengthen agriculture.

KOLKATA

West Bengal Chief Minister Suvendu Adhikari on Thursday announced a series of welfare measures for farmers, including a ₹2-per-unit electricity subsidy, free crop insurance and transport assistance. The initiatives also include price support for potato growers, new storage facilities and model agricultural markets, aimed at strengthening the state's farming sector.

Speaking at an event in Pursurah in Hooghly district, Adhikari said more than 46 lakh farmers in West Bengal would receive benefits under the PM-Kisan Samman Nidhi. He added that the state government was already providing an electricity subsidy of ₹2 per unit to around four lakh farmers to reduce their agricultural expenses.

The Chief Minister said his government had removed restrictions imposed by the previous Mamata Banerjee-led administration on transporting potatoes to other states. The government also announced price support measures for potato farmers.

Additional proposals include solar-powered cold storage facilities and model markets to improve agricultural infrastructure and reduce post-harvest losses. Adhikari also promised a special package for farmers in Alipurduar, Jhargram and Purulia districts, along with measures to provide flood relief to affected cultivators.

The government also outlined plans to extend financial assistance to educated unemployed youth.

Hardeep Puri wins Madhya Pradesh Rajya Sabha bypoll unopposed

BHOPAL

Union Petroleum Minister and BJP candidate Hardeep Singh Puri was declared elected unopposed to the Rajya Sabha from Madhya Pradesh on Thursday, after emerging as the only candidate remaining in the contest. Returning Officer Umesh Sharma issued the certificate of election on the final day for withdrawal of nominations, officially confirming Puri's entry into the Upper House of Parliament.

The nominations of the two other candidates, Kante Sayanna and Rajkumar Lohani, who was backed by the Opposition Congress, had been rejected during scrutiny. With no other valid candidate in the race, Puri's election was confirmed without a vote. The bypoll had been scheduled for November 12, if polling became necessary.

Hardeep Singh Puri

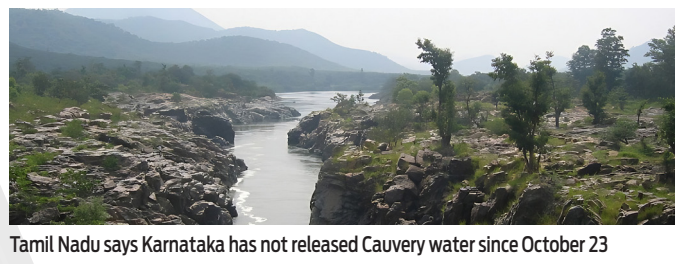

Madhya Pradesh BJP president Hemant Khandelwal collected Puri's certificate of election from the returning officer in the presence of party MLA Rameshwar Sharma.

How the seat fell to Puri

- Vacancy: L Murugan resigned; his term ran to April 2, 2030
- Scrutiny: both rival nominations rejected
- Result: declared elected on the last day for withdrawals

The seat became vacant following the resignation of former Union minister L Murugan from the Upper House last month. His term was originally scheduled to continue until April 2, 2030. The BJP subsequently nominated Puri, a former career diplomat who entered politics, to contest the by-election.

Tamil Nadu moves Supreme Court for early Cauvery hearing

Tamil Nadu says Karnataka has not released Cauvery water since October 23

NEW DELHI

The Tamil Nadu government on Thursday approached the Supreme Court over the release of Cauvery River water, alleging Karnataka had failed to release water since October 23 despite directions from the Cauvery Water Management Authority. The state sought an early hearing, and the court agreed to list the plea ahead of its regular schedule.

Tamil Nadu counsel B. Karunakaran made the oral mentioning before a Bench headed by Chief Justice of India Surya Kant. He told the court Karnataka had not complied with the authority's direction to release 3,000 cusecs of water every day. The submission brought the continuing dispute between the neighbouring states before the apex court.

The court agreed to list the plea early after hearing the request for urgent oral mentioning. The development gives Tamil Nadu an opportunity to press its concerns before the apex court without waiting for the usual listing process.

The Cauvery dispute has long involved disagreements between Karnataka and Tamil Nadu over the sharing and release of river water. The latest complaint concerns compliance with the authority's direction for a daily release of 3,000 cusecs. Whether Karnataka failed to follow the direction remains an issue for the proceedings. The court is yet to hear the merits.

Supreme Court clarifies 24-hour arrest production deadline

NEW DELHI

The 24 hours run from actual detention, not from the formal recording of arrest

The Supreme Court on Thursday ruled that the constitutional 24-hour deadline for producing an arrested person before a magistrate must be calculated from the time of actual detention, rather than the formal recording of arrest by police. A bench of Justices Ujjal Bhuyan and Atul S Chandurkar said authorities cannot use the distinction between detention and formal arrest to extend the permissible period of custody.

