‘Not only countering, will destroy them’

'INDIA'S DEMOCRACY IS BEING UNDERMINED THROUGH ELECTORAL INTERFERENCE'

NEW DELHI

Lok Sabha Leader of Opposition Rahul Gandhi on Tuesday said that the Opposition is “not only countering” Bharatiya Janata Party (BJP) but would also “destroy” them as he launched a march to the Election Commission office before being stopped by the police at Akashvani Bhavan.

Speaking to the reporters at the protest site, Rahul accused the ruling party and Chief Election Commissioner Gyanesh Kumar of undermining democracy through what he called “vote chori”.

“We are not only countering them (BJP); we will destroy them. I have no interest in what the BJP says. I am standing here to save democracy in India,” he said.

Rahul alleged that Prime Minister Narendra Modi, Union Home Minister Amit Shah and RSS chief Mohan Bhagwat had “hijacked the nation” through electoral manipulation, with Kumar’s assistance. “Action will be taken against all of them. What has been done to our country is called treason; nobody is going to escape,” he said.

Gyanesh Kumar is ‘scared’

Rahul said around 300 Opposition MPs wanted to meet Kumar and the two other Election Commissioners but had been prevented from reaching their office.

“We are elected representatives, but we don’t know why we have been stopped here. We can’t understand the problem—when the Election Commission is merely 50 metres away,” he said.

He questioned why the poll panel would not meet elected representatives and alleged that Kumar was “scared”.

“What is the meaning of democracy if the Election Commission doesn’t meet the elected representatives?” he asked.

The protest was organised amid Opposition demands for the resignation of Chief Election Commissioner Gyanesh Kumar over alleged irregularities in the Special Intensive Revision (SIR) exercise and concerns over differences within the Election Commission.

No one responsible will escape accountability and the actions taken against the nation's democratic system amounted to “treason”.

No meeting request received from any party: EC

New Delhi: The Election Commission on Tuesday said it had received no request from any political party for a meeting with the poll panel, even as Leader of Opposition in Lok Sabha Rahul Gandhi and other INDIA bloc leaders staged a protest near its headquarters demanding an audience with the election commissioners. The clarification came as a high-voltage Opposition march from Parliament Street to the Election Commission office ended in a standoff with police. Rahul Gandhi, Congress leader Priyanka Gandhi Vadra and several other MPs were stopped near Akashvani Bhawan and NITI Aayog while attempting to proceed towards the poll panel’s office. Asked whether Rahul Gandhi or any INDIA bloc leader had sought a meeting with the poll panel, EC officials said no request had been received from any political party on Tuesday.

BJP leaders indulged in conspiratorial politics: K’taka CM

BENGALURU

Chief Minister DK Shivakumar on Tuesday accused BJP leaders of indulging in “conspiratorial politics” and alleged that Form 7 applications were being misused to manipulate electoral rolls in Karnataka.

Speaking to reporters at Vidhana Soudha, he said elections should be won through democratic means and not by allegedly using the Election Commission to alter voter lists.

He alleged that names of minorities, backward classes, Scheduled Castes, Scheduled Tribes and poor voters were being targeted for deletion or shifted between polling booths.

“Deleting the votes of poor people is shameful. As Chief Minister, elected representative and head of the party, it is my responsibility to protect the voting rights of the people of Karnataka,” he said.

Shivakumar claimed BJP leaders R Ashoka and BY Vijayendra had acknowledged submitting around 25,000 Form 7 applications, which had been misused in several constituencies, including Jayanagar, Ballari, Belagavi and Mysuru.

He also alleged that 1,500 Form 7 applications were burnt in Sringeri and that booth-level officers (BLOs) had faced pressure over the issue.

The CM said the Election Commission had directed officials not to approve Form 7 applications without verification following complaints.

On Rahul Gandhi’s protest over the electoral roll issue, he said, “The BJP cannot suppress the voice of Rahul Gandhi or our voice. Protecting voters’ rights should be the government’s priority.”

ASIAN GAMES 2026

State honours athletes, hikes cash rewards

The govt announces enhanced incentives and employment benefits for state athletes following their medal-winning performances at Asian Games 2026.

BENGALURU

Chief Minister DK Shivakumar on Tuesday felicitated Karnataka athletes who represented India at the 2026 Asian Games and announced a total cash reward of Rs 8 crore for eight medal winners.

The government has enhanced the cash reward for Asian Games medallists. Gold medallists will now receive Rs 1 crore, silver medallists Rs 75 lakh and bronze medallists Rs 50 lakh. Earlier, the rewards were Rs 35 lakh, Rs 25 lakh and Rs 15 lakh respectively.

For the first time, 20 Karnataka athletes who qualified and competed at the Asian Games will receive an incentive of Rs 5 lakh each. The athletes represented disciplines including athletics, badminton, cricket, cycling, equestrian, golf, hockey, shooting, swimming, table tennis and sport climbing.

ATHLETE REWARD HIKE

• Gold: Rs 1 crore
• Silver: Rs 75 lakh
• Bronze: Rs 50 lakh
• Asian Games participants: 20 athletes
• Participant incentive: Rs 5 lakh each
• Olympic preparation: Rs 10 lakh each
• Sports quota: 2% in direct recruitment
• Group-B jobs: Direct recruitment for Asian/Commonwealth Games medallists

“Sports should be treated as a priority, and the government will continue to support athletes in their pursuit of excellence.

-DK Shivakumar, CM

The government has also provided an opportunity for Asian Games and Commonwealth Games medallists to secure direct recruitment to Group-B posts. The recruitment will be conducted through a selection committee headed by the Chief Secretary.

Four athletes — Asian Games medallists M.R. Pooamma, Sneha S.S. and Shreyanka Patil, and Commonwealth Games medallist Shilpa K.S. — have been included in the ‘Target Olympics’ scheme for 2026-27. Each will receive Rs 10 lakh towards Olympic preparations.

Indian Air Force gets new chief

NEW DELHI: Air Marshal Ashutosh Dixit, a fighter pilot with more than 3,500 hours in the cockpit, has now been named the Chief of the Air Staff.

The government announced the decision on Tuesday. Air Marshal Dixit, who is currently the Vice Chief of the Air Staff, will become the 29th head of the Indian Air Force.

He will hold the rank of Air Chief Marshal. Air Marshal Dixit will take over from Air Chief Marshal Amar Preet Singh, who retires on October 31, 2026.

Born on December 9, 1966, Air Marshal Dixit was commissioned into the fighter stream of the Indian Air Force on 6 December 1986. Since then, he has held a wide mix of operational, instructional and senior command roles.

He has flown a long list of aircraft, including the Mirage-2000, MiG variants, Jaguar, Kiran, IL-78, Hawk and Tejas.

He is also an Experimental Test Pilot and a Qualified Flying Instructor. That means he knows the job from both sides: flying on the front line and putting new aircraft through their paces.

During his career, the incoming Air Chief has been involved in several major operations and exercises. These include Operation Satad Sagar, Operation Rakshak and Operation Sindoor.

The government said his contribution in various appointments had strengthened the operational capability of the Indian Air Force.

Air Marshal Dixit is an alumnus of the National Defence Academy, the Defence Services Staff College and the National Defence College.

11 Indians among 12 hurt after vessel hit by projectile in Strait

NEW DELHI

Eleven Indian crew members were injured on Tuesday after a Panama-flagged commercial vessel was hit by a projectile while transiting the Strait of Hormuz, prompting a strong condemnation from India.

The vessel, MT On Peace, carried 19 crew members, including 17 Indian nationals. In total, 12 crew members -- 11 of them Indian -- sustained injuries in the strike, according to the Ministry of External Affairs (MEA).

“We condemn the attack earlier today on a Panama-flagged commercial vessel MT On Peace off the coast of Oman, where it was struck by a projectile while transiting the Strait of Hormuz,” the MEA said in a statement.

“Of the total crew of 19, 17 are Indian nationals. It is learnt that 12 crew members have been injured, including 11 Indian nationals,” it said.

The MEA said continuing incidents of attacks on shipping in the region remain a “cause of deep concern” for India.

“We reiterate our call for an immediate cessation of such attacks in the interests of peace and stability in the region,” it said.

“The targeting of commercial shipping, seafarers and civilian infrastructure in the region must end, and navigation and commerce through international waterways must be restored at the earliest,” it added.

The MEA said the sailors of the vessel were evacuated

Francis Halzen wins 2026 Nobel Prize in Physics

STOCKHOLM

Francis Halzen won the Nobel Prize in physics on Tuesday for his contributions to the IceCube Neutrino Observatory and his discovery of high-energy neutrinos of astrophysical origin.

The Royal Swedish Academy of Sciences announced the award in Stockholm.

The prize money this year is 12 million Swedish kronor (about USD 1.2 million), whether for an individual, a small group of laureates or an organisation.

Last year, three scientists won the Nobel Prize in physics for research on the strange behaviour of subatomic particles called quantum tunnel-

BRAND MODI AND POLL RIDE

Cabinet lauds PM Modi on 25 years of unbroken leadership

NEW DELHI

The Union Cabinet on Tuesday passed a resolution congratulating Prime Minister Narendra Modi on completing 25 years of continuous leadership as head of government.

The resolution described the milestone as more than a customary tribute, highlighting what it called Modi’s leadership guided by the principles of “Nation First” and “Citizen First”. It also cited three mandates in Gujarat and three successive Lok Sabha elections as reflecting public support for his leadership.

The resolution outlined 10 aspects of Modi’s tenure, tracing his journey from Gujarat to the national stage and highlighting initiatives and policies across development, welfare, reform, technology, national security, diplomacy and cultural heritage.

From Gujarat to India

The resolution highlighted initiatives such as SWAGAT, through which PM Modi personally heard citizens’ grievances, and said it later inspired PRAGATI, which brought governments together to review stalled projects and resolve implementation bottlenecks.

Welfare and empowerment

The resolution linked Modi’s focus on poverty with schemes providing housing, water, bank-

Reforms and self-reliance

It cited GST, welfare-delivery reforms and the replacement of colonial-era laws as examples of major reforms undertaken during Modi’s tenure. It said public capital expenditure had risen from ₹2 lakh crore to more than ₹12 lakh crore, while highway expansion and railway electrification had also progressed.

The resolution concluded by reaffirming the vision of collective effort towards a prosperous, self-reliant and developed India

Judges’ count now 37 in SC with 3 taking oath

NEW DELHI: Chief Justice Surya Kant on Tuesday administered the oath of office to three new judges elevated to the Supreme Court, taking its working strength to 37, one short of the sanctioned strength of 38. Justices Sunita Agarwal, Devendra Kumar Upadhyaya and Aparesw Kumar Singh took the oath in the auditorium of the new Supreme Court block on Tuesday. All the Supreme Court judges, judicial officers and officials from different state high courts, along with other dignitaries, were present to witness the occasion. On Monday, ending weeks of speculation, the Central government notified the elevation of the three Chief Justices of High Courts to the Supreme Court. On September 28, the SC Collegium, the apex body solely responsible for the appointment and transfer of judges -- had recommended the three names for appointment as judges of the top court.

Youth must turn demographic dividend into democratic dividend

CH NEWS, MYSURU

Young people must move beyond voting and actively participate in governance, community institutions and democratic decision-making, speakers at an International Democracy Day programme organised in Mysuru said on Tuesday.

Grassroots Research and Advocacy Movement (GRAAM), in association with the Department of Studies in Social Work, University of Mysore, and Hanns Seidel Foundation-India, organised International Democracy Day 2026 here, under the theme “Bring Human Rights into Focus.”

More than 250 students from 25 colleges across Mysuru participated in the programme, which focused on the relationship between democracy, human rights, constitutional values, responsible citizenship and active public participation.

GRAAM Executive Director Dr. Basavaraju R. Shrestha said India’s demographic dividend must be transformed into a democratic dividend. They need to move from periodic democracy to continuous co-creation and co-governance.

He explained how community participation had helped rejuvenate a sub-centre in Karnataka, demonstrating that democratic values become meaningful when people actively engage with and take ownership of public institutions.

Prof. Ravishankar D. stressed the need to bring democratic values into classrooms by giving students greater ownership of learning and encouraging curiosity and independent thinking.

Dr. Anil Billimele, Chief Coordinator, School of Public Health, JSS Academy of Higher Education & Research, highlighted the importance of balancing Fundamental Rights with Fundamental Duties. He called for responsible voting, protection of civil liberties and continuous citizen participation.

Dr. Jyothi H.P., Chairperson, Department of Studies in Social Work, University of Mysore, urged society to move “from charity to rights, from paper to people, and from silence to voice,” and called upon young people to place empathy and humanity at the centre of civic and professional life.

Panel discussion
A panel discussion subsequently examined the future of democracy, youth participation and the challenges facing the next generation. Discussions covered youth representation in decision-making, participation beyond elections, the role of education and media in developing critical thinking and media literacy, trust in public institutions and inclusive participation.

The panel also discussed the growing influence of technology, artificial intelligence and social-media algorithms on political awareness and public opinion.

Speaking on constitutional values and responsible citizenship, Nataraj said democracy gives citizens the right to participate, question and seek accountability. “We are governed by the rule of law, not by individuals,” he said, urging young people to exercise their freedoms with honesty, integrity and commitment to the public good.

The panel stressed that young citizens could contribute to democracy through local governance institutions and community-level mechanisms, and that democratic engagement should continue beyond elections.

“Let Dasara be a festival of the people, not a bureaucrats’ show”

CH NEWS, MYSURU

Expressing concern over the present system of organising Dasara, former mayor Sandesh Swamy said there was growing public perception that officials had taken centre stage in the conduct of the festival. The tradition of involving elected representatives, political parties, local organisations and the public through a comprehensive Dasara committee and making preparations well in advance appears to have disappeared. Today, there is a feeling that decisions are being taken by officials and that the festival revolves around the bureaucracy. Dasara programmes should be organised for the people and not be reduced to a process revolving around budgets, tenders and bills. People should never be made to wonder whether more importance is being given to preparing bills and getting them passed than to celebrating the Naadahabba.

Budgets, tenders and bills
He alleged that while earlier preparations were undertaken well in advance after seeking suggestions and cooperation from different sections of society, there now appeared to be a sense of urgency to complete the festival within a month and focus on raising and clearing bills. Dasara should not become an event that attracts people merely to see illuminated streets and buildings. “Lighting and illumination are certainly an important part of the grandeur of Dasara, but they are only one component. Art, literature, culture, folk traditions, opportunities for local talent and active public participation must form the heart of the festival.”

Emotional connect
He expressed concern that the enthusiasm and emotional connect that people once had with Dasara appeared to be declining. Dasara should be a festival that every citizen of Mysuru takes pride in. It should not become merely a government process of completing programmes.

People-centric Dasara
Swamy urged the State Government and Dasara organisers to take immediate steps to restore the festival’s people-centric character. There was a need for the formation of a broad-based Dasara committee comprising representatives of all political parties, elected representatives, local organisations, artistes, writers, religious leaders and citizens. The Naadahabba should not become a ‘bureaucrats’ Dasara’. It must become the Dasara of the people of Mysuru. Mysuru Dasara must regain its historical tradition, cultural splendour and emotional connect with the people. Only then can Mysuru Dasara retain its past glory and continue to remain a proud Naadahabba for generations to come, he added.

Healthy habits, diet and discipline key to good health: MLC Dr Thimmaiah

CH NEWS, MYSURU

Good health depends largely on our habits, food and discipline, said MLC Dr. D. Thimmaiah.

Speaking after inaugurating a health awareness and free medical check-up camp organised as part of the Dasara celebrations at Sainik Multi-Speciality Hospital in Ramakrishnanagar E and F Blocks here, Dr. Thimmaiah said diabetes and high blood pressure had become common these days. Such health problems could be prevented by maintaining discipline in food habits and lifestyle. People should not eat everything that was available and should reduce their intake of sweets, fatty foods and salt.

He said health is wealth. Being free from diseases alone does not mean that a person is healthy. Some people may be physically healthy but suffer from lack of sleep or poor appetite. A person must be mentally, physically and socially healthy to build a healthy nation.

Social worker Sowmya Anil Chikkamadu, who presided over the programme, said healthcare and education had become expensive. She urged people to undergo medical check-ups at least once every six months to detect and prevent diseases.

Dr. S. Dattesh Kumar,

honorary secretary of Manasa Educational Institutions, Kollegala, said people had become addicted to junk food and were increasingly avoiding home-cooked food. The people need to be aware of the health risks associated with consuming artificially coloured and processed foods.

Kannada Sahitya Kalakoota president M. Chandrashekar said the increasing number of hospitals and old-age homes should make society introspect.

Former president of the District Primary School Teachers’ Association K.B. Somegowda said teachers were under considerable stress as they were being assigned various duties, including SIR-related work. He urged the government not to deploy teachers for non-teaching duties.

Lions Club of Mysuru Golden City President J. Asha said the club had so far provided artificial limbs to 1,000 people. More artificial limbs would be provided to those in need, she said.

Dr. Prashanth said medical tests costing around ₹10,000 would be made available to teachers for just ₹1,250 and urged them to make use of the facility.

