B'LURU CABBIE GOES ON A KILLING SPREE, NABBED

Eliminates wife, 6 members of her family over a period of 10-20 days; dumps bodies

BENGALURU

In a shocking murder spree in Bengaluru, a 52-year-old cab driver allegedly killed his wife and six members of her family, including a seven-year-old boy, over a prolonged domestic dispute.

The police on Friday arrested the accused, Indushekhar. According to them, the killings took place over a period of one week at the accused's home in Bengaluru's Rajajinagar.

Indushekhar allegedly dumped the bodies at different locations, including Nandi Hills in Chikkaballapur district and confessed to the murders during interrogation.

The deceased have been identified as his wife Sunitha, mother-in-law Roopavathi, brothers-in-law Shivakumar and Shankar, their wives Divya and Nalini, and seven-year-old nephew Puneeth.

While the body of seven-year-old Puneeth has been recovered near Nandi Hills, a search is underway for the remaining six.

Addressing the media on Friday, Bengaluru Police Commissioner Seemant Kumar Singh said Indushekar murdered his wife Sunitha and six members of her family over a span of 15-20 days, allegedly luring them one by one before murdering them. A missing person's complaint was only lodged at Srirampura police station on November 3, triggering an investigation.

As per sources, Indushekar had frequent disputes with his wife Sunitha, whom he married about 20 years ago, over her frequent visits to her parental home.

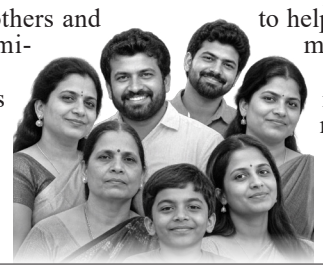

Despite attempts by family members to reconcile the couple, their differences persisted. He allegedly grew angry over the support Sunitha received from her mother and brothers and decided to eliminate her family.

Police sources said Shekhar first allegedly murdered Sunitha using a grinding stone, wrapped her body in cloth and dumped it near Nandi Hills. He subsequently switched off her mobile phone and told neighbours that she had gone on a trip to avoid suspicion.

The following day, he allegedly invited his brothers-in-law, Shivakumar and Shankar, to his house for a party and killed them using the grinding stone. He subsequently allegedly murdered their wives, Divya and Nalini, his mother-in-law Roopavathi and Shivakumar's seven-year-old son Puneeth, sources said.

The incident came to light after Nalini's mother lodged a missing-person complaint at Srirampura police station. During the investigation, police examined the missing persons' details, zeroed in on Indushekhar and took him into custody two days ago. His questioning reportedly led to the confession to the seven murders.The accused allegedly used chemicals to clean the house and remove bloodstains after the killings.

Police also recovered the grinding stone allegedly used to commit the crime and the car used to transport the bodies. The accused has been taken to the suspected locations to help recover the remaining bodies.

The Srirampura and Rajajinagar police are conducting parallel investigations into the case.

Cops probe daughter's role

Bengaluru police on Friday revealed that the minor daughter of the accused, Indushekhar, may have assisted him at every stage of the killings and the subsequent disposal of the bodies. Investigators are currently questioning her to establish exact role in the case.

'Saw him dump sacks': Minor boy 'tells' cops

The account of a 13-year-old boy has emerged as a crucial lead in the investigation into the alleged murder of seven members of a family in Bengaluru, with the police relying on his statements to trace where the bodies were dumped.

As per the police, the boy, who is the son of victims Shankar and Nalini, said he accompanied his uncle and witnessed him disposing of gunny bags at isolatawait until there were no people or vehicles around before dumping the bags. He reportedly recalled witnessing the disposal of four such bags. The boy also allegedly told the police that his uncle retained the mobile phones of his wife's family members. The police suspect that Indushekar may have planned to kill the 13-year-old as well. However, he was rescued by the police.

K'taka seeks ₹22,000 crore drought relief from Centre

Seeks appointments with Modi, Shah

BENGALURU

Karnataka has sought around Rs 22,000 crore in drought relief from the Centre under the NDRF norms, against an estimated total crop loss of Rs 62,000 crore, Deputy Chief Minister G Parameshwara said on Friday.

Speaking to reporters, he said the state has submitted three memoranda to the Centre seeking compensation for drought-related crop losses, besides seeking appointments with Prime Minister Narendra Modi, Union Home Minister Amit Shah and Union Agriculture Minister Shivraj Singh Chouhan to present its case personally.

Ready to take all-party delegation to Delhi

Parameshwara, who also holds the Revenue portfolio, said the government was prepared to lead an all-party delegation to New Delhi if it granted the appointments. "If the appointments are granted, we will go with an all-party delegation. If we are not given time, we have decided to meet the ministers under the leadership of the Chief Minister (DK Shivakumar) and submit our request."

Clarifying the compensation demand, he said the estimated drought-related crop loss was around Rs 62,000 crore, but the state could not seek the entire amount from the Centre. "Based on the NDRF guidelines, the state has calculated its eligible requirement and sought around Rs 22,000 crore," he said.

On relief for drought-hit farmers, Parameshwara said the government had released Rs 1,250 crore towards the first instalment of Rs 2,500 per farmer, which was being transferred directly to beneficiaries' bank accounts through Direct Benefit Transfer. Over three lakh farmers in Yadgir district had already received the relief amount, he said.

Asked whether the government would meet the PM during his proposed visit to Karnataka, he said it had sought a separate appointment to discuss the state's drought situation. "We expect the PMO to officially give us time. If an appointment is granted in New Delhi, we will go there and explain the drought situation and the need for relief. If we are asked to meet him in Mysuru, we will meet him there and submit our request."

Around 50 lakh farmers had suffered crop losses across 67 lakh acres due to drought, he said, adding that the government had to weigh the cost of Dearness Allowance and other benefits for lakhs of employees. "Decisions are being taken by considering the government's revenue and available resources, while ensuring justice to all sections," he said.

On the financial implications of recent government decisions, he said Karnataka's revenue position was better than that of the previous year, with encouraging collections from commercial taxes, excise, and stamps and registration.

Indian rupee hits six-months high

Mumbai: The Indian rupee strengthened past 94 per dollar on Friday (November 6) regaining appeal among emerging-market currencies after spending much of the year in the doldrums, and also posted its best week in three weeks.

EC gives fresh chance to voters excluded from draft SIR rolls

NEW DELHI

The Election Commission on Friday gave a fresh chance to electors of seven states who were marked as Absent, Shifted, Dead and Duplicate (ASDD), and whose names could not be included in the draft rolls during the ongoing Special Intensive Revision (SIR) exercise there.

The EC wrote to the chief electoral officers of Delhi, Maharashtra, Haryana, Andhra Pradesh, Jharkhand, Telangana and Nagaland on November 6, asking them to facilitate the inclusion of such electors in the final rolls.

The decision covers those who were issued enumeration forms but whose forms were not received back, resulting in their exclusion from the draft.

It essentially gives a second chance to such people in states where the SIR is on at present.

The Opposition has been accusing the EC of deleting the names of crores of eligible citizens from the electoral rolls at the behest of the BJP. The poll authority has defended the revision, citing its validation by the Supreme Court, while the BJP has said the Congress-led Opposition is merely a sore loser.

Special measures

The commission has directed officials to provide fresh enumeration forms to these electors and make all possible efforts to contact them through Booth Level Officers (BLOs), including house-to-house visits, WhatsApp, e-mail and SMS.

Booth-wise lists of such electors, along with reasons for their exclusion so far, will be displayed at polling stations and designated local government offices once again, says the order. The lists will also be uploaded on the websites of the respective chief electoral officers.

The EC said applications would be scrutinised by Electoral Registration Officers under Rule 21(1) of the Registration of Electors Rules, 1960.

Accepted applications will be kept separately for inclusion in the final electoral roll, with the electors retaining their previous EPIC numbers.

'GREEN CRACKERS NOT ALWAYS GREEN'

'Crackerless Diwali must be people's movement, not a court order'

NEW DELHI

Clean air initiatives during Diwali and other festivals must transform into a "people's movement" and controlling pollution during such festivals cannot be achieved solely through judicial decrees and police deployment, the Supreme Court said on Friday.

Hence, it urged the government in Delhi and other authorities to ensure active involvement of local municipal councillors to urge citizens against bursting polluting firecrackers during the Diwali.

A Bench headed by Chief Justice of India Surya Kant and Justices Joymalya Bagchi and V Mohana remarked that excessive judicial interventions often trigger higher non-compliance. "The more orders the Court passes, the more violations there may be. That is the tendency. Involve local councillors. Ask them to appeal to people to ensure that their Diwali celebrations do not contribute to pollution. It should become a people's movement," the CJI observed.

The remarks were made during the hearing of the case titled In Re: Curbing Air Pollution in the National Capital Region - Regulatory and Policy Framework, Air Quality Governance and Other Ancillary Issues, addressing the worsening air quality in Delhi-NCR ahead of the winter season. During the proceedings, the Amicus Curiae pointed out that physical policing has practical limits and the state "cannot have one police officer in every house."

Senior Advocate Aparajita Singh, also assisting the Court as Amicus Curiae, raised concerns over on-ground enforcement, pointing out that vendors exploit permissions granted for green crackers by displaying green boxes at kiosks while clandestinely selling banned conventional firecrackers inside the shops.

> The more orders the Court passes, the more violations there may be. That is the tendency.
> - Supreme Court

Highlighting the acute health risks to younger populations, Singh cited a 2012 Central Pollution Control Board study, which revealed reduced lung function in 43.5% of Delhi schoolchildren compared to children outside the capital.

One of the lawyers appearing in the matter also urged the Bench to recalibrate the Graded Response Action Plan to treat school restrictions independently and trigger protective measures at earlier pollution stages.

Additional Solicitor General Aishwarya Bhati, appearing for the government, concurred with the need for heightened awareness campaigns and placed on record a sector-wise compliance chart compiled from NCR States covering construction dust, municipal waste burning, vehicular emissions, and industrial activity.

The Amicus submitted that states tend to act swiftly only when the apex court directly seeks compliance reports or summons top bureaucrats, noting that comprehensive notes segregating airshed management, vehicular pollution, and industrial emissions have been finalized for a full hearing.

TOP COURT'S OBSERVATIONS

- Limits of judicial orders: Excessive court orders may lead to non-compliance rather than solving pollution.
- Multiple causes of pollution: Traffic, industrial emissions and stubble burning also contribute to Delhi's poor air quality.
- Public participation: Delhi govt should involve municipal councillors to encourage people to avoid polluting firecrackers.
- Avoid blaming the poor: Poor people and seasonal workers should not be unfairly held responsible for pollution.
- Enforcement challenges: Police cannot monitor every household, and banned crackers are reportedly sold illegally as green crackers.
- Traditional celebrations: Court highlighted the excessive commercialisation of festivals and encouraged a return to traditional and responsible customs.

2. One source: choose good study material and revise it repeatedly
3. Notes: prepare concise notes for the final revision

At the inauguration of the KAS preliminary mock test in Mysuru on Friday

CH NEWS, MYSURU

Interest, time management, risk management and an appropriate strategy are crucial to achieving success in competitive examinations, said Kalpashree C.R., Chief Administrative Officer of the Cauvery Neeravari Nigam Limited.

She was speaking after inaugurating the second paper of the fourth mock test for the Karnataka Administrative Service (KAS) preliminary examination, organised by the City Central Library in association with the Jnanagangothri Competitive Examination Training Centre, Bengaluru, in Mysuru on Friday.

Kalpashree advised candidates to identify their strengths and weaknesses and prepare a study plan accordingly. They need to give equal importance to different subjects while prioritising the revision of topics already studied. Selecting reliable sources of information for preparation is essential. Instead of referring to multiple sources, candidates should choose good study material and revise it repeatedly to gain clarity and command over the subjects. Candidates should systematically prepare important topics, study materials, textbooks and personal notes required for the preliminary examination. Preparing concise notes would help them during the final stage of revision, she added.

The CAO advised aspirants to restrict unnecessary mobile phone usage and utilise their study time effectively. Group discussions with fellow candidates would help improve their understanding of subjects and expose them to different perspectives.

Continuous hard work, an appropriate strategy, self-confidence and disciplined preparation are the key to success in competitive examinations. The candidates must face the examinations confidently and achieve their goals, she said.

City Central Library Deputy Director Manjunath B. briefed the gathering about the National Library Week celebrations scheduled to be held from November 14 to 20.

He invited library readers, competitive examination aspirants and members of the public to participate in the various programmes organised as part of the week-long celebrations. Mother tongue is essential to connect with culture and art: H.V. Rajeev

CH NEWS, MYSURU

Mother tongue plays a vital role in connecting people with their culture and art, said former Mysuru Development Authority (MDA) chairman and KPCC member H.V. Rajeev.

> Loving Kannada did not mean hating other languages

At the Kannada Rajyotsava celebrations at Pramati Hill View Academy

Presiding over the Kannada Rajyotsava celebrations held at Pramati Hill View Academy on Udayaravi Road in Kuvempunagar on Friday, he said the dance drama on Sangolli Rayanna had touched the hearts of all the children and helped the younger generation understand the significance of the freedom struggle.

He expressed concern that today's youth appeared to believe that Kannada had no connection with their lives and that English alone could provide them with livelihood opportunities. However, the beauty and joy of one's mother tongue were incomparable.

Those who move abroad in search of livelihood realise the power and importance of their mother tongue when they return home, he noted.