The bench observed that excluding the period between actual detention and formal arrest would violate Article 22(2) of the Constitution and Section 56 of the Bharatiya Nagarik Suraksha Sanhita (BNSS). It stated that the constitutional safeguard requires an arrested person to be produced before a magistrate within 24 hours, excluding only the time reasonably needed to travel from the place of arrest to the court.

The court clarified that time spent on preliminary inquiries, investigations, searches or seizures before formal arrest cannot be excluded from the calculation. It also disapproved of contrary interpretations adopted by the Orissa, Madras and Kerala High Courts in the Aryaman Pattanaik, Kannan and Arun K Thomas cases, respectively.

The Supreme Court further held that detention beyond the permissible period without production before a magistrate would warrant the person's immediate release. It stressed that detention must remain reasonable even when it falls within the 24-hour constitutional limit, reinforcing that the safeguard is not merely a procedural requirement but a protection against arbitrary custody.

The bench directed magistrates to independently verify compliance by recording the actual date and time of detention and examining whether its duration was justified. Magistrates can refuse remand if they find that the person was detained for an excessive period before being brought before them.

Delhi Police chargesheets six in Satya Niketan building collapse

NEW DELHI

Delhi Police has filed a 638-page chargesheet against six people in connection with the September 6 building collapse in Satya Niketan that killed seven people, including five students and two labourers. Investigators have examined 87 witnesses in the case, officials said on Thursday.

The chargesheet names building owner Hariram Gupta, his wife Urmila Gupta, their son Mahesh Gupta, labour contractor Sanoj Kumar and paying guest (PG) operators Sudhanshu Lavnish Kumar and Shubham Tyagi as accused.

Police have invoked charges including culpable homicide not amounting to murder, rash and negligent acts endangering human life, and negligence during building repairs and construction under the Bharatiya Nyaya Sanhita (BNS).

According to investigators, Hariram Gupta was the caretaker and a direct beneficiary of the property, while his wife was its registered owner. Their son allegedly managed the building and collected cash payments. Contractor Sanoj Kumar was carrying out repair work and allegedly demolished a wall. The remaining accused operated PG accommodations on the premises.

THE ACCUSED

- OWNERS: Hariram Gupta, Urmila Gupta
- SON: Mahesh Gupta
- CONTRACTOR: Sanoj Kumar

Supreme Court declines to shift Tirupati ghee case trial

The ghee was allegedly supplied for the Tirumala laddu prasadam

NEW DELHI

The Supreme Court on Thursday refused to transfer the trial in the Tirupati laddu ghee adulteration case outside Andhra Pradesh, rejecting a plea by one of the prime accused who raised concerns over the political atmosphere in the state. The case involves allegations of large-scale adulteration in ghee supplied to the Tirumala Tirupati Devasthanams (TTD), which manages the famous Tirumala temple.

Senior advocate Siddhartha Dave, appearing for Maharashtra-based dairy businessman Machindra Shantaram Lanke, told a Bench headed by Chief Justice of India Surya Kant that the atmosphere in Andhra Pradesh was politically charged. Lanke, one of the prime accused in the case, had sought the transfer of the trial to a court outside the state.

Investigations by the Central Bureau of Investigation and the Enforcement Directorate reportedly uncovered a scam worth approximately ₹250 crore. The probe revealed the alleged supply of nearly 68 lakh kilograms of fake and synthetic ghee to the temple administration between 2019 and 2024. The ghee was reportedly supplied for the preparation of the popular Tirumala laddu prasadam.

The alleged adulteration raised serious concerns because the ghee was intended for use in preparing offerings distributed to devotees visiting the temple. The investigation has focused on the supply chain and the alleged irregularities involving the procurement of ghee by the temple administration.

The Supreme Court's refusal means the request to move the proceedings outside Andhra Pradesh has not been accepted. The case remains a significant legal and public issue, given the scale of the alleged financial fraud and the religious importance of the Tirumala laddu prasadam for devotees across the country.

SHIMLA

The Himachal Pradesh government is preparing to introduce a health insurance scheme offering coverage of up to ₹10 lakh per family, doubling the existing ₹5 lakh limit under the Himcare programme. Principal Media Advisor to Chief Minister Sukhvinder Singh Sukhu, Naresh Chauhan, announced the development on Thursday, adding that the new scheme would also expand the number of eligible beneficiaries.