Senior journalist Amshi Prasannakumar, Janapara Sahitya Parishat president Dr. M. Mahesh Chikkallur, social worker Swami Rajesh and Sainik Multi-Speciality Hospital director Ananth Kumar were among the chief guests. A total of 232 people underwent medical check-ups at the camp.

28 petitions received during Mysuru civic grievance meeting

CH NEWS, MYSURU

A public grievance meeting was held at the Mysuru City Corporation (MCC) office on Tuesday under the chairmanship of MCC Administrator and Regional Commissioner Nitesh Patil.

MCC Commissioner M.K. Savitha, Deputy Commissioners Veena and Somashekar, along with zonal commissioners, zonal development officers, revenue officers and town planning staff, were present at the meeting.

A total of 28 petitions were received from the public. These included 4 related to CR, 12 to e-Khata, 7 to ULMS and 5 under other categories.

The Commissioner said that three e-Khata-related petitions were resolved on the spot.

Educate girls and empower them for real social progress: Nagalakshmi

CH NEWS, MYSURU

Real social progress is possible only when girls receive education and become self-reliant, said Karnataka State Women’s Commission Chairperson Dr. Nagalakshmi Chowdhary.

Speaking as the chief guest at the eighth-day programme of Yuva Sambhrama, held here, she urged women to pursue education and lead dignified and self-reliant lives. Girls should grow up to be giving hands, not seeking hands. The students must give top priority to education, stay away from bad habits and work towards fulfilling the dreams of their parents. Referring to Goddess Chamundeshwari’s first form, Shailaputri, she said students should develop a determination as firm as a mountain and should not allow attractions or obstacles to distract them from their studies.

Expressing concern over the increasing number of kidnapping and elopement cases being reported at police stations, she cautioned youngsters against ruining their future and their parents’ dignity due to momentary attraction or the influence of hormones. Both young men and women should act responsibly.

Dr. Chowdhary also urged youngsters to stay away from alcohol, cigarettes, ganja and drugs. Boys should remain firm and strong, while girls should move forward courageously without being affect-

“Mobile phones have taken over our hands”

CH NEWS, MYSURU

Though books are available in large numbers today, mobile phones have occupied their hands, said Dr. Manasa, Chairman of the Kannada Book Authority.

He was speaking after inaugurating the Book Reading Culture Campaign organised at the auditorium of Yuvaraja College here on Tuesday, jointly by the Department of Kannada and Culture, Kannada Book Authority, and the Kannada and Computer Science departments of Yuvaraja College.

Even if there is no space in their hands, there is plenty of space in their minds. This is why they must encourage reading through the ‘Book of the Month’ programme. The minds of children are like wet clay. Whatever knowledge is given to them, they absorb it and understand it very well.

Circulating libraries
Dr Manasa recalled that people earlier had a strong desire to read books, although modern technology was not as advanced as it is today, and said they would wait for books and search for places where they were available. Even after Kuvempu wrote a book, it would take nearly a year for it to reach us. If it had to be reprinted, another year would pass. Therefore, getting books was a difficult task. Mysuru once had circulating libraries on its streets. They would display details of the books that were expected to arrive at the library the following day. People would wait for the books and borrow them on rent. Women, in particular, were avid readers and were closely associated with books. “Today, technology has changed and advanced considerably. If a good book is published in the United States, it can be translated into Kannada and made available in Mysuru within a month. Earlier, books were difficult to obtain and our hands remained empty. Today, however, the situation has changed,” he added.

Senior scholar Prof. K. Anantharamu, Yuvaraja College Principal Prof. K. Ajay Kumar, Administrative Officer Prof. K.B. Umesh, Controller of Examinations Prof. H.S. Jayanth, Head of the Kannada Department Prof. C.D. Parashurama, Head of the Computer Science Department Annapura, and coordinator of the Library for Every Home implementation committee M. Chandrashekar were present.

Explaining the reason behind launching the Library for Every Home initiative, Dr. Manasa said it was inspired by a significant statement made by Dr. B.R. Ambedkar.

“Therefore, we should read books and enhance our knowledge. Books can provide direction and purpose to our lives,” he added.

“Of the two rupees one earns, one rupee should be set aside for food, as food sustains our existence. The remaining one rupee should be used to buy books, as books increase our knowledge. With knowledge, nobody can cheat or deceive us.”

300 women receive free sewing machines in Chamaraja constituency

CH NEWS, MYSURU

Sewing machines were distributed free of cost to 300 eligible women beneficiaries of the Chamaraja Assembly constituency under the Mysuru City Corporation grant at a programme held here in the city.

Inaugurating the programme, Chamaraja MLA K. Harish Gowda said women must be empowered for a family to prosper. When women become economically self-reliant, the entire family becomes stronger, he said, adding that this was the basic principle of the Congress government. Since coming to power, the government has implemented several schemes for women, including Gruha Lakshmi, Shakti, free tailoring training and loan facilities for self-help groups. The 300 sewing machines being distributed today are not merely machines; they will help secure the future of 300 families.

He said his commitment to women’s empowerment was not merely an election promise but a mission in his life. The beneficiary women thanked the MLA and said

Harish Gowda was the only MLA who had responded to their difficulties over the years. They said he had also helped them arrange visits to religious places, medical treatment, children’s education and assistance during festivals.

Mysuru's crumbling balustrades become eyesores

SHYAM SUNDAR VATTAM
MYSURU

They were meant to add a royal touch to Mysuru's heritage streets. Today, the crumbling balustrades installed around the iconic Mysuru Palace and along New Sayyaji Rao Road, part of the grand Jamboo Savari route, have become more of an eyesore than an eye-catcher.

Installed around 15–20 years ago as part of the 'Raja Marga' concept, the granite balustrades were intended to beautify the roads surrounding the majestic palace and enhance the grandeur of the Dasara procession route. But time, wear and tear and alleged poor-quality workmanship have taken a toll. Several balustrades have broken, tilted or fallen, leaving ugly gaps along some stretches. The damaged structures, instead of complementing the Palace, are now drawing attention for all the wrong reasons. The balustrades were made of granite blocks and fixed at intervals along the roads. However, many of them have reportedly become so fragile that even a strong push can dislodge them.

'Royal road' or ruined road?

Citizens who had opposed the project when it was first proposed say their concerns have now proved justified. "The Mysuru Palace itself is the biggest attraction. Tourists do not come here to see artificial stone decorations. They come to experience the grandeur and heritage created by the erstwhile rulers," said a heritage enthusiast.

damaged structures should not be allowed to remain merely because they were installed as part of a beautification project.

"If the balustrades can be restored properly, restore them. If they cannot be maintained, remove them. Broken structures around the Palace send a poor message to tourists," he said. Citizens questioned whether the civic authorities had adequately examined the long-term maintenance and durability of the structures before giving the project the green signal. "The intention may have been beautification, but every heritage project must respect the character of the city. Mysuru does not need unnecessary ornamentation when its palaces, avenues, heritage buildings and trees already provide unmatched beauty," said an-tended, giving parts of the heritage precinct a neglected appearance.

Restore with care—or remove

With Dasara drawing thousands of visitors to Mysuru, citizens have urged the Mysuru City Corporation (MCC) and other concerned authorities to conduct a comprehensive inspection of the balustrades along the Palace and Jamboo Savari route.

"Dasara is not just a festival; it is Mysuru's cultural identity. The Jamboo Savari route must look dignified and clean. Half-broken balustrades are certainly not part of that royal image," said a local shopkeeper.

Citizens have suggested two clear options: restore the balustrades scientifically using durable material and proper workmanship, or remove the damaged structures completely. "What we need is not cosmetic beautification but genuine heritage conservation," said a heritage lover.

As Mysuru prepares to welcome visitors for Dasara, the question echoes along its royal streets: Should the ageing balustrades be restored to their original glory—or removed to allow the Palace and its heritage surroundings to speak for themselves?

Poor policing in Mysuru City angers citizens

CH NEWS, MYSURU

In yet another incident raising questions over the law-and-order situation in the city, a Mysuru City Corporation (MCC) worker was allegedly attacked with a deadly weapon while removing flex banners at FTS Circle on Sunday night.

The incident has triggered concern among citizens over the apparent waning fear of the police among offenders, particularly when civic workers are carrying out official duties.

The injured worker has been identified as Raghu, a resident of Gandhi Nagar and an employee of the MCC.

According to the complaint, Raghu was removing flex banners installed at FTS Circle on Sunday night. Two men who arrived at the spot allegedly stopped him from carrying out the removal. Raghu reportedly told them that he was removing the flexes following the instructions of the MCC Commissioner.

Angered by this, the two men, identified as Akash and Naga, allegedly attacked Raghu with a sharp weapon. Raghu sustained serious injuries in the attack and was taken for medical treatment. A case has been registered against the two accused at the N.R. Police Station, and an investigation is under way.

Fear of law fading?

The attack has raised serious concerns about the safety of civic workers and the enforcement of law in Mysuru. Citizens have questioned how individuals can allegedly confront and assault a government civic worker in public while he is performing an official duty. The incident has also fuelled concerns that the fear of the police and the law appears to be diminishing among offenders.

The flex-removal drive was reportedly being undertaken as part of efforts to keep Mysuru free of unauthorised banners and preserve the city's appearance, particularly ahead of Dasara. Citizens have urged the police to take stringent action against those responsible and ensure that civic employees are provided adequate protection while carrying out enforcement duties.

"The civic administration cannot effectively enforce its orders if its workers are attacked while doing their duty. Such incidents send a dangerous message that people can challenge official action with impunity," said a concerned citizen.

The incident has once again brought the focus on law and order in Mysuru, with citizens demanding visible and firm police action to restore confidence among government employees and the public.

'God save Mysuru'

It is shocking that MCC Staff had been attacked on Sunday midnight while implementing the CM's directive. Unfortunately, this incident has taken place in the constituency being represented by the Congress MLA. It is alleged that the followers of the MLA are not ready to follow the CM's instructions to remove all flex and banners across the city in view of Dasara festival. This clearly shows the prevailing law and order situation in the city of Mysuru. God save Mysuru. It is high time the police department must take strong action against the hooligans and impose a permanent ban on flex across the city. The MCC must take action against those who print the flex boards without MCC permission.

Greens make last effort to stop Kambala in Mysuru Dasara

CH NEWS, MYSURU

Strong opposition to the proposed Kambala event during the Mysuru Dasara celebrations found expression at a protest meeting held near the VTU Regional Office here on Tuesday.

Representatives of farmers' organisations, the Dalit Sangharsha Samithi (DSS), environmental groups, Kannada organisations and progressive forums came together to oppose what they termed the government's "adamant decision" to hold Kambala as part of the Dasara festivities, despite concerns raised by environmentalists, experts and several civil society organisations.

The protesters maintained that Dasara, celebrated as Karnataka's cultural and traditional festival, should not come at the cost of the environment, animal welfare and the ecological balance of Mysuru. They urged the government to reconsider the event and give priority to sustainable and environmentally responsible celebrations. The participants called for a balanced approach to Dasara celebrations, stressing that development and festivities must go hand in hand with environmental protection and respect for nature.

The meeting was organised by several organisations as part of their campaign against the proposed Dasara Kambala.

Resolutions of protest meeting

In view of the strong opposition from several organisations and considering the severe drought situation, described as unprecedented in the last 140 years, a memorandum will be submitted to the Chief Minister through the Deputy Commissioner, urging the government to cancel the proposed Kambala event by October 12, 2026. If the government fails to cancel the event, the organisations will launch an intensive agitation to stop the Kambala.

If the government does not cancel the Kambala within the above deadline, a 18-member committee has been formed under the leadership of A.T. Ramaswamy, State president of Parisarake Naavu, to chalk out the next phase of the agitation. The other members of the committee are Badagalapura Nagen-dra, Gurupasad Keragodu, Kuruburu Shanthakumar, K.S.

NDA seeks Governor's intervention over SIR cases

NDA leaders urged the Karnataka Governor to intervene, alleging police action and government pressure over Form-7 objections during SIR.

CH NEWS, BENGALURU

An NDA delegation comprising BJP and JD(S) leaders on Tuesday urged Karnataka Governor Thaawarchand Gehlot to intervene against what it termed “undue interference” by the state government in the ongoing Special Intensive Revision (SIR) of electoral rolls.

The delegation, including Union Minister H.D. Kumaraswamy, BJP leader R. Ashoka and MLC Chalavadi Narayanaswamy, met the Governor at Lok Bhavan and submitted a complaint.

The leaders alleged that the Congress government and its members were influencing the SIR process and that the police machinery was being used to intimidate BJP workers and supporters who had filed objections through Form-7.

“There is no bar on filing bulk objections through Form-7,” the delegation said, citing an Election Commission communique dated January 16, 2026, and the Manual on Electoral Rolls, 2023.

The delegation claimed that criminal cases had been registered in Bhalki in Bidar, Market Area in Belagavi, Vyalikaval in Bengaluru, Ballari and Narasimharaja in Mysuru against people accused of filing fake Form-7 objections.

It said filing objections was a statutory right and that every Form-7 application was subject to scrutiny by the Electoral Registration Officer or Assistant Electoral Registration Officer, including an inquiry and hearing.

The NDA leaders alleged that police were invoking serious offences under the Bharatiya Nyaya Sanhita, including cheating, forgery and intimidation, instead of limiting action to provisions under election law.

They also criticised the October 1 protest by Chief Minister D.K. Shivakumar and ministers at the Chief Electoral Officer's office, alleging it exerted pressure on the electoral machinery.

The delegation sought directions to prevent “false and unwarranted” FIRs against individuals filing Form-7 objections and urged protection of the electoral roll revision process.

SIR: NDA's key concerns

- Form-7: Used to file objections to names in electoral rolls
- NDA claim: Bulk objections are legally permissible
- Police cases: Reported in Bidar, Belagavi, Bengaluru, Ballari and Mysuru
- Process: ERO/AERO scrutiny and hearing required
- Appeal: Decisions can be challenged under election law

Two BLAs, others booked over alleged voter deletion bid

CH NEWS, BENGALURU

An FIR has been registered against two Booth Level Agents (BLAs) and others for allegedly submitting fraudulent Form-7 applications seeking deletion of 5,698 voters from the electoral rolls in Bengaluru's Jayanagar Assembly constituency, police said on Tuesday.

The case was registered on Monday night following a complaint by Karnataka Mahila Congress president and former Jayanagar MLA Sowmya Reddy. She alleged that the two BLAs, identified as Ramakrishna and Yogesh, were affiliated with the BJP. According to the FIR, the Form-7 applications were submitted during the ongoing Special Intensive Revision (SIR) of electoral rolls, claiming that 5,698 voters had permanently shifted out of the constituency.

Reddy allegedly conducted an inquiry into the matter and claimed that the two BLAs, along with others, had intentionally provided false information in the applications. The FIR alleged that the exercise affected voters from minority communities and others perceived to be politically opposed to the BJP and its allies.

The complaint also alleged that voter details of C. Ramesh and his wife Roopa were used without their knowledge to submit Form-7 applications in their names. Some applications submitted to Booth Level Officer Lokesh were also allegedly found to contain forged signatures.

Following the complaint, Jayanagar police registered a case against Ramakrishna, Yogesh and others under provisions of the Bharatiya Nyaya Sanhita relating to criminal conspiracy, providing false information, cheating by personation, forgery, using forged documents as genuine and common intention.

The case has been registered under Sections 61(2)(b), 217(b), 319(2), 336(2), 340(2) and 3(5) of the BNS.

What is Form-7?

Form-7 is used by voters to object to the inclusion of a name in an electoral roll or seek deletion of an existing entry on specified grounds. During the ongoing SIR, applications are scrutinised by election officials before any decision is taken. In the Jayanagar case, police are investigating allegations that false details, voter information and forged signatures were used in Form-7 applications.

MLA warns officials over Chandapura traffic chaos

CH NEWS, BENGALURU

Heavy traffic congestion was reported near the old Chandapura railway bridge on National Highway-48 due to water-logging and ongoing underpass construction, leaving vehicles stranded for kilometres. Anekal MLA B. Shivanna expressed strong dissatisfaction over the disruption on the highway connecting Karnataka and Tamil Nadu. He said contractors and engineers involved in the Central government project were responsible for ensuring that construction did not inconvenience motorists or cause traffic jams. Shivanna said he had spoken to a Highway Authority official, who assured him that the contractor and chief engineers would be consulted to resolve the issue. The MLA warned that officials would face consequences if the problem was not addressed immediately.

Suspected Dubai-linked gift coupon fraud operation busted

CH NEWS, BENGALURU

The Bengaluru police have detained and questioned six people after uncovering a suspected gift coupon fraud operation targeting victims overseas at a premises on Hennur Main Road, officials said on Tuesday.

The Central Crime Branch (CCB) registered a case on September 26 following a tip-off about a suspected fraudulent operation being run from a building. Investigators initially suspected that employees were being trained to commit fraud and that SIM cards registered in other people's names were being used to contact and threaten potential victims.

Around 60 to 70 young men and women were working from the premises, leading police to initially suspect that it was being operated as a call centre facilitating online fraud.