Warning that a language which had existed for thousands of years should not disappear within a few centuries, Rajeev said that if people stopped using Kannada, the situation could become similar to that of Kannadigas in Ooty, Tamil Nadu, who had forgotten the Kannada script and whose language had gradually evolved into a blend of Tamil and Kannada. Losing linguistic ties was akin to losing relationships, he said. Loving Kannada did not mean hating other languages. People must preserve and promote their land and language, and the younger generation should take conscious steps in this direction.

Referring to employment opportunities in Karnataka, he said nearly 80 per cent of jobs in the State were still available to Kannadigas. He urged the youth to develop a greater love for Kannada.

Senior journalist Amshi Prasanna Kumar was the chief guest. Treasurer S. Phaniraj, PU College Principal and Academic Officer C.S. Sudarshan, and Headmistress V.R. Jarija were present. Prizes were distributed to the winners of a quiz competition.

Students presented group singing, an introduction to Kannada language and culture, Bharatanatyam, a coastal folk dance, Yakshagana, a dance drama on Sangolli Rayanna and a dance performance to the Kannada song 'Barisu Kannada Dimdimava'. Teachers also presented a group song.

Neha Bora's remarks on priests condemnable: Vikram Iyengar

CH NEWS, MYSURU

Vikram Iyengar, general secretary of the Mysuru District Brahmin Youth Forum, has strongly condemned the alleged derogatory remarks made by AISA president Neha Bora against the Brahmin community and priests.

Iyengar said caste-based insults could not be considered a benchmark of progressiveness. While those committing crimes such as rape and atrocities against women must be punished severely in accordance with the law, it was unjust to hold an entire community responsible for the mistakes of a few individuals or to insult religion and culture, he said.

He asserted that spreading caste hatred in the name of freedom of expression could not be tolerated. Maintaining equality and harmony in society was the responsibility of everyone, he added.

Iyengar demanded that Neha Bora immediately withdraw her remarks and apologise to the Brahmin community. He warned that a democratic protest would be launched if she failed to apologise.

Congress fears Modi becoming PM for a fourth consecutive term: Vijayendra

CH NEWS, MYSURU

BJP State President B.Y. Vijayendra alleged that the Congress is apprehensive about Narendra Modi becoming Prime Minister for a fourth consecutive term and is attempting to create anarchy in the country to destabilise the NDA government.

Addressing the 'Save Democracy, Eradicate Anarchy' padayatra in Mysuru on Friday, Vijayendra said Rahul Gandhi's dream of becoming Prime Minister would never materialise. He said the Congress leader was unable to digest India's transformation into a major global power under Modi's leadership.

The padayatra was inaugurated after offering floral tributes to the statue of Dr. B.R. Ambedkar.

Vijayendra accused the Congress and the INDIA bloc of conspiring to bring down the NDA government by creating confusion and instigating youth to take to the streets. He said India had witnessed significant development, the eradication of terrorism and Naxalism, and a peaceful environment under Modi's leadership.

Vijayendra called the State Government anti-poor, anti-farmer, anti-youth and anti-Hindu

Referring to a remark by Jharkhand Minister Ansari that Lok Sabha Opposition Leader Rahul Gandhi could mobilise 40 lakh people to set the country on fire if he wished, he said the campaign was being organised against those allegedly harbouring such anarchic intentions.

Vijayendra criticised the Congress government in Karnataka for increasing the prices of milk and curd during Dasara and Deepavali. He said people were finding it difficult to celebrate festivals such as Ganesh Chaturthi, Dasara and Deepavali amid rising prices.

BJP leaders and workers at the 'Save Democracy, Eradicate Anarchy' padayatra in Mysuru on Friday

Describing the government as anti-poor, anti-farmer, anti-youth and anti-Hindu, he appealed to people to work towards its removal.

MLC and Opposition Chief Whip in the State Legislative Council N. Ravikumar accused the State Government of unleashing a price-hike burden on the people, and sarcastically described the milk price hike as a Dasara gift and the bus fare hike as a Deepavali present. He said the government had emptied the public treasury and the opposition would continue its struggle until the government was ousted.

'INDIA bloc conspiring to create anarchy'

Mysuru-Kodagu MP Yaduveer Krishnadatta Chamaraja Wadiyar alleged that the INDIA bloc was attempting to undermine the Constitution and create anarchy. He said 13 crore names had been removed from electoral rolls during the Special Intensive Revision (SIR), including those of deceased persons, duplicate voters and people who had shifted residences. Despite the availability of clear information, the opposition was allegedly creating unnecessary controversy.

HDK rejects all-party drought delegation

Union Minister H.D. Kumaraswamy criticized the state's drought relief efforts, dismissing calls for an all-party Delhi delegation.

CH NEWS, BENGALURU

Political friction between state administrations and central authorities frequently intensifies during times of natural calamities, centering around resource allocation, disaster relief management, and administrative protocols.

A fresh political dispute has erupted in the region following sharp comments from a senior central minister regarding the state government's approach to securing financial assistance for drought-affected areas.

Union Minister H.D. Kumaraswamy has strongly criticized the state administration, declaring that there is no historical precedent or administrative necessity for taking an all-party political delegation to the Union Government to seek drought relief funds.

Addressing media representatives in Bengaluru, Kumaraswamy responded directly to recent remarks made by Deputy Chief Minister G. Parameshwara, who had publicly accused opposition parties of failing to cooperate in forming a unified all-party delegation to lobby New Delhi.

Expressing deep frustration over the state's handling of the crisis, Kumaraswamy noted that he has closely monitored the situation over the preceding two months, characterizing the state's efforts as mere bureaucratic correspondence.

He criticized state ministers for failing to schedule formal meetings with key federal leaders, including the Prime Minister, the Union Home Minister, and the Union Agriculture Minister.

Furthermore, he alleged that the state has submitted fluctuating and inconsistent financial memorandums initially requesting Rs 3,000 crore and subsequently escalating demands to Rs 26,000 crore without providing comprehensive, accurate meteorological and agricultural data to substantiate the claims.

The Union Minister drew upon his own extensive tenure as Chief Minister to contrast administrative styles.

He recalled that during severe natural disasters, such as the devastating floods in Kodagu when he led a coalition government alongside the Congress party, he managed relief efforts using state revenues and internal resources without organizing high-profile delegations to the national capital. He also referenced past policy implementations, such as comprehensive farm loan waivers, arguing that effective governance relies on diligent administrative execution rather than political posturing.

Union Minister H.D. Kumaraswamy.

As both sides exchange sharp accusations, the ongoing dispute highlights the growing friction over federal fiscal cooperation, leaving local agricultural communities waiting for coordinated relief measures.

Criticisms by Kumaraswamy

Lack of direct engagement

Slamming the state administration, HDK noted that ministers have merely engaged in correspondence without showing the courtesy of meeting Prime Minister Narendra Modi, Amit Shah, or the Union Agriculture Minister directly.

No precedent

Addressing remarks by Deputy Chief Minister Parameshwara regarding opposition non-cooperation, HDK maintained that relief requests are traditionally handled directly by the Chief Minister and relevant cabinet ministers.

Kodagu floods, 2018

Citing his own tenure as Chief Minister in 2018 during the Kodagu floods, Kumaraswamy stated that he utilized state tax revenues for relief and did not resort to sending an all-party delegation to the Centre.

Court rejects plea for concurrent prison terms

CH NEWS, BENGALURU

The High Court of Karnataka.

Karnataka High Court dismisses Ramesh's petition to serve separate prison sentences concurrently, ruling that independent trials cannot share overlapping penalties.

Facing legal consequences in the court of law can take unexpected turns for individuals involved in serious criminal activities. When a person is found guilty across multiple separate legal proceedings, judges must carefully determine how the penalties will be served. A recent high-profile ruling from the Karnataka High Court has brought significant clarity to this complex legal process.

The High Court of Karnataka has officially dismissed a petition filed by a convicted individual seeking to serve two distinct prison sentences concurrently rather than consecutively. The petitioner, identified as Ramesh, had requested that his prison terms for separate offenses be allowed to run at the same time. However, a single-judge bench presided over by Justice M. Nagaprasanna firmly rejected the plea after reviewing the case history and relevant legal precedents.

The background of the matter dates back several years. In 2016, a serious case involving murder and attempted murder was registered against the accused under the K.P. Agrahara Police Station jurisdiction. While the legal proceedings for that initial matter were still underway, a separate criminal case was filed against him in 2019 for threatening a witness associated with the ongoing trial.

Because these matters were tried independently, they resulted in separate convictions and timelines. In August 2022, he was sentenced to five years of simple imprisonment for the witness intimidation charge. Later, in January 2023, he received a life sentence along with an additional five-year rigorous imprisonment term for the murder case.

During the hearings, the petitioner's legal counsel argued that both matters were interconnected and requested the court to invoke legal provisions allowing the sentences to run simultaneously. Conversely, the Public Prosecutor strongly opposed this request, pointing out that the criminal acts occurred at different times and involved distinct events.

All government schools to go bilingual in phases

CH NEWS, BENGALURU

A government high school in Bengaluru.

Modern education landscapes across India are shifting rapidly, driven by parental desires to equip children with competitive global skills. For decades, public sector educational institutions have faced declining enrollments as families increasingly gravitate toward private English-medium options. To bridge this divide and restore faith in public education, state authorities have launched a massive structural transformation aimed at reshaping the future of classroom instruction across the region.

The Government of Karnataka has announced a comprehensive plan to transition all government-run schools into bilingual institutions by introducing English-medium streams in a phased manner. School Education Minister Madhu Bangarappa officially shared the initiative, emphasizing that parents should have the absolute freedom to choose the preferred medium of instruction for their children. According to recent UDISE+ data, the state houses 48,527 government schools, all of which are slated for this progressive upgrade.

This policy builds upon groundwork laid in previous academic cycles. Initial bilingual sections began rolling out years ago under past administrations, gradually expanding to thousands of campuses. In urban educational districts like Bengaluru North and Bengaluru South, over a thousand schools have already received clearance to offer bilingual classes starting from the first grade. High public demand was evident when thousands of schools across thirty-three districts applied to adopt the framework.

While parents and communities have welcomed the move, education experts advise a cautious and strategic approach. Critics note that successful implementation requires robust, long-term professional development rather than brief orientation workshops for rural educators.

Equipping teachers with effective communication and pedagogical tools is vital to ensuring that students truly benefit from the bilingual shift. As the state moves forward, this ambitious reform aims to revitalize public schooling and create equal opportunities for every child.

Factory collapse exposes construction negligence

CH NEWS, HOSUR

Construction sites are meant to be places of steady progress, but they can quickly turn into scenes of absolute heartbreak when safety rules are ignored. A terrible accident has shaken a local industrial area near the border, leaving families mourning and several others fighting for their lives in the hospital.

A tragic incident occurred near the industrial zone in Hosur during the construction of a private factory building known as Balaji Gears. While workers were actively pouring heavy concrete into a mold, the wooden beams and temporary support structures suddenly collapsed without warning. Three workers became trapped beneath the heavy debris and tragically lost their lives at the scene. Four other individuals sustained critical injuries and were rushed to a nearby private hospital for emergency medical treatment.

Authorities have identified the victims as Kumaresan, Michael, and Srinivasan. Preliminary investigations suggest that the disaster was caused by severe negligence and a complete failure to follow standard safety precautions. Officials noted that there were no adequate supporting pillars or proper structural plans to bear the massive weight of the concrete.

Following the accident, local district officials and the police superintendent visited the site to inspect the damage and oversee rescue efforts using a crane. A total of seventeen people were working at the site when the disaster struck.

The District Collector has instructed local law enforcement to take strict legal action against everyone responsible for the oversight, including the site engineer who designed the unsafe structure. Officials continue to urge all contractors and builders to prioritize worker safety to prevent such devastating accidents from happening again.

Traffic chaos hits Bengaluru as Hebbal route closes

CH NEWS, BENGALURU

Hebbal: the road to Mekhri Circle is shut for 18 months

Urban infrastructure projects are essential for long-term metropolitan growth, but major construction work often brings immediate commuter nightmares. Millions of residents living and working in fast-growing technology hubs understand that building a better future requires navigating massive disruptions, temporary route diversions, and endless hours spent stuck in vehicle queues.

A massive traffic gridlock has paralyzed normal movement along crucial arterial stretches in Bengaluru following the official closure of a major transit corridor. The road connecting Hebbal to Mekhri Circle has been completely shut down to vehicular traffic for the next 18 months. This drastic measure has been implemented to facilitate a major infrastructure initiative, the construction of a brand-new four-lane elevated road stretching from the UAS staff quarters in Hebbal all the way down to Mekhri Circle.

The complete halt of normal traffic flow along this key section has triggered severe bottlenecks. Thousands of motorists including daily office-goers, school children, and frantic travelers heading toward the Kempegowda International Airport found themselves trapped in extensive tailbacks. Commuters attempting to navigate alternative pathways reported extreme delays, as surrounding roads buckled under the sudden surge of diverted vehicles.

