INDIAN ₹ GOES PLASTIC

Centre approves 1 billion polymer notes each of Rs 10 and Rs 20 for field trials; paper notes will continue alongside them.

NEW DELHI

The Centre has approved the Reserve Bank of India's (RBI) proposal to begin field trials of polymer (plastic) banknotes in the Rs 10 and Rs 20 denominations, Finance Minister Nirmala Sitharaman informed the Rajya Sabha on Tuesday.

The RBI, following a recommendation from its Central Board, had proposed the move under Section 25 of the RBI Act, 1934. If the trials are successful, polymer notes in both denominations may be issued regularly.

But, the move has sparked curiosity with many wondering whether India is preparing to phase out traditional paper currency. But, the government has made it clear that there is no proposal to replace existing paper banknotes. Instead, the polymer notes will circulate alongside paper notes to see how they perform in real-world conditions before any larger decision is taken.

As part of the pilot, the RBI plans to issue 100 crore Rs 10 notes and 100 crore Rs 20 notes, taking the total trial to 200 crore polymer banknotes worth around Rs 3,000 crore. If the field trials are successful, the central bank may consider regular issuance of these denominations.

Polymer currency trial in depth

Denominations
₹10 and ₹20 notes will go plastic first

Trial quantity
2 billion total banknotes (1 billion pieces each).

Field trials
Testing in Indian Conditions

Timeline
Expected to launch around early FY28 (starting around April 2027/2028).

Paper currency status
No plans to phase out or replace existing paper money; polymer notes will circulate alongside standard paper notes.

Why is the RBI making the switch?

Lifespan
Designed to last two to four times longer than regular paper notes.

Durability
Higher resistance to moisture, dirt, and daily wear and tear.

Security
Enhanced features that make counterfeiting much harder while cutting long-term replacement costs.

Economic impact
Saving costs and space

Why only Rs 10, Rs 20 notes?

These are among the most widely used notes in daily transactions. In terms of the number of banknotes in circulation, they account for nearly a quarter of all currency notes in India, even though their value share is relatively small. Their high usage makes them the ideal candidates for testing durability under everyday conditions.

Will digital payments be affected?

Not immediately. The government told Parliament that the impact on digital payments can only be assessed after the notes are issued on a regular basis. For now, the proposal is limited to field trials.

What happens to paper notes?

The existing Rs 10 and Rs 20 paper notes remain legal tender and will continue to circulate even after the polymer trial begins. The RBI's step is meant to test whether plastic notes are better suited for India's cash economy, not to replace paper currency overnight.

Global adoption of polymer notes

India is far from the first country to explore plastic currency. Countries including Australia, Canada, the United Kingdom, New Zealand, Singapore and Romania already use polymer banknotes. These countries report that the notes remain cleaner for longer, survive rough handling better and are harder to counterfeit than conventional paper currency.

Security and counterfeiting

The fight against counterfeiting is getting smarter. Polymer banknotes have strong security features to stay ahead of fakes. The polymer material makes it possible to include many advanced security elements. These security features are often built right into the polymer substrate. They are hard to copy. Banknote designers use things like tiny printing, special inks, clear windows, and raised parts. These help keep counterfeits away. Also, each banknote has its own serial numbers. This helps in tracking and catching counterfeiters.

Advantages of plastic notes

The good things about polymer banknotes go beyond their toughness and security features. One important benefit is that they are cleaner. Paper banknotes can hold dirt and bacteria, but polymer notes are non-porous. This means germs have a hard time sticking to them. This makes polymer notes a more hygienic choice for daily transactions. Also, using polymer banknotes helps the environment as well.

When will plastic notes reach public?

There is no confirmed timeline yet for when the new polymer notes will reach the hands of the public. The Finance Ministry said the procurement process is currently at an initial stage. Because the process has only just begun, it is not possible at present to determine the exact timeframe for introducing polymer banknotes or the expenditure involved. The govt approval therefore marks the start of the process rather than an immediate rollout. For now, paper currency remains in circulation.

Give TN 12,000 cusecs for 15 days: CWRC to K'taka

NEW DELHI

In a setback for Karnataka in the ongoing Cauvery water-sharing dispute, the Cauvery Water Regulation Committee (CWRC) on Tuesday directed the state to ensure the release of 12,000 cusecs of water daily to Tamil Nadu for the next 15 days, starting from 8am on August 12. The water is to be released at the inter-state Biligundlu gauge station.

The direction came after the CWRC reviewed submissions from both Karnataka and Tamil Nadu, along with reservoir storage levels, Central Water Commission (CWC) data and a seven-day inflow forecast for the Krishnaraja Sagar and Kabini reservoirs. While issuing the order, CWRC said it had adopted a cautious approach in view of the unpredictable weather pattern and the possibility of worsening El Niño conditions.

During the meeting, Karnataka argued that it was facing severe hydrological distress, stating that inflows into its four Cauvery reservoirs stood at 77.746 TMC, nearly 47 per cent below the 30-year average, and were declining sharply. The state contended that there was no scope for further releases, citing the need to conserve water for drinking purposes, essential needs and agriculture. Karnataka also urged the CWRC to defer any fresh directions until the monsoon situation became clearer.

Tamil Nadu, on the other hand, sought a revision of the earlier CWRC direction to release 3,500 cusecs for 15 days, arguing that the quantity was not based on a scientific distress-sharing formula. Despite Karnataka's objections, the CWRC directed the state to ensure flows of 12,000 cusecs at Biligundlu from August 12 for the next 15 days.

Committee directive

Quantum: 12,000 cusecs (cubic feet per second) per day.

Duration: 15 days starting from 8:00 am on August 12, 2026.

Measurement point: Biligundlu inter-state border.

Enforcing body: Endorsed by the CWMA during its 55th meeting.

State stances and reactions

Karnataka's position: Argued that inflows into its four basin reservoirs (KRS, Kabini, Hemavathi, Harangi) are 47% below normal averages and water must be conserved for drinking and local agriculture. Karnataka is examining legal remedies and plans to petition the Supreme Court.

Tamil Nadu's position: Maintained that its downstream cropping requirements and water deficits justify the immediate release of its entitled share.

Protests: Farmer and regional outfits in Karnataka have criticized the order, heightening local political tensions.

Maintain law and order in Mandya: CM to babus

BENGALURU

Following the CWRC's move, Karnataka Chief Minister DK Shivakumar, who was holding a video conference meeting with officials on other subjects, discussed the fallout of the order.

He informed officials that the committee had ordered Karnataka to release 12,000 cusecs of water and said the state government would take an appropriate decision on the matter.

He directed local officials to ensure that law and order is strictly maintained in Mandya district amid intense protests over the Cauvery water-sharing dispute, emphasizing that protecting peace is the direct responsibility of the district administration and police.

"Law and order has to be maintained. There should not be any unnecessary incidents. The DC and SP have to take care of it."

He added: "We're getting rain and there is water, we can't hold onto the water and keep it. We will release how much ever we can. Farmers have to be educated about it. We are protecting our farmers. We will hold meetings in the next 3-4 days."

Shivakumar also instructed the Mandya deputy commissioner and superintendent of police to remain vigilant and ensure that law and order is maintained in the district in view of the sensitive nature of the Cauvery issue. He said necessary measures had already been taken to protect the interests of farmers and appealed to all stakeholders to act responsibly.

Shivakumar asked district officials to immediately inform the government about any local issues arising out of the CWRC order, assuring them that he would personally monitor the situation and gather all relevant information before taking further steps.

LS clears 'Keralam', 'Co-operative' bills

New Delhi: The Lok Sabha on Tuesday passed two bills — the Kerala (Alteration of Name) Bill, 2026, and the National Co-operative Development Corporation (Amendment) Bill, 2026 — without a debate in roughly 14 minutes.

This occurred amid continuous Opposition protests demanding the presence of Union Home Minister Amit Shah. The Kerala (Alteration of Name) Bill, 2026, which seeks to change the state's official name to Keralam, and legislation concerning the National Co-operative Development Corporation were cleared amid the din, with no formal debate.

Prez nod to Bill criminalising insult to Vande Mataram

New Delhi: President Droupadi Murmu on Tuesday gave assent to the Prevention of Insults to National Honour (Amendment) Bill, 2026, giving Vande Mataram the same statutory legal protection as the National Anthem, Jana Gana Mana. The amendment expands the 1971 law to cover intentional prevention of the National Song's singing or disturbance of an assembly engaged in its rendition. Such offences can attract up to three years in prison, a fine, or both. However, the move has also drawn criticism from the Opposition.

NDA-INDIA lock horns outside Parliament

New Delhi: Opposition and ruling party MPs staged counter protests and raised slogans against each other outside Parliament on Thursday. A large number of MPs belonging to both camps stood outside the Makar Dwar of Parliament and raised slogans against the other side. While the ruling party MPs raised slogans against the Opposition for politicising the paper leak issue and raised slogans like "sharam karo, sharam karo" and "Vande Mataram", the opposition INDIA bloc MPs demanded the resignation of Dharmendra Pradhan. Congress leader Sonia Gandhi also took part in the stir.

NASA invites ISRO to set up first human outpost on Moon

NEW DELHI

The USA's National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) has invited Indian Space Research Organisation (ISRO) to be a partner in the ambitious Moon Base programme in which the US space agency plans to build the first human outpost on the Moon.

The Moon Base is humanity's first lunar outpost, a place where astronauts would live, work, and explore near the Moon's South Pole.

Through a series of crewed and uncrewed missions, NASA and its partners would build the infrastructure needed to support an enduring human presence on the lunar surface while advancing science, technology, and exploration for the benefit of all.

The invitation to India was extended during a bilateral meeting on space-cooperation held in Bengaluru last week, the US Embassy said in a statement.

ISRO chairman V Narayanan and US Ambassador Sergio Gor addressed the meeting which was co-chaired by M Sankaran, director, UR Rao Satellite Centre and on the US side by Wesley Brooks, Assistant Secretary of State for Oceans and International Environmental and Scientific Affairs and Kathleen Karika, NASA Associate Administrator for International and Interagency Relations.

What is NASA's Moon base programme?

NASA is embarking on one of the most ambitious endeavours in human history: building humanity's first outpost on another celestial body. Located near the lunar South Pole, the Moon Base will be built step by step through a series of robotic and human missions that help astronauts learn how to live and operate in one of the most demanding and dangerous environments humans have ever set out to explore. Sonia hails Manmohan as 'quiet but consequential PM

NEW DELHI

History will remember Manmohan Singh as a "quiet but a most consequential prime minister", Congress leader Sonia Gandhi said in a signed article on Tuesday, adding that his record of integrity stands in stark contrast with the Modi government's.