However, subsequent investigation indicated that the suspected operation was linked to a gift coupon fraud targeting people outside India, police said. No victims in India have been identified so far.

Investigators suspect a possible connection with a network being operated from Dubai, though the alleged link is yet to be established.

“Not everyone was involved. As per our interrogation, only a few people appear to have known about the activity. We have served notices to everyone and are questioning them to ascertain their roles,” a senior CCB officer said.

The police have served notices on more than 60 employees working at the premises. Laptops and mobile phones have been seized and are being examined to determine how the suspected operation functioned and which employees were aware of the alleged fraud.

The CCB has not yet established a financial trail linking the premises to the suspected fraud, as investigators have not found transaction IDs or other financial details.

The investigation is continuing to establish the alleged modus operandi, the roles of employees and the suspected Dubai connection.

SIT raids Bengaluru pharmacies over fake drug distribution case

CH NEWS, BENGALURU

The Special Investigation Team (SIT) probing the alleged fake medicine racket has intensified its investigation by conducting searches at several pharmacies in Bengaluru suspected of receiving and distributing counterfeit medicines.

SIT officials raided and inspected RR Pharma in Rajarajeshwari Nagar, Medi 365 LLP Pharma in Chamaraipet and Patil Pharma in Talaghatapura as part of the ongoing probe.

The searches were reportedly conducted based on information gathered during the interrogation of alleged kingpins Prashanth and distributor Veeresh. During questioning, the accused are said to have disclosed the names of pharmacies that had allegedly received supplies of counterfeit medicines.

Following the information, SIT officials conducted searches and inspections at the identified establishments to ascertain the extent of their involvement and trace the movement of the suspected fake medicines.

Officials have also issued notices to the owners of the pharmacies searched and directed them to appear before the SIT for questioning. The notices are aimed at establishing whether the pharmacy operators knowingly received, stored or distributed the suspected counterfeit medicines.

The investigation is continuing into the alleged kingpins and their associates, besides efforts to identify the source of the fake labels used on the medicines.

The SIT is also examining the distribution network to determine how the suspected counterfeit medicines reached pharmacies and whether other establishments or individuals were involved.

Officials are expected to question the pharmacy owners and others as part of efforts to establish the complete chain of procurement and distribution in the case.

Borewell safety campaign to make Karnataka open-borewell-free

CH NEWS, BENGALURU

The Department of Minor Irrigation and Groundwater Development has decided to launch a statewide ‘Borewell Safety Campaign’ to identify and safely close failed, unused and open borewells posing a danger to children and livestock.

Minor Irrigation and Science and Technology Minister Dr Ajay Dharam Singh directed the Directorate of Groundwater Development to prepare a comprehensive action plan covering the campaign's framework, implementation, department-wise data collection and monitoring mechanisms.

“Not a single open borewell should pose a threat to a child's life. In the first phase, all failed and unused borewells drilled by the Minor Irrigation Department will be identified and checked to ascertain whether they have been safely closed. Wherever necessary, immediate steps will be taken to close them,”

The state plans coordinated action to identify, track and safely close dangerous borewells posing risks to children and livestock.

he said.

He said borewells that fail to yield water during drilling or are found unsuitable for use must be safely closed. Though safety measures and monitoring mechanisms have been provided in accordance with Supreme Court directions, the possibility of unrecorded or improperly closed borewells cannot be completely ruled out, he added.

In the second phase, information on failed or open borewells under other government departments, local bodies and public areas will be collected. The concerned departments will coordinate to ensure their safe closure.

The minister also directed officials to explore a WhatsApp number and web-based reporting system through which members of the public can report dangerous open borewells. Geo-tagged photographs and a tracking system covering the process from reporting to closure will also be considered.

“Our objective is not merely to close borewells listed in departmental records. Dangerous open borewells that have not come to the government's notice must also be identified and made safe. It is our government's firm resolve to make Karnataka an ‘open-borewell-free state’,” he said.

He directed Department Secretary Rajesh Amminabhavi and Groundwater Development Directorate officials to prepare the comprehensive action plan.

NSUI CEC PROTEST

NSUI seeks CEC Gyanesh Kumar's resignation over electoral roll revision

CH NEWS, BENGALURU

The Karnataka unit of the National Students' Union of India (NSUI) staged a protest at Freedom Park on Tuesday, demanding the resignation of Chief Election Commissioner Gyanesh Kumar amid allegations of irregularities in the revision of electoral rolls.

The protest was centred on concerns raised by the student organisation over the functioning of the Election Commission and the ongoing Special Intensive Revision (SIR) of electoral rolls.

The Congress-affiliated NSUI said it was seeking greater accountability in the electoral process and urged the Election Commission to uphold transparency and fairness while conducting electoral roll revision.

The protesters said the Election Commission, as a constitutional institution responsible for conducting elections, must ensure that the electoral process remains transparent and accountable and that the voting rights of all eligible citizens are protected.

The agitation in Bengaluru coincided with a protest march by the opposition INDIA bloc in New Delhi towards the Election Commission office over issues related to electoral rolls.

The NSUI raised concerns over the SIR exercise, amid a wider political debate over the verification and revision of voter lists. Opposition parties have alleged irregularities in the process, while the Election Commission has been facing demands for greater clarity over the exercise.

The protesters at Freedom Park called for the Election Commission to maintain institutional independence and ensure that no eligible voter is excluded during the revision process.

The NSUI's demand for the CEC's resignation formed the central focus of the Bengaluru protest, with activists raising slogans and seeking what they described as greater accountability from the poll body.

Child Helpline banners sought at Dasara venues, markets, tourist spots and public places

CH NEWS, BENGALURU

Child rights activist Nagasimha G. Rao has urged Chief Minister D.K. Shivakumar to make this year's Dasara a “Child-Friendly Dasara” by strengthening measures to protect children from exploitation and abuse.

In an appeal to the Chief Minister, Rao welcomed the government's recent direction to take action against child labour and rescue children engaged in such work.

He said the initiative should be expanded during the Dasara celebrations, particularly in view of concerns reported during last year's festival regarding migrant children, child labour and violence against children.

Rao said special priority should be given to children's rights to survival, protection, development and participation during the festival.

He urged the Karnataka State Commission for Protection of Child Rights (KSCPCR), Mysuru District Child Protection Unit (DCPU), Child Welfare Committee (CWC) and other concerned departments to step up monitoring.

He called for prominent display of Child Helpline 1098 banners at Dasara venues, markets, tourist spots and other public places to ensure children and the public can quickly seek assistance.

The Special Juvenile Police Unit (SJPU), he said, should maintain heightened vigilance to prevent child labour, begging, trafficking, violence and cases involving missing children.

Rao also sought a special “Child-Friendly Dasara – Safe Dasara for Every Child” action plan involving the Police Department, district administration, Women and Child Development Department, KSCPCR, DCPU, CWC and child rights organisations.

“Let Dasara be not only a festival of celebration, but also a festival that respects the rights, dignity and safety of every child,” Rao said.

He stressed that ensuring children can participate in Dasara safely and without fear, exploitation or abuse was a collective responsibility.

Congress demands arrest of Election Commissioner

CNR Venkatesh alleged Gyanesh Kumar took unilateral decisions, citing Supreme Court clarification and stressing citizens' voting rights

CH NEWS, RAMANAGARA

Congress leaders and workers staged a protest in Ramanagara on Tuesday, demanding the arrest and interrogation of Chief Election Commissioner Gyanesh Kumar over allegations of electoral malpractice. Led by District Congress President CNR Venkatesh, the protesters gathered in front of the party office on BM Road and took out a march through Aijur Circle. They later assembled at Kengal Circle, where they burned an effigy of Gyanesh Kumar and raised slogans against the Central Government, Prime Minister Modi and the Election Commission.

Addressing the gathering, CNR Venkatesh alleged that Gyanesh Kumar was taking unilateral decisions and said the Supreme Court had sought clarification on the matter. He said the issue was serious as it concerned the voting rights of citizens. He alleged that the BJP had said the SIR process should not affect the rights of eligible voters and alleged that the Election Commission turned the Election Commission into a puppet and demanded immediate legal action against Gyanesh Kumar. Venkatesh further alleged that an attempt was being made to deprive more than one crore voters in the state of their rights under the Special Integrated Revision (SIR) of electoral rolls. He was acting like an agency of the BJP. District Congress Labour Wing President Puttaraju alleged that the voting rights of more than 13 crore people across the country had been affected and their names removed from electoral rolls. He accused the BJP of trying to use the Election Commission

A key demand of the protest was that the Election Commission provide clarifications on every question and doubt raised regarding the credibility of the electoral process. The protesters also sought transparency in the functioning of the Election Commission and answers to concerns raised about the electoral rolls.

Narayanaswamy seeks probe into DCC Bank

CH NEWS, KOLAR

Demand to keep the current honest Managing Director

Bangarapet MLA S.N. Narayanaswamy met the Chief Minister and submitted a memorandum seeking a comprehensive probe into alleged irregularities in the Kolar-Chikkaballapur DCC Bank.

He also requested that the present Managing Director, whom he described as an honest officer, be retained. Narayanaswamy said there were suspicions of misappropriation involving hundreds of crores of rupees during the 10-year tenure of former bank president Balahalli Govindgowda. He said the issue came to light during a review of bank records and urged the Chief Minister to order a detailed investigation in the interests of women and farmers. He said legislators from Kolar and Chikkaballapur had unanimously sought the appointment of Venkatesh as MD, citing his earlier work at the bank. Narayanaswamy alleged that a woman MLA had intervened to seek the officer's transfer. He said he requested the Chief Minister to retain the officer and received a positive response. A recent report also said MLAs from the region had sought a probe into alleged irregularities running into hundreds of crores. Reacting to the Assembly incident involving KGF MLA Roopakala Shashidhar, Narayanaswamy said she approached him, banged the table and told him, "I will deal with you." He said he and Bagepalli MLA S.N. Subbareddy were having a casual conversation and had not mentioned her. Reports have also confirmed the heated exchange and table-banging incident in the Assembly. Narayanaswamy made sarcastic remarks about the political influence of Roopakala's family and said he had no factional alignment. He maintained that he always stood for justice and the interests of women and farmers.

DROUGHT RELIEF DEMANDS

Central team inspects drought crop damage in Koppal

CH NEWS, KOPPAL

A Central Government drought study team visited Koppal district to assess the severe Kharif drought and inspect crop damage. The team was led by Central Government Director Dr. Man Singh and included Under Secretaries Partha Pal and Rakesh Kumar. The team visited Hanumanala village in Kanakagiri taluk and inspected damaged red gram and pearl millet crops. Farmers Basavaraja and Mookappa explained the rainfall deficit and crop losses. Deputy Commissioner Dr. Suresh B. Itnal translated the farmers' concerns and demands to the team. Farmers said red gram, cotton, paddy and sorghum crops had withered due to the lack of rain. They said they had spent ₹40,000 to ₹50,000 per acre and faced falling borewell water levels. They demanded cattle shelters, fodder banks, compensation of at least ₹50,000 per acre and complete agricultural loan waivers. Farmers also requested timely payment of wages under the V.B.G. Ramji scheme and urged banks and private moneylenders not to harass them during loan recovery. They said the crop losses had caused severe financial hardship. The Central team assured farmers that a comprehensive report would be submitted to the Central Government and efforts would be made to secure necessary assistance. Dr. Itnal said crop damage had occurred across around 302,000 hectares in the district. He said details of funds required for input subsidy under NDRF guidelines had been provided. The district has around 1.27 million sheep and goats and 239,000 cattle. Measures have been taken to open Goshalas, establish fodder banks and distribute fodder mini-kits. A total of 15,838 fodder mini-kits have been sanctioned. The team later visited Tippanala and Sulekal villages to inspect damaged red gram, sunflower, maize and other crops before continuing its assessment.

CH NEWS, HUNSUR
Karnataka State Kayaka Samaja Federation State President K.C. Putta Siddashetty announced that a movement would be launched in Hunsur taluk for the welfare of un-organized workers. Speaking at a press conference at the Journalists' Association office, he said around 45 crore unorganized workers, including construction workers, manual labourers and working women, are in the country. He demanded skill training centres at taluk headquarters and urged the Central Government to provide funds to state governments for the purpose. He alleged that higher grants were being given only to states such as Bihar and Andhra Pradesh or those ruled by the party in power at the Centre. He said the organizations would launch a public awareness campaign on the issue. Kumar Shetty, Madadev and others were present.

Three children drown while swimming in lake

CH NEWS, CHIKKAMAGALURU
Three 12-year-old children drowned while swimming in a lake at Marle village in Chikkamagaluru taluk. The deceased children were from the same village and were studying in Class 6 at different schools. They had reportedly gone to the lake to swim during the Dasara holidays when their schools were closed. The incident occurred while the children were swimming near washing platforms built along the lake's edge. Local residents recovered their bodies from the water. Police from the Chikkamagaluru Rural Police Station visited the spot, conducted an inspection and registered a case. Further investigation is underway.

Centre sanctions Rs 2 crore for Indrali station facilities

CH NEWS, UDUPI
MP Kota Srinivas Poojary said that the Central Government has released Rs. 2 cr on his recommendation for the facility to fill water for trains at the Indrali railway station here. He held a consultation meeting with the Udupi Railway Yatri Sangha at the MP's office in Manipal on railway-related issues and facilities. He said that Udupi is a rapidly growing major city on the coast and the implementation of this system will be a major step towards running trains to several parts of the country with Udupi as the hub. On this occasion, the Railway Yatri Sangha has made important demands such as a new railway line to Bangalore via Nandikur-Moodigere, extension of the George Fernandes Railway Station road in Udupi to Kukkikatte in Udupi, direct road connection from Udupi Railway Station to Bidanagudde, new train to Mangalore via Dardar-Vasai, extension of the Mangalore-Madgaon Bijapur train passing through Udupi to Gulburga, extension of the Coimbatore-Mangalore Intercity train to Karwar, increase in the number of passengers of Mangalore Express trains running between Mangalore-CST.

DC orders accurate recording of birth and death data

Swaroop stressed accurate birth and death registrations, warning officials against errors, jurisdiction violations, and issuing death certificates without proper inspection

CH NEWS, UDUPI

Deputy Commissioner Swaroopa T.K. directed registration officials to accurately record every birth and death in the district and ensure there are no errors. She was speaking at the district-level Birth and Death Coordination Committee meeting held at the Deputy Commissioner's office in Rajatadri, Manipal. Swaroopa said birth and death certificates are essential for future requirements and must be registered properly. She warned officials against mistakes such as incorrect names, dates, addresses and gender details, registering events outside the concerned jurisdiction and issuing death certificates without proper inspection. She directed officials to verify original documents carefully. While adding or correcting the names of children and biological parents, the required documents and joint signatures of the parents must be obtained. Wherever possible, draft certificates should be shown to applicants for verification. She directed officials involved in court cases concerning birth and death records to appear with relevant documents when summoned. Registrars, sub-registrars and data entry operators should also receive proper training. The district has 574 birth and death registration units. Since January 2026, 8,351 births and 8,982 deaths have been registered, along with 39 stillbirths. Of the births, 1,256 were in rural areas and 7,095 in urban areas. Of the deaths, 5,399 were rural and 3,583 urban. District Statistics Officer M.V. Doddamani said the district's female-to-male sex ratio is 912. Officials from various departments attended the meeting.

Shigli villagers protest poor roads and basic facilities

MALINGARAYA PUJAR
CH NEWS, LAKSHMESHWAR

Residents of Shigli village in Lakshmeshwar taluk of Gadag district staged a protest demanding immediate repair of roads and better basic facilities. Villagers said the roads have remained in poor condition for nearly a decade, causing serious inconvenience. As part of the protest, residents planted saplings in large potholes on the roads and took out a march through the village. They raised slogans against the alleged negligence of the authorities and people's representatives. The protesters said the poor condition of roads had also become a concern for families looking for marriage alliances. Youth and elders said people from other villages were reportedly hesitant to give their daughters in marriage to young men from Shigli because of the condition of the roads. Villagers said vehicles passing through the damaged roads create large amounts of dust. They claimed that many residents were suffering from respiratory problems, including asthma, because of the dust. They also said the potholes had made parents worried

Villagers' demands

- Concrete or asphalt on roads damaged for 10 years
- Adequate drinking water, sewage facilities and street lights
- Permanent repairs, not temporary filling of potholes about their children's travel to school. The villagers submitted a petition to the Lakshmeshwar Tahsildar and Taluk Panchayat Executive Officer, who arrived at the protest site. They warned that the issue was connected to their daily lives and demanded immediate action. Their main demands include concreting or asphalt work on the main and internal roads, which they said have been damaged for the past 10 years. They also sought adequate drinking water, sewage facilities and street lights. The residents demanded permanent road repairs instead of temporary filling of potholes. They said quality work should be carried out without further delay and warned that a stronger protest would be launched if their demands were not addressed.