Chauhan said eight insurance companies had participated in the tendering process, with Birla Sun Life emerging as the lowest bidder. Chief Minister Sukhu has directed the Health Secretary to hold further negotiations with the company to finalise the arrangement and speed up implementation. The government is currently working to settle the tendering process and premium structure, with further details expected after negotiations.

The proposed insurance model follows complaints of alleged corruption and misuse of funds under the existing Himcare scheme. Preliminary inquiries reportedly indicated irregularities involving certain private hospitals and nursing homes, including facilities outside the state. The government aims to introduce stronger safeguards, improve transparency and ensure public funds are used effectively. Chauhan said people below the poverty line and beneficiaries of other eligible welfare programmes would particularly benefit from the expanded coverage.

60%	DA, UP FROM 58%
₹160 cr	EXTRA COST TO MSRTC

Maharashtra's state transport undertaking extends festive financial benefits to thousands of workers through increased allowances, bonuses and advance payments ahead of Diwali celebrations.

MUMBAI

The Maharashtra State Road Transport Corporation (MSRTC) has announced a Diwali bonus of ₹10,000 for each of its employees and raised the dearness allowance (DA) from 58 per cent to 60 per cent. The decisions, announced by Transport Minister Pratap Sarnaik on Thursday, are expected to benefit around 83,000 employees of the state-run transport undertaking.

Eligible employees will also receive an advance payment of ₹12,500 to help meet festival expenses, Sarnaik said. The announcements were made during a meeting with representatives of various MSRTC employee unions at the Transport Commissioner's office in Bandra. The bonus and DA revision will together impose an additional financial burden of approximately ₹160 crore on the corporation.

Sarnaik said the government remained committed to supporting employees despite the corporation's financial difficulties and wanted them to celebrate Diwali. He described the bonus as recognition of the workforce's contribution, noting that transport officers and employees worked continuously to provide safe journeys to passengers. He said the payment was not simply a gesture of generosity but an entitlement.

The minister also appealed to employees not to resort to protests or strikes, warning that disruptions could inconvenience ordinary passengers who rely on state-run buses. He said the government and the corporation would address employee concerns through dialogue while working to improve passenger services and strengthen the organisation's financial position.

MSRTC is the country's largest state-run public transport undertaking. It operates a fleet of nearly 15,000 buses and carries approximately 55 lakh passengers every day. The latest measures are intended to provide festival-season financial support to its workforce while acknowledging the role employees play in maintaining daily public transport services across Maharashtra, including urban centres, towns and rural routes.

India targets first human deep-sea mission by 2028

NEW DELHI

India is preparing to launch its first human deep-sea exploration mission to a depth of up to 6,000 metres by 2028, Union Minister of State for Science and Technology Jitendra Singh announced on Wednesday. The proposed mission marks a major step in the country's efforts to strengthen indigenous capabilities in deep-ocean exploration and expand its scientific presence in the maritime domain.

Speaking at the Indo-Pacific Regional Dialogue 2026, Singh said India's ocean-related programmes were increasingly following a mission-based approach involving multiple departments and institutions. He highlighted the growing integration of ocean sciences, space technology, nuclear science, geology, electronics and robotics to advance the country's deep-sea research and maritime capabilities.

The minister pointed to the National Institute of Ocean Technology (NIOT) in Chennai as a key institution supporting the programme. The institute has developed the capability to conduct trials at depths ranging from 5,000 to 6,000 metres in the Central Indian Ocean Basin. Singh also highlighted the Ocean Mineral Explorer, which enables detailed surveys of hydrothermal sulphide deposits, several of which have already been identified.

Centre moves to revisit UGC equity rules

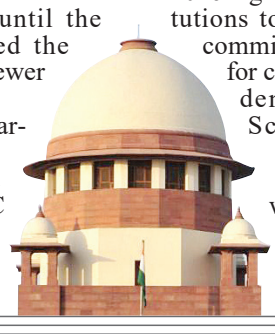

NEW DELHI

The Centre has told the Supreme Court that it will constitute a committee to re-examine the University Grants Commission's 2026 equity regulations, which were stayed by the court in January. Solicitor General Tushar Mehta informed a bench led by Chief Justice of India Surya Kant that the government considered students' concerns and wanted a framework in which no group felt excluded, threatened or apprehensive.

The Chief Justice said the review must protect the interests of all students, adding that the well-being of young people should remain central to the exercise. The court had earlier questioned the wording of provisions in the regulations, particularly the definition of caste-based discrimination, and warned that unclear language could invite misuse.

While staying the 2026 regulations, the bench of Chief Justice Surya Kant and Justice Joymalya Bagchi had said Regulation 3(C) was vague and required revision. It directed that the UGC's 2012 equity regulations would remain in force until the court considered the validity of the newer framework.