She also said that Singh's prophetic prediction of January 2014 is becoming increasingly self-evident with every passing day, in an apparent reference to his then statement that it would be "disastrous for the country" to have Narendra Modi as the prime minister.

The Congress Parliamentary Party chairperson's remarks in the article published in The Indian Express come days after the Supreme Court gave former PM Singh a clean chit in the coal block allocation case.

"History will indeed remember him kindly as a quiet, gentle but a most consequential prime minister," she said.

She said the judgement brings to a conclusion one of the most tragic arcs of our public discourse — "the witch-hunt against Dr Singh, a man of the most remarkable probity and integrity".

"Nagendra has to be in court every day. He is still an accused. In this situation, when will he come to Vidhana Soudha? When will he do the department's work?" Ashoka asked.

Harmful chemicals in cosmetics will invite ban: Khader

Karnataka may ban cosmetics containing harmful chemicals after laboratory tests confirm safety violations.

CH NEWS, BENGALURU

The statement came after Food Safety and Drug Administration (FSDA) officials collected 22 cosmetic samples, including lipstick, sunscreen, soap, shampoo and talcum powder, from roadside vendors, malls and showrooms across Bengaluru on Monday.

FSDA Commissioner Srinivas K. said preliminary analysis had detected carcinogenic substances in some products. Officials also identified 23 types of heavy metals and chemicals in various cosmetics. Samples will undergo laboratory testing, following which the government will decide on further action against brands.

Congress synonymous with corruption, alleges Chalavadi

CH NEWS, BENGALURU

BJP leader and Legislative Council Opposition Leader Chalavadi Narayanaswamy on Tuesday accused the Congress of being synonymous with corruption and alleged that the party had introduced corruption to the country.

Speaking at the BJP state office Jagannatha Bhavan in Malleswaram, in the presence of State BJP president B.Y. Vijayendra and Assembly Opposition Leader R. Ashoka, he alleged that Congress leaders selectively raised issues and later avoided responsibility.

Referring to protests at Jantar Mantar over the NEET issue, Narayanaswamy alleged that the Congress had mobilised protests in the name of students. He claimed disruptive forces subsequently attempted to create a threat to the country, following which the Centre introduced stringent measures.

He criticised Congress leader Rahul Gandhi, alleging that he opposed both examination leaks and measures aimed at preventing them.

"What did Rahul Gandhi do then? He opposed the leaks as well as measures to prevent leaks. Isn't this a double standard?" Narayanaswamy asked.

Referring to student protests in Jharkhand, he said students were demanding justice over alleged injustice. He alleged that the Congress and its ally were in power in the State and accused the government of suppressing protesting students. "Where have those who protested at Jantar Mantar disappeared?" he asked. Narayanaswamy said the BJP would stand with the struggles of young people and urged citizens to contribute to national security.

Prakash Raj claims name deleted from Bengaluru electoral rolls

CH NEWS, BENGALURU

Actor Prakash Raj on Tuesday claimed that his name had been deleted from the electoral rolls in Bengaluru during the ongoing Special Intensive Revision (SIR) of electoral rolls.

In a video posted on his X account, the National Award-winning actor said he was among the 65 lakh voters whose names had allegedly been removed from the electoral rolls following the revision.

"I am one of the 65 lakh voters whose vote rights have been deleted from Bangalore constituency after SIR," Raj said, describing the development as a "joke".

He said he was born and educated in Bengaluru and had been associated with theatre in the city.

Raj also pointed out that he had contested as an MP candidate from the constituency. He said he would now find out the procedure required to restore his name and voter ID.

"Kya kya kagaz dikhana padega (what all papers will I have to show) to get back my voter ID?" he said.

Taking a swipe at the Centre, Raj alleged that authorities could use their powers to deny some citizens the right to vote but questioned whether they could prevent voters from defeating those in power.

There was no immediate response from Election Commission officials regarding Raj's claim.

However, reports said his name appeared in the ASDDO (Absent, Shifted, Dead, Duplicate and Others) list of Bangalore Central's Shantinagar constituency, with "permanently shifted" cited as the reason.

ITMS sends traffic penalty notices across Haveri

CH NEWS, HAVERI
Motorists violating traffic rules in Haveri city are now receiving penalty notices through the Intelligent Traffic Management System (ITMS). Introduced in late July, the system uses artificial intelligence and cameras to identify violations and is helping create greater awareness about road safety among motorists. ITMS cameras have been installed near Hosamani Siddappa Circle, Kaginele Cross and Gutthal Cross. They capture vehicle registration numbers when motorists break rules. At present, notices are being sent to about 100 violators each day through messages to registered mobile numbers. Police officials said notices will also be delivered to offenders' homes in the coming days. Superintendent of Police Yashoda Vantagodi said penalties are being issued for riding without helmets, driving without seat belts, using mobile phones while driving and carrying three people on two-wheelers. She said the system has already encouraged more riders to wear helmets and urged everyone to follow safety rules. Police also plan to strengthen the system further. Residents welcomed the initiative but requested cameras at more important junctions, including Subhas, Basaveshwara, Ambedkar, JP, Valmiki, G.H. Patel and Mahatma Gandhi Circles. Rider Ravindra Shettar said wider camera coverage would discourage motorists from avoiding monitored roads. Residents also sought more zebra crossings and better public education on traffic rules. Officials believe wider implementation can improve road discipline and reduce accidents.

Former Council chairman says resignation hurt him deeply

HUBBALLI
Former chairman of the Karnataka Legislative Council Basavaraj Horatti said he was deeply hurt by the events that led to his resignation. Speaking to reporters at his home office in Hubballi on Tuesday, he said such a development had happened for the first time since 1956, when a chairman was asked to resign. Horatti said Chief Minister D.K. Shivakumar had earlier asked for his resignation. He told the Chief Minister that he would resign on August 14, when the House resumed after the condolence motion. However, on August 7, the Chief Minister, KPCC president and about 20 legislators arrived at the annexe and pressed him to resign immediately.

He said he tried to avoid confrontation and explained that he had already announced his resignation date. The group, however, remained firm and even had the resignation letter typed. To calm the situation, Horatti signed it.

He said the law required the Chairman to submit his resignation to the Deputy Chairman. Since that post was vacant, he wanted to complete the appointment process first. Shocked by the sudden events, he wrote to the Governor to inform him about what had happened. He stressed that it was not a complaint. Horatti said the Council had been a model for country, making developments painful for him. He was upset that he was not allowed to deliver a speech and thank members for their support during his tenure. He said Congress should not have announced a candidate for constitutional post on party letterhead. Horatti said he would continue attending House proceedings as a member.

AT A GLANCE

- Horatti resigned as Council Chairman on August 7.
- Congress planned a no-confidence motion against Horatti.
- Congress nominated Saleem Ahmed for Chairman's post.
- Horatti alleged pressure from the Congress government.
- He said Shivakumar wanted an earlier resignation.
- Resignation triggered fresh Congress-BJP-JD(S) political confrontation.

She was speaking after inaugurating a free self-employment training camp organised by Darideepa Mahila Multipurpose Organisation in Gadag. Deepa Hanumantha Gowda attended as the guest of honour. SAVE EMERGENCY ACCESS

Koppal hospital relocation raises serious emergency concerns

CH NEWS, KOPPAL
Several organisations in Koppal have urged the district administration and elected representatives to continue the district hospital in its old building on Hospet Road until the Kidadala Railway Overbridge is completed. The appeal was submitted on Tuesday by groups led by the Janapara Sangathanagala Samyukta Vedike, opposing the hospital's relocation to the KIMS premises. The organisations said the shift had created serious problems for patients, especially those needing emergency treatment. They pointed to the Kidadala railway gate, which is frequently closed because of train movements. Ambulances carrying critically ill patients, including heart attack and accident victims, can reportedly get stuck near the gate. The groups warned that such delays could cost lives because emergency patients need treatment within the important golden hour. They said patients may not reach the hospital on time if ambulances are held at the railway crossing. The organisations stressed that immediate access to medical care was essential for poor and ordinary patients. The alliance warned that officials and elected representatives could face responsibility if patients died because timely medical treatment is unavailable. It named Koppal Deputy Commissioner, KIMS Director Dr. Vijayanath Itagi, District In-charge Minister Shivraj Thangadagi, MLA Raghavendra B. Hitnal and MP Rajashekar B. Hitnal in its warning. The organisations demanded that the old district hospital be reopened for public service until the fly-over construction is finished. S.A. Gafar, Basavaraj Sheelvantar, Channabasappa Appannavar, Makhbool Raichur and leader Galeppa Mungoli urged authorities to act quickly. They said any delay or loss of life would make the administration responsible.

He said water had reached the Tunga and Bhadra reservoirs and that the Tungabhadra reservoir currently had around 82 TMC of water. He asked farmers and people's representatives to consider the available water before deciding the release schedule.

Farmer leaders from Koppal, Vijayanagar, Ballari and Raichur demanded that the available 82 TMC of water be released into the canals to protect standing crops. They also urged the committee to pass a resolution immediately and ensure that downstream farmers were not denied their share of water.

Dr Mahadevappa, Venkatesh & Tanveer Sait hold closed-door huddle

MYSURU

A private meeting between three senior Congress leaders who were left out of the recent Cabinet expansion has created fresh political interest in Karnataka. Former ministers Dr. H.C. Mahadevappa, K. Venkatesh and Tanveer Sait met in Mysuru on Tuesday for a closed-door discussion. Their meeting has drawn attention because all three leaders are senior members of the party and were seen as possible choices for ministerial positions. The development has raised questions about whether a new political understanding is emerging within the ruling Congress.

Tanveer Sait later played down the political importance of the meeting but admitted that the current situation had brought the three leaders together. He said they belonged to the same party but had not been particularly close earlier. According to Sait, the situation after the Cabinet expansion required them to discuss their concerns. He also indicated that the leaders felt they should perhaps have met much earlier. His remarks have added to speculation about growing disappointment among senior Congress leaders who were not included in the expanded ministry.

The meeting comes at a time when the Congress leadership is trying to maintain unity after the Cabinet changes. Several leaders who expected ministerial positions have reportedly been unhappy with the outcome. While there has been no clear indication of any organised group, the meeting has started discussions about whether the three leaders could jointly present their concerns to the party leadership. For now, the exact issues discussed during their private meeting have not been made public.