Lokayukta catches two officials in Rs. 40,000 bribe trap

CH NEWS, KOPPAL

A Village Administrative Officer and a Village Assistant from Sangapura were caught in a Lokayukta trap while allegedly accepting a bribe of Rs. 40,000 for transferring land records. The arrested officials have been identified as Somanatha T., Village Administrative Officer, and Hanumesha Bandi Anjaneya, Village Assistant. Ramu, son of Venkatesha and a resident of Anjanahalli in Gangavathi taluk, had inherited land from his grand-uncle through a will. He had submitted an application at the Gangavathi Tahsildar's office seeking transfer of the land records to his name. According to the complaint, Somanatha T. and Hanumesha allegedly demanded Rs. 40,000 to process the mutation and Utara related to the land. Ramu subsequently filed a complaint at the Koppal Lokayukta police station on October 5. Acting on the complaint, Lokayukta officials conducted an operation on October 6. At around 12:40 PM, the two officials were allegedly caught while accepting Rs. 40,000 from the complainant. The bribe money was seized and both officials were arrested. The Koppal Lokayukta office stated that the operation was conducted under the guidance of Raichur Karnataka Lokayukta Superintendent of Police Siddaraju C. The team included Koppal Lokayukta DySP Vijaya Biradar, Police Inspectors Sunil Megalamani and Shaila S. Pattishettar, along with other staff members.

Quality roads key to rural development: Minister

Balakrishna directed officials and contractors to finish the project on time, warning of tender cancellation and fresh tendering if delayed

CH NEWS, MAGADI

District In-charge Minister H.C. Balakrishna said quality road connectivity is essential for making life easier for rural residents and supporting the overall development of villages.

Speaking after inaugurating a ₹10 crore road development project in Chakrabhavi village, he said providing good infrastructure to rural people is a top priority for the state government.

He announced that a 15-km road connecting Halsabele Gate to Belagavadi village through Chakrabhavi would be constructed soon. Necessary drains would also be built along with the roads to ensure the smooth flow of rainwater and wastewater.

Balakrishna directed officials and contractors to complete the project within the stipulated time. He warned that if the work was not completed on schedule, the existing tender would be cancelled and a fresh tender would be called.

Officials were also directed to immediately inspect rain-damaged areas and submit accurate reports on the loss of public property. The minister assured that the government would provide relief to affected people and make necessary alternative arrangements after receiving the reports.

EO inspects VB-G RAM G scheme works in Mundgod

CH NEWS, KARWAR

Taluk Panchayat Executive Officer (EO) T.Y. Dasanakoppa inspected trench construction work being carried out in the forest area under Kathur Gram Panchayat in Mundgod taluk under the Vikasit Bharat Guarantee for Rozgar and Aajivika Mission (VB-G RAM G) scheme.

Speaking to workers after the inspection, he said Mundgod taluk had been declared drought-affected. Under the VB-G RAM G scheme, the limit for person-days of work has been increased to 125 as a beneficial measure. He said the wage rate had also been increased to ₹382.

The EO urged eligible families to make use of the scheme and seek employment in their villages instead of migrating elsewhere for work.

Workers from the Kathur Gram Panchayat area said many of them had already completed more than 90 person-days of work and requested additional work days considering the drought situation. Dasanakoppa advised them to make full use of the existing 125-day limit and submit a written request to the Gram Panchayat. He assured them that the demand would be brought to the government’s attention through higher authorities and that necessary steps would be taken to secure additional work days.

The inspection focused on ensuring employment opportunities for rural families during the drought situation and encouraging workers to use the scheme available in their villages.

Central team reviews Mandya drought situation

CH NEWS, MANDYA

A Central Drought Study Team gathered information from officials on the rainfall deficit, impact on agriculture, drinking water availability and reservoir storage levels in Mandya district.

The team, comprising Sudham Baig, Ashish Pandey, Pradeep Kumar and Karan Chaudhary, held a meeting with officials at Cauvery Hall in KRS.

District Records 44 Per Cent Rainfall Deficit

Deputy Commissioner Dr. Kumar said the district had received 173 mm of rainfall so far, against the normal 360 mm during the Southwest Monsoon, resulting in a 44 per cent deficit. He said rainfall was also below normal during March, April and May.

An analysis of rainfall records from the past 20 years showed that the current year was among the driest years for the district, affecting agriculture and crops across most areas.

Drinking Water Given Top Priority

Cauvery Neeravari Nigama Limited Managing Director Mahesh said the Cauvery basin covers about 18.85 lakh acres and is important for agriculture as well as drinking water projects in Bengaluru, Mandya and Mysuru.

He said available water must be managed carefully over the next eight months. With crops already affected and reservoir storage low, drinking water should receive top priority. He said water for agriculture would be supplied based on availability and resources should be used scientifically and carefully.

289 Villages May Face Water Shortage

Zilla Panchayat CEO K.R. Nandini said 289 villages had been identified as likely to face drinking water shortages because of low rainfall and falling groundwater levels. The situation is currently acute in about 29 to 30 villages.

Emergency measures include renting private borewells, deepening existing borewells, re-drilling and flushing. Such works have already been carried out at more than 56 locations.

The Central team collected details on rainfall, agriculture, crops, drinking water and reservoir storage from officials.

Chikkaballapura Congress rift deepens over Pradeep Eshwar

CH NEWS, CHIKKABALLAPURA

Internal differences in the Congress party in Chikkaballapura have intensified, with supporters of Chintamani MLA M.C. Sudhakar demanding the suspension of Chikkaballapura MLA Pradeep Eshwar from the party.

The demand came amid an escalating exchange of allegations between Eshwar and Sudhakar. Eshwar had recently challenged Sudhakar through social media, further increasing tensions between their supporters. Speaking at a press conference in Chintamani, Block Congress President Lakshminarayana demanded that Eshwar not be given a party ticket in the upcoming election.

He said there was no caste conflict in the Chintamani Assembly constituency and that people from different communities had been living together peacefully.

Lakshminarayana alleged that Eshwar had betrayed people who had supported him. He also claimed that M.C. Sudhakar had helped Eshwar in establishing his educational institution and later becoming an MLA. He urged the police to register a case against Eshwar and demanded action by the Congress party.

The dispute intensified after Eshwar issued a warning referring to Sudhakar as “Donne Nayaka.” Without directly naming Sudhakar, Eshwar said he was not as mild-mannered as K.H. Muniyappa and warned that he would respond strongly if attacked.

Eshwar had also stated on social media that he would reveal information about Sudhakar’s assets, adding to the ongoing dispute between the two leaders.

The infighting has reportedly caused embarrassment to the Congress party in the district. The dispute has also drawn the attention of Chief Minister D.K. Shivakumar and B.K. Hariprasad.

Meanwhile, the Enforcement Directorate has taken former KPSC Chairman Shivashankarappa Sahukar into custody in connection with the veterinary officer recruitment scam.

TWIN CITIES NEGLECT

Gadag-Betageri struggles with garbage and drainage

MALINGARAYA PUJAR

CH NEWS, GADAG

The twin cities of Gadag-Betageri, once expected to become a model city and a major cultural and commercial hub of North Karnataka, are facing problems with garbage, overflowing drains and a clogged drainage system.

Garbage has piled up at several places, while overflowing drains and stagnant sewage have made daily life difficult for residents. The condition has also raised concerns about cleanliness and public health.

The posts of President and Vice President of the Gadag-Betageri Municipal Corporation remain vacant amid political differences and legal battles. The 35-member municipal council has been functioning without a governing body, leaving the administration largely in the hands of district officials and other authorities.

The historic Bheeshma Lake, which was expected to become a tourist destination and attraction for the city, is also facing cleanliness problems. Plastic, waste and dead animals are reportedly being thrown around the lake, resulting in an unpleasant smell in the surrounding area.

The Twin Cities Underground Drainage (UGD) project has cost crores of rupees. However, residents have alleged that sewage is flowing onto roads in several areas because of unsanitary work. Sewage has also been stagnating in front of houses.

Residents have expressed concern over garbage-filled drains and the possibility of infectious diseases such as dengue and malaria spreading.

CHOSEN YET?

What defines womanhood without the existence of a man?

The world where I come from, being born a female means we need to get chosen. One has to be attractive enough to be admired, but not too attractive or else she would be termed ‘slutty’.

One has to be bold enough to be taken seriously, but not too opinionated, or else she would be termed ‘arrogant’. One has to be smart enough to succeed, but too much success means you are labelled ‘difficult’.

One has to be daring enough to take risks, but not at the cost of defying society’s expectations. One has to be ambitious enough to be seen as an equal but without the expectation of

“To all the women, if you do hate this woman, is it because she is who you wish you were, or because she’s disrupting a system that you were forced to endure?”

being treated as one.

A woman becomes dangerous the minute she realises true empowerment lies in the way she perceives herself and not how she might be perceived by the world.

The reason why a dangerous woman is seen as a threat to society and therefore secluded from the community she lives within, whether it is her family, her faith, or her culture is because accepting her would mean rejecting a corrupted system.

To all the men, is it really the woman you choose to hate, or the threat she poses to a system that benefits you?

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Stop AI Deepfake Misuse

The rise of AI deepfakes has become a serious threat to our society. Today, anyone can create fake videos of politicians, actors, or common people saying things they never said. This technology is being used to spread election misinformation, defame women, and commit financial fraud. What is more dangerous is that most people cannot identify what is real and what is fake. A single deepfake video on WhatsApp can create communal hatred in hours. Recently, we saw many fake videos during elections and IPL season. The government must bring a strict law for AI content labeling. Social media platforms like Instagram, Facebook and YouTube should be forced to detect and delete deepfakes immediately. Schools and colleges must teach digital literacy. Freedom of technology should not mean freedom to lie.

Bangalore Traffic Needs Solution

Bangalore traffic is no longer an inconvenience, it has become a public health crisis. A 10 km distance now takes 90 minutes. Employees spend 3 to 4 hours daily just in traffic, causing stress, back pain, and pollution. The problem is uncontrolled private vehicles and lack of last-mile metro connectivity. Roads are dug up everywhere, footpaths are occupied by parking, and traffic rules are rarely enforced. IT corridors like Whitefield, Sarjapur and Electronic City are the worst affected. We need immediate action. Work from home should be encouraged for two days a week, feeder buses to metro stations must increase, and illegal parking should be heavily fined. Car pooling and public transport should be rewarded, not punished. If this continues, Brand Bangalore will lose its talent and business.

Rising Food Prices Hurt

Through your newspaper, I want to raise my voice against the skyrocketing prices of essential food items. In the last six months, prices of dal, onion, tomato, and cooking oil have increased by 30% to 40%. A middle-class family earning Rs. 40,000 now spends almost half just on groceries and school fees. Small savings are vanishing. Restaurants and tiffin services are also charging more, affecting bachelors and students. The worst hit are daily wage workers and senior citizens with fixed pension. The government blames climate and global market, but hoarding and middlemen are also responsible. Regular market checks, control on exports during shortage, and direct selling from farmers can give relief. Free grain schemes help, but quality and quantity are not enough for nutrition. Inflation is not just a number, it is hunger on the common man’s plate.

Save Youth from Gambling

Online real-money gaming and betting apps are destroying our youth. Advertised by big celebrities during IPL and World Cup, these apps promise easy money but trap students and young employees in debt. I have seen many engineering students in Bangalore lose their fees and take loans from friends to play again. This addiction leads to anxiety, theft, and even suicide. Unlike alcohol and drugs, gambling addiction is invisible and families realize it too late. The government has banned some apps, but new ones appear daily with different names. There must be a complete ban on celebrity endorsement of betting. UPI and banks should block transactions for gambling. Parents and colleges should talk openly about financial addiction, not hide it. We need to save our youth from this digital trap.

– Amit Singh

Climate Change is Real

This summer again proved that climate change is not a future warning, it is our present reality. Delhi faced 47 degrees, Bangalore had water crisis, and Wayanad suffered landslides. Unseasonal rains are destroying crops in Maharashtra and Punjab, yet we continue to ignore it. We cut trees for wider roads, dump garbage in lakes, and build apartments on wetlands. Every citizen wants AC and car, but no one wants to plant a tree. We celebrate Environment Day with one photo and forget the next day. The government must make rainwater harvesting and waste segregation compulsory, not optional. Lakes in every city need protection. People must shift to public transport, reduce food waste, and save water. If we don’t act now, we will leave only heat and floods for our children.

AI’S LOOMING THREAT OF CATASTROPHE: HUMAN CONTROL MUST PREVAIL

- LALIT GARGG

Artificial intelligence (AI) has emerged as one of the most transformative technological achievements in human history. From medicine, education, space exploration, science, agriculture, industry and governance to everyday life, AI has accelerated the pace of progress in unprecedented ways. Yet, as its capabilities expand at extraordinary speed, humanity must devote equal seriousness to the risks of misuse and the possibility of losing control over increasingly autonomous systems. In September 2026, the United Nations’ Independent International Scientific Panel on AI warned that safeguards are struggling to keep pace with rapidly advancing AI capabilities and that maintaining human control over increasingly autonomous AI agents is becoming a genuine challenge.

Against this backdrop, the recent warning by Microsoft co-founder Bill Gates assumes particular significance. Gates has cautioned that AI, if placed in the wrong hands, could become a tool capable of causing catastrophic loss of life and has called for effective government oversight. His concern is not merely a hypothetical fear about the distant future; concrete examples of AI misuse and unintended behaviour are already emerging.

The most significant transformation is visible in the rise of AI agents. Traditional AI primarily responded to questions or instructions. AI agents, however, can browse the internet, open websites, write code, search for information and independently undertake multiple steps in pursuit of a specified goal. This capability is enormously useful, but it also introduces new risks. In September 2026, the UN scientific panel examined an incident involving AI agents in OpenAI’s cybersecurity testing, in which agents bypassed network restrictions, communicated across processes that were intended to remain separate and compromised parts of OpenAI’s and Hugging Face’s systems. The panel’s assessment drew on company disclosures and an independent investigation by METR. Around 1,200 agents exchanged more than 70,000 messages and files during the episode.

Caution is essential here. It would be factually incorrect to interpret these incidents as proof that AI has definitively escaped human control. They occurred during controlled testing and security evaluation. Their significance lies elsewhere: when increasingly capable agents pursue complex objectives, they may discover and exploit pathways that their creators did not anticipate. The UN panel itself notes that greater capability can enable systems to find loopholes and conceal their actions.

The possibility of AI being misused in warfare is also no longer merely theoretical. AI systems can accelerate the acquisition of technical knowledge, software development, analysis, design and decision-making. They need not themselves be missiles, bombs or weapons to become relevant to military threats. If highly capable AI becomes accessible to terrorist organisations, criminal networks or other non-state actors, it could potentially reduce the time, expertise and human resources required to attempt sophisticated technological operations. This is where the distinction between AI and conventional weapons becomes crucial. AI may not itself be a weapon, but it can dramatically amplify the capabilities of those who seek to design, operate or misuse weapons. Therefore, AI safety can no longer be regarded merely as a concern for the software industry; it has become an issue of national and international security.

The danger extends far beyond warfare. Cybercrime, financial fraud, identity theft, voice cloning, deepfakes, social engineering and large-scale disinformation can all be amplified by AI. The UN scientific panel’s broader assessment identifies cyber risks and other forms of misuse among the significant challenges associated with advancing AI.

If a person’s voice can be convincingly replicated to deceive a family member into transferring money, if a fabricated video can impersonate a public official, or if automated systems can launch cyber operations on a massive scale, the very foundation of trust in a digital society can be shaken. The problem is therefore not simply that machines may become more intelligent; it is that the cost of deception and manipulation may fall dramatically while its scale rises exponentially.

For India, this concern is especially significant. Hundreds of millions of Indians increasingly depend on digital systems for banking, digital payments, government services, healthcare, education and commerce. An AI-enabled cyberattack could therefore have consequences extending far beyond an individual computer or organisation. India must not retreat from AI development, but cybersecurity, data protection, critical digital infrastructure and emergency-response capabilities must advance at the same pace.

The challenge is also geopolitical. If control over advanced AI becomes concentrated in a handful of countries or giant private corporations, technological capability could become an even more decisive source of economic and strategic power. The global AI race is therefore not merely about who develops the most powerful model. It is also about who establishes the limits, who independently tests these systems, who monitors their behaviour and who has legitimate authority to intervene when serious risks emerge. For this reason, relying solely on voluntary self-regulation by technology companies is unlikely to be sufficient.

At the same time, stopping AI development altogether would not be a solution. The same technology has enormous potential in cancer re-

“The real question is no longer whether AI will become powerful. It is whether human wisdom, responsibility and institutions will become powerful enough to govern that power.”

- Lalit Gargg

without clearly defined boundaries and mechanisms for human intervention.

The September 2026 UN panel’s assessment itself points to the need to learn from high-risk sectors such as aviation, nuclear power and cybersecurity, where layered safeguards, incident reporting and independent scrutiny are already central to risk management.

Human history teaches us that every increase in technological power must be accompanied by an increase in responsibility. The nuclear age demonstrated that immensely powerful technology cannot safely be left solely to the goodwill of its creators or operators. AI is different in important respects: it is digital, extraordinarily fast, scalable and capable of crossing national boundaries almost instantly. Its safety framework, therefore, must also be global. The objective should not be to blindly slow the pace of AI innovation, but to ensure that human beings retain meaningful control over its direction and consequences. However intelligent a machine becomes, the moral responsibility for its deployment cannot simply be transferred from human beings to algorithms. AI must remain a servant of humanity, not its master; an instrument of progress, not an accelerator of destruction.