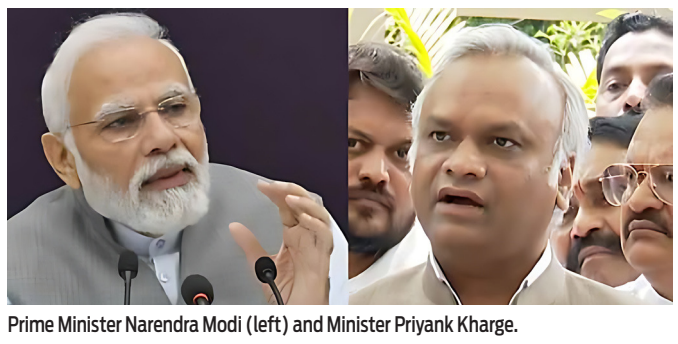

In an effort to manage the chaos, traffic authorities have placed heavy restrictions on commercial transport. Large buses, heavy trucks, and other goods-carrying vehicles are now strictly permitted to travel only via the narrow service roads running parallel to the main corridor. Meanwhile, traffic police have issued advisories suggesting alternative interior routes to help distribute the heavy volume of vehicles and alleviate continuous gridlock.

As the city braces for eighteen months of heavy construction activity, urban planners urge commuters to plan their daily travel schedules well in advance, utilize public transit where possible, and exercise patience while navigating alternate routes across the affected northern corridor.

THE DEGREE DEBATE

Kharge defends qualifications against BJP criticisms

Political debates in the state often stretch far beyond governance, frequently touching upon personal backgrounds, educational credentials, and linguistic abilities of prominent figures. A recent war of words has erupted between ruling party ministers and opposition leaders, drawing widespread public attention.

Minister Priyank Kharge has fired back sharply at statements made by BJP leader Chalavadi Narayanaswamy concerning his educational background and qualifications. Addressing critics head-on, Kharge declared his complete readiness to open his academic credentials for public discussion. He pointedly remarked that information regarding Prime Minister Narendra Modi's degree certificates remains notoriously difficult to access, noting that such details have not been made transparent even through formal Right to Information (RTI) channels.

> "I am a graphic designer, I know English better than Modi does."
> — Priyank Kharge, Karnataka Home Minister

Taking the confrontation a step further, Kharge asserted with absolute confidence that he possesses superior educational qualifications and speaks better English than the Prime Minister. Responding directly to allegations labeling him a "Convent Dalit," Kharge strongly refuted the claim.

He clarified that the children of the very leaders leveling these accusations are the ones who attended elite convent schools, whereas he completed his own schooling at the traditional Adamaru Matha institution. To settle any lingering doubts, Kharge publicly challenged Narayanaswamy to a comprehensive debate on any language or subject, at any time and place of his choosing.

The political sparring also touched upon cultural and linguistic knowledge. While openly acknowledging the limits of his own familiarity with the historical song 'Vande Mataram,' Kharge did not hesitate to question the competence of his political rivals. The exchange also addressed sharp remarks involving Union Minister Kumaraswamy, whom Kharge had previously referred to using a colloquial expression. When BJP leader N. Ravikumar demanded a formal apology for those comments, Kharge dismissed the pressure, firing back with a pointed query asking whether Ravikumar truly represents the sentiment of millions of citizens. As these fiery verbal volleys continue, political tensions across the state remain visibly elevated.

POOR RAINFALL IMPACT

Drought hits Gadag, farmers face mounting hardship

Severe drought: Laxmeshwar, Naragund and Shirahatti taluks (shaded) of Gadag district.

MALINGARAYA PUJAR, GADAG

Farmers in parts of Gadag district are facing serious difficulties due to poor rainfall and crop losses during the 2026 agricultural season. The situation has raised concerns about farm incomes, livestock management and the livelihoods of agricultural workers.

According to the Karnataka government's drought assessment, Laxmeshwar, Naragund and Shirahatti taluks have been classified as severely drought-affected for the Kharif season.

Rabi season in doubt

Farmers who depended on the monsoon for their crops are worried about the impact of insufficient rainfall on cultivation. The situation has also affected preparations for the Rabi season, with farmers facing uncertainty over crops such as chickpeas, wheat, jowar and maize.

Crop losses add to farmers' worries

Maize, which is an important food and fodder crop in the region, remains a major concern for farming families. Safflower and other agricultural crops have also faced challenges due to changing rainfall conditions.

The shortage of agricultural fodder has added to farmers' difficulties. Maize stalks, gram husk and wheat straw are important sources of cattle feed. Farmers facing fodder shortages may struggle to maintain their livestock and could be forced to sell animals at lower prices.

Dairy farmers and agricultural labourers are also concerned about their income and employment opportunities. Some workers may be forced to look for jobs in nearby towns and cities.

BJP warns protest over Magadi road delay

Taluk BJP president K.R. Prasad Gowda threatened protests after Deepavali if the delayed Magadi-Bengaluru KSHIP road project is not finished.

CH NEWS, MAGADI

Taluk BJP president K.R. Prasad Gowda criticised the Congress government, alleging that rising prices and anti-people policies had increased the difficulties faced by the public. He said people were waiting for the next Assembly elections to express their dissatisfaction.

Speaking at a press conference at the BJP office, he accused the government of burdening people through increases in fuel and milk prices and bus fares.

He also credited party workers for the NDA candidate A.P. Ranganath's victory in the Legislative Council election and urged them to prepare for upcoming local body and Assembly elections. He said the BJP would strengthen its organisation at the booth level and highlight Central government schemes while exposing the State government's failures.

Protest threat over stalled road work

Gowda expressed concern over the delay in the KSHIP road project between Magadi and Bengaluru. He claimed that only five per cent of the work remained unfinished but had been pending for years. He said road dust was affecting shopkeepers, residents and schoolchildren.

He warned that the BJP, NDA partners and other organisations would stage protests, including a road blockade and a demonstration at the KSHIP office, after Deepavali if the work was not completed.

He urged Minister H.C. Balakrishna to secure additional funds and speed up development works in the taluk.

BJP condemns remarks on Mysore rulers

Gowda also criticised remarks allegedly made by Congress leaders about the Mysore Maharajas. He highlighted Nalvadi Krishnaraja Wadiyar's contribution to the development of the region, particularly the Krishna Raja Sagara (KRS) Dam and educational institutions. He urged political leaders to respect the contributions of the former rulers.

BJP district and taluk office-bearers and party workers attended the press conference.

Sugar factory set to resume operations: DC

The sugar factory in Uttara Kannada district is set to resume operations following successful discussions between sugarcane farmers, farmers' organisations and factory management, Deputy Commissioner K. Lakshmipriya said.

She announced this during a meeting with sugarcane growers, farmers' representatives and factory officials during her visit to Haliyal.

Officials of E.I.D. Parry (India) Limited said the factory would purchase sugarcane at Rs. 3,500 per metric tonne, as agreed during discussions between factory management and farmers' representatives in Belagavi district. They also assured farmers that if another sugar factory in Karnataka offered a higher price for sugarcane with a 12 per cent recovery rate, they would match it.

To ensure fair weighing, a committee comprising farmers and officials will monitor the process. The Deputy Commissioner warned that strict action would be taken if any irregularities in weighing were found or complaints received.

Factory officials also announced that the earlier 25 per cent deduction for burnt sugarcane would be waived due to drought conditions. Farmers would receive full payment even for burnt cane.

Milk prices, bus fares add to common man's burden

CH NEWS, SRINIVASPUR

Rising prices of essential commodities, including Nandini milk and dairy products, along with higher KSRTC bus fares, have increased the financial burden on ordinary families in Karnataka. With household incomes failing to keep pace with rising expenses, the government must balance the interests of farmers and consumers.

Milk is an essential part of daily life, particularly for children and elderly people. Higher prices of milk, curd, ghee and butter directly affect household budgets.

THE WAY FORWARD

Farmers, consumers and commuters all need support

- Subsidies and affordable cattle feed for dairy farmers
- Efficiency, not only fare rises, for transport corporations
- Proper financial planning to protect the Shakti scheme

At the same time, dairy farmers face increasing costs of cattle feed, veterinary care, electricity and labour. They deserve fair prices for their produce. However, the entire burden should not fall on consumers. The government should explore subsidies, affordable cattle feed and financial assistance to support both farmers and families.

The increase in KSRTC fares has created additional difficulties for students, workers and daily commuters. Many people from rural areas depend on buses for employment, education and healthcare. The government should consider improving transport corporation efficiency, controlling unnecessary expenditure and increasing financial support instead of depending mainly on fare increases.

The Shakti scheme has helped women access education, employment and healthcare through free bus travel. Its benefits should be protected through proper financial planning and regular assessment. Any changes must ensure that women who depend on the scheme are not disadvantaged.

The government must review dairy prices and bus fares while considering the financial difficulties faced by ordinary families. Supporting farmers, protecting consumers and providing affordable public transport should go hand in hand.

A welfare-oriented government must ensure that its decisions improve people's lives. A balanced and transparent approach is essential to protect the interests of all sections of society.

Hindu groups protest vandalism of Navagraha idols

CH NEWS, RAMANAGARA

Hindu organisations staged a protest at Kempegowda Circle in Ramanagara, condemning the vandalism of Navagraha idols at Sri Lakshmi Venkateshwara Temple. The protesters demanded a thorough investigation and strict legal action against those responsible.

Addressing the protest rally and awareness meeting, Sri Annadaneshwaranatha said Hinduism stood for sacrifice and tolerance, but attacks on religious places could not be ignored. He urged the authorities to ensure that those responsible were punished to prevent similar incidents.

Dr. Mallesh Guruji of Gaudagere Chamundeshwari Kshetra said India respected all religions and the Constitution guaranteed equal rights to everyone. He urged the police to investigate the incident thoroughly and take action against the culprits.

Shivarudra Swamiji of Channapatna Virakta Matha questioned the claim that the vandalism was committed by an intoxicated person. He said the destruction of all nine Navagraha idols raised concerns about the intention behind the incident. He urged the police to investigate whether anyone else had assisted the accused. Rajashekhara Shivacharya Swamiji of Revanasiddheshwara Matha recalled previous incidents of temple vandalism in Ramanagara and urged the Hindu community to raise its voice against attacks on religious places.

Chandrashekhar, a social activist, also condemned the incident, referring to earlier cases involving damage at Arkeshwara Temple and footwear being thrown during Chamundeshwari and Banni Mahakali Karaga celebrations. He called for greater vigilance and collective efforts to protect religious places.

Former MLA A. Manjunath, former KSIC Chairman Gautam Gowda, Hindu Hitarakshana Samiti Convener D. Girigowda, BJP District President M.N.L. Anandaswamy and JD(S) District President H.C. Jayamuthu attended the protest along with leaders and members of various Hindu organisations. Manjunath said, "Attacks on temples are condemnable; this is a despicable act that infringes upon the religious beliefs of Hindus. Such incidents must be curbed. If the police fail to take action, Hindu activists will step in to handle it themselves. Should such an incident recur, the consequences will be severe."

CELEBRATE DIWALI WITH DIYAS, LIGHT EARTHEN LAMPS

A message of tradition, culture and environmental protection

DR. PRIYANKA SAURABH

In the race for modernity, we are gradually forgetting our traditions and cultural heritage. The tradition of lighting earthen lamps on the sacred festival of Diwali is also fading away. They have been replaced by electronic lights, garlands, and other artificial illumination. This change is not only affecting our cultural traditions but is also having far-reaching consequences on the social and economic levels. To protect the environment and preserve our cultural heritage, it is essential that we pledge to light earthen lamps and avoid firecrackers on Diwali.

The festival of Diwali is deeply connected with earthen lamps. It is a festival deeply rooted in our culture and faith. It is believed that the people of Ayodhya welcomed Lord Shri Ram back to Ayodhya after completing fourteen years of exile by lighting lamps in their homes. Since then, the tradition of celebrating Deepotsav on the new moon day of Kartik month has been prevalent. Lighting earthen lamps is not only a religious tradition, but also a symbol of our cultural identity and connection to nature.

The allure of artificial lighting has grown rapidly over the past two decades. In the glare of modernity, we are drifting away from our traditional lifestyles. The use of colorful electric lights and garlands has increased during Diwali, while loud firecrackers have exacerbated the problem of air and noise pollution. This has the greatest impact on the environment, animals, birds, the elderly, children, and people suffering from respiratory problems.

> "Remember, the real light of Diwali is not in the electric lights, but in the flame of earthen lamps, mutual love and the light of humanity. May everyone have light!"
> — Dr. Priyanka Saurabh

This change also has an important social and economic aspect. The traditional occupation of potters, who make clay lamps, is gradually being affected. There was a time when people would place orders for diyas with potters weeks before Diwali. Their families would work day and night to craft the diyas. Even though their income wasn't very high, they certainly had a passion for keeping their art and tradition alive.

Today, the situation has changed. The decline in demand for clay lamps has dampened the enthusiasm of potters. Many families are forced to abandon their ancestral profession and take up other occupations. On Diwali, many homes now only symbolically light a few clay lamps, while most decorations are done with electronic lights and garlands. We must understand that our small gesture can make a big difference in the lives of an artisan's family. By purchasing clay lamps, we not only preserve our culture but also support the livelihoods of local artisans.

The tradition of lighting earthen lamps has its own unique beauty and significance. The flame of a mustard oil lamp brings a special sense of peace and intimacy to the mind. Artificial light cannot match the simplicity and natural beauty of the lamp. Earthen lamps are linked to local resources and traditional crafts. However, to protect the environment, oil, wicks, and other resources should be used judiciously when using them.

Our culture isn't limited to lighting lamps. It also includes cleaning homes, preparing delicious food, sharing sweets, giving gifts to neighbors and those in need, and maintaining mutual love and harmony. The true joy of Diwali lies in bringing happiness to our homes and the lives of others.