The meeting follows Cabinet changes, amid Congress efforts to maintain unity, with disgruntled leaders possibly discussing concerns and whether to jointly approach party leadership

Later in the evening, Urban Development and Mysuru District In-charge Minister Dr. Yatindra Siddaramaiah met Mahadevappa, Venkatesh and Sait. His visit is being seen as an effort to understand their concerns and prevent the issue from growing into a larger dispute. Details of the discussion were not immediately available, but the meeting suggested that party leaders were keen to address the situation before it affects the Congress's public image.

The developments have left party workers and political observers watching closely. The key question is whether the Mysuru meeting was simply an informal discussion among disappointed senior leaders or the beginning of a wider political conversation. With the leaders yet to reveal their next steps, speculation is likely to continue until they make their position clear.

Inaugurating the programme and speaking as the chief guest, Usha Narasimhan, president of the Mysuru division of the Karnataka Lekhakiyara Sangha and noted novelist, said that a student union represents the institutional and organisational spirit of students. "Organisational strength is more powerful and valuable than individual interests. So, students should emerge as the voice of youth and as a voice that respects tradition. Along with pursuing a degree, they should cultivate discipline, restraint and culture.

She stressed the importance of women receiving quality education and said that women's empowerment was contributing to improving the lives of women. She congratulated the newly elected office-bearers and urged them to organise meaningful programmes through the Student Union, address challenges and move forward with confidence.

"Environmental conservation is everyone's responsibility"

MYSURU

As part of World Environment Day celebrations, a tree-planting programme was organised by Mysuru Lion Garden City at the Padma Shri Saalumara Thimmakka Park in the KBL Silicon City Layout near Hebbal in Mysuru. Speaking after planting saplings, Lion Garden City Secretary Dr. E.C. Ningraj Gowda said environmental conservation should not be limited to a one-day programme but must become an integral part of everyone's life. Trees provide humanity with clean air and shade while playing a vital role in maintaining ecological balance. With the rapid increase in concrete construction in urban areas, green spaces are steadily declining. Keeping the welfare of future generations in mind, it is the collective responsibility of everyone to plant more trees and ensure their protection and proper maintenance, he said. Dr. Ningraj Gowda called upon people to contribute to environmental conservation by planting and nurturing trees in their homes, schools, offices and public spaces. "Everyone should come forward with the resolve of 'One Person-One Tree' and contribute towards building a greener Mysuru," he said.

A STATEWIDE CALL FOR EMPATHY, TRANSPARENCY, AND DECENTRALIZED GOVERNANCE

Drought crisis: State demands "Team Karnataka" approach

BENGALURU

In a massive, unprecedented administrative outreach, Chief Minister DK Shivakumar convened a sweeping video conference on Tuesday, addressing over 2.5 lakh state government officials across 750 locations.

Speaking from the Banquet Hall of Vidhana Soudha, the Chief Minister delivered a clear, impassioned mandate: politicians and bureaucrats must dismantle traditional hierarchies and operate purely as "Team Karnataka."

Against the backdrop of a looming ecological and agricultural crisis—with 164 of the state's 240 taluks facing severe drought conditions—the state's leadership underscored that bureaucratic delays and corruption would be met with zero tolerance. With groundwater levels plummeting and a devastating lack of rainfall severely affecting crop yields, the government announced emergency relief measures, including the distribution of 1,00,000 fodder kits and the authorization of 51,000 man-days of labor under the VB-G Ram G employment scheme to curb rural migration. The sprawling virtual summit brought district-level administrators, police chiefs, and local panchayat officials face-to-face with top state leadership, resulting in tailored, region-specific directives aimed at stabilizing Karnataka's agrarian economy and reforming its public services. Below are the detailed reports from key districts across the state, highlighting how local administrations are translating the Chief Minister's grand vision into immediate action.

MANDYA: GROWERS IN CRISIS

MANDYA

The agricultural heartland of Mandya is confronting a severe climatic anomaly. During Tuesday's extensive virtual interaction, local officials presented a grim reality to the state leadership: the district is grappling with a staggering 70% rainfall deficit for the crucial monsoon months of July and August.

The acute lack of rain has essentially stalled the sowing season, forcing the district administration to declare a localized monsoon failure. Responding to the crisis, the Chief Minister instructed the Agriculture Department and district administrators to establish a seamless coordination network to shield farmers from the brunt of the extreme weather. The situation in Man-

Directives for Mandya

- Alternative cropping: Officials must immediately initiate aggressive awareness campaigns to transition farmers away from water-intensive crops like paddy and sugarcane, promoting drought-resistant alternatives.
- Grassroots presence: Politicians and bureaucrats must operate directly from the taluk level to prevent farmers from having to travel long distances for grievance redressal.
- Strategic Water Management: Every drop of available water must be mapped and prioritized for local agricultural survival before interstate allocations are finalized.

dya is further complicated by interstate water-sharing obligations. The Cauvery Water Management Committee has recently mandated Karnataka to release 12,000 cusecs of water daily to neighboring Tamil Nadu over the next fortnight. Acknowledging the anxiety this has caused among local agriculturists, the Chief Minister assured that the state cabinet would review the water release mandate in a high-level meeting within the coming days, keeping the interests of Karnataka's farmers at the absolute forefront.

In a strong rebuke of performative governance, the Chief Minister urged local leaders to abandon "publicity-driven programs" in favor of concrete fieldwork.

GADAG: COMBATING DRY SPELL

GADAG

The cascading effects of the drought have taken a heavy financial toll on the agrarian communities of Gadag. Following a comprehensive three-day ground inspection by Cabinet Minister Basavaraj Rayareddy, the district reported estimated agricultural and horticultural damages soaring to ₹164 crore.

During the video conference, the Joint Director of Agriculture for Gadag provided an urgent briefing to the state leadership, highlighting the district's proactive yet desperate measures. Recognizing the impending crop failures, the local administration has successfully mobilized a massive insurance registration drive. To date, an impressive 152,349 local farmers have been registered under the state's flagship crop insurance scheme (PMFBY), splitting into roughly 139,000 agricultural cultivators and 12,000 horticultural workers. However, the

Directives for Gadag

- Immediate Compensation Tracking: Local officials are tasked with monitoring the status of every registered farmer's insurance claim to prevent corporate delays.
- Livestock Protection: With neighboring states also facing crop failures, fodder imports have dried up. Gadag officials must prioritize the local distribution of the state's newly procured fodder kits.
- Employment Generation: Accelerate public works to ensure landless agricultural laborers have immediate access to daily wage work, mitigating the risk of mass migration to urban centers.

state leadership noted with frustration that insurance companies are dragging their feet on disbursing legitimate compensation. The Deputy Chief Minister promised swift intervention, assuring that a separate governmental inquiry would be launched to force insurance providers to expedite payouts.

Vijayapura: Conscience of governance

VIJAYAPURA

Adopting a deeply philosophical tone, the Chief Minister addressed the civil servants of Vijayapura with a reminder of the historical weight their positions carry. "We do not want to merely read or write history; we are here to create it," he proclaimed, invoking the legacies of architectural and administrative pioneers like Kengal Hanumanthaiah and Sir M. Visvesvaraya.

The Chief Minister reminded the bureaucrats that out of Karnataka's sprawling population of over 70 million, only a fraction—roughly 550,000 individuals—have been granted the privilege of government employment. He framed this not as a right to authority, but as a sacred duty to serve the public. Power, he noted, is an opportunity bestowed by the people, and success is measured solely by how effectively that power translates into public welfare.

He further proudly referenced Karnataka's global standing, noting that international leaders often look to Bengaluru before the national capital—a testament to de-

Directives for Vijayapura

- The 'Praja Seva' Initiative: Implementation of a new public service framework requiring swift, local resolution to basic infrastructure demands like housing and drinking water.
- Ethical Administration: Employees were urged to work according to their conscience, embracing a mantra of "sharing and caring" rather than relying on strict bureaucratic red tape.
- Youth Empowerment: Rapid rollout of the 'Bharat Jodo Yuva Sangh' to engage young people in revolutionary public service and community building

CADES of clean governance, visionary investments by the historic Maharajas, and the enduring brilliance of the state's human capital.

The focus now, he argued, must be on ensuring that this top-tier development reaches the most marginalized rural pockets of districts like Vijayapura.

Directives for Karwar

- Strict Residency Rule: All government staff must physically reside within their assigned headquarters; violators face immediate disciplinary action.
- Voter List Integrity: Following 100% digitization of electoral rolls, Booth Level Officers (BLOs) must meticulously verify all recent name deletions to ensure no legitimate voter is disenfranchised.
- Radical Transparency: The deployment of public complaint boards and the immediate publication of civil servant contact directories to dismantle administrative secrecy.

KARWAR

In Karwar, the Chief Minister's message of transparency was met with immediate, strict implementation protocols by the local administration. Deputy Commissioner K. Lakshmi Priya wasted no time in translating the state's broad guidelines into hard, non-negotiable rules for the district's civil workforce.

In a bid to eliminate the absentee-bureaucrat culture, the district administration announced a severe crackdown on officials living outside their assigned headquarters. The practice of officials commuting from comfortable urban centers to rural postings—often resulting in truncated workdays—has been strictly outlawed. To enforce this, Karwar is compiling a comprehensive, transparent administrative manual. By August 15, the names, exact office locations, verified mobile numbers, and residential addresses of every government employee in the district will be made a matter of public record. Furthermore, anti-corruption mechanisms are being heavily fortified. Dedicated helplines and bold informational boards will be installed in every government building, empowering citizens to report bribery directly to the Chief Minister's Office, which is actively monitoring localized complaints.

CHITRADURGA: SECURING THE FUTURE

CHITRADURGA

The video conference in Chitradurga highlighted the intersection of social justice and digital innovation. The state government announced a historic, massive campaign to secure the land rights of rural and urban citizens through the issuance of digitized property records—delivered entirely free of cost and without the traditional hurdles of bribery.

Termed as a "land guarantee scheme," the initiative aims to distribute photographic, signed e-Khatas (property certificates) directly to the doorsteps of 11.1 million rural households and 2.5 million urban families within the next six months. The Chief Minister framed this as the unwritten "sixth guarantee" of his administration, de-

Directives for Chitradurga

- Doorstep Document Delivery: Execute the flawless, bribe-free distribution of e-Khatas across all panchayats and hoblis over the next two quarters.
- Digital Auditing: Mandate the use of modern technology to verify beneficiary identities and cross-reference welfare claims, effectively stopping "double billing."
- Mandatory Field Inspections: Taluk-level officers, including PDOs and Tahsildars, must submit daily activity logs detailing their physical visits to local schools, hospitals, and ashrams.

signed to provide absolute security to the hard-earned assets of the working class. To ensure the integrity of this massive rollout, as well as the state's existing welfare guarantees, Chitradurga officials were instructed to embrace advanced technology. By utilizing digital records, biometric verification, and comprehensive data scanning across municipal and public works departments, the government intends to entirely eliminate the scourge of fake billing, duplicate beneficiaries, and tampered property documents.