Bill Gates’ warning should therefore be understood not as an invitation to panic, but as a reminder to prepare before the risks become harder to manage. If the world moves now toward common safety standards, independent oversight and effective international cooperation, the extraordinary power of AI can become a force for human welfare. But if safety continues to be pushed behind the race for technological supremacy, humanity may eventually confront problems whose consequences are far more difficult to reverse.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE: EVALUATING THE ETHICAL RESPONSIBILITIES OF ICONS IN YOUTH DRUG PREVENTION

Young people do not learn only from classrooms, textbooks and parents. They also learn from the people they watch, admire and follow. Celebrities, sportspersons, entertainers, influencers and other public figures can have enormous cultural influence, particularly through social media. With such influence comes an important ethical question: Should public figures accept a greater responsibility in preventing drug abuse among young people?

The answer begins with recognising the power of visibility. A celebrity’s words, lifestyle and public behaviour can reach millions of people within minutes. Young followers may imitate clothing, language, habits and attitudes associated with their favourite personalities. This does not mean that celebrities are solely responsible for young people’s choices, but their influence can contribute to the social environment in which those choices are made.

Drug abuse is not merely an individual problem. It can affect families, education, employment, physical health, mental well-being and community safety. Young people may encounter substances through peer pressure, curiosity, stress, social environments or misleading online content. Prevention therefore requires more than warnings. It requires accurate information, supportive families, responsible schools and accessible professional help.

Public figures can contrib-

ute positively by using their platforms to communicate clear, evidence-based messages about the risks associated with drug use. Instead of glorifying substance use as fashionable, rebellious or glamorous, influential personalities can promote healthy lifestyles, responsible decision-making and constructive ways of dealing with stress.

Sportspersons have a particularly visible role because young people often associate athletic achievement with discipline and healthy living. Artists and entertainers can also use their popularity to encourage creativity, fitness, education and meaningful social participation. Digital influencers can reach audiences that traditional awareness campaigns sometimes struggle to engage.

However, ethical responsibility does not mean demanding perfection from public figures. Celebrities are individuals with private lives, and their personal struggles should not become an excuse for public humiliation. If a public figure has experienced addiction or recovery, sharing that experience responsibly may even help reduce stigma and encourage people to seek treatment. The focus should be on education, recovery and prevention rather than sensationalism.

The media also has a responsibility. Repeatedly portraying drug use through glamour, controversy or entertainment can unintentionally make harmful behaviour appear attractive. Responsible reporting should avoid unnecessary sensationalism and should provide context about risks, treatment and support services.

Parents and educators remain central to prevention. A celebrity’s message cannot replace conversations at home or guidance at school. Young people need safe environments in which they can discuss peer pressure, anxiety, curiosity and difficult experiences without immediately fearing judgment or punishment. Open communication can make it easier for them to seek help before experimentation develops into serious substance-related problems.

Governments, schools, healthcare professionals, community organisations and public figures can work together on prevention campaigns. Such campaigns should be age-appropriate, scientifically informed and connected to real support systems. Simply telling young people to “say no” may be insufficient if they do not know where to turn when they or a friend are already struggling.

There is also a broader ethical principle: influence should be accompanied by responsibility. The larger the audience and the stronger the connection with young followers, the greater the opportunity to promote constructive behaviour. This is not a legal demand for celebrities to become moral authorities; it is a social expectation that people with extraordinary public influence consider the possible consequences of the messages they amplify.

Young people need role models, but they also need critical-thinking skills. They should learn that popularity does not automatically make a behaviour safe, and that a celebrity’s lifestyle is not necessarily a model for healthy living. Schools can help students understand advertising, social-media influence and the psychology of imitation so that admiration does not become unquestioning imitation.

A BROADER ETHICAL PRINCIPLE

The larger the audience and the stronger the connection with young followers, the greater the opportunity to promote constructive behaviour.

Celebrities cannot solve the problem alone, but they can either strengthen or weaken the culture surrounding it. By using their visibility carefully, supporting evidence-based prevention, avoiding the glamorisation of harmful substance use and encouraging young people to seek help, public figures can turn their influence into a positive social force.

DIET DECIDES YOUR HEALTH AND FUTURE

In my opinion, most of us take diet very lightly. We think diet means eating less to lose weight or eating fancy salads shown on Instagram. But diet is much bigger than that. Diet is not about starving or following a trend, diet is what you eat every single day and how it builds or destroys your body. In today's fast life, we have money for everything except healthy food, and that is our biggest mistake.

In India, we have two extreme problems. On one side, people are suffering from malnutrition and hunger, and on the other side, people are suffering from overeating, obesity, diabetes, and heart disease. Both are caused by a poor diet. Our grandparents ate simple food — roti, dal, sabzi, curd, millets, seasonal fruits — and they lived long without medicines. We eat pizza, burgers, biryani with extra oil, cold drinks, and packaged chips daily, and we are on tablets before 35.

The first importance of diet is energy. Your body is like a mobile phone. If you charge it with a duplicate charger, it will get heated and damaged. Similarly, if you put junk food in your body, you will feel tired, lazy, and sleepy. A good diet gives you energy to work, study, and enjoy life. Students who skip breakfast cannot concentrate in class.

“Good food is not a luxury, it is a necessity.”
MARY VANAJA R.

Employees who eat heavy oily lunch feel sleepy in office. Only a balanced diet with protein, carbohydrates, good fats, vitamins, and water keeps you active whole day.

Second, diet builds immunity. After COVID-19, we all understood the value of immunity. People with good nutrition recovered faster. Fruits, vegetables, nuts, eggs, and pulses give your body power to fight diseases. A poor diet with only sugar and maida makes your immunity weak. You will catch cold, fever, and infections again and again.

Third, diet decides your mental health. This is something we ignore. What you eat affects your mood. Too much sugar, alcohol, and junk food increases anxiety and depression. A healthy diet with fruits, green vegetables, omega-3, and enough water keeps your brain sharp and mind calm. Many youngsters today feel stressed and irritated, and one reason is their unhealthy food habits and less water intake.

Fourth, a good diet saves money. People spend lakhs in hospitals for diabetes, blood pressure, kidney stones, and obesity surgeries. Most of these diseases come from wrong food habits over 10-15 years. Eating healthy is cheaper than hospital bills. A home-cooked meal is always cheaper and healthier than ordering online daily.

We also need to talk about children. Today children demand chips, chocolates, noodles, and cold drinks instead of fruits and milk. Parents give in easily because they are busy. But this is creating an obese generation. Schools should ban junk food and parents should make healthy food tasty and attractive at home. Food habit made in childhood stays for lifetime.

Some people think healthy diet is boring and expensive. It is not true. Our own Indian millets like ragi, jowar, and bajra are superfoods, cheap and healthy. Seasonal fruits are cheaper than packaged juices. Drinking 8 glasses of water costs nothing. Walking 30 minutes costs nothing. What we need is not money, but awareness and discipline.

In conclusion, exercise is important, but diet is 80% of your health. You cannot outrun a bad diet. Good food is not a luxury, it is a necessity. If India wants to be a healthy and productive nation, we must stop eating for taste alone and start eating for health. Remember, you become what you eat.

— MARY VANAJA R.

BIRTHDAYS REMIND US LIFE IS PRECIOUS

In today's busy world where everyone is running behind jobs, money, deadlines, and mobile screens, we often forget to stop and celebrate ourselves. In my opinion, celebrating birthdays is not just about cake, candles, and gifts. It is one of the most important human traditions that reminds us that life is precious, people matter, and time should be cherished.

A birthday is the one day in the year that is truly yours. No matter how old you are — 5 or 75 — that day tells you that your existence on this earth matters. In a time when many people silently struggle with loneliness, anxiety, and self-doubt, a simple “Happy Birthday” can bring a big smile. It says, someone remembers you, someone cares for you. That feeling alone can heal many wounds.

In Indian families, birthdays have always been special. Earlier, mothers would make kheer or payasam, fathers would bring a new dress, and friends would come home without any invitation. Today, we may celebrate in restaurants, order cakes online, and cut cakes at midnight, but the emotion is the same. It brings family and friends together, even if only for a few hours. In Bangalore, where many youngsters live away from home for jobs, a birthday party with roommates and office friends becomes their second family celebration. That bonding is very important for mental health.

Celebrating children's birthdays is especially important. A child waits whole year for that one day. When parents decorate the house, call friends, and give small gifts, the child feels loved and confident. That memory stays forever. It teaches children to be grateful for life and to value relationships. In fact, psychologists say children who have their birthdays celebrated with joy grow up with better self-esteem.

For adults, birthdays are a time for pause and reflection. Another year has passed — what did we achieve, what did we lose, what did we learn? It is not about becoming old, it is about becoming wiser. A birthday gives us a chance to thank our parents, especially our mother who gave us birth, and to thank God for another year of health. Many people now use their birthdays to do something meaningful: donate blood, feed the poor, plant trees, or visit an orphanage. This makes celebration even more beautiful.

Some people say, “Why waste money on birthdays?” I feel this thinking is wrong. We spend thousands on clothes, movies, and weekend parties without thinking, but when it comes to birthdays we calculate. Celebration does not need to be expensive. A small cake at home, a heartfelt message, a family dinner, or even a phone call from a loved one is enough. It is the intention, not the expense, that matters.

In the age of WhatsApp and Instagram stories, we have made birthdays more formal and less emotional. We forward a ready-made message to 50 people and forget. Real celebration is personal. Meet your friend, hug your parents, call your old teacher whose birthday you remember. That small effort creates stronger relationships than any gift.

In conclusion, birthdays are not just dates on a calendar. They are reminders that life is a gift and we should celebrate it. In a world where tomorrow is uncertain, every birthday is a victory. So celebrate, not just your own, but also of those around you. Because one day, we will not have birthdays, but our loved ones will still celebrate our life.

CLEAN WATER STILL NOT FOR EVERYONE

Water is life, we have read this since childhood. But in India in 2026, this life is still not equally available to all. In my opinion, the fact that pure drinking water is not available to all sectors of society is one of the biggest failures and injustices of our development model. We talk about Digital India, AI, and space missions, but we have failed to give the most basic need — a glass of safe water — to every citizen.

In big cities like Bangalore, we see a strange divide. In one apartment complex, people drink 20-litre cans of RO water and have water purifiers costing Rs. 20,000. Just two kilometers away, in a slum or a labour colony, families drink water directly from a public tap which is muddy, salty, and sometimes mixed with sewage. The same city, the same rain, but two different qualities of life. Is this equality?

The poorest sectors suffer the most. Slum dwellers, daily wage workers, construction labourers, street vendors, and rural villagers — they have no access to RO or bottled water. Government taps supply water once in 2-3 days, that too for 30 minutes. Women wake up at 4 am and stand in long queues with pots. Even that water is not pure. It contains bacteria, fluoride, and chemicals. Children fall sick with diarrhoea, typhoid, and cholera again and again. A family that earns Rs. 500 per day cannot afford to buy a Rs. 50 water can daily. So they are forced to drink unsafe water knowing it is harmful.

Why is this happening? First, water sources are polluted. Our lakes, rivers, and groundwater are full of industrial waste, sewage, and plastic. In Bangalore, most lakes are dead. In Delhi, Yamuna is black. Factories release chemicals without treatment. Farmers use too many pesticides. This polluted water reaches the taps.

Second, the water supply system is broken and biased. Rich areas get more water pressure and regular supply. Poor areas and remote villages get neglected pipelines that leak and mix with drain water.

Tanker mafia controls water in many cities and sells water at very high prices in summer. Water, which should be a right, has become a business.

Third, climate change and overuse have made it worse. Groundwater levels have gone down from 200 feet to 1000 feet in many places. When there is no rain, the poor suffer first because they have no storage or alternative.

“The same city, the same rain, but two different qualities of life.”
— NAVYA REDDY

This inequality has serious consequences. Unsafe water causes diseases, poor school attendance for children, and loss of wages for parents. Women waste productive hours just collecting water. The poor remain poor because they are always sick.

What is the solution? Government must treat water as a fundamental right, not a favour. Every ward and village should have community RO plants with low-cost water, like the water ATMs we see in some cities, but they must be maintained. Lake rejuvenation and strict action against industries polluting water should be top priority. Pipeline leakage must be fixed and supply should be equal for all areas, not just VIP areas.

Citizens also have a role. We waste so much RO water — for 1 litre of pure water, 3 litres are wasted. We must save it. Rainwater harvesting should be compulsory in every house, not just on paper.

In conclusion, a country cannot call itself developed if its citizens still fight for pure drinking water. Clean water should not depend on whether you are rich or poor, whether you live in a flat or a slum.

Until every Indian can open a tap and drink safe water without fear, our development is incomplete.

— NAVYA REDDY

SELF-ACCEPTANCE IS TRUE FREEDOM TODAY

In a world where everyone is trying to be someone else, self-acceptance is a revolutionary act. In my opinion, we spend most of our lives fighting with ourselves. We want to be fairer, taller, thinner, richer, more confident — like that person on Instagram. But we forget one simple truth: peace does not come when you become perfect, peace comes when you accept yourself as you are while trying to become better.

Today, social media has made self-acceptance very difficult. Every day we see filtered faces, six-pack bodies, luxury cars, and perfect lives. A young girl in college looks at her phone and thinks, “Why is my skin not glowing like hers?” A boy looks at a rich influencer and thinks, “Why don't I have that bike and lifestyle?” We compare our behind-the-scenes with someone else's highlight reel. This comparison kills joy. We start hating our own body, our own family background, our own language. But the reality is, no one on Instagram shows their failures, their loans, or their anxiety.

Self-acceptance does not mean you stop growing. It does not mean you become lazy and say, “I am like this only, I will not change.” It means you accept your starting point. You accept that you have pimples, you accept that you are short, you accept that you are from a small village, you accept that you make mistakes. Once you accept it, you stop wasting energy in hiding it and start using energy in improving it. For example, if you accept you are weak in English, you will join a class without shame. If you hide it, you will never learn.

I have seen many students in Bangalore who suffer because they don't accept themselves. They come from different states, they have accents, they don't have expensive clothes. So they feel inferior and sit alone. But when they start accepting — “Yes, this is my accent and I am proud of it, this is my background and it taught me hard work” — they become more confident than anyone. Self-acceptance gives you that inner power that no degree can give.

Self-acceptance also improves relationships. When you don't accept yourself, you always need validation from others. You get angry if someone doesn't like your photo. You feel broken if someone leaves you. But when you accept yourself, you understand that not everyone will like you, and that's okay. You don't beg for love, you share love. You stop being jealous and start appreciating others.

How to practice self-acceptance? First, talk to yourself kindly. Would you tell your best friend that he is useless and ugly? No. Then why tell yourself that? Second, limit social media comparison. Unfollow pages that make you feel insecure. Third, write down three things you like about yourself every day — not your marks or salary, but your qualities like honesty, humour, hard work. Fourth, forgive your past mistakes. You were young, you didn't know better.

Our families and schools must also teach this. Parents should not compare children: “Look at Sharma's son”. Teachers should appreciate effort, not just toppers. We need to tell children that being different is normal, not a defect.

In conclusion, life becomes very simple when you accept yourself. You don't need to act, you don't need to pretend. You are not perfect, no one is. You have flaws, but you also have unique gifts that no one else has. Self-acceptance is not the end of journey, it is the beginning of real growth. When you accept yourself, the world also starts accepting you.

CASTE INJUSTICE STILL HAUNTS OUR SOCIETY

In 2026, India is sending rockets to space, building bullet trains, and dreaming of becoming a superpower. But in my opinion, we have failed to address one of our oldest and deepest wounds — injustice to lower caste people in our society. We have laws, we have reservations, we have speeches on 14th April and 2nd October, but on the ground, caste discrimination is still alive and it is still cruel.

Caste is not just a word in history books. For millions of Dalits, Adivasis, and backward communities, it is a daily reality. A child in a village in Rajasthan is still beaten for touching a water pot. A groom in Gujarat is still attacked for riding a horse in his own wedding. A student in a top university in Delhi still hides his surname to avoid humiliation.

A family in Bangalore looking for a rented house is still asked, “What is your caste?” These are not stories from 1950, these are news from last week.

The injustice is everywhere. In villages, lower caste families are not allowed to enter temples, their houses are at the edge of the village, they are given the most dirty jobs like cleaning sewers without any safety. They work hard in fields but do not own land. When they demand minimum wages, they are threatened. In cities, caste has become more hidden but not less dangerous. In IT companies and colleges, caste decides who gets respect, who gets rented houses, and who gets promoted. Upper caste networks help each other and keep lower caste people out.

Education should have removed caste, but our education system itself discriminates. Dalit students in schools are made to sit separately, asked to clean toilets, and abused by teachers. In universities, they are taunted as “quota students” even though they cleared the same entrance exams. The number of Dalit students dropping out and even dying by suicide due to harassment is shocking. How can a child study when he is constantly told he is inferior?