During the hearing, the bench had indicated that the UGC could be asked to form a committee comprising academicians and eminent jurists familiar with educational institutions, subject to the court's approval. The Chief Justice observed that schools and colleges were part of society and questioned the consequences of creating divisions within campuses.

Introduced to address caste-based discrimination in colleges and universities, the 2026 regulations require institutions to establish special committees and helplines for complaints from students belonging to Scheduled Castes, Scheduled Tribes and Other Backward Classes. The rules triggered protests in the national capital.

Keerthy Suresh opens up about interfaith marriage challenges

Actor Keerthy Suresh has opened up about the challenges she faced while convincing her family to accept her relationship with businessman Antony Thattil. The actor revealed that her mother, veteran actress Menaka, discovered their relationship by reading her diary during her college days.

In a recent conversation with Curly Tales, Keerthy recalled that she began dating Antony in January 2010, shortly after completing Class 12. Keerthy and Antony exchanged vows in traditional Tamil Hindu and Malayali Christian ceremonies in the presence of family members and close friends.

Regina Cassandra says strong roles matter more

Actor Regina Cassandra says the importance of a character matters more to her than its screen time. Having recently played several negative roles in Telugu and Tamil films, she wants to explore varied characters instead of focusing only on leading parts.

Speaking ahead of her latest Tamil film release, Regina explained that her career choices reflect her interest in trying different roles. She said she enjoys playing positive and negative characters, as well as lead and special roles, provided they offer something meaningful to perform.

For Regina, the length of a role is less important than its substance and contribution to the story. She believes a character with depth can create an opportunity to display her abilities, regardless of how long she appears on screen. Challenging parts, she added, allow her to explore different aspects of acting and bring variety to her work.

The actor said she does not want a fixed image to restrict the opportunities she considers. Her focus remains on strengthening her career through interesting choices and continuing to work across different kinds of films. Regina also revealed that she is signing more projects, with her attention firmly on characters that offer scope for a strong, memorable performance.

PARIS

A flight travelling from Dublin to Rome was diverted to France on Thursday after a suspected bomb threat, as European countries reported similar alerts involving aircraft.

The plane landed safely at Evreux, French Prime Minister Sebastien Lecornu said. All 151 passengers and six crew members were brought to safety, while bomb disposal teams arrived to examine the aircraft.

Lecornu's office said authorities were monitoring the situation, Euronews reported. The French air force said it sent aircraft after receiving the alert. Flight tracking websites identified the diverted service as an Aer Lingus flight.

More threats were reported. Italian media said alerts involved flights bound for Rome and departing from Milan. A Helsinki to Rome service landed safely after being escorted by Italian fighter jets.

A Finnair spokesperson said a bomb threat targeted a Helsinki to Vienna flight operated by Jettime. That aircraft also landed without incident.

In the Czech Republic, police said four planes heading to Prague received threats claiming explosive devices were on board. Officers considered the threats unlikely to be credible but activated security measures and arranged inspections after landing.

Police later said the searches found no explosives and security measures at Prague Airport had ended. The National Centre against Terrorism, Extremism and Cybercrime took over the investigation.

Bulgarian authorities also reported threats against three Ryanair flights heading to Sofia. The transport ministry said services from Copenhagen and Madrid landed in Sofia, while a flight from London was diverted to Plovdiv.

The incidents followed bomb threats against around 10 European flights on Tuesday, when Warsaw airport briefly closed and Italy scrambled an air force aircraft.

Britain agrees to talks over slavery's legacy

LONDON

Britain has agreed to hold talks with countries affected by the transatlantic slave trade, following discussions at the Commonwealth summit in Antigua and Barbuda.

A joint statement released on Wednesday said the dialogue would follow a structure, include affected parties and take place within an agreed period. Leaders said the process should address the harm caused by the trafficking and enslavement of Africans.

The agreement appeared in the summit statement under reparatory justice. It also recognised efforts by the United Nations, African Union and Caribbean Community to address slavery's legacy and support the return of cultural heritage.

Prime Minister Andy Burnham said Britain was open to a formal apology for its role in the slave trade. However, he ruled out financial reparations, despite calls from African and Caribbean leaders for compensation.

Foreign Office officials said the timetable would be settled later. Foreign Secretary Ed Miliband indicated that the talks could run for 12 months.

Burnham also proposed a debt reset to help poorer nations facing heavy repayment burdens. He said private businesses should be involved in efforts to support Commonwealth countries struggling with higher borrowing costs.

Britain has announced 40 million pounds over three years to support infrastructure investment in the Caribbean, including green energy projects.