Today's young generation needs to be especially aware of this. The responsibility of passing on culture and traditions to the next generation rests on their shoulders. They should prioritize earthen lamps over electronic decorations. Awareness campaigns should be conducted through schools, social organizations, and local organizations, raising awareness about the importance of earthen lamps and environmental protection.

Diwali is a festival of light, love, harmony, and positivity. Instead of turning it into a festival of pollution and ostentation, it should be celebrated with simplicity and sensitivity. The smoke and noise from firecrackers not only pollute the environment but also cause problems for many animals. Therefore, we should strive to celebrate a clean and safe Diwali by staying away from firecrackers.

This Diwali, let us all pledge to light earthen lamps in our homes, purchase them from local potters, avoid firecrackers, and spread joy in the lives of those in need. Earthen lamps are symbols of our culture, tradition, labor, and self-reliance. By adopting them, we can pass on our heritage to the next generation.

THE PRICE OF EXTREME WEALTH: A WORLD DIVIDED BY INEQUALITY AND CLIMATE INJUSTICE

LALIT GARGG

The world today is passing through an era of profound contradictions. On the one hand, remarkable milestones are being achieved in development, prosperity and modernization; on the other, poverty, hunger, violence, displacement and environmental destruction are becoming increasingly alarming. This raises a fundamental question: when the world possesses abundant resources and science and technology have made unprecedented advances, why are millions of people still struggling to secure even the most basic necessities of life? The international organization Oxfam, through its report 'The Disaster Divide', offers an uncomfortable yet thought-provoking answer. It reveals that the climate crisis is not merely the consequence of nature's fury, but is also deeply rooted in economic inequality, excessive consumption and the growing concentration of resources and power in the hands of a privileged few.

The report highlights how the lifestyles and investments of the world's wealthiest 0.1 per cent, approximately eight million people, are contributing disproportionately to carbon emissions, with consequences extending to billions across the globe. According to the report, this privileged group is responsible for more carbon pollution than the poorest 44 per cent of the world's population. This disparity is not merely a statistical difference; it is a disturbing reflection of human insensitivity, in which the entire world is being made to pay for the extravagant lifestyles of a handful of people. Private jets, luxury yachts, excessive energy consumption and investments in polluting industries have become symbols of modern affluence, while millions of people struggle for clean air, safe drinking water and two square meals a day. The real question is not how much wealth an individual possesses, but who bears the social and environmental cost of that prosperity.

> The true measure of a prosperous society lies in how it treats its most vulnerable people and how responsibly it uses the resources entrusted to it. For development that neither protects nature nor safeguards human dignity is not progress; it is merely a prelude to destruction.

The most alarming dimension of this crisis is that climate disasters, too, are increasingly exposing the divide between the rich and the poor. A flood may strike a wealthy person's luxurious mansion and a poor person's modest dwelling at the same time, but its consequences are vastly different. The wealthy can relocate to safer places, rely on insurance and use modern facilities to recover their losses. The poor, however, often lose their homes, agricultural land, livestock and livelihoods, pushing them years behind in their struggle for survival. According to Oxfam, countries with greater economic inequality experience up to seven times more flood-related deaths. The report further estimates that emissions generated by the world's richest one per cent could lead to approximately 1.9 million additional heat-related deaths in the future. An estimated 78 per cent of these deaths are likely to occur in low- and lower-middle-income countries. Thus, those who contribute least to the climate crisis are often forced to bear its most devastating consequences.

The widening gap between the rich and the poor is not confined to environmental concerns. When resources, opportunities and rights are distributed unjustly, social discontent inevitably takes root. Unemployment, inflation, food insecurity, water scarcity and displacement intensify social tensions. Gradually, these tensions can manifest themselves in anger, rebellion, crime, communal conflicts and violence. It would be simplistic to attribute every form of violence solely to economic inequality. However, when the benefits of development remain concentrated in a few hands while the burden of crises falls upon the overwhelming majority, the foundations of social harmony and stability are bound to weaken. Ironically, some major investors first accumulate enormous profits through polluting industries and subsequently find opportunities to profit from disaster management, environmental clean-up and reconstruction. Oxfam's 'Destroy and Rebuild Index', which examines 217 companies, investigates this disturbing pattern of double profiteering. It raises serious questions about an economic system in which a disaster becomes a business opportunity for some, while turning into a lifelong tragedy for others.

In the Indian context, this warning assumes even greater significance. A substantial section of India's vast population depends on agriculture, construction, small businesses and the informal sector for its livelihood. Farmers are battling erratic rainfall, droughts, floods and rising temperatures. Laborers are compelled to work in extreme heat, while families living in urban slums face the combined hardships of waterlogging and scorching temperatures. According to the World Bank, more than 80 per cent of India's population lives in districts vulnerable to climate-related disasters. Furthermore, approximately 76 per cent of the population residing in 57 per cent of the country's districts faces high or very high risks from extreme heat. These figures underline the scale of India's vulnerability and the urgency of a comprehensive response.

For India, the challenge is not merely to accelerate the pace of economic growth, but to ensure that development is equitable, inclusive and environmentally sustainable. The vision of a Viksit Bharat 2047 will acquire real meaning only when the benefits of progress reach the person standing at the very end of the social and economic spectrum. If metropolitan cities continue to set new benchmarks of luxury and conspicuous consumption while farmers in villages struggle for water, electricity and sustainable livelihoods, the picture of development will remain incomplete. India, aspiring to emerge as a Vishwaguru and a guiding force for the world, must demonstrate that economic prosperity and environmental conservation can coexist in a balanced and sustainable framework.

Achieving this requires certain fundamental policy priorities. The accountability of affluent sections and highly polluting industries must be clearly established. An appropriate taxation framework should discourage excessive luxury consumption, while clean and renewable energy must receive greater encouragement. The conservation of water, forests and land must become an essential condition of development rather than a secondary consideration. Equally important is the need to establish effective systems of social security, insurance, healthcare and rehabilitation for farmers, laborers and vulnerable communities affected by climate disasters. The benefits of economic growth must not remain confined to the owners of capital; they must also reach the hands that create wealth through their labor. Development cannot be considered meaningful if those who contribute most through their hard work remain deprived of its rewards.

India's civilizational wisdom has long upheld the ideals of 'Sarve Bhavantu Sukhinah' (May all be happy), 'Vasudhaiva Kutumbakam' (The world is one family) and 'Aparigraha' (non-possession and restraint). Mahatma Gandhi's philosophy of 'Simple Living and High Thinking' is not merely a message for individual conduct; it represents a broader vision of the judicious use of resources and social responsibility. The Jain philosophy of Aparigraha likewise teaches that accumulation beyond one's genuine needs ultimately creates imbalance and injustice in society. Nature is not our personal property; it is a precious inheritance entrusted to us for future generations. These values offer a meaningful moral foundation for addressing the challenges of a world increasingly driven by excessive consumption and limitless accumulation.

Ultimately, Oxfam's 'The Disaster Divide' places a fundamental moral question before humanity: Can development mean unlimited prosperity for a privileged few alongside growing deprivation and helplessness for the overwhelming majority? The Earth is not the private estate of any particular class, nor can its resources become the exclusive preserve of a handful of powerful individuals. The need of the hour is not to treat wealth itself as a crime, but to make prosperity inseparable from accountability. We must remember that when the gulf of inequality becomes too deep, the resulting discontent cannot remain confined within geographical or political boundaries. Its consequences can threaten social harmony, economic stability and global peace. If we are to save our planet, we must change the direction of development, connect prosperity with compassion and make the global economic system accountable to humanity. Economic progress must be measured not merely by the accumulation of wealth, but by the quality of life it creates, the dignity it ensures and the environment it preserves.

THE PRICE OF CELEBRATION: RISING FESTIVE POLLUTION

DR. VIJAY GARG

Festivals are an essential part of human culture. They bring happiness, strengthen social relationships and provide opportunities for families and communities to celebrate together. Whether it is Diwali, Dussehra, Christmas, New Year, weddings or other public celebrations, people express their joy through lights, decorations, music, fireworks and grand gatherings. However, behind this excitement lies a growing environmental concern: festive pollution.

Celebrations that are meant to spread happiness are increasingly becoming sources of air, noise, water and solid-waste pollution. The rising environmental cost of festivities forces us to reconsider how we celebrate and what kind of world we are leaving for future generations.

Air pollution is one of the most visible consequences of large celebrations. Firecrackers release smoke, fine particulate matter and harmful gases into the atmosphere. These pollutants can worsen respiratory problems, trigger asthma and create serious difficulties for children, elderly people and those suffering from heart and lung diseases. During periods of poor air quality, even a few hours of excessive fireworks can add to an already dangerous pollution burden.

Noise pollution is another major concern. Loudspeakers, firecrackers, high-volume music and prolonged celebrations disturb neighborhoods and affect public health. Excessive noise can cause stress, sleep disturbances, headaches and hearing-related problems. It also creates difficulties for hospital patients, newborn babies, elderly people and students preparing for examinations.

Festive pollution does not end with air and noise. Decorative materials, plastic packaging, disposable plates, cups, thermocol, artificial flowers and other non-biodegradable products generate enormous quantities of waste. Many of these materials are used for a few hours but remain in the environment for years. Improper disposal blocks drainage systems, pollutes water bodies and creates unhygienic surroundings.

Water pollution also increases during certain festivals. Religious offerings, plastic materials, colors, chemicals and other waste are sometimes dumped into rivers, ponds and lakes. Such practices damage aquatic ecosystems and threaten the survival of fish and other organisms. Our rivers and water bodies deserve respect and protection, not the burden of irresponsible celebrations.

The environmental impact also extends to animals and birds. Loud explosions frighten domestic animals, disturb wildlife and interfere with the natural behavior of birds. Stray dogs and other animals often experience severe anxiety during fireworks. Birds may abandon their nests or become disoriented because of sudden flashes and loud sounds. A truly joyful celebration should not become a source of suffering for voiceless creatures.

Another overlooked issue is the excessive consumption of electricity and natural resources. Decorative lighting, temporary structures, unnecessary packaging and large-scale commercial activities increase energy use and carbon emissions. The growing culture of showmanship and competition has transformed many festivals into expensive displays of consumption rather than meaningful occasions of togetherness.

The solution is not to stop celebrating but to celebrate responsibly. Festivals should reflect our cultural values, compassion and respect for nature. People can choose traditional lamps, energy-efficient LED lights, reusable decorations and biodegradable materials. Community celebrations can reduce unnecessary fireworks, loud music and disposable products.

Schools, colleges, resident welfare associations, religious organizations and local authorities can play an important role in promoting eco-friendly festivals. Awareness campaigns, cleanliness drives, waste segregation and tree-planting activities can turn celebrations into opportunities for environmental education. Children should be encouraged to understand that protecting nature is also a form of celebrating life.

Government regulations are equally important. Rules regarding firecrackers, noise levels, waste disposal and pollution control must be implemented effectively. However, laws alone cannot bring lasting change without public cooperation and responsible behavior.

The media and social platforms can also promote the message of green celebrations. Instead of encouraging extravagant displays, they should highlight communities that celebrate through charity, kindness, cleanliness and environmental protection.

Festivals are meant to unite people, not endanger their health or damage the planet. The real spirit of celebration lies in sharing happiness, helping the needy, respecting others and protecting the environment.

We must remember that the atmosphere, rivers, trees and wildlife are not separate from our celebrations; they are essential parts of our lives. If our festivities leave behind polluted air, mountains of waste and frightened animals, we must question the meaning of such happiness.

> "Let us celebrate with lights, not smoke; with music, not noise; with kindness, not waste. The true price of celebration should never be the health of people or the future of our planet."
> DR. VIJAY GARG

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Air Pollution Health Emergency

Through your newspaper, I wish to express concern over the severe air pollution crisis affecting large parts of the country. Every winter, air quality reaches hazardous levels, causing breathing problems, eye irritation and serious health risks for children and the elderly. The main causes are vehicle emissions, industrial smoke, dust from construction and burning of waste. Despite repeated warnings, action remains slow and temporary. We need strict enforcement of emission norms, better public transport, control on construction dust and mass awareness on waste burning. Clean air is not a luxury but a basic right, and urgent steps are needed now. – Vidhyashree J.

Rising Youth Unemployment Crisis

I am writing to highlight the growing problem of unemployment among educated youth in the country. Lakhs of graduates and post-graduates apply for a few thousand jobs, and many remain jobless for years despite qualifications. This leads to frustration, depression and loss of talent. The main reasons are lack of skill-based education, slow job creation in manufacturing and over-dependence on a few sectors. The government must promote vocational training, support small businesses and startups with easy loans, and align college courses with industry needs. Only meaningful employment can secure the future of our youth. – Sharon Faustina J.

Stop Online Financial Frauds

I want to draw attention to the alarming rise in online financial frauds across the country. Every day innocent citizens lose their savings to fake calls, messages and links claiming to be from banks or government agencies. Many victims are senior citizens and first-time internet users who trust such messages. Cybercrime cells are overburdened and recovery of money is rare. There is urgent need for stronger cyber security systems, faster complaint redressal, mandatory verification of senders by telecom companies and nationwide awareness campaigns in local languages. Digital progress must not come at the cost of public safety. – Anna B.

WE NEED TO MAKE TIME FOR LONELINESS

Loneliness rarely announces itself in a way that demands attention. It can sit beside someone at a crowded dinner, follow a worker home, or fill the quiet hours after a phone stops ringing. We often mistake it for a private weakness when it is also a failure of how we organize daily life.