HAVERI: HONORING THE PAST, BUILDING THE FUTURE

HAVERI

The interaction in Haveri carried a strong focus on community cohesion and democratic participation. Addressing the district's officials, the Chief Minister reiterated the urgent need to decentralize problem-solving. Bureaucratic hurdles should not force a farmer from Haveri to travel to the Vidhana Soudha in Bengaluru; rather, the Vidhana Soudha's authority must be exercised by the local Tahsildar on the ground.

To foster cultural and social unity in the wake of agricultural distress, the state

Directives for Haveri:

- Democratic Vigilance: Officials must remain hyper-vigilant regarding the SIR (voter roll revision) process, particularly ensuring that marginalized groups, minorities, and backward classes are not unjustly removed from the electoral lists.
 - Grassroots Grants: Facilitate the immediate establishment and funding of Bharat Jodo Sanghas to promote local unity and youth empowerment.
 - Accountability Checkpoints: District officials were warned that the state leadership will conduct random audits and direct calls to welfare beneficiaries every three months to independently verify that government services are reaching the ground uncompromised.
- announced the rollout of the "Bharat Jodo Sanghas" across all local panchayats. Backed by an annual government grant of ₹10 lakh per association, these grassroots groups are intended to be hubs of youth engagement, social harmony, and localized talent development. The administration ordered that the membership drives for these groups be completed by the end of the month, ensuring inclusion across all communities and demographics. Additionally, a strong directive was issued regarding the upcoming Independence Day celebrations. Education officers were instructed to ensure that every school—private and public alike—participates vigorously in the national celebration, using the moment to instill a sense of shared civic responsibility in the younger generation.

Bidar leaders seek early approval for railway bridges

CH NEWS, BIDAR

Bidar South MLA Dr. Shailendra Beldale and former Legislative Council chairman Raghunath Rao Malkapure have urged the Union Railway Ministry to speed up work on two important railway bridges in Bidar.

They appealed for an overbridge near the Shapur railway gate and an underbridge near the old Adarsh Colony railway gate.

The leaders met Union Railway Minister Ashwini Vaishnaw and Union Minister of State for Railways and Jal Shakti V. Somanna in New Delhi. They explained that the Detailed Project Report process for both projects was already underway and requested early approvals and funds so construction could begin without further delay.

They said railway gates at Shapur and the old Adarsh Colony cause daily traffic jams and inconvenience to residents. An overbridge and underbridge would help vehicles move smoothly, reduce waiting time and improve safety near the railway crossings. The leaders also requested that the Vande Bharat service currently running up to Kalaburagi be extended to Bidar. They sought a new Bidar-Bengaluru train through Kalaburagi to improve connectivity.

Somanna responded positively and assured the delegation that the proposals would be examined and necessary action taken. Beldale said continued efforts would be made through the Railway Department to fulfil the long-standing demands of Bidar residents. MP B.Y. Raghavendra, BJP district president Somnath Patil, MLAs Prabhu B. Chavan and Sharanu Salagara, former MLAs Prakash Khandre, and BJP leaders Peerappa Yaranalli, Kiran Patil, Babu Wali, Baburao Karbari, Basavaraja Arya and Ishwar Singh Thakur were present. The leaders said improved railway infrastructure would support safer travel, ease congestion and strengthen Bidar's development.

CEO vacancy puts Gadag administration under pressure

CH NEWS, Malinagaraya pujar

Administrative work in Gadag district is facing difficulties as the Zilla Panchayat has remained without a permanent Chief Executive Officer for nearly a year. District Collector C.N. Sridhar is currently handling the additional responsibilities of Zilla Panchayat CEO and Municipal Administration Officer, along with his regular duties. IAS officer Bharat, who was serving as Zilla Panchayat CEO, was transferred in August 2025. Since then, the government has not appointed a permanent replacement. Citizens and farmer organisations say the arrangement has increased the workload on the Collector and delayed the disposal of important files. The absence of elected bodies has added to the concerns. Elections to the Zilla Panchayat, Taluk Panchayats and local bodies have not been held, leaving people with fewer elected representatives to raise local issues. Residents claim this has affected the implementation of rural and urban development programmes and government welfare schemes. Several project files related to drinking water, sanitation, drainage and roads are reportedly awaiting approval. The district is also facing poor rainfall, and preparations are underway to assess the drought situation. Citizens say the shortage of senior officials is making it harder to respond quickly to these challenges.

Officials stress regular deworming for healthy growth

Gadag attracts major investments in wind energy

CH NEWS, Malinagaraya pujar

Gadag district is emerging as a major wind power centre in Karnataka, with more than 800 wind turbines installed across rural areas. Private companies are developing projects by taking agricultural and hill land from farmers on long-term leases. The district’s strong and regular winds, especially around Kappatagudda, have attracted large renewable energy investments. More than 214 turbines have been installed around Mundargi and over 30 in Shirahatti. New projects are also progressing in Lakshmeshwar, Lakkundi and other areas. Modern turbines with capacities ranging from 3.3 MW to 5.2 MW are being installed. Some turbines have towers around 140 metres high, with blades reaching nearly 70 metres. These machines can generate power even when wind speeds are relatively low. The district has projects involving companies such as ReNew, Tata Power, Ayana Renewables, Suzlon Energy, NTPC and others. Power generated from these projects is supplied to the electricity grid, including through agreements with Hubballi Electricity Supply Company. Karnataka contributes significantly to India’s wind power production, while the state aims to expand renewable energy capacity further by 2030. However, the rapid growth of wind projects has also raised concerns among local residents. People living near turbines have complained about constant noise from rotating blades. Birds and bats are reportedly at risk of colliding with turbine blades. Large vehicles transporting equipment have also damaged some rural roads. Farmers have expressed concern about the use of agricultural land for projects and possible effects on farming. The district’s growing wind energy sector could provide clean electricity and strengthen Karnataka’s renewable energy goals. At the same time, residents say development should protect farmland, wildlife and local communities. They want authorities and companies to address environmental concerns, repair damaged roads and ensure farmers receive fair benefits. A balanced approach will be important as Gadag expands its role in renewable energy.

GADAG CONGRESS NEEDS FIGHTER, SAYS RAVIKUMAR REDDY

Former Gadag District Youth Congress president Ravikumar Reddy has urged the party high command to appoint Sachin Patil as the district Congress president. Reddy said the district needs a leader who works directly with party workers instead of remaining in an office. He praised Patil as a grassroots leader who has supported and encouraged young people in the party. Comparing Patil’s role with D.K. Shivakumar’s organizational skills in Karnataka, Reddy described Patil as a troubleshooter who can strengthen the party at the district level. He said appointing Patil would help improve the party’s organization and survival. situation and workers’ concerns. The delegation submitted a petition seeking Patil’s appointment and highlighted his organisational experience and public work. Hadapada praised Patil’s contribution to education through the K.H. Patil College and Polytechnic institutions. He said Patil had helped provide quality education to students from poor and disadvantaged families and had personally supported some students facing financial difficulties. He described Patil as a leader who remained connected with ordinary people. He also credited Patil with helping party workers secure opportunities in Gram Panchayats, Taluk Panchayats, Zilla Panchayats, municipalities and other local bodies. Hadapada said Patil had the ability to bring workers together during disagreements and maintain unity despite differences. The delegation said Patil’s public contact, organisational skills and ability to understand the district’s social diversity made him suitable for the post. Former Youth Congress president Ravikumar Reddy, Savita Samaj treasurer Arun Rampur, Nagar Sabha member Chummi Nadaf, youth leader Anilkumar Siddamanahalli and social activist Abdulmunaf Mulla were among those present. Hadapada urged AICC and KPCC leaders to consider the demand and appoint Patil to strengthen the Congress organisation in Gadag.

Karnataka Congress: Leadership transition and the challenge of internal unity

P. SUNIL KUMAR, EDITOR
CH NEWS, BENGALURU

Karnataka's political landscape has entered a sensitive phase, with leadership equations, cabinet representation and competing ambitions within the Congress emerging as important factors in the functioning and stability of the government. The transition of leadership from Siddaramaiah to D.K. Shivakumar marks a significant political development for the Congress in Karnataka. Shivakumar's elevation to the Chief Minister's position follows years of organisational work, political struggle and his persistent ambition to lead the State. However, a leadership change of this magnitude inevitably alters the balance of power within the ruling party and tests its ability to manage competing interests. For Siddaramaiah, the transition is equally significant. Having led the government with his own administrative priorities and political vision, relinquishing the Chief Minister's position under an arrangement involving the Congress high command naturally changes his role and influence within the government. The challenge for the Congress, therefore, is not simply about who occupies the Chief Minister's chair, but how the political consequences of the transition are managed. Cabinet formation has consequently become crucial. Siddaramaiah is understood to have suggested certain names for inclusion while expressing reservations about the continuation of some existing ministers, including, reportedly, Zameer Ahmed Khan. The matter has assumed greater political significance amid allegations and internal complaints concerning the conduct of certain leaders during political campaigning in Davangere. Questions have reportedly been raised within party circles over whether some activities there worked against the interests of the Congress and leaders associated with Siddaramaiah. Claims have also surfaced regarding an audio conversation allegedly connected to the controversy. Unless independently authenticated or officially confirmed, such claims must be treated with caution. Nevertheless, reports that these concerns reached the Congress high command indicate unease within sections of the State leadership. The reported decision by Siddaramaiah to stay away from the swearing-in ceremony carries political symbolism. When a senior leader of his stature distances himself from an important government event, it inevitably sends a message to legislators, party workers and the public.