King Charles III, who attended the summit as Commonwealth head, expressed sorrow over Britain's connection to slavery. He described the trade as a shameful period whose effects continue to burden Commonwealth societies.

THE BOTTOM LINE

Talks, an apology possible, no reparations

- Talks could run for 12 months
- 40 million pounds for Caribbean infrastructure

The agreement commits Britain to discussions, while its opposition to compensation remains unchanged. The next step will be to settle the timetable and terms for talks with those affected by slavery's harm.

Rights group alleges 4 killings after disappearances in Balochistan

QUETTA

The Baloch Yakjehti Committee alleged on Thursday that four civilians were killed after being forcibly taken from their homes in Balochistan.

The rights group accused Pakistani forces and groups it described as state-backed death squads of involvement.

According to the committee, the bodies of shopkeeper Elahi Baksh, 60, and driver Muneer Ahmad, 32, were found in Laghorzard, in the Naal region, on November 2.

It alleged that Frontier Corps personnel took Baksh from his home on October 30. Ahmad was allegedly taken by a Pakistan-backed armed group on October 2, leaving his family without information about his whereabouts.

In another case, the committee said Salahuddin was killed on October 31 in what it described as a staged encounter. His body was left near Zardain Koti in Kharan district.

The group alleged that security forces had taken Salahuddin and his brother Azar from their home on August 7.

The fourth victim was Reyan Ulfath, a 17-year-old student whose mutilated body was found in Kulanch, near Pasni, on October 22. The committee alleged that an armed group had taken him from his home on October 16.

The committee said these cases reflected a pattern of people disappearing and later being found dead. It urged the United Nations and international rights organisations to examine the allegations.

It demanded accountability for those responsible and stressed that every person must receive legal protection, due process and respect for their dignity.

RAWALAKOT PROTEST DEATHS

Kashmir group reports 7 deaths during protests

ISLAMABAD

The United Kashmir People's National Party said at least seven people were killed and 18 seriously injured after Pakistani forces allegedly attacked protesters in Rawalakot on Thursday.

The party, known as UKPNP, accused security forces of firing on peaceful gatherings and using drones against residential areas in Pakistan-occupied Kashmir. However, it said reports that four children had died required independent verification.

According to information cited by the group, forces targeted protest sit-ins at Matialmera Bus Terminal, Umar Farooq Chowk and other locations. The party alleged that heavy machine guns, armoured vehicles and drones were used.

It named three of those reported killed as Atif Jardees, 35, Ehtisham Younis, 30, and Adil Rashid, 32.

The group also said a house belonging to Shakeel Khan near the bus terminal was destroyed by fire following an alleged drone attack. It added that reports of four children's deaths were linked to that incident.

UKPNP condemned the alleged violence and urged the United Nations and the European Union to press for civilian protection and prevent further bloodshed.

It said protesters were seeking rights, public services, protection of property and respect for the law. The group demanded an independent investigation into the reported deaths, injuries, attacks and damage to homes.

The allegations follow concerns raised by six UN human rights experts over Pakistan's decision to designate the Joint Awami Action Committee as a terrorist organisation.

In a letter to Pakistan's government, the experts questioned whether the listing met international standards. They expressed concern that the committee might have been targeted because of its political, labour and human rights work.

The experts also raised allegations of unlawful killings, arbitrary arrests, excessive force and communication restrictions during protests. Independent inquiries would be needed to establish the circumstances of the reported violence.

CSK secure Livingstone and Edwards in 4-player trade

NEW DELHI

Chennai Super Kings have strengthened their squad ahead of the Indian Premier League 2027 auction by acquiring all-rounders Liam Livingstone and Jack Edwards from Sunrisers Hyderabad in a four-player trade. In exchange, CSK have released pacers Khaleel Ahmed and Nathan Ellis to the Hyderabad-based franchise.

Livingstone will join Chennai at a reduced salary of ₹6 crore, compared to the ₹13 crore that Sunrisers Hyderabad had invested in him at the auction. The move gives CSK an experienced all-rounder at a significantly lower cost as they prepare for the upcoming season.

Australian all-rounder Edwards will join Chennai at his existing salary of ₹3 crore. Meanwhile, Khaleel Ahmed and Nathan Ellis will move to Sunrisers Hyderabad at their current salaries of ₹4.8 crore and ₹2 crore, respectively. The exchange allows both franchises to reshape their squads according to their requirements.

With the IPL 2027 auction approaching, the trade is expected to influence both teams' squad-building strategies. Livingstone's reduced salary also gives Chennai greater financial flexibility, while the arrival of Khaleel and Ellis provides Sunrisers with additional pace-bowling options ahead of the new campaign.