Our schedules reward speed, usefulness and constant availability. Relationships receive whatever time remains. We postpone visits until work settles, delay calls until the weekend and assume that a familiar face must have someone else to talk to. Gradually, ordinary companionship becomes an appointment that nobody manages to keep.

Digital contact can help, especially when distance or disability limits movement. Yet a stream of reactions does not always offer the comfort of being heard. A person may receive dozens of messages while feeling unable to tell anyone that the day has been difficult. Visibility and belonging are different experiences.

The answer does not require everyone to become outgoing. Some people enjoy solitude, and that choice deserves respect. The concern begins when isolation feels unwanted and there seems to be no dependable route back to other people. Help should offer connection without turning quiet personalities into problems that need correction.

Small, regular gestures can make that route easier. A neighbor who checks in without demanding conversation, a colleague who shares lunch, or a relative who calls at a predictable time creates something valuable: continuity. Care becomes more believable when it survives beyond birthdays, emergencies and public displays of concern.

Public life matters too. Affordable gathering spaces, accessible transport, welcoming libraries and comfortable benches allow people to meet without having to buy something. When every shared space expects spending, companionship becomes harder for those already watching their money. A community needs places where simply being present is enough.

Employers should consider the social cost of exhausting work patterns. A worker who finishes every shift drained may have little energy left for friendship. Flexible schedules and reasonable boundaries cannot manufacture intimacy, but they can protect the time and strength that relationships require. Connection needs room to develop.

We should also resist making loneliness another task for people who already feel excluded. Telling someone to join a club assumes confidence, money, mobility and welcome. Sometimes the more useful question is whether our existing groups make newcomers comfortable, or merely invite them into circles that remain closed.

There is no single gesture that repairs every form of isolation. Grief, illness, migration and family conflict create different needs. Listening matters because it prevents us from offering our favorite solution to someone facing a different difficulty. Companionship begins with curiosity about another person's experience. A kinder society would treat time spent with others as part of a worthwhile life, rather than a distraction from achievement. We cannot promise that nobody will feel alone.

We can notice who has fallen silent, keep ordinary promises and make belonging easier to find. Often, that begins with staying just a little longer.

— SHARON FAUSTINA J.

CAREGIVERS DESERVE SUPPORT BEYOND WORDS OF GRATITUDE

Care often begins with something: a prescription collected, a meal prepared or a ride arranged. Then the tasks multiply. Someone becomes responsible for appointments, washing, bills and reassurance, often while holding a job and managing another household. What looked temporary becomes the structure around which a life must bend.

Families frequently describe this work as love. That description can be true, but it is incomplete. Love does not remove exhaustion, replace lost earnings or create uninterrupted sleep. When affection becomes the reason support is withheld, caregivers are asked to prove devotion through sacrifice that others would never accept as reasonable employment.

Much of the burden remains invisible because it happens behind closed doors. The person who remembers medication times may also remember school deadlines, grocery shortages and insurance forms. This mental work continues even during apparent rest. A caregiver sitting quietly may still be planning the next difficult hour.

We should stop treating help as a reward for reaching breaking point. Support works best when it arrives before resentment, injury or financial crisis. Reliable respite, clear information and affordable professional assistance can protect both the person receiving care and the person providing it. Neither benefits when exhaustion becomes routine.

Other relatives have responsibilities too. Asking a caregiver to request help places another management task on already crowded shoulders. A better approach is to offer something specific and dependable: cover an evening, prepare meals each week or handle transport. Shared calendars are useful only when people honour the commitments written there.

Workplaces can make a difference by recognising caregiving as a part of adult life. Flexible hours, predictable shifts and leave arrangements allow employees to remain useful without hiding family responsibilities. Policies should include different kinds of households, rather than assuming that care always follows one familiar family pattern.

> "We should measure compassion by whether caregivers can rest, remain financially secure and preserve a life beyond their duties. Those are needs, not excessive demands."
> — VIDHYASHREE J.

The dignity of the person receiving care must remain central. Needing assistance does not erase preferences, privacy or the right to participate in decisions. Care arrangements should protect independence wherever possible. Supporting caregivers and respecting recipients are connected goals, even when difficult conversations are needed to balance their wishes.

Money deserves honest discussion. Families sometimes avoid it because calculating costs appears unloving. Yet silence can leave one person paying through savings, reduced hours and missed opportunities. Agreeing on expenses and responsibilities early helps prevent unequal arrangements from becoming permanent simply because nobody wants to sound selfish.

Caregivers also need permission to have ordinary feelings. Irritation, boredom and longing for freedom do not cancel affection. Constant praise for being strong can make it harder to admit distress. Listening without judgement offers more support than insisting that dedication should always look patient, cheerful and grateful.

A society that values care must organise practical ways to sustain it. Gratitude matters, but gratitude without time, money or shared responsibility leaves the hardest work untouched.

— VIDHYASHREE J.

CHILDREN NEED FREE TIME WITHOUT A SCORECARD

A child's afternoon can now resemble an adult's busiest working day. Lessons follow school, organised practice follows lessons, and the evening ends with preparation for tomorrow. Much of this comes from loving intentions. Adults want children to have opportunities. Yet opportunity loses something when it leaves no room to breathe.

We have become skilled at measuring childhood. We count marks, certificates, reading levels and competition results. The quieter parts of growing up resist that accounting: inventing a game, repairing a friendship, staring at clouds or discovering what to do when nothing has been arranged. These experiences still matter.

Free time does not mean the absence of learning. It allows children to choose, negotiate and make mistakes without immediate evaluation. A game that changes its rules halfway through may teach cooperation. An abandoned drawing may reveal a preference. A long afternoon can give an interest time to emerge naturally.

Boredom, within safe and supportive circumstances, need not be treated as an emergency. Adults do not have to supply entertainment at the first complaint. Sometimes children need a little space before curiosity takes over. This is different from neglect: freedom grows best when dependable care remains available in the background.

> "A healthy afternoon may end with muddy clothes, an unfinished game and no certificate at all."
> — MARIA RINCIA P.

The pressure to fill every hour also affects family relationships. Conversations become instructions about what comes next. Shared meals turn into progress meetings. A child may learn that attention arrives most reliably after achievement, rather than through ordinary companionship. Affection should remain recognisable on days when nothing impressive happens.

Schools and activity providers can help by keeping demands proportionate. Homework and practice should have a clear purpose, with room for rest and different home circumstances. Families cannot all provide transport, quiet rooms or paid tuition. An overcrowded schedule can turn unequal resources into another source of shame.

Parents need support rather than another standard they must meet perfectly. Some rely on organised activities because working hours make supervision difficult. Others face strong pressure to keep pace with peers. Criticising individual choices misses the need for affordable childcare, safe play areas and reasonable expectations from institutions.

Screens complicate the discussion but should not consume it. Digital play can be creative or social, just as offline activities can be stressful or exclusionary. The useful question concerns the quality of experience and whether children have varied choices. Replacing every screen minute with another lesson preserves the same crowded pattern.

Children should have a voice in their schedules. Their interests may change, and leaving an activity need not mean failure. Learning commitment matters, but so does recognising an arrangement that no longer fits. Adults can guide these decisions without making every choice a test of future success.

Childhood is a stage of life with value in itself. It should contain rest, laughter, friendships and unplanned discoveries alongside effort. We can prepare children for responsibility while allowing them moments that produce nothing to display.

REPAIRING EVERYDAY THINGS CAN RENEW OUR CONNECTIONS

A broken zip or a loose chair leg presents a small decision with wider meaning. We can replace the object, put it aside or try to repair it. The easiest option often appears obvious. New goods arrive quickly, while finding someone who can mend the old ones takes time.

That imbalance shapes our habits. We begin to expect short lives from everyday belongings and accept replacement as the normal response to minor damage. Yet an object may have years of use left. Throwing it away can waste materials, money and the skill already invested in making it.

Repair deserves attention because it offers practical value, particularly when household budgets are tight. A dependable repair can delay a purchase and keep familiar tools working. But it must remain a real choice. Nobody should be expected to use unsafe equipment or pay more for mending than replacement would reasonably cost.

Manufacturers influence that choice. Products designed with sealed parts, unavailable components or inaccessible instructions make repair difficult before anything breaks. Clear repair information, reasonably priced spare parts and replaceable components give owners more control. Durability should be a feature people can assess, rather than a promise hidden behind attractive packaging.

Repair workers deserve fair payment and respect. Their judgement may involve years of experience, even when the final adjustment looks simple. Bargaining down skilled labour while accepting the price of a new product reveals a confused sense of value. The work of making things last is worth sustaining.

There is a social benefit too. A workshop can become a place where practical knowledge passes between generations and strangers begin talking. Community repair sessions can connect people who rarely meet otherwise. Their value comes from patient cooperation as much as from the number of objects returned to use.

These spaces should welcome beginners without embarrassment. Many people were never taught basic maintenance, and confidence grows through clear guidance. Asking how something works should not invite ridicule. At the same time, organisers must recognise limits and direct electrical, structural or otherwise hazardous jobs to qualified professionals.

Repair also changes our relationship with ownership. Learning how to tighten, clean or adjust something can make us more attentive to its condition. We notice early signs of wear instead of waiting for failure. Care becomes an ordinary habit, extending beyond purchases made only when something stops working.

Still, individual effort cannot carry the whole responsibility for waste. Repair works best alongside better design, reliable services and sensible access to parts. Public institutions and large buyers can encourage durable products through their purchasing decisions. A household should not have to overcome an entire market to keep one appliance functioning.

We need a culture in which maintenance receives some of the admiration usually reserved for novelty. The repaired object carries evidence of attention: someone thought it worth keeping. That attitude can save resources and preserve useful skills. It can also remind us that care often means giving something another chance to serve.

PUBLIC SPACES SHOULD WELCOME EVERY AGE EQUALLY

A public space reveals its priorities through details. A bench offers rest, a working toilet makes a longer visit possible, and a level path allows a wheelchair to move freely. Their absence sends a quieter message about who is expected to stay and who should simply keep moving.

We often judge shared spaces by how they look in photographs. Attractive paving and dramatic features receive attention, while shade, seating and maintenance seem less exciting. Yet the everyday experience depends on those elements. A beautiful square offers limited comfort when nobody can find drinking water or escape the heat.

Older people, children, disabled people and caregivers experience these shortcomings especially clearly. A short walk can become difficult without somewhere to pause. A parent may avoid an outing because changing facilities are unavailable. Accessibility concerns the entire journey, including transport, entrances and the confidence that basic needs can be met.

Good design should begin by listening to people who use a space differently. Consultation cannot consist only of inviting comments after decisions are settled. Residents need understandable plans, accessible meetings and evidence that their observations influence the result. Everyday experience can identify problems that polished drawings easily conceal.

Safety matters, but it should not become an excuse to exclude. Bright lighting, visible routes and dependable maintenance can support confidence. Rules that discourage young people from gathering or remove resting places may simply transfer discomfort onto those with fewer alternatives. Shared space requires fair access as well as reasonable boundaries.

Commercial activity can bring energy, but public life should include places where spending is optional. Someone eating a packed lunch deserves a seat as much as someone carrying a purchased drink. When every comfortable corner belongs to a business, limited income becomes a barrier to participating in community life.

Maintenance deserves a stable budget. A broken lift, blocked path or locked toilet can undo the promise of an expensive redevelopment. People plan around reliability. If facilities repeatedly fail, those who need them most may stop coming altogether, creating an appearance of low demand that disguises the original problem.

There will be disagreements about noise, play, pets and opening hours. These are reasons for thoughtful management, rather than proof that different groups cannot share. Clear rules, spaces for varied activities and opportunities to resolve complaints can help. Nobody should expect complete control over a place intended for everyone.

We should also consider workers who keep these areas usable. Cleaners, gardeners and maintenance teams need equipment, fair conditions and enough time to do their jobs. Public appreciation is hollow when essential upkeep relies on exhausted staff. A welcoming environment rests on their labor as much as on design.

The best shared spaces allow ordinary life to unfold with dignity. They make room for conversation, solitude, movement and rest across different ages and abilities. Their success is visible when people feel comfortable returning.

A public place offers something simple and valuable: permission to belong without having to explain yourself.

CWRC directs Karnataka to release Cauvery water for 15 days

Karnataka has been directed to release 3,000 cusecs of Cauvery water daily to Tamil Nadu for 15 days from November 7.

NEW DELHI

The Cauvery Water Regulation Committee (CWRC) on Friday directed Karnataka to release 3,000 cusecs of water daily to Tamil Nadu for the next 15 days, beginning at 8 am on November 7. The directive requires the state to ensure the stipulated water flow reaches Biligundlu on the inter-state border.

The committee, chaired by Vineet Gupta, reviewed rainfall, crop conditions and reservoir storage across the Cauvery basin before issuing the order. Under the directive, Karnataka must release a total of 3.88 thousand million cubic feet (tmcft) of water during the specified period.

Karnataka's case

During the meeting, Karnataka highlighted the severe water shortage affecting its Cauvery basin. The state informed the committee that inflows into its four major Cauvery reservoirs were 53.88 per cent below the 30-year average. It also stated that drought conditions had affected 55 of the 56 taluks in the state's Cauvery basin. Karnataka further pointed out that its projected water availability of 57 tmcft would leave only seven tmcft after meeting priority requirements until July 2027. It argued that this would be insufficient to sustain standing crops and requested that no additional releases be ordered.