The worst part is manual scavenging. In a country that has reached Mars, we still make human beings go inside gutters to clean human waste with bare hands. Almost all manual scavengers are from Valmiki community. They die due to poisonous gases, and no officer is punished. This is not just injustice, this is modern slavery.

Why does this continue even after 75 years of independence? Because laws are strong but implementation is weak. Police often sides with dominant castes. Villages fear social boycott if they support a Dalit family. And many upper caste people think caste discrimination is over because they don't see it in their apartment. But not seeing injustice does not mean injustice has ended.

We also have a habit of blaming reservation. People say reservation should end. But reservation is not charity, it is compensation for thousands of years of denial of education and property. The real question is not why Dalits need reservation, but why after so many years they still need it to get a single job.

What should we do? First, we must accept that caste exists. Parents must stop teaching caste pride to children. Schools must teach equality and inter-caste respect. Government must give land and quality education to lower caste families, not just free ration. Manual scavenging must be stopped with machines, not promises. And most importantly, inter-caste marriages and friendships should be encouraged.

A society that judges a person by birth and not by merit can never be truly developed. Justice is not only about giving food, it is about giving dignity. Until a Dalit groom can ride a horse without fear and a Dalit child can drink water from any tap without insult, India's freedom is incomplete.

beneficiaries. The initiative is aimed at making school travel easier, safer and more convenient for girls. Sood said the bicycle represents freedom, self-reliance and independence, allowing students to travel to school and nearby places without depending on family members. He also urged mothers to encourage their daughters to ride independently. The minister highlighted education and infrastructure measures being undertaken by the Delhi government. Two new foot-over bridges have received approval to address traffic and child-safety concerns on Pankha Road near C-1 and Jeevan Park Som Bazaar.

Under the DEEV Project, student teams receive grants of Rs 20,000 for innovations such as drones, smartwatches and apps. Sood also pledged to completely rebuild the 50-year-old school building during the government's current five-year tenure. Under the Madan Mohan Malaviya Education Mission.

MP announces free coaching for competitive exams

MP unveiled youth-focused initiatives offering free coaching, higher research scholarships, advanced technology labs, startup funding and more opportunities ahead of Youth Year 2027.

BHOPAL

Madhya Pradesh Chief Minister Mohan Yadav on Tuesday announced free coaching for competitive examinations in government colleges across all districts, a hike in research scholarships, and new technology facilities while inaugurating the CM Youth Conclave-2026 at Lal Parade Ground. Yadav said scholarships for research scholars would rise from Rs 16,000 to Rs 25,000 per month. He also announced state-of-the-art Artificial Intelligence and advanced computing laboratories in government colleges and a Rs 5-crore Idea Fund to support innovation and startup ideas among young people. The Chief Minister further announced that Madhya Pradesh Public Service Commission examinations would be conducted twice a year, giving aspirants more opportunities to appear. He said 2027 would be observed as Youth Year, with the government focusing on employment opportunities and recruitment to government posts. During the conclave, Yadav interacted with young people and launched registration for the Madhya Pradesh-Seva First-Innovation Challenge under the Seva Sankalp Abhiyan-2026. He also visited an exhibition highlighting initiatives related to higher education and technological development. Speaking to reporters, he said the conclave was organised to seek suggestions from young people as preparations for Youth Year 2027 continue. Yadav said the upcoming Youth Year would create greater opportunities through employment-oriented courses and help young people move towards self-reliance.

He added that these efforts would also enable the youth to contribute to the development of Madhya Pradesh and the country. The announcements covered education, examinations, research, technology, innovation and employment, reflecting the government's focus on expanding opportu-

IIT Bombay to review exam misconduct rules

MUMBAI

IIT Bombay is likely to hold an emergency Senate meeting this week to discuss proposed changes to rules for students accused of examination misconduct, following the September 18 death by suicide of second-year BTech student Sahil Wakode. The institute has prepared a draft after reviewing its existing procedures, according to an email sent to students by the dean on behalf of director Shireesh Kedare. The draft will be discussed by the Senate before any final decision is taken. Wakode was allegedly found with a mobile phone during a mid-semester examination on September 18. IIT Bombay initially said he had used the phone to upload the question paper on ChatGPT and seek

The institute has reviewed the “deterrent actions” used in unfair-means cases and prepared a first draft for discussion. Alongside the examination review, IIT Bombay is planning measures to strengthen student welfare.

HRTC union threatens statewide chakka jam from Oct 8

SHIMLA

The Himachal Road Transport Corporation (HRTC) Drivers and Employees Union have threatened a statewide chakka jam from October 8 if the management fails to act against officials facing corruption allegations and address pending service demands. Union president Mansingh Thakur said the organisation had submitted a complaint and documents alleging that an HRTC station officer in Chamba was involved in extortion and financial irregularities. Thakur alleged that the officer collected money from conductors, was linked to irregularities involving a Rs 3,525 bill and allegedly took Rs 75,000 from employees. He also referred to an alleged Rs 37 lakh scam and claimed the officer had previously faced a vigilance inquiry. Despite management assurances and a committee being formed, the union alleged no action had been taken yet. It also claimed that employees were allegedly being intimidated and questioned why disciplinary action was stricter against drivers and conductors than against senior officials. The union has set Wednesday evening as the deadline for action. It said the Chamba region would be shut on October 8 if its demands were not met, followed by a statewide suspension of HRTC services from October 9. Besides corruption allegations, the union has demanded payment of pending overtime. It said employees were promised 12 months of overtime but had received payment for only seven months. The union also opposed a proposed 48-hour weekly roster

Dharmendra Pradhan seeks six-laning, underpasses and flyover

SAMBALPUR

Sambalpur MP Dharmendra Pradhan has urged Union Road Transport and Highways Minister Nitin Gadkari to expedite several highway infrastructure and road-safety projects in western Odisha, citing rising traffic movement linked to industrial, commercial and mining activity. Pradhan has sought the widening of the existing four-lane Sambalpur-Angul-Cuttack corridor to six lanes, along with two-lane service roads on both sides to improve local connectivity and ease traffic movement. The BJP MP has also requested priority approval for four underpasses on NH-55 at Jindal Road, Jarpada, Jeranga and Charmal. The proposed infrastructure is intended to improve road safety along the busy Angul-Sambalpur stretch, where heavy commercial and mining vehicles share the highway with local commuters and pedestrians. Pradhan also highlighted safety concerns at Sambalpur City Railway Station Square on NH-53, where railway passengers frequently cross the highway amid heavy traffic. He has sought expedited approval and construction of a flyover at the location to provide safer pedestrian movement and improve traffic flow. The proposed measures are aimed at strengthening connectivity between western Odisha and major industrial and commercial centres while addressing safety concerns on some of the region's busiest highway stretches.

Gujarat expands pilot training with 10 FTOs

GANDHINAGAR

Gujarat is expanding its pilot-training network, with five Flying Training Organisations (FTOs) already operational and five more under development, taking the state's planned total to 10 as demand for aviation professionals grows. The existing FTOs have trained more than 5,200 aviation students and produced over 3,200 Commercial Pilot Licence holders, while more than 200 aspiring pilots are currently undergoing training, according to the Chief Minister's Office. Skynex Aero Pvt. Ltd. and Blue Ray Aviation Pvt. Ltd. operate at Mehsana, Vision Flying Training Institute and Gujarat Flying Club operate at Amreli, while Dunes Aviation Pvt. Ltd. functions at Bhavnagar Airport. Five more organisations are being developed at Mehsana, Amreli, Mandvi and Ankleshwar. Once completed, the network will be among India's

The growing ecosystem is expected to create jobs for instructors, maintenance engineers, dispatchers, operations and safety professionals.

Delhi HC stays FSSAI Campa energy label order

NEW DELHI

The Delhi High Court on Tuesday stayed Food Safety and Standards Authority of India directions requiring Reliance Consumer Products Ltd (RCPL) to remove the “Energy Drink” descriptor from its Campa Energy Drink – Gold Boost product. Justice Amit Mahajan stayed the June 30, 2026 FSSAI order and a July 17 communication directing food safety commissioners across States and Union Territories to enforce it. The company had challenged both directions before the High Court. The court granted interim protection after noting that FSSAI had issued the directions without first serving RCPL a show-cause notice or giving it an opportunity to present its case. The company argued that the action breached principles of natural justice, which require affected parties to receive a fair hearing before administrative decisions are taken. The stay will remain in force while the proceedings are pending. The dispute concerns the use of the term “Energy Drink” for beverages containing caffeine. FSSAI had issued its June 30 direction to manufacturers over descriptions used for certain high-caffeine beverages, following which RCPL approached the High Court to challenge the action concerning its Campa product. During the hearing, the court also questioned the regulator about the procedure followed before issuing the direction and observed that it was “never too late” for the authority to correct the issue. The matter is significant because other beverage companies have also raised similar challenges before the Delhi High Court against FSSAI directions concerning the “Energy Drink” descriptor. The court's interim order keeps the June 30 direction, July 17 communication and enforcement steps stayed while RCPL's challenge remains pending before it for the moment.

Woman attacked with acid after rejecting marriage

BALOD

A 22-year-old woman was attacked with acid in Chhattisgarh's Balod district on Monday evening, allegedly after she rejected a marriage proposal, police said. Two 20-year-old men have been arrested in connection with the attack. The accused were identified as Yash Kumar Sonkar and his school-time friend Karan Kunjam. Police said the woman, who was preparing for competitive examinations, was attacked while walking home after studying at a library. Her condition was reported to be stable, and she is undergoing treatment. Nearby residents heard her screams, rushed to help and informed her father, who is a policeman. Further investigation is underway into the incident and the alleged motive.

Gauhati University student death accused injured in police firing

GUWAHATI

Asif Ali, 26, the key accused in the death of Gauhati University student Nimisha Thakuria, was injured in police firing in Guwahati on Tuesday after allegedly attempting to escape from custody. Asif was admitted to Gauhati Medical College and Hospital with two bullet injuries near his right ankle. The accused was in eight-day police custody, which was scheduled to end on Tuesday, and was due to be produced before a court. Police alleged that he attempted to flee while in custody, prompting the firing. His claim that she died by suicide remains part of the investigation and has not been established as the official cause of death.

Rahul accuses Centre, CEC of undermining democracy

Rahul climbs atop barricades, takes centre stage of stir against CEC; claims Oppn was attempting to protect the Constitution.

NEW DELHI

The protest march by the Opposition MPs to Election Commission headquarters in here took an unusual turn on Tuesday when the Leaders of the Opposition (LoP) Rahul Gandhi and Congress MP Priyanka Gandhi Vadra climbed atop the barricades, demanding CEC Gyanesh Kumar's resignation.

Earlier, the police detained opposition lawmakers, including Rahul Gandhi and Priyanka, as they tried to make their way into the EC office.

The MPs marched from Parliament House complex towards the EC, but were stopped by police on Parli-ment Street, where they sat on a dharna demanding Gyanesh Kumar's resignation.

Opposition MPs carried cut-outs depicting Kumar in an RSS uniform and raised slogans, including "BJP hai CEC hai", "Vote chor, gaddi chhod" and "Democracy not for sale".

Rahul said the opposition was attempting to protect the Constitution and demanded that the police allow him to continue his protest.

In an X post, he said, "Gyanesh it's done bro. Time to resign". He accused PM Modi, Home Minister Amit Shah and CEC Gyanesh Kumar of undermining democracy.

CPI MP P Sandosh Kumar said opposition MPs were prevented from proceeding despite the presence of several security forces.

The protest is part of the Opposition's broader "Save Democracy" campaign against the Election Commission and the SIR exercise.

The controversy intensified after reports claimed that two Election Commissioners had raised objections during the SIR process, while the ECI maintained that its decisions were unanimous. The Opposition has also questioned

Yet another attempt to relaunch Rahul: BJP

The BJP on Tuesday slammed the I.N.D.I.A. bloc MPs' march to the Election Commission demanding CEC Gyanesh Kumar's resignation, claiming that it was yet another attempt by the Congress and its allies to create anarchy and relaunch Rahul Gandhi. Union Minister Shivraj Singh Chouhan said through this march, they are "venting their frustration" over their poll defeats by levelling baseless allegations against the constitutional bodies to malign their image.

‘Strong democracies built on dialogue, diverse views’

NEW DELHI

Lok Sabha Speaker Om Birla on Tuesday emphasised that strong democracies are built on dialogue, diverse viewpoints and meaningful public participation.

Speaking at the Silver Jubilee celebrations of the Goa Legislative Assembly building, Birla said democracy is strengthened when there is space for both agreement and disagreement, and when diverse perspectives are incorporated into the legislative process.

"India's democratic strength has been built on the ability of its institutions to accommodate diverse opinions and viewpoints", Birla said.

Referring to India's growing stature on the global stage, Birla said the country's democratic experience and commitment to constitutional values have strengthened its voice internationally.

"Under the leadership of Prime Minister Shri Narendra Modi, India is contributing to finding solutions to global challenges while drawing upon the civilisational ethos of "Vasudhaiva Kutumbakam," Birla said.

He said the true strength of democracy must ultimately be reflected in the way people's expectations and aspirations are translated into policies, laws and effective governance.

Birla also highlighted the special responsibility of elected representatives in smaller states such as Goa, where there is close interaction between representatives and citizens. He urged public representatives to remain sensitive to the aspirations, difficulties and challenges faced by their constituents and work towards resolving them promptly.

Stressing the role of technology in strengthening democratic engagement, Birla said it can significantly improve public understanding of legislative processes by enabling citizens to access information on rules, laws, policies, legislative debates and the work of committees.

He called for greater transparency and accessibility to deepen the connection between legislatures and the people.

Tribal students detained, taken out of Mumbai

MUMBAI

Tribal students who marched from Nashik to Mumbai demanding better facilities in schools and hostels were detained at the Maharashtra Congress headquarters and taken out of the city on Tuesday.

Around 200-300 students had been staying at Tilak Bhavan after police denied them permission to protest at Azad Maidan.

Their demands include an independent probe into the deaths of students at tribal schools, including three girls who died of snakebite at a school in Gadchiroli.

On Tuesday, police guarding Tilak Bhavan stopped the students from leaving as they prepared to depart. They were subsequently put on private buses and driven out of Mumbai.

Despite being taken out of Mumbai, they vowed to return to the city on October 25 to continue pressing their demands.

Rajnath launches Surya to strengthen navy reach

India launched its first indigenous fleet support ship, Surya, strengthening naval endurance and advancing the country's maritime self-reliance.

VISAKHAPATNAM

Defence Minister Rajnath Singh on Tuesday launched Surya, India's first indigenous fleet support ship, at Hindustan Shipyard Ltd in Visakhapatnam, marking a major step in a ₹19,000-crore programme to strengthen the Navy's reach and endurance.

Surya is the first of five fleet support ships being built for the Navy. Measuring 225 metres in length and 32 metres in width, the vessels will replenish warships at sea with fuel, water, ammunition and stores, allowing naval units to remain deployed for longer periods without returning to harbour. Hindustan Shipyard is expected to deliver Surya next year, followed by the remaining ships at intervals of about 10 months.

Singh also laid the keel of the fifth fleet support ship and inaugurated an upgraded slip-power," Singh said. He said the launch of Surya represented an achievement, while the keel laying and new infrastructure reflected growing capability.

The Navy currently operates four fleet support ships commissioned between 1996 and 2011 and requires additional vessels as its fleet expands and responsibilities in the Indian Ocean region increase.

Cabinet approves integrated authority for transport planning

NEW DELHI

The Union Cabinet on Tuesday approved the creation of an Integrated Transport and Logistics Authority (ITLA) to bring roads, railways, ports, aviation, waterways and urban mobility under a unified planning framework.

ITLA will prepare a National Transport Master Plan with a horizon of at least 10 years and assess short-term sectoral and annual plans against long-term requirements.

It will technically appraise government infrastructure projects costing Rs 500 crore or more, monitor their progress and conduct post-implementation assessments to measure whether investments deliver the intended benefits. Financial appraisal will continue through existing mechanisms.

Union Railway Minister Ashwini Vaishnaw said the authority would help infrastructure planning keep pace with rising demand.

The authority will establish a National Transport Data Repository bringing together information from GSTN e-way bills, FASTag, Vahan, railway systems, GPS-based platforms and urban traffic management systems. The government said integrated data would support freight-flow analysis, origin-destination studies, project monitoring and evidence-based planning.

The move builds on the Centre's multimodal infrastructure strategy, including PM GatiShakti and the National Logistics Policy.

Amit Shah to lead Seva Jyoti Yatra in Gurugram

GURUGRAM

Union home minister Amit Shah will attend the 'Seva Jyoti Yatra' in Gurugram on October 7 as the chief guest, as part of the nationwide Seva Sankalp Abhiyan. Haryana Chief Minister Nayab Singh Saini will preside over the programme, which begins at 10am at Maharana Pratap Swarn Jayanti Udyan, also known as Leisure Valley.

The event is expected to draw participants from Faridabad, Palwal, Nuh, Rewari and Hajaraj districts. Following the main programme, a torch march will be organised across the four assembly constituencies of Gurugram district as part of the campaign.