A TEST FOR THE HIGH COMMAND

The Congress high command now faces a delicate balancing act. D.K. Shivakumar requires sufficient political authority to establish his leadership and deliver an effective government. At the same time, Siddaramaiah remains one of Karnataka Congress's most influential mass leaders, with considerable administrative experience and political support. Allowing the transition to become a confrontation between rival camps would be politically costly. Governments do not suffer only because of Opposition pressure. Internal mistrust, competing power centres and unresolved grievances can cause equally serious damage. The Congress must therefore ensure that disagreements over cabinet positions, political appointments and leadership influence do not overshadow governance. Shivakumar now carries the responsibility of demonstrating that his opportunity to lead Karnataka is about administration, development and collective leadership rather than the fulfilment of personal political ambition. His ability to accommodate senior leaders, maintain legislative unity and establish an effective working relationship with Siddaramaiah will be critical. Siddaramaiah, too, has an important role. His experience and influence remain valuable political assets. A constructive relationship between the two leaders could strengthen the government; an escalating rivalry could weaken it considerably.

UNITY MUST PREVAIL OVER PERSONAL AMBITION

Karnataka's electorate expects stability, development and accountable governance not prolonged struggles over positions, portfolios and political supremacy. The Congress leadership in Delhi must therefore act with political maturity, ensuring a workable balance between the State's senior leaders while addressing genuine grievances before they develop into larger disputes. Leadership transitions are rarely easy, particularly when powerful leaders command their own political constituencies. Yet the success of any government ultimately depends on whether individual ambitions can be subordinated to collective responsibility. For D.K. Shivakumar, the Chief Minister's chair represents the culmination of a long political journey. For Siddaramaiah, the transition marks a new phase of his political career. For the Congress, however, the issue is larger than either individual. The decisive question is whether the party can transform a difficult leadership transition into collective strength or allow internal differences to become its greatest political vulnerability. The answer could determine not only the stability of the government, but also the future direction of the Congress in Karnataka.

Mindful career: Choosing a path with purpose, not pressure

CH NEWS, BENGALURU

In today's fast-changing world, choosing a career is no longer just about earning a living. It is about finding work that aligns with our values, interests, strengths, and aspirations. Yet many students and professionals continue to make career decisions based on social pressure, salary expectations, or popular trends. A mindful career is an alternative approach—one that encourages thoughtful, informed, and purposeful career choices.

A mindful career begins with self-awareness. Before selecting a profession, individuals should understand who they are. What are their interests? What are their strengths and areas for improvement? A career chosen with self-knowledge is more likely to bring long-term satisfaction than one chosen simply to impress others.

The modern workplace is evolving rapidly due to artificial intelligence, automation, and digital transformation. Jobs that were once considered secure may disappear, while entirely new professions continue to emerge. In such an environment, career decisions should be flexible rather than rigid. A mindful career means preparing to learn continuously, adapt to change, and acquire new skills throughout life.

Another important aspect of a mindful career is purpose. Financial stability is important, but money alone cannot guarantee happiness. People who find meaning in their work often experience greater motivation, resilience, and well-being. Whether someone becomes a teacher, engineer, artist, scientist, entrepreneur, healthcare worker, or farmer, every profession has value when it contributes positively to society.

Unfortunately, many young people compare themselves with others and feel pressured to follow the crowd. Some choose medicine because their relatives expect it, engineering because their friends are doing it, or government jobs because they are considered prestigious. Such decisions often lead to frustration when personal interests and career paths do not match. A mindful career encourages independent thinking instead of blind comparison.

Parents, teachers, and career counselors have a crucial role in supporting mindful career decisions. Rather than imposing their own dreams, they should help students explore different possibilities, understand emerging careers, and recognize their unique talents. Open conversations, career assessments, internships, mentoring, and real-world exposure can help students make informed choices.

Technology has expanded career opportunities beyond traditional professions. Fields such as data science, cybersecurity, renewable energy, digital marketing, robotics, environmental science, content creation, sports management, biotechnology, and artificial intelligence are creating exciting opportunities. A mindful individual remains curious, explores these options, and evaluates them carefully instead of following outdated assumptions.

Mental well-being is also connected with career choices. People who constantly work in fields they dislike often experience stress, burnout, and dissatisfaction. On the other hand, those whose work aligns with their interests and values generally enjoy better emotional health and stronger professional commitment. Success is not merely reaching a high position—it is maintaining a healthy, balanced, and meaningful life.

A mindful career also values ethics and responsibility. Professional success should never come at the cost of honesty, compassion, or social responsibility. Ethical professionals build trust, strengthen institutions, and contribute to sustainable development. Integrity is as important as intelligence.

Students should remember that career decisions are not one-time events. A career is a lifelong journey of learning, growth, and adaptation. Changing careers, upgrading skills, or pursuing higher education are all normal parts of professional life. The willingness to learn is becoming more valuable than any single qualification.

In conclusion, a mindful career is about making conscious choices instead of rushed decisions. It combines self-awareness, continuous learning, adaptability, purpose, and ethical responsibility. As the world of work continues to change, those who choose their careers thoughtfully will be better prepared not only for professional success but also for personal fulfillment. A mindful career is ultimately not about finding the highest-paying job—it is about building a meaningful life through meaningful work.

Bengaluru has been cleaned up; Now, let's keep it that way

PRADIVYA NAMBIAR
CH NEWS, BENGALURU

There is something almost unfamiliar about Bengaluru these days: you can see the city again.

The recent clean-up drive led by Minister Krishna Byre Gowda has brought a visible and, frankly, welcome change to several parts of the city. Roads look clearer. Pavements are more accessible. The clutter that had slowly become accepted as an unavoidable part of everyday Bengaluru has, at least for now, been pushed back. And the difference is not subtle.

Personally, I have not seen Bengaluru this clean in a long time. For those who remember the city as lush, green and relatively open, this is a welcome reminder of what Bengaluru can look and feel like when public spaces are actually reclaimed. It is a good beginning. But it cannot remain a beginning. Because Bengaluru has seen clean-up drives before. The familiar cycle is simple: enforcement arrives, roads are cleared, pavements are reclaimed and then, slowly, the carts return, vendors creep back onto pavements and parking once again takes over whatever space is available. By evening, some of the very roads that look impressively clear during the day can begin to tell a different story. That is the real test of this exercise.

A city cannot be managed through occasional drives. It needs consistent enforcement. If a pavement is cleared today, it must still be a pavement tomorrow. If an encroachment is removed, it should not be allowed to reappear gradually because nobody is watching.

There is also a larger question of balance. Street vendors are part of Bengaluru's social and economic fabric, and the answer cannot simply be to push them from one street to another. But neither can the public be expected to surrender pavements and roads indefinitely. The city needs designated spaces, clear rules and, above all, predictable enforcement. The same urgency applies to parking. Bengaluru's roads are already under enormous pressure. Yet on major roads, vehicles are routinely parked wherever their owners please. On narrower streets, double parking can turn an inconvenience into gridlock within minutes.

We cannot celebrate a road being cleared of encroachments while allowing parked vehicles to become the next encroachment. Parking enforcement therefore needs to become an integral part of the clean-up, not an afterthought. Main roads, narrow arterial stretches and high-traffic neighbourhoods require regular monitoring. A public road is not an extension of someone's private parking space. But there is another uncomfortable truth that we, as citizens, need to confront. A government can clear a street. It cannot follow every individual carrying a food wrapper. Walk through almost any busy part of Bengaluru and you will see it: someone finishes eating and drops the wrapper on the pavement; another throws a piece of paper onto the road; someone spits wherever they please; garbage is left beside an overflowing bin rather than inside it. These are not always failures of municipal administration. They are personal choices.

We cannot blame the government for every act of poor hygiene committed by citizens themselves. There is a moral responsibility that comes with living in a city. If we expect the government to clean our streets, we also have a responsibility not to dirty them in the first place. The same principle applies to garbage, parking and public spaces more broadly. We cannot demand a cleaner Bengaluru while treating the road outside our own home, office, shop or car as somebody else's problem.

Civic sense cannot be outsourced. That does not absolve the government of its responsibilities. The administration must provide adequate waste collection, enforce rules, regulate parking, manage vending and maintain public infrastructure. But citizens have to meet the government halfway. A cleaner Bengaluru will ultimately require both: effective governance and responsible citizenship. Perhaps most importantly, this clean-up has reminded Bengaluru of something we seem to have forgotten: the city's greatest asset is not just its economy. It is its environment.

The Bengaluru people fell in love with was lush, green and relatively open. It had trees, neighbourhoods with breathing space and streets that did not feel permanently overwhelmed. Much of that character has been lost amid rapid growth, poor planning and an increasingly casual attitude towards public space. This clean-up offers a glimpse of that old Bengaluru. The challenge now is to resist the temptation to declare victory too early. Will the pavements still be clear months from now? Will vendors be given sustainable and lawful spaces rather than simply moved temporarily? Will double parking still be tolerated? Will enforcement continue after the headlines disappear? And will citizens themselves stop treating public spaces as dumping grounds?

Krishna Byre Gowda deserves credit for demonstrating that change is possible and that the deterioration of Bengaluru's public spaces is not inevitable. But a clean city is not created by a clean-up campaign alone. It is created by consistency from the government and from us. The government must enforce. Citizens must cooperate. The government must provide. Citizens must take responsibility.

The government can clean the street. But it cannot stop someone from throwing a wrapper on it. That choice belongs to us.

Bengaluru looks better today. For once, there is a sense that we may be getting a little bit of our city back cleaner, greener and more liveable. Now, the responsibility is collective. Let us make sure we keep it that way.

The Glamour of Ordinary Things

SANCHIA JOANNA S
CH NEWS, BENGALURU

There is a certain poise to the ordinary, a glamour that reveals itself only when we give the moment it is due. And it is these, intricate fragments that lend glamour to our day.

College is abundant of such moments. Circles of friends scattered across the green park, their laughter overpowering the bells. Lending a hand with a friend's bag, a gesture so obscure, yet tender. The ever-present chatter of the campus the rhythm no one composed yet everyone knows.

The restless anticipation outside the lifts, eyes flaring, watching the numbers descend as if the choice of a door might change the course of their day. The cafeteria counter-staff who, with a familiar smile, remembers your regular order before you even utter a word making you feel seen in a fleeting crowd. And those keen helpers, who sweep and brighten every corner, leaving the campus immaculate as if it were a sanctuary of youth.

The slow drift of evening breeze near Café Zamorin, where a medley of departments bond over a coffee. The dancers rehearsing in corners, their speakers unleashing beats that make students around tap their feet in sync. Security guards, with calm smiles, straightening bikes and aligning scooters as if every wheel mattered. These unspoken gestures, often overlooked, are what make belonging feel like home.