Tamil Nadu, meanwhile, said Karnataka had released only 53.435 tmcft of water until November 4, leaving a backlog of 16.895 tmcft. It alleged that releases had fallen below the previously directed 3,000 cusecs on several days between October 24 and November 4. The state sought the release of 20.678 tmcft at Biligundlu between November 5 and 21, including the pending quantity.

Tamil Nadu also argued that its reservoirs, including Mettur, Bhavani and Amaravathi, held 37.125 tmcft as of November 5. It urged the committee to consider water inflows, usage and withdrawals across the basin while determining the states' respective shares.

Jharkhand HC restores cancelled JSSC-CGL appointments

RANCHI

The Jharkhand High Court on Friday set aside the State government's decision to cancel the Jharkhand Staff Selection Commission Combined Graduate Level (JSSC-CGL) examination and the appointments made through the recruitment process. The ruling restores the positions of candidates selected under advertisement number 10/2023.

Jharkhand High Court reinstates JSSC-CGL appointees, overturning the state government's cancellation of the recruitment examination and restoring their service continuity.

A single-judge bench of Justice Deepak Roshan quashed the government's cancellation decision and directed that the affected candidates be reinstated. The court further ordered that their service be treated as continuous, without any interruption. The direction means the candidates' employment must not be regarded as having been broken during the period affected by the cancellation.

The State government had announced the cancellation on August 17, 2026, following a report from the Jharkhand State Crime Investigation Department and protests by candidates. The decision covered both the examination process and appointments made on its basis. The government's move had therefore put the recruitment and the status of selected candidates in question.

The case concerns the JSSC-CGL recruitment exercise, conducted to fill posts through the commission's combined graduate-level selection process. The cancellation had followed the investigation agency's report and protests from candidates. The High Court has now set aside the cancellation, restoring the appointments made through the examination.

The order brings relief to candidates whose appointments had been cancelled by the State government. The State has been directed to reinstate them and recognise their service as continuous. The ruling settles the immediate status of these appointments.

AMARAVATI

The YSR Congress Party (YSRCP) on Friday accused the ruling Telugu Desam Party (TDP)-led coalition government in Andhra Pradesh of large-scale irregularities during the Zilla Parishad Territorial Constituency (ZPTC) and Mandal Parishad Territorial Constituency (MPTC) elections. The opposition party alleged misuse of official machinery, intimidation of its workers and violations of Supreme Court directives.

Addressing the media in Amaravati, former minister Kakani Govardhan Reddy claimed that YSRCP voters, polling agents and party leaders were prevented from participating in the electoral process. He alleged that several active party members were detained at police stations or placed under house arrest, while ruling coalition workers were allowed to move freely.

Reddy further accused TDP supporters of rigging, vote cycling and driving away opposition polling agents. He claimed that party workers were attacked in several locations and that some were forced to leave their villages. Despite complaints to senior officials, he alleged, no action was taken against those responsible.

The YSRCP alleged misuse of official machinery in the ZPTC and MPTC polls

Questioning police conduct, Reddy condemned the alleged treatment of former Atmakur MLA Mekapati Vikram Reddy. He also raised concerns over the presence of sitting ministers and MLAs at polling stations, alleging that some were involved in booth capturing. He questioned how constitutional safeguards could be protected if police personnel themselves were allegedly involved in electoral malpractice.

The YSRCP wants the polls cancelled and fresh elections held where ministers or MLAs visited polling stations

The former minister urged the District Collector to intervene and demanded cancellation of the polls followed by fresh elections in areas where ruling party ministers or MLAs had visited polling stations in violation of the Model Code of Conduct. He also alleged an attempted attack on YSRCP Gudur constituency in-charge Guravaiah.

Reddy called for action against officials allegedly involved in the irregularities and demanded accountability to ensure free and fair elections.

RAHUL GANDHI LIKELY TO VISIT US FOR UNIVERSITY ADDRESSES

NEW DELHI

Congress leader and Leader of Opposition in the Lok Sabha Rahul Gandhi is likely to visit the United States from November 16 to 19, with planned engagements at two prominent universities, according to sources. The proposed trip is expected to include interactions with students at Columbia University in New York and the University of Chicago.

Gandhi is likely to address students at Columbia University on November 17 before travelling to Chicago for an interaction at the University of Chicago on November 18. He is expected to return to India on November 19. The details of the engagements are yet to be officially confirmed.

THE PROPOSED TRIP

- New York — Columbia University, Nov 17
- Chicago — University of Chicago, Nov 18
- Home — Back in India, Nov 19

The proposed visit comes weeks after Gandhi's reported trips to Vietnam and Thailand, which triggered a political exchange between the Congress and the Bharatiya Janata Party (BJP). His earlier travel coincided with protests by Congress and other INDIA bloc parties over alleged irregularities in the Special Intensive Revision of electoral rolls.

The BJP criticised Gandhi for travelling abroad during the political agitation and questioned the timing of his visits. BJP leaders also raised questions about his overseas meetings, including interactions with American lawmakers Ilhan Omar and Ro Khanna. The party accused him of neglecting domestic political issues and making statements that could affect India's image.

Gandhi's earlier visits to the US have also attracted political controversy. During his May 2023 visit, he criticised the BJP government over alleged misuse of investigative agencies and institutional independence. In September 2024, his remarks on the rights of Sikhs in India drew criticism from the ruling party. During an April 2025 visit, he described the Election Commission as "compromised", prompting another political confrontation.

SC seeks replies from KPCC leaders over CJI post

NEW DELHI

The Supreme Court on Friday issued notices to office-bearers of the Kerala Pradesh Congress Committee (KPCC) over a contempt petition concerning a social media post targeting Chief Justice of India Surya Kant. The court observed that judicial restraint should not be mistaken for institutional weakness and warned that attempts to undermine judicial authority would be dealt with firmly.

The petition seeks contempt proceedings against the party office-bearers over a post published from the official X account of the Congress's Keralam unit. The post went viral on October 12, attracting widespread criticism before it was subsequently deleted.

KPCC president Sunny Joseph had apologised for the post, stating that it was not authorised by the organisation and had been published by an individual without approval. The party leadership distanced itself from the content after the incident triggered criticism on social media.

The notices seek responses from the concerned office-bearers, marking a further development in the controversy. The matter concerns the responsibility of political organisations and their representatives for content shared through official social media accounts, particularly when it relates to constitutional institutions and judicial authority.

SC ON CYBERCRIMINALS

Cybercriminals deserve jail, have no place in society: SC

NEW DELHI

The Supreme Court on Friday observed that cyber criminals have no place in society and deserve to remain behind bars while rejecting a bail plea filed by an accused in a cyber fraud case. A three-judge Bench headed by Chief Justice of India Surya Kant declined to grant relief to the accused and also refused to entertain his request to surrender after Deepavali.

"You do not surrender, the police will take care of you."
— Justice Joymalya Bagchi, Supreme Court

During the hearing, the Chief Justice made strong oral remarks about cybercrime and its impact on society. "They have no space in society," he said, indicating the court's firm approach towards offences involving digital fraud. The Bench's observations came while considering the accused's plea for bail.

The accused's lawyer also sought permission for his client to surrender after the Deepavali festival. However, the court did not accept the request. Justice Joymalya Bagchi responded to the submission by telling the lawyer, "You do not surrender, the police will take care of you." The remarks underscored the Bench's refusal to grant the accused additional time or immediate relief.

The Supreme Court in New Delhi

The hearing reflects the judiciary's concern over cyber fraud and the growing challenges posed by crimes committed through digital platforms. Such offences can involve financial deception and misuse of technology, affecting individuals and institutions. The court's observations highlighted the seriousness with which it viewed allegations of cybercrime and the need for accountability.

The court's decision leaves the accused without the requested bail relief, while the police remain responsible for taking further action in accordance with the law.

Delhi court rejects plea seeking FIR against CM Rekha Gupta

A Delhi court dismissed a complaint seeking an FIR against Chief Minister Rekha Gupta over alleged remarks comparing officials to Lord Hanuman.

NEW DELHI

A Delhi court on Friday dismissed a complaint seeking registration of a First Information Report (FIR) against Chief Minister Rekha Gupta over her alleged remarks comparing Delhi government officials to Lord Hanuman.

Additional Chief Judicial Magistrate Ashwini Panwar dismissed the complaint. A detailed order explaining the court's decision is awaited. The complaint alleged that Gupta made the remarks on September 23, 2025, during an official government programme organised at Kashmere Gate Inter-State Bus Terminal.

The event marked the launch of Delhi Transport Corporation (DTC) bus services connecting Delhi with Baraut in Uttar Pradesh. The complainant had approached the court seeking police action over the chief minister's alleged statement.

On October 15, the Delhi Police submitted a status report stating that there was no basis for registering an FIR, as the alleged remarks did not disclose any cognisable offence.

Owaisi extends SSC fee aid to students

HYDERABAD

AIMIM president Asaduddin Owaisi distributed assistance for Secondary School Certificate (SSC) examination fees to nearly 1,700 students from Government Urdu Medium Schools in Hyderabad. The programme was sponsored by the Majlis Charities Educational and Relief Trust.

The Trust had earlier distributed nearly 12,000 educational kits, including school bags, long books and guide sets, to students in Classes 6 to 9 in September. In October, it provided All-in-One study material to around 8,000 Class 10 students across Telangana. About ₹86 lakh is being spent on educational assistance this year. Over 21 years, the Trust has spent nearly ₹10.50 crore on educational kits, examination fees, cash awards for SSC toppers and study materials for underprivileged students.

Addressing the gathering, Owaisi said the Gross Enrolment Ratio for Muslims was 40 per cent, while Telangana recorded 36 per cent, which he described as the highest among Indian states. He criticised the Centre for discontinuing pre-matric, post-matric and merit-cum-means scholarships for Muslim students over the past four years. He questioned the government's explanation that the decision was linked to alleged corruption during Mukhtar Abbas Naqvi's tenure and an ongoing CBI inquiry.

Owaisi cited education data showing Muslim dropout rates of 8 per cent at the primary level, 6 per cent at the secondary level and 4 per cent in higher education. He also referred to Uttar Pradesh government figures for 2021-22, which recorded higher rates of 17.3, 12.6 and 11.7 per cent respectively.

Kerala to review 488 bar licences granted under LDF

THIRUVANANTHAPURAM

Kerala Excise Minister M Liju said the United Democratic Front (UDF) government would closely examine 488 bar licences granted during the previous Left Democratic Front (LDF) administrations and act if irregularities were found. He was responding to allegations by former Excise Minister M B Rajesh over action against officials who issued licences under liquor policy.

Liju said the licences were granted after a rule amendment on June 23, 2017. The change allowed establishments that lost bar licences in 2014 and later operated as beer and wine parlours to apply afresh. Of the 488 licences, 410 were issued during the first Pinarayi Vijayan government and 78 during its second term. In 2014, the UDF government led by Oommen Chandy had restricted licences to five-star hotels, resulting in more than 700 hotels losing their licences.

The minister rejected the argument that Deputy Excise Commissioners had only renewed licences. He said the establishments had lost their licences years earlier, making the process a restoration rather than an annual renewal. Liju said the government would withdraw the authority given to Deputy Excise Commissioners to grant new FL 3 licences through the renewal provision.

Kerala government will scrutinise 488 bar licences granted under previous LDF administrations and take action if any irregularities are identified.

On FL 7 licences for airport transit lounges, Liju alleged that the Excise Commissioner granted two at Cochin International Airport in June without informing the government. An Excise Deputy Commissioner was removed, while two others were suspended over decisions contrary to government policy.

Liju said the department would upload every order on its website to improve transparency.

Tamil Nadu's Cauvery water shortage raises festival concerns

MAYILADUTHURAI

The dry condition of the Cauvery River at Tula Ghat has raised concern ahead of the Kadai Muga Theerthavari festival scheduled for November 16. With thousands of devotees expected to visit the town from across the region for the annual event, social activist Appar Sundaram has urged the Tamil Nadu government to release water from Mettur Dam in advance.

The festival is held during the Aippasi month and includes a ceremonial procession of deities from prominent temples, including Mayuranathaswamy, Ayyarappar and Vadhanyeswarar, to the Cauvery riverbanks for the sacred Theerthavari. Devotees traditionally take a holy dip in the river, but the dry riverbed has raised doubts over whether the rituals can take place as usual.

Stagnant water on the dry bed of the Cauvery.

Sundaram said the Cauvery normally carries water during this period, but its flow has been severely reduced because of the low water level in Mettur Dam. He warned that the lack of water could affect thousands of pilgrims travelling long distances to Mayiladuthurai for the festival.

He appealed to the State government and Chief Minister to arrange an early release from the dam so that water reaches Tula Ghat before November 16. Sundaram said immediate action was needed to preserve the traditional significance of the event and ensure that devotees were not disappointed. He also stressed that the religious ceremonies should be conducted without disruption.

GSRTC staff at the launch of the new buses.

GANDHINAGAR

Gujarat Deputy Chief Minister Harsh Sanghavi on Friday inaugurated 101 new buses of the Gujarat State Road Transport Corporation (GSRTC), marking their entry into public service ahead of Diwali. The new vehicles are expected to improve passenger comfort, strengthen connectivity between rural and urban areas and make travel easier during the festive period.