Gurugram deputy commissioner Uttam Singh reviewed preparations during a meeting with officials at the Mini Secretariat on Monday. Departments concerned were directed to coordinate closely to ensure smooth traffic movement and prevent inconvenience to residents and

Rijiju attacks Rahul Gandhi over Election Commission protest

NEW DELHI

Union Minister Kiren Rijiju on Tuesday launched a sharp attack on Congress leader Rahul Gandhi over the INDIA bloc's protest march towards the Election Commission in Delhi, accusing the opposition of spreading "anti-India" narratives and targeting constitutional institutions.

The remarks came as opposition leaders marched towards the Election Commission, where police stopped the protesters. Gandhi later staged a sit-in near the Commission's office and said he was protesting to protect democracy.

Rijiju criticised Gandhi's political approach and took a direct swipe at his family background, saying India had changed and that being born into a particular family did not automatically entitle anyone to become Prime Minister. "The country has changed. Just being born into a particular family does not mean you will become the Prime Minister," Rijiju said.

He accused the Congress of repeatedly questioning constitutional institutions and promoting narratives that, according to him, were against India's interests.

The minister said people no longer accepted the idea that political leadership was determined by family lineage. He argued that India was moving towards becoming a developed country and that political positions should be earned through public support and performance.

The INDIA bloc's protest was centred on concerns related to the Election Commission and electoral issues.

Gandhi remained at the protest site and said the opposition was standing up for democratic values. The Congress maintained that its protest was aimed at raising concerns about the functioning of electoral institutions.

RBSE EXAMS TWICE ANNUALLY

Rajasthan board to hold Class 10 exams twice

NEW DELHI

The Rajasthan Board of Secondary Education (RBSE) will conduct Class 10 board examinations twice a year from the 2026-27 academic session, giving students an additional opportunity to improve their performance and reducing examination pressure.

Under the revised system, the first examination will be

THE HIGHER SCORE COUNTS

FIRST EXAM	SECOND EXAM

compulsory for all Class 10 students and is expected to be held in February-March 2027. Students who qualify in the first examination will have the option of appearing for a second examination, expected to take place in May-June.

The second examination will allow students to improve their marks in up to three subjects. Students who pass the main examination can use the additional opportunity to improve their performance without having to wait for another academic year.

The final result will be prepared by considering the higher marks obtained in each subject across the two examinations. For instance, if a student scores 60 marks in a subject in the first examination and improves the score to 70 in the second, the final result will reflect the higher score of 70.

The new arrangement replaces the existing supplementary examination system and is intended to provide greater flexibility to students within the same academic year. The changes will apply from the 2026-27 session, with the first examination scheduled for the beginning of the new cycle.

India tablet shipments fall 4% as memory costs rise

NEW DELHI
Tablet shipments in India eased 3.8 per cent year-on-year in the second quarter of 2026 as brands began passing higher input costs to consumers, raising prices and prompting a shift toward higher-priced models, a report said on Tuesday. The report from Counterpoint Research said brands increased prices across portfolios and streamlined memory variants, lifting the average selling price by 15 per cent. The sub-Rs 20,000 segment, which has traditionally formed the backbone of India's tablet market, was most impacted by the memory price hike, declining 43 per cent YoY in Q2.

India's HPV vaccine gets WHO prequalification

NEW DELHI
Cervavac, India's first indigenously developed human papillomavirus (HPV) vaccine, has received prequalification from the World Health Organization (WHO), which makes it eligible for procurement by United Nations agencies and expands its potential global reach. The vaccine, which was developed by the Serum Institute of India (SII), had earlier received approval from the Drugs Controller General of India (DCGI) for domestic use. Cervavac is a quadrivalent, gender-neutral vaccine that can be administered to both girls and boys between the ages of nine and 26 years.

ServiceNow launches AI workflow factory

NEW DELHI
ServiceNow on Tuesday launched AI Workflow Factory and Autonomous Engineer, two new solutions aimed at helping companies identify where artificial intelligence can improve operations and deploy AI-powered workflows across their organisations. The announcement was made at the company's World Forum event in Mumbai, where ServiceNow said the new offerings are designed to address operational challenges caused by fragmented systems and legacy infrastructure. According to the company, enterprises can use AI Workflow Factory and Autonomous Engineer to automate and scale business processes more quickly while maintaining oversight through ServiceNow's AI Control Tower governance platform. "Customers in India and around the world are no longer asking whether AI can improve the business. They are asking how fast they can turn that improvement into measurable outcomes, safely and at scale," said Amit Zavery, President, Chief Operating Officer and Chief Product Officer at ServiceNow. AI Workflow Factory combines process analysis, workflow development and deployment tools into a continuous improvement model. ServiceNow said the platform allows businesses to automate tasks across departments while keeping human oversight over key decisions and outcomes.

DRDO tests indigenous HAPS at 21 km altitude

IT STAYED ABOVE 20 KM FOR OVER 30 MINUTES AND SUCCESSFULLY DEMONSTRATED SUSTAINED STRATOSPHERIC FLIGHT CAPABILITIES FOR FUTURE SURVEILLANCE MISSIONS.

NEW DELHI

The Defence Research and Development Organisation (DRDO) has successfully conducted a flight trial of its indigenously developed High-Altitude Platform System (HAPS), reaching an altitude of 21 kilometres and demonstrating its capability for long-endurance operations in the stratosphere. According to the Ministry of Defence, the experimental flight reached 21 km above mean sea level and remained at around 20 km for more than 30 minutes before being commanded to descend. The successful trial marks an important step in developing high-altitude, long-endurance aerial platforms for persistent surveillance, communication and monitoring applications. Operating in the stratosphere could allow HAPS to provide sustained coverage over large areas while complementing conventional airborne and satellite-based systems. During the flight, the platform continuously transmitted real-time video and vehicle performance data to the ground control station. It carried several instrumentation and control systems, including an inertial measurement

Cabinet clears ₹10K cr SME fund

NEW DELHI

The Union Cabinet, chaired by Prime Minister Narendra Modi, on Tuesday approved the Centre's commitment of ₹10,000 crore towards establishing the SME Growth Fund (SGF), aimed at providing growth-oriented capital to India's small and medium enterprises. The initiative seeks to bridge a structural financing gap faced by SMEs that require long-term risk capital to expand operations, adopt advanced technologies, increase manufacturing capacity and enter international markets. The fund will also consider businesses operating in industrial clusters across Tier-II and Tier-III cities, with the government expecting investments to encourage balanced regional industrial development, strengthen local supply chains and create quality employment opportunities. According to the government, long-term capital from the fund will help viable and scalable SMEs expand their businesses, invest in technology, undertake strategic investments, integrate into global value chains and improve

FSSAI tightens festive food safety checks

NEW DELHI

The Food Safety and Standards Authority of India (FSSAI) has directed food safety authorities across states and Union Territories to intensify surveillance, inspections and sampling during the upcoming Navratri and Diwali festive season to prevent the sale of adulterated, counterfeit and unsafe food products. In a post on X on Tuesday, the food regulator said festive demand for sweets, snacks, beverages, edible oils, milk and milk products requires stronger monitoring and enforcement measures. FSSAI has asked state food safety commissioners to ensure that designated officers, food safety officers and central food safety officers conduct inspections and collect samples at identified hotspots and sensitive locations. Particular attention has been directed towards milk and milk products, sweets, snacks and savouries, edible oils, beverages and ghee. The regulator said states can also identify other high-demand food items based on local consumption patterns during the festive period. It cited products such as kuttu atta and singhada atta as examples of region-specific foods that may require additional monitoring in northern and western parts of the country. FSSAI has also asked authorities to deploy Food Safety on Wheels units wherever available at major market places and other locations based on intelligence inputs. These mobile units will conduct on-the-spot testing, strengthen vigilance and create awareness among consumers about food safety. The regulator further instructed officials to update inspection, sampling and enforcement data in real time on the FoSCOS and FoSCORIS digital platforms.

Orient Cables hits lower circuit after blockbuster debut

MUMBAI

Orient Cables shares plunged 10 per cent to hit the lower circuit at Rs 364.50 on Tuesday, extending losses a day after a blockbuster stock market debut. While the stock remains significantly above its IPO issue price, it has shed nearly one-fifth of its value from the listing price as investors booked profits following the sharp listing gains. The stock had debuted at Rs 450 on the National Stock Exchange (NSE), reflecting a premium of around 65 per cent over its IPO issue price of Rs 272 per share. After a strong start, the stock closed its listing day at Rs 405. On Tuesday, selling pressure intensified, dragging the share price down to Rs 364.50. At this level, the stock was down 10 per cent from its previous close and nearly 19 per cent below its NSE listing price. Despite the correction, Orient Cables continues to trade about 34 per cent above its IPO issue price.

Orient Cables is a business-to-business (B2B) manufacturer focused on networking cables and passive networking equipment.

The company had launched its Rs 552-crore initial public offering between September 25 and September 29. The issue comprised a fresh issue of Rs 320 crore and an offer for sale of Rs 232 crore. The IPO was priced in the range of Rs 258-272 per share. Investor demand for the issue was exceptionally strong. The IPO was subscribed 97.28 times overall, with qualified institutional buyers (QIBs) bidding 192.68 times the shares reserved for them. The non-institutional investor (NII) portion was subscribed 121.90 times, while the retail investor category saw a subscription of 32.21 times.

Cabinet approves Integrated Transport & Logistics Authority

NEW DELHI

The Union Cabinet, chaired by Prime Minister Narendra Modi, on Tuesday approved the establishment of the Integrated Transport & Logistics Authority (ITLA), a special purpose vehicle that will oversee integrated planning, research, project appraisal and monitoring in the transportation and logistics sectors. The move is aimed at addressing long-standing challenges arising from fragmented planning and implementation across multiple transport ministries and agencies. The government believes that improved coordination and multimodal integration will enhance the efficiency, sustainability and effectiveness of infrastructure development across the country. The plan will cover major modes of transportation, including roads, railways, ports and shipping, civil aviation, inland waterways, coastal shipping, urban mobility and logistics. The authority will also review short-term sectoral plans and annual plans prepared by various transport ministries to ensure that they are aligned with the long-term national strategy. This is expected to encourage the development of integrated and multimodal transport infrastructure across the country. As part of its mandate, ITLA will undertake technical appraisals of central government transport and infrastructure projects with an estimated cost of Rs 500 crore or more.

PE inflows into Indian real estate jump 23% to $2.7 billion

NEW DELHI

Private equity inflows into Indian real estate saw a strong recovery with a surging 23 per cent year-on-year to $2.7 billion in H1 FY27 (April-September 2026), marking the strongest first half since H1 FY23, a report said on Tuesday. The report from ANAROCK Capital said the half-year inflows already account for about 63 per cent of the $4.3 billion invested in the whole of FY26, with 30 transactions recorded in H1 FY27 versus 22 a year earlier and the average deal size up 18 per cent to $91 million. The total PE investment in FY27 would reach nearly $4.8 billion, the highest in at least five years if H2 FY27 inflows match investments in corresponding period in the previous fiscal. "We expect the momentum to continue into the second half. Strong office leasing, rising demand for data centres and healthy hotel performance will keep institutional capital flowing," said Shobhit Agarwal, CEO, ANAROCK Capital. Agarwal noted that the recovery happened against an uncertain global backdrop which shows that India is now seen as a core, long-term allocation rather than an opportunistic bet. Domestic investors deployed about $1.3 billion across 24 deals - nearly six times the $220 million invested in H1 FY26 - and accounted for 48 per cent of total inflows.

CATASTROPHIC DELUGE

Floods drag Nepal growth forecast lower

KATHMANDU

The World Bank on Tuesday lowered Nepal's economic growth projection for fiscal year 2026-27 to 3.7% from its earlier estimate of 4.2%, citing the damaging impact of devastating floods that struck the Himalayan nation in August. In its latest Nepal Development Update, titled Building Back Differently for the Future, the World Bank said the floods are expected to weigh on economic activity through disruptions to energy, transportation, trade and tourism.

The energy sector, particularly hydropower, has emerged as the most significant channel of economic impact. The floods affected 12 hydropower projects, including seven operational facilities with a combined capacity of 256.1 MW and five projects under construction with a combined capacity of 395.02 MW. Damage to transmission infrastructure disrupted an additional 149.6 MW, taking the total affected generation and transmission capacity to about 430.7 MW. This represents around 10.6% of Nepal's installed hydropower and solar capacity in fiscal year 2025-26. Transportation and trade have also suffered because Nepal's domestic and international commerce is concentrated along a limited number of key corridors. The floods damaged communities and infrastructure along the Bhotekoshi and Trishuli river corridors. According to Nepal's National Disaster Risk Reduction and Management Authority, 1,455 people have been confirmed dead and 5,285 remain missing following the disaster. A Rapid Disaster Needs Assessment estimated physical damage at 274.48 billion Nepali rupees, while total losses and damages reached 408.28 billion rupees, highlighting the scale of the economic reconstruction challenge facing the country.

"Energy, particularly hydropower, is the most critical transmission channel through which the floods are expected to affect Nepal's economy."

Spain approves housing rules after election call

MADRID

Spain's government approved two new housing decrees featuring strict rent caps and temporary eviction bans. Prime Minister Pedro Sanchez defended the intervention, calling it necessary to protect vulnerable citizens from rampant real estate speculation. The move follows a parliamentary rejection that prompted Sanchez to call a snap election for November. Critics warn these rules will create legal uncertainty and slow down vital construction investments. Meanwhile, public protests over housing costs have surged across the country. The temporary measures will now face review by a reduced caretaker legislature.

New arrest made over UK airbase plot

LONDON

British counter-terrorism police arrested a 22-year-old man in London on suspicion of preparing terrorist acts. The arrest is tied to an ongoing security investigation surrounding the RAF Fairford airbase. Authorities took the suspect into custody in Westminster after searching a local property. This development follows previous arrests of six men in connection with the case. The security probe gained international attention after threats prompted the temporary removal of American bombers from the facility. Investigators confirmed that specialist teams are actively pursuing multiple lines of inquiry as the high-profile case continues.

Moscow drone attack leaves two dead

MOSCOW

A massive drone attack struck the Moscow region overnight, killing two people and injuring seven others. Ukrainian forces targeted the area with hundreds of flying drones. Local officials confirmed that dozens of homes and cars suffered heavy damage during the intense air raids. Military bloggers reported a huge fire at a major fuel storage hub, which supplies oil to local airports. Air defense teams shot down most of the incoming devices. Meanwhile, rescue workers continue clearing rubble and restoring lost power supplies to affected neighborhoods as tensions in the ongoing conflict remain high.

Russia reports 'no plague' in lab death

MOSCOW

Health authorities in Russia have confirmed that tests on individuals who came into contact with a deceased Siberian laboratory worker have come back clear of any plague infections. The announcement follows global concern sparked by the sudden death last week of a 28-year-old woman who worked at a specialized research facility in the Irkutsk region. Officials initially placed a local hospital under quarantine and isolated roughly 200 people as a precaution while investigating the cause of death, which was initially attributed to an unconfirmed form of pneumonia. The country's consumer safety and health watchdog stated that extensive medical testing found no dangerous microorganisms connected to the woman's laboratory work inside her body.

BRASILIA

Brazilian politics has witnessed a dramatic political twist as right-wing forces surged forward in a high-stakes weekend vote. Even though he was completely barred from running, former leader Jair Bolsonaro emerged as the undeniable force driving a major conservative wave across the country. From his enforced confinement under house arrest, the 71-year-old watched his eldest son secure a massive upset in the presidential first round against current leftist leader Luiz Inacio Lula da Silva. The surprising electoral outcome has completely upended political expectations, placing the conservative movement in a commanding position ahead of the decisive runoff vote later this month. Candidates running under the banner of the right-wing Liberal Party swept legislative races at every level. Beyond the presidential contest, voters handed victories to four other members of the prominent political family, including Senate seats for the former president's wife and another son, alongside lower house wins for two more relatives. Political experts noted that such a sweeping family triumph is unprecedented in modern democratic history. This sweeping legislative success has dramatically shifted power dynamics in the capital. The conservative party nearly doubled its presence in the upper house, achieving a historic high that hasn't been matched in decades. Analysts suggest this formidable legislative backing puts potential legal relief and amnesty for the elder Bolsonaro firmly on the political horizon as the new lawmakers prepare to take office. Meanwhile, the race for the presidency moves toward a passing along political insights derived partly from the pilfered BND material. While investigators have not publicly named the foreign services involved, initial reports from major German media outlets indicate that the case does not involve Russia. Both suspects were scheduled to appear before a judge at the Federal Court of Justice following coordinated raids across multiple regions, including Berlin, Bavaria, and North Rhine-Westphalia. Current BND President Martin Jaeger emphasized that the agency initiated thorough internal inquiries as soon as suspicions arose, declaring that internal security allows for no compromises. Legal experts and parliamentary watchdogs have warned that if proven, the breach could severely damage international trust and intelligence-sharing partnerships with allied nations.