Meanwhile, sudden plans sprout among friends an impulsive café run, a reckless bunk, an impromptu memory etched forever. A friend unwraps tandoori momos, steam twirling into the cool air with the first bite, it is joy in the simplest, spiciest form. Monsoon arrives, leaving the campus' plants smiling, leaves dripping in silver and walkways glimmering. And in the crowd, there are glances exchanged delicate, fleeting, as though words would only diminish them.

The ID card, a quiet witness to every ebb and flow, is more like a second skin and a passport to belonging. The bell rings, and order gives way where attention scatters like birds set free.

This is the glamour of ordinary things. Not chandeliers or champagne, but cafeteria chatter, resonating laughter, rain slick trees, and the human kindness of those who make this place what it is. One day, all of it will become 'good old days'. Until then, we live inside a film that unwraps itself daily, a life that is ordinary yet extraordinarily ours.

Rahul faces questions over student protests in Jharkhand

NEW DELHI

The Bharatiya Janata Party (BJP) continues to question Lok Sabha Leader of Opposition Rahul Gandhi's alleged dual approach where the Congress has been aggressively protesting against the Centre over reported National Eligibility-cum-Entrance Test (NEET) irregularities and the Delhi Police action while being restrained on similar issues in Jharkhand, where his party is part of the coalition government.

They argue that it took a specific question for the Congress leader to spell out a rhetoric of sorts on his party's stand on the Jharkhand issue, and protesters at Parliament entrance to seek answers from Wayanad MP Priyanka Gandhi Vadra.

As she was entering Parliament, Priyanka faced the demonstration accusing Rahul Gandhi of not visiting Jharkhand amid the student agitation and subsequent police

Cong MP accused Centre of diverting attention from alleged police brutality during July 20 march by highlighting action against protesting students in Jharkhand

NEW DELHI

Congress MP K.C. Venugopal accused the BJP-led Centre of trying to divert attention from alleged police brutality against protesters during the July 20 Parliament march by highlighting police action against student agitators in Jharkhand.

Venugopal was reacting after NDA and Opposition MPs staged rival protests outside Makar Dwar of Parliament over issues, including the Jharkhand students' agitation, selective outrage and repeated disruptions in the House.

The Opposition demanded that Union Home Minister Amit Shah attend Parliament and address the alleged police action against students protesting examination irregularities in Jharkhand, including allegations concerning the use of pellet guns. The NDA, meanwhile, accused the Opposition of stalling parliamentary proceedings.

Speaking to reporters, Venugopal said police action against students was contestable wherever it occurred, but argued that the Congress MP Amar Singh also said the party opposed lathi-charge and any use of force against students, including when such action involved a government allied with the Congress. Extreme heat becoming more frequent and intense: UN agency

GENEVA

Periods of extreme heat are becoming more frequent, intense and longer-lasting as climate change warms the planet, the U.N. weather agency said on Tuesday, noting changes since the famously hot European summer of 1976.

Parts of Europe are enduring their fifth heatwave of a summer marked by drought, wildfires and record-breaking temperatures. BJP leader shrugs off DMK-BJP alliance buzz: Vanathi

CHENNAI

BJP leader Vanathi Srinivasan on Tuesday played down speculation about a possible alliance between the BJP and the DMK in Tamil Nadu, saying political alliances would be announced by the parties concerned if and when such a decision was taken.

Her remarks came amid renewed political discussions over possible realignments in the state following the formation of the Tamil Nadu government headed by Chief Minister C. Joseph Vijay. The changing political landscape and movement of leaders between parties have fuelled speculation about new combinations ahead of the next parliamentary election.

Several political leaders, including former AIADMK ministers, have shifted their political affiliations since the change of government. Against this backdrop, sections of the ruling establishment have also raised the possibility of the DMK and BJP coming closer before the parliamentary polls.

The speculation gained further attention following remarks by DMK MP Kanimozhi Somu, who said political parties should be prepared to support initiatives that were beneficial to Tamil Nadu, irrespective of where they originated.

There are no permanent enemies or friends in politics. Whatever is good for Tamil Nadu, wherever it comes from, we will certainly accept and welcome it, Kanimozhi Somu had said.

India slams Pakistan over Pok violence

NEW DELHI

India strongly condemned alleged human rights violations in Pakistan-occupied Kashmir (PoK) and other parts of Pakistan, calling on the international community to hold Islamabad accountable for what it described as repeated abuses and flagrant violations.

Addressing a bi-weekly media briefing in New Delhi, Ministry of External Affairs spokesperson Randhir Jaiswal said more than 90 people had been killed and several others injured in PoK amid protests and growing public discontent. He alleged that Pakistani authorities had responded to the unrest with bullets, blackouts, repression and oppression.

Jaiswal was responding to questions about alleged atrocities in Balochistan, which observed its 79th Independence Day on Tuesday. He said India continued to monitor developments globally but highlighted the situation in PoK and other parts of Pakistan.

The MEA spokesperson also referred to protests that have taken place in PoK during recent months, including during and before elections. According to him, public grievances had been met with force, internet restrictions and repression, resulting in significant casualties.

The protests, initially driven by concerns over electricity prices and the rising cost of essential commodities, have Jaiswal said the developments had attracted international attention and urged the global community to take note of the alleged violations and hold Pakistan responsible.

The remarks came amid reports and social media videos alleging police brutality during demonstrations, including in Kotli, where women protesters were reportedly seen fleeing as security forces opened fire during a rally.

₹125 CRORE CYBER FRAUD NETWORK EXPOSED

SURAT

The Surat City Cyber Crime Cell has arrested four alleged members of a Jamtara-based cyber fraud network from a hotel in Patna after tracing a fake PNB One.APK file used to siphon Rs five lakh from a local victim, with the investigation so far uncovering 336 malicious APK files linked to 31,174 installations, 5,613 compromised devices and cyber fraud worth Rs 125.39 crore across the country.

The arrests followed a technical investigation into a complaint relating to a Rs five lakh fraud reported in May. According to the police, the victim received a fake PNB One.APK file through WhatsApp.

Once installed, the application allowed the accused to gain access to the phone and subsequently transfer Rs five lakh from the victim's bank account without their knowledge.

An FIR was registered at the Surat Cyber Crime Police Station under sections 318(4), 336(2), 338, 336(3), 340(2), 61(2), 3(5) of the Bharatiya Nyaya Sanhita, 2023, and sections 66(c) and 66(d) of the Information Technology Act.

Additional Commissioner of Police (Crime) Karanraj Vaghela said the investigation was initially focused on tracing the developer of the APK file.

Technical analysis led police to Uttar Pradesh, where they had earlier arrested Rohit, a resident of Kasganj district, who was allegedly the main developer supplying fake APK files to cyber criminals.

Rohit was a developer who prepared APK files according to the demands of different cyber criminals.

Whether it was SBI, Punjab National Bank, Axis Bank, HDFC Bank or UCO Bank, or names such as hospitals, RTO challans and customer support, he developed files designed to mislead victims and allow cyber criminals to access their accounts, Vaghela said.

Police said analysis of Rohit's laptop and mobile phone indicated that he had developed and supplied more than 121 APK files, with data linked to around Rs 64.38 crore in cyber fraud.

The billionaire industrialist welcomed the US court's decision with humility and deep respect for the judicial process, as the court dismissed all criminal charges against Gautam Adani, Sagar Adani and their associate Vneet Jaain.

BRICS URBAN COOPERATION

BRICS cities urged to share innovation

MUMBAI

Maharashtra Deputy Chief Minister and Urban Development Minister Eknath Shinde on Tuesday called upon BRICS countries to strengthen cooperation by sharing advanced technology, knowledge, information and experiences to address common urban challenges.

Speaking as the chief guest at the BRICS Friendship Cities Conclave 2026 in Mumbai, Shinde said closer cooperation among cities could provide fresh momentum to global development and help build sustainable, resilient and citizen-centric urban centres.

He said cities were not merely structures of brick and concrete but engines of economic growth and development. Referring to Prime Minister Narendra Modi's vision, Shinde said urbanisation should be treated as an opportunity rather than a problem.

The deputy Chief minister noted that cities across countries increasingly face similar challenges, including rapid urbanisation, climate change, floods, heatwaves, traffic congestion, pollution, water management and affordable housing. He said finding solutions to these issues required cities to look beyond national boundaries and learn from one another.

Shinde stressed that successful urban development could not be measured only through tall buildings or modern skylines.

Instead, ease of commuting, access to safe housing, clean air, opportunities for children and effective disaster management should remain central to urban planning.

He said Maharashtra was pursuing sustainable urban development through stronger infrastructure, digital governance and climate-responsive planning.

Projects across Mumbai, Nagpur, Pune, Nashik, Thane and Chhatrapati Sambhajnagar, he added, were receiving renewed momentum in areas such as metros, roads, drainage, redevelopment, affordable housing, digital services, green infrastructure and disaster management.

India ranks sixth-largest economy at $3.92 trillion

India ranked as the world’s sixth-largest economy in 2025-26, with a nominal GDP of $3.92 trillion, Parliament was informed

NEW DELHI

India emerged as the world’s sixth-largest economy in 2025-26, with a nominal GDP of $3.92 trillion, according to the International Monetary Fund’s April 2026 World Economic Outlook, Parliament was informed on Tuesday.

Minister of State for Finance Pankaj Chaudhary said the ranking was based on nominal GDP measured at prevailing US dollar exchange rates. He cautioned that India’s position could change depending on economic growth, currency movements, prices, revisions to national accounts and the performance of other major economies.

The government, he said, has adopted a broad-based strategy to strengthen India’s growth potential, with a focus on agriculture, manufacturing, infrastructure, logistics, MSMEs, innovation and research.

Manufacturing growth is being supported through Production-Linked Incentive schemes and the relaxation of certain Quality Control Orders, while infrastructure development is being driven by public investment, PM Gati Shakti and the National Logistics Policy.

The government is also seeking to attract investment through higher public capital expenditure, a liberalised foreign direct investment policy and tax reforms covering direct taxes and the Goods and Services Tax.

Chaudhary said India was further working to strengthen its external competitiveness by expanding its network of free trade

NASA invites ISRO to join moon base programme

NEW DELHI

India and the United States have discussed expanding cooperation in human spaceflight, scientific research, lunar exploration and commercial space activities, with NASA inviting ISRO to participate in its Moon Base programme during high-level bilateral talks held in Bengaluru earlier this month, the US Ambassador to India, Sergio Gor said on Tuesday.

The two-day meeting was held at the Indian Space Research Organisation’s (ISRO) headquarters in Bengaluru on August 5 and 6 and brought together officials from ISRO, NASA and the US State Department to review ongoing projects and identify new opportunities for cooperation.