The inauguration ceremony was attended by Minister of State for Transport Pravin Mali. In a departure from the usual protocol, Sanghavi invited GSRTC employees to participate in flagging off the entire fleet. Drivers, conductors and workshop staff joined the ceremony and formally launched the buses for public use, recognising the contribution of employees to the transport network.

Sanghavi also announced that GSRTC employees would receive half a month's salary in advance to help them meet expenses and celebrate Diwali. Before the programme, he interacted with drivers, conductors and workshop personnel, acknowledged their role in keeping services operational and extended festive and New Year greetings to employees and their families.

The event brought together representatives from the state and local administration. Gandhinagar Municipal Corporation Mayor Rupsinh Thakor, District Panchayat President Rajesh Patel, and legislators Alpesh Thakor and Rita Patel were among those present. Transport Department Principal Secretary Hareet Shukla, GSRTC Vice Chairman and Managing Director Dr Rajender Kumar, GSRTC Secretary Ravi Nirmal and corporation employees also attended.

Cyclone Arnab floods Ganjam market, traders suffer heavy losses

GANJAM

The aftermath of Cyclone Arnab has caused extensive damage in Aska market and surrounding areas of Odisha's Ganjam district, with floodwaters submerging the marketplace for three days and leaving traders and residents struggling to recover their losses.

Damage estimate

Odisha Pradesh Congress Committee president BC Das, who visited the affected areas, estimated that the damage across Ganjam district exceeded ₹5,000 crore. He called for a comprehensive recovery plan, emphasising that financial compensation alone would not address the long-term challenges. Das urged the government to provide adequate assistance and strengthen drainage infrastructure to prevent similar devastation in the future.

Traders count losses

Local traders have suffered substantial losses as floodwaters damaged stocks and commercial establishments. With goods becoming unsellable, shopkeepers are disposing of surviving merchandise at heavily reduced prices. Garments originally priced at around ₹400 are being sold for just ₹100 to ₹150. Trader Sarat Ghadei estimated his losses at ₹5 lakh to ₹6 lakh, while larger businesses reported even greater damage.

Homes under water

The flooding also affected residential areas, including concrete houses constructed under the Pradhan Mantri Awas Yojana. Fisherman Paresh Nayak said his newly built house, which received ₹2 lakh in government assistance, was completely submerged. Residents were forced to move to higher ground, with villagers helping rescue elderly people, women and children. Nayak said recovering lost livelihoods could take four to five years.

Encroachments blamed

Residents also blamed unauthorised constructions along a local drainage channel for obstructing the natural flow of water towards the river, worsening flooding in nearby settlements and farmland. Meanwhile, Chief Minister Mohan Charan Majhi discussed relief, restoration and disaster-resilient infrastructure with Union Home Minister Amit Shah. An eight-member Central Inter-Ministerial Team also visited Odisha between November 2 and 4 to assess the cyclone damage.

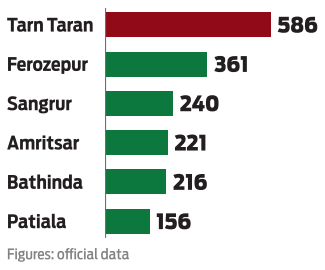

Punjab records 2,787 farm fires, 710 FIRs filed

CHANDIGARH

Punjab recorded 2,787 stubble-burning incidents between September 15 and November 5, 2026, with authorities registering 710 first information reports (FIRs) against those involved in the practice, according to official data. The figures highlight the continuing challenge of controlling farm fires during the paddy harvesting season.

Tarn Taran reported the highest number of incidents at 586, followed by Ferozepur with 361. Other districts also recorded significant cases, including Sangrur with 240, Amritsar with 221, Bathinda with 216 and Patiala with 156. The overall number of incidents had stood at 2,347 on November 4, indicating an increase of 440 cases by the following day.

Authorities have also initiated financial penalties to discourage farmers from burning crop residue. Environmental compensation exceeding ₹46 lakh has been imposed in 914 cases, while more than ₹24 lakh has been recovered so far. Police have registered 710 FIRs in connection with stubble-burning incidents as enforcement measures continue across the state.

Vehicle retail sales rise 25% month-on-month

MUMBAI

India's automobile retail sector recorded 31,72,466 vehicle registrations in October, marking a 25.05% increase over September, although sales declined 23.80% compared to October 2025. The Federation of Automobile Dealers Associations (FADA) said the year-on-year decline was largely due to an unusually high base last year, when Navratri and Diwali coincided in October.

The strongest performance came from the electric vehicle segment, which recorded an all-time high of approximately 3.55 lakh units, registering 44.88% year-on-year growth. Overall electric vehicle penetration increased to around 11.5% from approximately 6% a year earlier. Electric two-wheelers, three-wheelers, passenger vehicles and commercial vehicles all recorded their best-ever October sales.

According to FADA data, two-wheeler retail sales stood at 23,21,419 units, declining 28.35% year-on-year but increasing 29.67% over September. Passenger vehicle sales fell 14.23% compared to October 2025.

Commercial vehicles emerged as another strong performer, recording sales of 1,15,140 units, an increase of 2.29% year-on-year and 11.19% month-on-month.

India Strengthens Preparedness Against FMD SAT-1 Threat

India strengthened preparedness against FMD SAT-1 through a national exercise assessing surveillance, diagnostics, emergency vaccination and coordinated responses.

NEW DELHI

India has stepped up its preparedness against the potential entry of Foot-and-Mouth Disease (FMD) serotype SAT-1, a strain not yet reported in the country but increasingly monitored due to its spread beyond Africa into parts of West Asia.

The Department of Animal Husbandry and Dairying (DAHD), in collaboration with the ICAR-National Institute of Veterinary Epidemiology and Disease Informatics (ICAR-NIVEDI), conducted a two-day national tabletop exercise to assess the country's readiness to tackle a possible outbreak.

Held under the theme "Detect Early, Confirm Fast, Contain Together," the exercise focused on strengthening disease surveillance, improving diagnostic capabilities and ensuring coordinated responses to potential incursions of the transboundary animal disease. The initiative aims to protect livestock health, farmers' livelihoods and India's broader livestock economy.

A total of 83 participants representing 25 states, three Union Territories and several national institutions took part in the exercise.

Participants examined simulated outbreak scenarios and assessed preparedness across critical areas, including early disease detection, laboratory diagnosis, epidemiological investigations, animal movement restrictions, emergency vaccination strategies and risk communication.

Animal Husbandry Commissioner Dr. Naveena B.M. highlighted the importance of advance planning, early detection, rapid response and coordination between central and state authorities.

ICAR-NIVEDI Director Dr. Baldev R. Gulati stressed the need for risk-based surveillance, epidemiological intelligence and effective early warning systems to address emerging disease threats.

NEW DELHI

Union Minister for Fisheries, Animal Husbandry and Dairying Rajiv Ranjan Singh has called for further increasing India's fish production and productivity, stressing the need for measurable outcomes and stronger implementation of fisheries development programmes.

Chairing the 13th governing body meeting of the National Fisheries Development Board (NFDB) in Hyderabad, Singh appreciated the growth in fish production, which rose from 141.64 lakh tonnes in 2019-20 to 197.75 lakh tonnes. He urged the board to strengthen its role as a proactive development institution with greater outreach to fish farmers and closer coordination with states and Union Territories.

The minister emphasised timely completion and operationalisation of projects, along with effective utilisation of funds to improve fishers' incomes and livelihood security. He also called for focused support to northeastern and inland states to address gaps in production, supply and consumption and help them achieve self-sufficiency.

Dr. Abhilaksh Likhi, Secretary of the Department of Fisheries, highlighted the government's efforts to expand aquaculture and boost seafood exports, currently valued at approximately Rs 70,000 crore. He also stressed the need to strengthen NFDB's digital presence, simplify stakeholder support systems and encourage private investment through cooperatives, Fish Farmer Producer Organisations, start-ups and entrepreneurs.

State fisheries ministers sought continued central assistance for developing fish markets and Integrated Aqua Parks.

NCLT declares ex-Videocon promoter Venugopal Dhoot bankrupt

NEW DELHI

The National Company Law Tribunal (NCLT) has declared former Videocon Industries promoter Venugopal Nandlal Dhoot bankrupt, paving the way for proceedings to recover outstanding dues of more than Rs 12,668 crore owed to State Bank of India (SBI).

A Mumbai bench of the tribunal admitted SBI's petition under Section 123 of the Insolvency and Bankruptcy Code (IBC), initiating bankruptcy proceedings against Dhoot in his capacity as a personal guarantor for loans extended to Videocon Group companies.

The decision follows the failure of Dhoot's personal insolvency resolution process after creditors rejected his proposed repayment plan. The tribunal appointed insolvency professional Asish Narayan as the bankruptcy trustee and directed that Dhoot's estate be vested in him for administration and distribution among creditors.

According to SBI, Dhoot's outstanding liabilities amounted to Rs 12,668.06 crore, including interest and penalties, as of September 30.

SBI had invoked the personal guarantees in February 2018 following loan defaults by the group.

During the insolvency resolution process, Dhoot proposed repaying Rs 600 crore over three years through a proposed real estate development project in Siliguri. The proposed amount was less than one per cent of the admitted claims.

However, the resolution professional raised concerns over the proposal, citing its dependence on future project approvals, uncertain cash flows and the absence of any upfront payment.

Smart meter installations must rise to 2.5 lakh a day, says report

NEW DELHI

India will need to accelerate smart meter installations to nearly 2.5 lakh meters per day to achieve its target of deploying 25 crore smart meters by March 2028, a report said on Friday.

The report noted that around 6.5 crore smart meters had been installed across the country as of April 2026, representing nearly one quarter of the target.

The required pace is more than 2.5 times the roughly 99,000 meters installed daily in FY26, while installation rates have improved significantly.

Maharashtra accounts for around 1.1 crore installations, or 17% of the cumulative total, while Maharashtra, Bihar and Uttar Pradesh together contribute nearly 47% of all installations. However, deployment remains uneven across states.

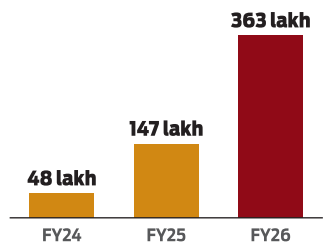

Uttar Pradesh has installed around 32% of its sanctioned volumes, compared with approximately 52% in Bihar, highlighting the importance of execution capabilities and state-level implementation in translating allocations into actual deployment.

The report estimated that full-scale smart meter deployment could generate cumulative additional revenue of approximately Rs 1.84 lakh crore over the five years ending FY31, through improved billing and collection efficiency and lower Aggregate Technical and Commercial (AT&C) losses.

Sector indicators have improved, with AT&C losses declining from 20.73% in FY20 to 15.04% in FY25.

Smart metering could raise billing efficiency to 97% to 98%, increase collection efficiency beyond 99% under prepaid models and reduce AT&C losses to around 12%.

Deepinder Goyal in face-off with doctors over wearable

NEW DELHI

Temple, the wearable device startup founded by former Eternal CEO Deepinder Goyal, has come under scrutiny from doctors over its scientific claims, prompting the entrepreneur to publicly defend the product and reject allegations that it is misleading consumers. In a series of posts on social media platform X, Goyal said Temple's claims would be quickly tested by users once the device reaches customers, noting that the company offers a 14-day no-questions-asked return policy.

He said Temple has invested about $30 million in developing the wearable, including around $20 million of his own capital, saying that the scale of investment and long-term commitment behind the project run counter to suggestions that it is a fraudulent venture.

Goyal, who said he stepped away from his role as CEO of Eternal to focus on Temple, maintained that his reputation was tied to ensuring the science behind the product is accurate.

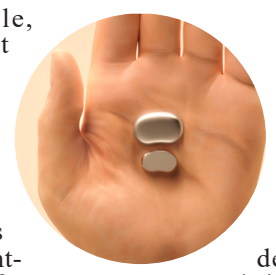

The comments come amid mounting criticism from doctors, led by hepatologist Cyriac Abby Philips, popularly known online as The Liver Doc.

Philips has publicly questioned Temple's scientific claims, particularly its ability to assess brain-related metrics through measurements from the superficial temporal artery.

In posts on X, Philips alleged that the company had not provided sufficient evidence to support claims related to brain blood flow and other advanced metrics.

He argued that existing public material and preprint research papers do not conclusively establish the device's claimed capabilities and accused the company of overstating the science behind the product.

India and Japan will mark 75 years of diplomatic relations in 2027, with growing business links adding another chapter to their partnership.

Japanese semiconductor component maker Tem Tech Lab is looking to expand its presence in India, according to report. The company sees opportunities in supplying components, maintaining factories and providing services.

Founded in 1982, Tem Tech focuses on sensor technology and system development. Aizawa said flexibility allows the company to respond to different customer needs.

Its pressure sensor range now includes more than 30 types, designed to work with different systems. Overseas business accounts for 70 per cent of sales, with customers in countries including the United States, South Korea, Taiwan, China and Malaysia.

The relationship has deep roots. India and Japan established diplomatic relations in 1952. Their economic cooperation grew over subsequent decades, with Japan beginning yen loans to India in 1958.

Pakistan's malnutrition crisis demands stronger joint action

FAISALABAD

More than 40 per cent of children and women in Pakistan face malnutrition, according to a report citing officials, who called for stronger cooperation to improve diets and tackle food insecurity.