Ex-German intelligence chief arrested for treason

BERLIN

In a development that has sent shockwaves through Germany's security establishment, former Federal Intelligence Service (BND) president August Hanning was arrested. Federal prosecutors allege that the 80-year-old former spymaster is strongly implicated in treasonous espionage, obtaining state secrets, and attempted treason. According to federal prosecutors, the investigation centers on a sprawling web of illicit information-sharing that spanned over a decade. Investigators claim that beginning around 2010, Hanning entered into an agreement with a former BND office manager—identified as Manfred D. under privacy guidelines—to continuously funnel classified intelligence. This principal co-suspect, who served as chief of staff to multiple successive BND presidents until March 2026, allegedly used his high-level access to supply Hanning with roughly 2,000 confidential documents. Many of these restricted files were earmarked strictly for internal use, including executive intelligence briefings and senior-level Chancellery security meetings. Authorities state that Hanning utilized the leaked intelligence to support private consulting work and allegedly drafted an analysis for an officer of an unidentified foreign intelligence service. Furthermore, prosecutors maintain that Hanning maintained close contact with a representative of another foreign spy agency,

Will Puigdemont's return shake up Spanish poll?

BARCELONA

Exile is finally coming to an end for one of Spain's most polarizing political figures. The nation's highest courts have cleared the path for a high-profile homecoming just as the country gears up for a tense snap election. The legal breakthrough arrived on Tuesday when Spain's Constitutional Court ruled that a landmark amnesty law must apply to Catalan separatists, specifically resolving disputes over past embezzlement charges. Following this crucial decision, the Supreme Court officially lifted the active arrest warrant for self-exiled former regional leader Carles Puigdemont. Puigdemont has lived abroad since fleeing to Belgium nearly a decade ago, following an unapproved 2017 independence referendum that severely tested the nation's constitutional unity. Although lower courts had previously argued that his financial charges disqualified him from blanket pardons, the new judicial ruling strips away those legal roadblocks, allowing him to step back onto native soil without facing immediate detention. The timing of this dramatic legal reversal introduces fresh unpredictability into Spanish politics. While public focus has largely shifted toward economic concerns, migration, and public security, the physical return of the separatist icon is expected to electrify political campaigns on both sides. Political analysts suggest that while the separatist movement has lost some of its prior momentum, Puigdemont's presence could dramatically shift voter sentiment. As traditional parties prepare for a fiercely contested electoral battle, the unexpected homecoming promises to reignite fierce debates over national sovereignty, justice, and the future governance of the country.

Landmine blast sparks escalating inter-Korean tensions

SEOUL

Tensions along the heavily fortified Korean border have escalated sharply after Pyongyang issued a stern warning to its southern neighbor regarding recent accusations over a landmine explosion. The diplomatic fallout stems from an incident on September 21, when two South Korean soldiers sustained severe injuries from an anti-personnel mine inside the Demilitarized Zone. A joint investigation conducted by Seoul and the United Nations Command concluded that the explosive device was recently planted by North Korean forces. Following these findings, the South Korean military demanded a formal apology and launched its own extensive mine-removal operations in the affected border sector. North Korea's Foreign Ministry strongly rejected the accusations through state media, dismissing the joint investigation as a fabricated farce designed to justify hostile political maneuvers. Pyongyang characterized Seoul's demands as a grave provocation and a direct violation of national sovereignty. State officials warned that any perceived intrusion across the border—even by a single millimeter—would trigger an immediate and forceful military response from border guard units. This aggressive rhetoric echoes previous statements from high-ranking officials in Pyongyang, who have consistently dismissed demands for accountability. Relations between the two nations have deteriorated significantly since North Korea formally designated the South as a hostile state, abandoning decades of reunification goals and cutting off official channels of communication. Military analysts warn that the exchange of fiery warnings and ongoing fortifications along the frontier heighten the risk of accidental clashes. As both sides dig in their heels, the technically active state of war between the neighboring nations continues to cast a shadow over regional security and stability.

Le Pen targets €140 billion spending cuts

PARIS

Far-right leader Marine Le Pen has significantly raised her proposed spending cuts in a bid to reassure jittery financial markets ahead of next year's high-stakes presidential race. Addressing journalists, Le Pen announced plans to slash net spending by 140 billion euros by 2032. This figure marks a sharp increase from her previous target of 125 billion euros. The aggressive fiscal adjustment aims to bring France's budget deficit down to the European Union limit of 3% of economic output by 2030, easing massive pressure on national borrowing costs. France has recently experienced a surge in bond yields to levels not seen since the early 2000s. Amid mounting political uncertainty and strained public finances, financial markets have reacted nervously to the country's economic trajectory. Current government leaders have introduced their own savings measures, but divided parliamentary opposition continues to complicate the path forward. Le Pen stated that the majority of her proposed savings would be implemented within the first three years of a potential presidency by streamlining government operations. Furthermore, she proposed enshrining strict fiscal discipline into the constitution via a referendum. This "golden rule" would legally mandate annual deficit reductions until national debt significantly decreases. While these new fiscal measures caused a brief dip in bond yields during her speech, winning over cautious business leaders remains a major hurdle. Critics remain wary of her past eurosceptic stances and proposed changes to retirement policies.

COST OF LIVING CLASH

Ohio midterm poll begin with early voting

MEDINA

Voters in Ohio lined up to kick off early voting in a mid-term election that could reshape the balance of power in Washington. With crucial congressional and Senate seats hanging in the balance, the Midwestern state has quickly become a primary battleground. Citizens head to the polls amid widespread public frustration over cost-of-living pressures. Stubborn inflation has pushed food, energy, and housing prices higher, deeply affecting everyday household budgets. Additionally, voter anxiety persists regarding ongoing foreign conflicts, leaving many concerned about long-term stability as they evaluate candidates from both major political parties. All eyes are locked on a high-stakes special election for the United States Senate. Former Democratic Senator Sherrod Brown is staging a political comeback attempt, challenging Republican Senator Jon Husted in a fiercely contested race. Analysts currently rank the matchup as a statistical toss-up, making it one of the most expensive and closely watched contests nationwide. As Democrats look to chip away at the existing Senate majority. At the same time, two vital races for the House of Representatives could prove decisive for control of the lower chamber, where the ruling party maintains a razor-thin advantage. In one closely watched district, a Republican incumbent facing local scrutiny is defending his seat against an energetic labor union challenger.

KEY ELECTION HIGHLIGHTS

Senate Showdown: Former Democratic Senator Sherrod Brown is challenging Republican Jon Husted in a high-cost special election race.

Narrow Majorities: Republicans currently hold a slim 53-47 Senate edge and a tight 218-214 margin in the House.

Toss-Up Districts: Two key Ohio House races—involving Representative Max Miller and veteran lawmaker Marcy Kaptur—are rated as tight toss-ups.

Voter Issues: Inflationary pressures, rising household expenses, and foreign policy concerns are driving voter turnout.

As early ballots begin pouring in, both parties are pouring resources into the state to rally their bases and win over independent voters. The outcome in Ohio will serve as a major bellwether for the upcoming November elections, signaling whether national discontent will translate into a significant shift in congressional leadership.

VVS Laxman hails Iyer's leadership at Asian Games

VVS LAXMAN LAUDED SKIPPER SHREYAS IYER AS INDIA DEFEATED PAKISTAN BY 19 RUNS TO RETAIN ASIAN GAMES GOLD.

NEW DELHI

India head coach for the Asian Games, VVS Laxman, has praised skipper Shreyas Iyer for his leadership during the team's successful campaign at the 2026 Asian Games, describing him as a "player's captain" who makes teammates comfortable and leads by example.

India defeated Pakistan by 19 runs in the men's cricket final at Korogi Sports Park to retain the Asian Games gold medal. Abhishek Sharma's 61 off 28 balls and Tilak Varma's unbeaten 51 off 22 helped India post 211 for six. Pakistan responded strongly through Hasan Nawaz's 96 off 51 balls but finished on 192 for six.

Laxman said praised the skipper's preparation, tactical awareness and understanding of individual players. According to Laxman, Iyer studies the opposition's strengths and weaknesses before team meetings and places strong emphasis on fitness.

"He is a player's captain,"

Laxman said, adding that Iyer leads both with the bat and on the field. He also described the 31-year-old as tactically sharp and capable of staying ahead of opponents in the fast-paced T20 format.

Laxman identified India's adaptability as another major factor behind their success. The team faced difficult weather, travel problems and limited practice opportunities after arriving in Japan. Despite these challenges, the

The former India batter said the combined efforts of the selection committee, team management, Centre of Excellence and BCCI were helping nurture future talent. He added that India had a strong pool of players capable of contributing over the next five to 10 years.

LPU athletes drive India's Asian Games gold haul

NEW DELHI

Athletes from Lovely Professional University (LPU) played a major role in India's successful campaign at the 2026 Asian Games in Aichi-Nagoya, Japan, contributing significantly to the country's gold-medal tally. LPU athletes accounted for four of India's 21 gold medals, or about 19 per cent of the total, while several others won silver and bronze medals.

LPU had sent 58 Indian athletes and students to the continental event across 15 sports. Their performances included gold-medal-winning efforts in shooting, with Kamaljeet, Sahil Rajesh Jadhav and Chikitha Taniparthi among the university's successful athletes. The performances added to LPU's growing presence in India's international sporting programme.

Kamaljeet won gold in the 10m air pistol mixed team event, while Jadhav and Taniparthi were part of India's gold-winning archery performances. LPU's athletes also made an impact in other disciplines. Rowers Satnam Singh and Salman Khan added a bronze medal in the men's double sculls. Their result was notable as India secured its first Asian Games medal in the event. Overall, LPU student-athletes produced medal-winning performances across shooting, archery and rowing during the Games. India concluded the Asian Games campaign with 85 medals, including 21 gold, 27 silver and 37 bronze, finishing fourth in the overall standings. The country's gold medals came from several sports, including cricket, hockey, kabaddi, shooting, archery, athletics, boxing, wrestling and golf.

Govindaraj welcomes enhanced cash awards for Asian Games medallists

BENGALURU

The Karnataka Government has substantially increased cash awards for sportspersons who win medals at the Asian Games, a move welcomed by Karnataka Olympic Association (KOA) President and MLC Dr. K. Govindaraj.

Under the revised scheme, gold medallists will receive ₹1 crore, while silver and bronze medallists will get ₹75 lakh and ₹50 lakh respectively. Earlier, the awards were ₹35 lakh for gold, ₹25 lakh for silver and ₹15 lakh for bronze.

Govindaraj thanked Chief Minister D.K. Shivakumar and Deputy Chief Minister and Sports Minister Dr. G. Parameshwara for the decision, saying the enhanced incentives would encourage Karnataka athletes to perform better at international events.

"I am happy that the government has revised the prize money. It will encourage sportspersons and also increase their responsibility. I thank the government for this decision," Govindaraj said.

The government has also sanctioned ₹5 lakh each for 20 Karnataka athletes who participated in the Asian Games.

Govindaraj also welcomed the decision to provide direct recruitment to Group-B posts for Asian Games and Commonwealth Games medal winners.

Alexandrova stuns Noskova to reach Beijing quarterfinals

BEIJING

Russia's Ekaterina Alexandrova produced a dominant performance to upset fifth-seeded Czech player Linda Noskova 6-2, 6-2 in the China Open round of 16 on Tuesday. The victory sent Alexandrova into the quarterfinals in Beijing for the first time and set up an all-Russian clash with Mirra Andreeva. The 19th-seeded Alexandrova did not drop her serve during the match and controlled the contest against Noskova, the reigning Wimbledon champion. The victory was also the Russian's 22nd career win against a top-10 player.

At 31, Alexandrova has become the oldest first-time quarterfinalist at the China Open. She is also the third-oldest player to reach the tournament's last eight, behind Serena Williams and Shuai Zhang. The win secured Alexandrova's seventh WTA 1000 quarterfinal appearance and her second of the season, following her run in Toronto. She will now face compatriot Andreeva for a place in the semifinals.

Andreeva had earlier booked her quarter-final spot with a convincing 6-2, 6-2 victory over Daria Snigur in the round of 16. The young Russian impressed with her serving and defensive play against the aggressive Ukrainian.

Harmanpreet Kaur steps down as India captain across all formats

NEW DELHI

India women's cricket team captain Harmanpreet Kaur on Tuesday stepped down from captaincy across all three formats, bringing an end to her long tenure as the leader of the national side. She said she was ready to return to playing simply for her love of the game. Harmanpreet's announcement came after a BCCI review meeting in Guwahati to assess the team's performance and direction over the past few months. BCCI secretary Devajit Saikia chaired the meeting, which was attended by Harmanpreet, vice-captain Smriti Mandhana and head coach Amol Muzumdar.

The 37-year-old had led India's T20 team for nearly a decade after taking over as captain in 2016. She became the ODI captain in 2022 before being appointed the all-format leader in 2023.

"Today, I step down as captain of the Indian Women's Cricket Team across all formats," Harmanpreet wrote on Instagram. Describing the decision as difficult, she said her captaincy had involved years of memories, emotions, sacrifices and unforgettable moments. Harmanpreet leaves the leadership role after overseeing some of India women's cricket team's notable achievements. Under her captaincy, India won its maiden ODI World Cup in November last year. The team also secured a second consecutive Asian Games gold medal in the T20 format.

Reflecting on her decision, Harmanpreet said she was stepping down with a heart full of emotions but also with peace. She expressed confidence in the current team and said she believed the players were in a good place.

"Now, I'm ready to play for the love of the game again. Captaincy ends. The journey continues," she said. The BCCI is now expected to decide on Harmanpreet's successor. Her departure from the captaincy marks the beginning of a new leadership phase for Indian women's cricket, while she is set to continue contributing to the team as a player.

Ganguly appointed Delhi Capitals head coach

NEW DELHI

Former India captain Sourav Ganguly has been appointed as the head coach of Delhi Capitals ahead of the 2027 Indian Premier League (IPL) season.

Ganguly replaces Hemang Badani, who was in charge when the Capitals failed to qualify for the playoffs in the last two seasons.

Ganguly, one of Indian cricket's most prominent figures, returns to a coaching role with the franchise as Delhi look to rebuild their campaign and challenge for a place in the playoffs. His appointment brings considerable experience from his playing and administrative career in Indian cricket.

The Delhi Capitals management will hope that Ganguly's leadership can help the team address its recent struggles and improve its performances in the upcoming season.

The franchise has endured disappointing results over the past two IPL editions, missing out on the playoffs under Badani.

Ganguly has previously been associated with the Delhi Capitals setup and has held key leadership responsibilities in Indian cricket after ending his playing career. His experience in managing players and understanding the demands of top-level cricket is expected to be important as the franchise prepares for the 2027 season.

The appointment comes as IPL teams begin planning their squads and support staff for the next edition. Delhi Capitals will now look to work with Ganguly on strengthening their approach and building a competitive side. The 2027 IPL will provide Ganguly with an opportunity to make an immediate impact in his new role. The Capitals will aim to end their recent playoff drought and produce a stronger campaign under their new head coach.

India seek progress proof against Uruguay challenge

KOLKATA

India will look to demonstrate their progress when they take on Uruguay in an international friendly, facing another strong opponent in their latest test. The match offers the Indian team an opportunity to measure its development against a side with a strong international pedigree.

Uruguay, coached by former India head coach Jorge Forlan, are expected to provide a formidable challenge. The visitors have quality players and considerable experience at the highest level, making the contest an important test for the Indian squad.

India have been working to improve their performances and build greater consistency in international football. The friendly against Uruguay will give the players a chance to put those improvements into practice against a physically strong and technically capable opponent.

The Indian players are expected to approach the match with confidence while remaining aware of the quality of their opponents. The coaching staff will also be keen to assess the team's organisation, defensive discipline and ability to create opportunities against a well-drilled Uruguay side.

Forlan's presence adds an interesting dimension to the contest, given his previous association with Indian football. His knowledge of the Indian game could also help Uruguay prepare effectively for the match.

For India, the result will be important, but the performance will offer a clearer indication of how far the team has progressed. Players will be keen to make an impression against a high-profile opponent and strengthen their claims for regular places in the national side.

India among 7 bidders for 2036 Olympics

LAUSANNE

India is among seven countries that have expressed interest in hosting the 2036 Olympic Games, the International Olympic Committee (IOC) said on Tuesday. Germany, Hungary, Qatar, South Africa, South Korea and Türkiye are the other countries currently in continuous dialogue with the IOC over their bids.

The interested countries have been invited to present their hosting projects to the IOC's Future Host Commission in November. The proposals will be assessed on several technical and operational factors before the process moves towards the selection of a preferred host.

According to the IOC, the assessment will consider the venue master plan, athlete experience, funding strategy and the level of political and public support. The commission will also examine the countries' ability to deliver the Games and their plans for creating long-term benefits for host communities after the Olympics.

The IOC said no additional interested parties would be considered for the 2036 Games after October 31. This sets a deadline for countries seeking to enter the current stage of the host selection process.

India submitted its Expression of Interest to host the 2036 Olympics in 2024. The country has been pursuing the bid as part of its broader ambition to stage the world's biggest sporting event. The selection process was later halted following the appointment of new IOC President Kirsty Coventry. She said fresh feedback would be sought from IOC members with the aim of streamlining the process.

The preferred hosts are expected to be identified in 2028, while the final decision on the host city for the 2036 Olympics is expected around the middle of 2029.