“NASA has invited ISRO to join its Moon Base programme, deepening the tion between the two countries in lunar exploration.

The proposal builds on co-operation under the Artemis Accords, a framework designed to promote international partnerships for the peaceful exploration of the Moon and beyond.

Both sides also agreed to continue discussions on sharing open scientific data under the Artemis framework and explored opportunities for future partnerships in space science, advanced technologies and human spaceflight.

The talks come on the heels of the successful launch of the NASA-ISRO Synthetic Aperture Radar (NISAR) mission, a landmark joint project aimed at monitoring changes on Earth’s surface and supporting scientific research related to natural hazards, ecosystems and environmental changes.

Kerala HC suggests pension hike for freedom fighters

KOCHI

With only around 60 freedom fighters now surviving in Kerala, most of them aged above 90, the Kerala High Court asked the Centre and the state government to consider creating a special welfare fund for them, including a mechanism to accept public contributions.

A division bench of Chief Justice Soumen Sen and Justice V.M.Syam Kumar issued the direction while disposing of a public interest litigation filed by Sabu Stephen seeking greater welfare measures and recognition for freedom fighters.

The petitioner told the court that around 60 freedom fighters were currently living in Kerala, of whom 27 were receiving the Central government’s freedom fighters’ pension and 33 the State pension.

SC UPHOLDS FREEZE ON TMC BANK ACCOUNTS

NEW DELHI

The Supreme Court declined to interfere with the Enforcement Directorate’s (ED) freezing of three bank accounts of the Trinamool Congress in connection with an alleged money laundering probe, while allowing the existing interim arrangement for the party to meet its day-to-day expenses under the supervision of a court-appointed Special Officer.

A Bench of Justices M.M. Sundresh and Prasanna B. Varale was hearing a plea filed by the Trinamool faction led by Mamata Banerjee, challenging the Calcutta High Court’s order refusing to grant interim relief against the ED’s freezing of the three HDFC Bank accounts.

The apex court also disposed of a separate petition filed by rebel TMC leader Biswanath Das, who had challenged the Calcutta High Court’s order, contending that he represented the “real party”.

The Justice Sundresh-led Bench observed that the order of the High Court was a “balanced” arrangement as it ensured that the party’s day-to-day operations were not stalled while keeping the operation of the accounts under judicial supervision.

“We will not say anything. We will dispose of both the matters and leave it to the discretion of the Special Officer appointed by the High Court. Whatever you want to say, say it in the main petition,” the top court said.

The Supreme Court clarified that it was not concerned with the dispute between the rival factions of the party and was only examining the limited issue concerning the operation of the frozen bank accounts.

It left it open to the parties to raise their respective objections before the Special Officer and in the main proceedings pending before the Calcutta High Court.

Senior advocate Kapil Sibal, appearing for the Trinamool, submitted that while the alleged proceeds of crime were around Rs 160 crore, more than Rs 400 crore was lying in the frozen bank accounts.

India rejects China’s Arunachal objection

NEW DELHI

India firmly rejected China’s objection to New Delhi’s decision to identify 27 locations in Arunachal Pradesh by their Indian names, reiterating that the northeastern state is an “inalienable and integral” part of the country.

Ministry of External Affairs spokesperson Randhir Jaiswal said nothing could alter the “indisputable reality”. His remarks came after Beijing termed India’s move “null and void” and objected to the use of Indian names for locations in Arunachal Pradesh.

“Arunachal is an inalienable and integral part of India and this is a fact which is self-evident. At the same time, let me also underline that nothing can change this indisputable reality,” Jaiswal said at a media briefing in New Delhi.

Jaiswal also underlined that India considers border issues with China among the most serious aspects of the bilateral relationship. He said maintaining peace and tranquillity along the Line of Actual Control remains essential and that the situation on the border would have a direct bearing on broader India-China ties.

AI can make more Indians bankable: RBI

Governor Sanjay stated that it represents an innovative approach to executing banking operations

MUMBAI

Reserve Bank of India (RBI) Governor Sanjay Malhotra on Tuesday said artificial intelligence (AI) could transform credit delivery, improve customer services and accelerate financial inclusion, potentially making more Indians eligible for formal banking services.

Speaking at the inaugural session of the FIBAC 2026 conference in Mumbai, Malhotra said AI could become a defining force for Indian banking during the current decade, much like economic liberalisation shaped the 1990s and digitalisation transformed the sector in the 2010s.

Malhotra stressed that banks should not treat AI as merely another technology project. Instead, he said it should be viewed as a new way of conducting banking operations, assessing risks, serving customers, pricing capital and organising institutions. He urged banks to make deliberate decisions about their AI strategies rather than allowing technology adoption to happen without clear direction.

The RBI Governor said many banks were already de-

“lenders to develop their AI capabilities with a clear purpose and responsible approach. The central bank considers AI a capability that should be responsibly harnessed, rather than simply treated as a risk that needs to be controlled.”

AI boosts credit access

AI expands financial inclusion by evaluating alternative data for customers without credit histories. However, banks must carefully balance this innovation with responsible, transparent practices to protect customer interests and ensure reliable lending decisions.

ploying AI, while several others were examining its potential applications.

Highlighting its potential for financial inclusion, Malhotra said AI could improve the economics of credit delivery by helping banks assess customers who do not have formal credit histories. Advanced technology could enable lenders to evaluate alternative information and make more informed lending decisions, potentially bringing underserved sections of society into the formal financial system.

He said the adoption of AI would require banks to balance innovation with responsible practices. As the technology increasingly influences lending and customer-facing decisions, financial institutions will need to ensure that its use remains reliable, transparent and aligned with the broader interests of customers and the banking system.

Malhotra's remarks come as Indian banks increasingly explore AI for lending, customer service, fraud detection and operational efficiency.

Toyota Recalls More Than 508,000 Vehicles in US

A malfunctioning display can compromise several critical safety features

WASHINGTON

Toyota Motor Corp will recall 508,354 vehicles in the United States over a problem with the instrument cluster display that could prevent critical safety information from being shown, increasing the risk of crashes or injuries, according to the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration (NHTSA).

The recall covers certain 2025 and 2026 Toyota Camry Hybrid vehicles. The issue involves a failure in the instrument cluster display when the vehicle is started. If the display does not function properly, several important safety features may also be affected.

According to the US auto safety regulator, the defect could deactivate the hazard warning lights, turn signals, seat belt warning system and smart key reminder. The loss of these functions could prevent drivers and other road users from receiving important safety alerts and signals, potentially increasing the risk of an accident.

Toyota has informed authorities about the issue and will address the problem through a software update. Dealers will update the instrument cluster display software free of charge for affected vehicle owners.

The recall highlights the growing importance of software and electronic systems in modern vehicles, where failures in digital displays can affect multiple safety-related functions. Instrument clusters provide drivers with essential information and warnings, making their reliable operation critical to safe vehicle use.

Owners of affected Camry Hybrid vehicles will be able to have the software updated at authorised Toyota dealerships without paying for the repair. The company and regulators are expected to notify eligible owners with further instructions on when and where the update can be carried out.

The recall covers more than half a million vehicles in the US and represents another major safety action involving Toyota's increasingly software-dependent vehicle systems.

Toyota has not indicated that the issue involves a mechanical failure of the vehicle's core driving systems. Instead, the recall is focused on correcting the instrument cluster software problem and

UP to resume smart meter rollout after awareness drive

LUCKNOW

Uttar Pradesh will resume the rollout of smart electricity meters after conducting a consumer awareness campaign, State Power Minister said on Tuesday. The move is aimed at addressing concerns among consumers and ensuring greater understanding of the technology before expanding its implementation.

The decision comes amid efforts by power distribution utilities to increase consumer confidence in smart metering. Awareness programmes are expected to explain how smart meters work, how electricity consumption can be monitored and how consumers can use digital tools to track their usage and payments.

Smart meters are being promoted as an important part of modernising India's electricity distribution system. They can provide consumers with near real-time information on electricity consumption, enable digital bill payments and help households monitor their power usage. For distribution companies, the technology can improve billing and collection efficiency and support better management of the electricity network.

The Uttar Pradesh government's decision to undertake awareness activities before restarting the rollout reflects the importance of consumer engagement in the transition. Earlier studies have found that lack of awareness about smart-meter applications, billing details and prepaid systems can affect consumer acceptance.

The Centre's Revamped Distribution Sector Scheme (RDSS) has made smart metering a key component of electricity distribution reforms. As of December 31, 2025, around 3.90 crore smart meters had been installed under RDSS, while the overall number installed across various schemes stood at 5.28 crore. The government has also said that consumer awareness programmes are being conducted to improve confidence in prepaid smart meters.

The minister said the rollout in Uttar Pradesh would proceed after consumers are adequately informed about the technology and its benefits. The awareness drive is expected to help address doubts and encourage smoother adoption when installation work resumes.

Dhoot Transmission IPO flags key business risks

MUMBAI

Dhoot Transmission Ltd's initial public offering (IPO) has highlighted several business risks, including heavy dependence on a few customers, cybersecurity threats and related-party transactions, according to the company's red herring prospectus (RHP).

The company's customer concentration remains a major concern. Its top five customers contributed 71.56 per cent of total operating revenue in FY26, compared with 71.18 per cent in FY25 and 66.17 per cent in FY24. Dhoot Transmission said it does not have long-term supply agreements with these customers and supplies components based on requirements from original equipment manufacturers (OEMs).

The company also warned that customers have the right to terminate their contracts. Any reduction, suspension or discontinuation of orders from major customers could therefore have a significant impact on its business, financial performance and revenue.

Cybersecurity is another key risk disclosed in the RHP. Dhoot Transmission said it faced a cyberattack during FY25, which resulted in the leakage of significant data, including confidential information relating to product designs and pricing. Following the incident, the company said it strengthened its systems and increased investments in cybersecurity. However, it cautioned that there can be no guarantee that future cyber incidents will be completely prevented.

The company has also identified related-party transactions as a significant risk. These transactions include product sales, rent, commissions, purchases of fixed assets and reimbursement of expenses. In FY24, shareholders approved transactions involving the sale of current assets worth around Rs 57.42 crore and immovable assets, including land and buildings, worth about Rs 23.75 crore to its subsidiary Dhoot Auto-Components Pvt Ltd.