Punjab Higher Education Commission Chairperson Professor Iqrar Ahmad Khan said growing more food alone would not solve the problem. Universities, researchers and development partners needed to work together on practical nutrition measures, he said.

Khan was speaking at the closing session of an international conference at the University of Agriculture Faisalabad. The Pak-Korea Nutrition Centre organized the event, which focused on partnerships and policy.

He explained that the centre initially concentrated on farm production, food supply and links between human, animal and environmental health. However, widespread malnutrition showed that these efforts also needed a clear focus on nutrition.

The centre later widened its work to include improving skills, cutting food waste and finding practical answers to community problems.

Professor Imran Pasha, dean of the university's Faculty of Food, Nutrition and Home Sciences, urged federal and provincial authorities to develop a joint national plan with universities, research institutions and international partners.

He also proposed a Centre of Excellence in Nutrition at the university to support research, improve policies and bring institutions together.

Pasha said better monitoring was needed in places that influence what people eat, especially children. Such evidence could help authorities develop healthier food policies.

11 die as bus collides with truck in Pakistan

ISLAMABAD

At least 11 people were killed and 33 injured when a passenger bus collided with a truck near Pakpattan in Pakistan's Punjab province, according to media reports on Friday.

Rescue 1122 said 11 people died at the scene. Eight others suffered minor injuries, while 25 were taken to hospitals in Pakpattan for treatment, Dawn reported.

Emergency workers spent three hours freeing people trapped in the wreckage. Cranes and other heavy machinery were brought in to help rescuers reach the victims.

The collision comes against a pattern of road accidents across Punjab.

Liberman softens draft stance, opens coalition door

TEL AVIV

Yisrael Beyteinu leader Avigdor Liberman said on Friday he was ready to compromise on military service rules for ultra-Orthodox Jewish men and consider joining a government with their parties.

The shift reverses his opposition to such an alliance as political leaders seek a way forward after Israel's election.

Liberman indicated that he could support a government led by Yashar leader Gadi Eisenkot. However, he maintained that any coalition must avoid relying on the Arab parties, Ra'am and the Joint List.

In a statement on X, he set out three priorities: ending Benjamin Netanyahu's time in power, preventing another election and rejecting a government dependent on those parties. He said his party would vote against a government relying on their support or abstention.

On other matters, including the draft law, Liberman argued that compromise was necessary. He acknowledged that changing his position would upset supporters but said national interests had to come first.

Liberman's three priorities

1. Ending Benjamin Netanyahu's time in power
2. Preventing another election
3. No government dependent on the Arab parties

The draft dispute concerns military service for ultra-Orthodox men, an issue on which Liberman has demanded change.

He also warned that a minority government could prove unstable and allow Netanyahu to return stronger.

Citing the Bennett-Lapid government formed in 2021, which lasted just over a year, he argued that another short-lived administration could produce a similar outcome.

The raids followed a reported military operation in Kolwah last week. Twenty-one people allegedly detained during that operation had been identified, while details of others remained unclear.

Premier League demands constant focus: Alonso

NEW DELHI

Chelsea manager Xabi Alonso has described the Premier League as one of the most demanding football competitions, stressing that no team can afford to lose concentration at any stage of a match.

Alonso said the quality of teams and players across the English top flight makes every fixture challenging, regardless of the opponent's position in the standings.

Chelsea have made a positive start to the 2026-27 Premier League season, occupying fourth place with 16 points from nine matches. However, Alonso acknowledged that his team still needs to improve defensively.

He said conceding goals had become an area of concern and stressed that reducing defensive mistakes was essential for the club's progress. According to him, several goals conceded this season resulted from individual errors rather than opponents successfully breaking through Chelsea's defensive structure. Alonso called for greater compactness, improved decision-making and stronger performances in individual duels. He also emphasised that defending should not be considered the responsibility of defenders alone, as it begins with the forwards and their pressing efforts.

The Chelsea manager also spoke about England international Cole Palmer's role in the team's attacking setup. He identified the central attacking midfield position as Palmer's most effective role.

Alonso explained that Palmer could create scoring opportunities, deliver decisive passes and make dangerous runs when operating between the opposition's midfield and defensive lines.

The manager expressed confidence that Chelsea would continue improving through consistent preparation, collective responsibility and better performances in both defence and attack.

Nayar doubts Kohli can reach century milestone

NEW DELHI

Former India assistant coach Abhishek Nayar believes Virat Kohli may not have enough matches before the 2027 ODI World Cup to reach the landmark of 100 international centuries. Although he hopes the batting star achieves the feat, Nayar feels the limited number of opportunities could make it difficult.

Nayar discussed Kohli's prospects alongside former India batter Cheteshwar Pujara. Kohli currently holds the record for the most centuries in men's ODI cricket, with 55 hundreds. He surpassed Sachin Tendulkar's previous record of 49 centuries and became the first batter to score 50 ODI hundreds during the 2023 World Cup semi-final against New Zealand in Mumbai.

Nayar said the number of matches available before the next World Cup might not be sufficient for Kohli to reach 100 international centuries. He also pointed out that Kohli's motivation after the 2027 tournament could be different.

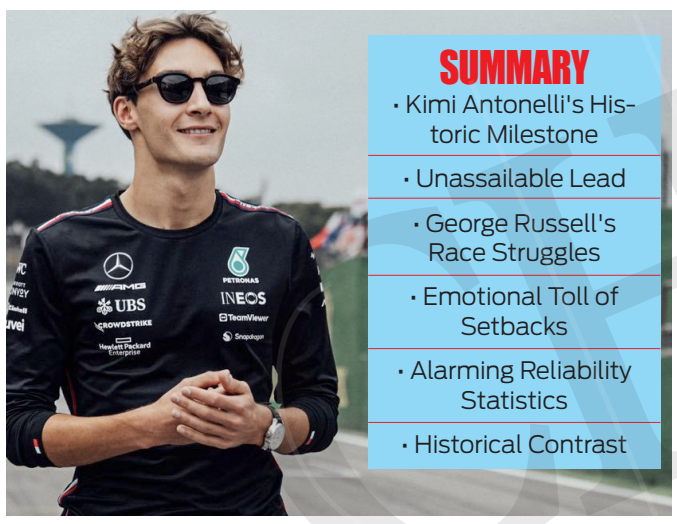

The discussion also focused on India's search for another seam-bowling all-rounder to support Hardik Pandya. Nayar suggested grooming an additional option who could play alongside Hardik, providing greater batting depth and flexibility, particularly on overseas tours to New Zealand and South Africa.

He also backed the revival of tri-nation and quadrangular ODI tournaments, saying they would make matches more competitive and improve fan engagement. Nayar recalled memorable multi-nation contests, including Sachin Tendulkar's famous performance against Australia in Sharjah.

Pujara agreed that India should develop Nitish Kumar Reddy as a backup for Hardik, considering the latter's fitness concerns.

Russell opens up after Antonelli's historic triumph

SAO PAULO

Mercedes driver George Russell has opened up about his disappointment after watching teammate Kimi Antonelli secure his maiden Formula One world championship, admitting that he wanted to leave the venue following another frustrating race affected by technical problems.

Antonelli became the youngest Formula One world champion after finishing third at the Mexico City Grand Prix. His points tally of 380 made him uncatchable with four races remaining in the season.

Russell congratulated Antonelli and his family on the historic achievement but left the scene without attending the post-race media commitments. He finished sixth after starting from second position, with deployment issues affecting his performance.

Speaking ahead of the Brazilian Grand Prix in Sao Paulo, Russell said he was extremely disappointed, particularly because another promising result had slipped away due to circumstances beyond his control.

He described the season as a continuous cycle of setbacks and recovery, saying the repeated problems had taken an emotional toll. He admitted that after the Mexico race, he simply wanted to leave and spend time away from the disappointment.

Russell also revealed the extent of Mercedes' technical difficulties this season. According to him, a review with his race engineer showed that the team had encountered problems in 14 races, while only six races passed without any issues.

He compared this record with previous seasons, saying that he had generally experienced only two problematic races annually, while the team faced four such races in 2023.

Despite the difficult campaign, Russell said he was ready to return to competition after four days of recovery. He emphasised the importance of resilience, adding that difficult seasons should not define an individual's career.

He expressed determination to overcome the setbacks and return stronger for the remaining races.

Mumbai City FC parts ways with Marquez

NEW DELHI

Mumbai City FC and head coach Manolo Marquez have mutually agreed to part ways for the remainder of the 2026-27 Indian Super League (ISL) season following the club's disappointing start to the campaign.

The club announced the decision on Friday after failing to secure a victory in its opening four matches. Mumbai City suffered defeats against Churchill Brothers and Sporting Club Delhi, while managing draws against Kerala Blasters and Punjab FC.

Marquez, who joined the Mumbai-based club ahead of the current season on a one-year contract, will now end his association with the Islanders. The management expressed confidence in the existing squad and said its priority was to improve performances in the upcoming matches.

In an official statement, Mumbai City FC confirmed that the decision was mutually agreed upon. The club also indicated that it would continue its campaign with the current squad while exploring opportunities to strengthen the team.

Director of Football Sujay Sharma said the club was navigating a new phase in Indian football and remained focused on supporting the first team and achieving its objectives for the season. He added that further updates regarding the squad and coaching arrangements would be communicated through official channels.

The club also stated that neither party would make further comments on the matter.

Marquez brought considerable experience in Indian football to Mumbai City. He guided Hyderabad FC to their maiden ISL title during the 2021-22 season before taking charge of FC Goa, where he won back-to-back Super Cup titles and led the team in the AFC Champions League Two campaign.

The Spanish coach also served as head coach of the Indian national football team alongside his club responsibilities.

His departure comes as Mumbai City look to revive their campaign and improve their position in the ongoing ISL season.

CABI announces squad for Women's T20 series

GURUGRAM

The Cricket Association for the Blind in India (CABI) has announced a 17-member Indian women's squad for the upcoming five-match bilateral T20 series against Nepal, scheduled to be held from December 2 to 8 at The Ball Park Cricket Ground in Gurugram.

The series, titled the Women's T20 Cricket Series for the Visually Impaired, will mark the return of India's reigning world champions to international cricket on home soil.

The Indian team will face Nepal following their memorable encounter in the inaugural Women's T20 Blind Cricket World Cup, where India defeated Nepal to claim the historic championship title. The upcoming series is expected to provide both teams with valuable international exposure and an opportunity to showcase their talent.

Ahead of the competition, the Indian women's blind cricket team will attend an intensive coaching camp in Gurugram beginning November 16. The camp will focus on improving cricketing skills, physical fitness, tactical preparation, team combinations and match readiness.

CABI Chairman Mahantesh G. Kivadasannavar said the series would provide players with valuable international experience and help strengthen women's blind cricket in India. He also thanked IIFL Home Finance Limited for supporting the initiative.

Girish Kousgi, Managing Director and CEO of IIFL Home Finance, said the organisation was proud to support the world champion athletes through its corporate social responsibility partnership with Samarthanam Trust for the Disabled.

The initiative reflects the joint efforts of CABI, Samarthanam Trust and IIFL Home Finance to promote inclusive sports and create greater opportunities for visually impaired women athletes.

AARYAVIR SEHWAG POWERS INDIA TO DOMINANT VICTORY

OMAN

India Under-19 began their campaign in the ACC Men's U-19 Asia Cup 2026 with a convincing 10-wicket victory over Nepal at the Al Amerat Cricket Ground on Friday.

An unbeaten half-century from Aaryavir Sehwag and a disciplined bowling performance helped India register a commanding win.

After winning the toss, India elected to bowl and restricted Nepal to 128 runs in 42.3 overs. India's bowlers maintained pressure throughout the innings, preventing Nepal from building substantial partnerships.

Ishan Sood led the attack with an impressive spell of three wickets for 18 runs in his 10 overs, including four maiden overs. He struck early, dismissing Prashiddha Jaishi, Suryanshu Koirala and Nischal Chhetri to reduce Nepal to 27 for three.

Arjun Rajput also claimed three wickets for eight runs, while Yashveer Goud picked up two wickets. Manal Chauhan and Kavya Patel took one wicket each.

For Nepal, Darsh Sonar was the highest scorer with 43 runs off 93 deliveries. Wicket-keeper-batter Aashish Luhar contributed 29 runs off 45 balls, but their efforts could not prevent Nepal from being bowled out for 128.

India made light work of the 129-run target, reaching 129 without losing a wicket in just 19.1 overs. Aaryavir Sehwag, son of former India opener Virender Sehwag, remained unbeaten on 70 off 52 deliveries, hitting seven fours and four sixes. Captain Lakshya Rajesh Raichandani provided excellent support with an unbeaten 53 off 63 balls.

Brook targets higher fitness standards ahead of Australia series

AUSTRALIA

England captain Harry Brook has emphasised the need to improve the team's fitness, preparation and performance standards ahead of the upcoming white-ball series against Australia, as the side begins its preparations for next year's ODI World Cup in Africa.

England are scheduled to play three One-Day Internationals (ODIs) and five Twenty20 Internationals (T20Is) against Australia Down Under. Brook believes the series will provide an important opportunity to strengthen the team's skills, improve physical conditioning and build consistency ahead of the global tournament.

With the World Cup just 12 months away, Brook said England must focus on learning from previous experiences and developing into one of the fittest and strongest teams in international cricket.

He also stressed that while victories cannot always be guaranteed, players and support staff can take responsibility for improving their preparations away from the field. Better preparation, he believes, can contribute significantly to winning matches.