Related-party transactions & governance risks

■ Nature of Risk: The identification of related-party dealings as a significant risk highlights potential conflicts of interest inherent in intra-group transactions.	■ Types of Transactions: These dealings span multiple operational categories, including product sales, rent payments, commission structures, fixed-asset purchases, and expense reimbursements.
■ Material Scale: Substantial asset transfers occurred recently; in FY24, shareholder approvals sanctioned the sale of current assets worth approximately Rs 57.42 crore and immovable assets (land and buildings) worth around Rs 23.75 crore to its subsidiary, Dhoot Auto-Components Pvt Ltd.	■ Board Discretion: Management has acknowledged that the board periodically scales up transaction limits with associate entities for logistics and supply needs, with no absolute guarantee that future terms will always match open-market or arm's-length favorability.

RECORD CASH MOUNTAINS

Samsung AI windfall raises special dividend hopes

SEOUL

Samsung Electronics' strong cash generation from the artificial intelligence (AI) boom is increasing expectations that the South Korean technology giant could announce a special dividend or expand shareholder returns.

Samsung and fellow memory-chip maker SK Hynix are generating record cash as demand for chips used in AI applications continues to grow. Investors have consequently increased pressure on both companies to return a larger portion of their surplus cash through dividends or share buybacks.

Samsung currently targets shareholder returns equivalent to 50 per cent of free cash flow. Its existing three-year shareholder return programme runs through 2026, with the company expected to announce details of its next capital-return policy. Samsung has said it is reviewing ways to enhance shareholder returns while maintaining a healthy balance sheet and funding future growth.

The expectations have strengthened following the company's record earnings and the rapid expansion of AI-related semiconductor demand. Samsung's memory business has benefited from higher demand for advanced chips, particularly those used in servers and AI infrastructure.

Investors are seeking greater clarity on how Samsung plans to deploy its growing cash reserves. The company faces a balance between rewarding shareholders and maintaining sufficient funds for capital-intensive investments in memory, foundry operations and other advanced technologies.

Samsung's first-quarter 2026 dividend was set at 372 won per common and preferred share, with a total payout of 2.45 trillion won. The company has also conducted share repurchases in recent years as part of its shareholder-return strategy.

Market expectations for an additional payout have risen as analysts assess Samsung's ability to generate strong free cash flow from the AI-driven semiconductor cycle. Some forecasts have

Financial drivers & investor pressure

■ AI-driven growth: Record cash generation is fueled by robust demand for advanced memory chips tailored for AI applications, servers, and broader AI infrastructure.	■ Capital allocation conflict: Investors are pressing Samsung to distribute a larger share of its surplus cash via dividends and share buybacks.
■ Complementary strategies: Alongside regular dividends, Samsung has utilized share repurchases in recent years to support its overarching shareholder-return strategy..	■ Current policy framework: Samsung's current three-year shareholder return programme targets returns equal to 50 percent of free cash flow and runs through the end of 2026.

pointed to the possibility of a sizeable special dividend, although the final amount and timing depend on Samsung's free cash flow, investment requirements and board decisions.

Shareholders are also pushing for stronger capital allocation as Samsung's shares have faced pressure despite record earnings. Investors argue that larger payouts could improve shareholder value and help address the long-standing valuation discount applied to South Korean companies.

Samsung has not announced a specific special-dividend amount. Any additional payout will depend on its formal shareholder-return policy and the company's assessment of future investment and cash requirements.

Navy officer Taniksha wins Commonwealth fencing gold

Taniksha hard work has propelled her to the Olympic qualifiers, showcasing consistent growth in international competition

NEW DELHI

Indian Navy officer and fencer Taniksha Khatri has added a Commonwealth Championship gold to her growing list of achievements after defeating compatriot Khushi Dabhade 15-7 in the senior women's epee final in Nigeria.

Taniksha's victory marks another major milestone in a fencing journey that began in 2012. Over the past 14 years, she has dedicated herself to training while building a career in the Indian Navy. Her efforts have also taken her to the Olympic qualification stage, highlighting her steady progress on the international circuit.

Taniksha said every day of training had contributed to her development as a fencer. She credited her family for standing by her through the challenges and helping her continue her sporting career.

The fencer also expressed gratitude to her coaches, saying their guidance and training had played an important role in developing her skills. She praised the Indian Navy for providing support, motivation and encouragement while she pursued fencing alongside her service.

Her Commonwealth title came in an all-Indian final against Dabhade. Taniksha eventually established control and secured a convincing 15-7 victory to claim the women's épée crown. The success has strengthened her confidence ahead of upcoming international competitions.

Taniksha now has her sights set on the Asian competitions and the Olympics. She said she would continue training with the aim of delivering her best performances on the biggest stages.

The Commonwealth gold represents the reward for years of discipline, preparation and perseverance. For Taniksha, however, the achievement is not only a personal accomplishment but also a moment of pride for India.

She said the victory belonged not just to her, but to the country that earned the gold through her success.

That fencing, despite being a respected sport, does not receive enough support and promotion in India.

Bindra calls beijing gold sporting life's "Biggest Peak"

NEW DELHI

Indian shooting legend Abhinav Bindra has reflected on the historic gold medal he won at the 2008 Beijing Olympics, describing the achievement as the "biggest peak" of his sporting life, 18 years after creating history.

On August 11, 2008, Bindra became the first Indian to win an individual Olympic gold medal when he triumphed in the men's 10m air rifle event with a score of 700.5. The landmark victory became one of the defining moments in Indian sporting history and elevated shooting to greater prominence in the country.

Marking the anniversary, Bindra looked back on his journey and said the years since Beijing had taught him that the periods between major achievements are equally important. He represented India at the 2012 London Olympics, where he finished 16th, before returning for the 2016 Rio Games and narrowly missing another medal with a fourth-place finish.

Bindra's career extended well beyond his Olympic triumph. The former shooter became a seven-time Commonwealth Games medallist, including four golds, and won three Asian Games medals. He also captured the 10m air rifle world championship title in 2006 and collected more than 150 individual medals during a career spanning nearly two decades.

His contribution to Indian sport continued after retirement. Bindra established the Abhinav Bindra Foundation Trust, which works to support grassroots athletes through sports science, high-performance training and education. He also served as vice-chair of the International Olympic Committee Athletes Commission.

During his IOC tenure, Bin-dra became the first Indian recipient of the Olympic Order, recognising his contribution to the Olympic movement. His post-retirement work has focused on helping create better opportunities and support systems for the next generation of athletes.

Eighteen years after his historic Beijing triumph, Bindra's reflection highlights both the significance of reaching the sporting summit and the value of the journey that follows. His 2008 gold remains a landmark achievement that continues to inspire Indian athletes.

Trump backs under-fire FIFA Gianni Infantino

WASHINGTON

US President Donald Trump has thrown his support behind FIFA president Gianni Infantino, who is facing growing criticism from several football governing bodies over his leadership and a controversial proposal involving private investment in World Cup commercial rights. Trump warned that removing Infantino would be a "terrible mistake" and described the FIFA chief as a highly successful leader.

Trump's intervention comes at a time when Infantino is under increasing pressure from major football confederations. UEFA, the Asian Football Confederation (AFC) and CONCACAF have jointly criticised the FIFA president over a proposal to sell a stake in World Cup commercial rights to private investors. The plan was withdrawn following widespread opposition. The three confederations accused Infantino of acting without adequate consultation and said the episode had damaged trust in FIFA leadership. They have called for an independent review and stronger safeguards to prevent similar decisions from being taken without wider consultation among FIFA's member associations.

Rhodes sees fewer bilateral ODIs in future

MUMBAI

Former South Africa cricketer Jonty Rhodes believes bilateral ODI series could become less frequent in the future, but said it would be difficult to imagine cricket without the traditional 50-over format.

Rhodes was speaking during the jersey launch of European T20 Premier League side Rotterdam Dockers in Mumbai. He acknowledged the growing influence of franchise-based T20 cricket but said passionate supporters would continue to give international cricket, including ODIs, strong relevance.

The former South African star said the expansion of T20 leagues could put pressure on bilateral 50-over cricket. With players increasingly balancing international commitments and franchise opportunities, Rhodes suggested that some cricketers could choose to end their international careers earlier to focus on T20 competitions.

Rhodes pointed out that T20 cricket had not eliminated Test cricket despite concerns when the shortest format was intro-

At this stage, I think there will be fewer and fewer bilateral series," while adding that it remained "very difficult to think of cricket without the 50-over version."

duced. Instead, the three formats have developed alongside each other, although the growing number of franchise leagues could create greater competition for players and scheduling space.

He also highlighted the importance of fans in preserving ODI cricket. According to Rhodes, supporters remain deeply attached to their national teams and will continue following them regardless of the format. Major international tournaments, particularly the ODI World Cup, provide the 50-over game with an important platform.

Rhodes also discussed South Africa's prospects at the 2027 ODI World Cup, which the country will co-host with Zimbabwe and Namibia. He said South Africans were excited about staging the tournament and hoped the national team could finally win another ICC limited-overs trophy.

The former cricketer also praised the evolution of fielding, noting that modern teams place far greater emphasis on athleticism, fitness and fielding standards. He credited players and coaches for raising expectations and said teams could no longer afford to hide weak fielders. Rhodes' comments come as international cricket continues to balance traditional formats with the rapid expansion of franchise T20 leagues worldwide.

NEW DELHI

Former South African cricketer Jonty Rhodes and Bollywood actor John Abraham unveiled the official jersey of Rotterdam Dockers ahead of the inaugural European T20

Premier League (ETPL).

The unveiling marks another step towards the launch of the new franchise-based cricket competition, which aims to expand the reach and popularity of T20 cricket across Europe. Rotterdam Dockers will represent the Netherlands in the tournament.

Rhodes, widely regarded as one of cricket's finest fielders, has been associated with the Rotterdam franchise, while Abraham is part of the ownership group. Their presence at the jersey launch added significant attention to the team ahead of the inaugural season.

The ETPL is expected to bring together international players and emerging European talent, providing a platform for cricketers from the continent to gain greater exposure in a competitive T20 environment.

Rotterdam Dockers will look to build a strong identity around the new franchise as preparations gather pace. The jersey unveiling is also expected to help strengthen the team's connection with local supporters and cricket fans in the Netherlands.

The competition is being positioned as an important development for European cricket, where T20 leagues have grown in popularity in recent years. Organisers are hoping the ETPL will create a sustainable professional pathway for players while attracting international audiences and commercial interest.

With Rhodes' cricketing credentials and Abraham's profile in Indian entertainment and sports, Rotterdam Dockers have already generated considerable interest before taking the field. The franchise will now focus on completing its squad and preparations for the historic first edition of the ETPL.
