KARNATAKA ASSEMBLY MONSOON SESSION

'BOWING TO IDEALS OF DEMOCRACY...'

DKS gears up to face Oppn salvo; bows to assembly door and CM seat, walks up to the opposition benches and greets LoP R Ashoka and DyLoP Arvind Bellad before the start of the legislative session.

BENGALURU

Chief Minister DK Shivakumar on Thursday bowed to the threshold of the Legislative Assembly and the CM's chair as he entered the House at Vidhana Soudha for the first time as Chief Minister.

The monsoon session, which began on Thursday, marks his first legislative session in the new role.

"With the blessings of crores of Kannadigas, bowing to the ideals of democracy, I take my first step into the House as Chief Minister," Shivakumar posted on X, sharing a picture.

Shivakumar walked up to the opposition benches and greeted the Leader of Opposition in the House R Ashoka and Deputy Leader of Opposition Arvind Bellad in the beginning of the day's proceedings.

Shivakumar posted on X that he was taking his first step into the House as CM while bowing to the ideals of democracy and with the blessings of Kannadigas. He also greeted opposition leaders R Ashoka and Arvind Bellad.

Shivakumar was sworn-in as the chief minister along with 13 ministers on June 3, following Siddaramaiah's resignation as CM on May 28.

He expanded his Cabinet on August 3, by inducting 19 ministers, bringing the total strength to 33. One berth remains vacant.

The monsoon session of the Karnataka legislature is expected to be stormy with the opposition likely to corner the Congress government on a host of issues, including drought management and the resignation of minister B Nagendra, who is facing corruption charges.

BJP to boycott Assembly Speaker poll

Bengaluru: The Opposition BJP said on Thursday that it would boycott the election to pick the Speaker of the Karnataka Assembly, even as it and the JD(S) nominated a candidate for the Legislative Council chairperson post despite lacking the numbers in the Upper House. Both polls will be held on Friday. Speaking to reporters, LoP R Ashoka said the BJP was boycotting the election because the Congress high command had already announced the Speaker's name in a letter. "The House has sovereignty and the MLAs have the right. But the Congress has unconstitutionally mentioned the name of the Speaker to be selected on its letterhead."

Integrated Township (GBIT) project near Bidadi in Bengaluru South district, and the demand for Nagendra's resignation are likely to disrupt House proceedings.

On Thursday, the House paid tributes to D Sudhakar, a member of the current Assembly and a Minister, who passed away recently, during the obituary reference.

Eyeing RSS, Cabinet approves bill on use of public property

Bengaluru: The Karnataka Cabinet is learnt to have approved on Thursday a Bill requiring private organisations and associations to seek government permission to use public property for any activity, a move widely seen as targeting the Rashtriya Swayamsevak Sangh (RSS).

The Karnataka Regulation of Use of Government Premises and Public Property Bill, 2026, drafted by the Home Department headed by Priyank Kharge, is likely to be introduced in the ongoing monsoon session of the legislature.

The Bill will replace an October 18, 2025 order that made "prior permission" mandatory for any private organisation, association or a group of persons to use government property or premises.

While the order did not specifically name RSS, it contained enough provisions to impact the activities of the Hindu majoritarian organisation, including its route marches. The order, however, was stayed by the Karnataka High Court citing violation of fundamental rights.

Minimum wages: Cabinet panel formed

The Cabinet also decided to form a sub-committee headed by Deputy Chief Minister G Parameshwara to look into the hike in minimum wages in the state, which was done through a final notification by the Labour Department in May.

A pet project of Labour Minister Santosh Lad, the government revised minimum wages in the range of Rs 32,145 and Rs 20,350. While this was hailed by trade unions, it was criticised by employers as "too steep."

A case is currently ongoing in the High Court between employers and the Government of Karnataka.

It may be recalled that the Finance Department had advised all government departments to wait for the Cabinet's final decision before proceeding with the revision of minimum wages.

The business has finally started

The Karnataka Legislature's monsoon session began on August 13, 2026, and is scheduled to run until August 27, 2026, spanning 10 working days at the Vidhana Soudha in Bengaluru. The session assumes significance as it comes after a considerable delay, amid mounting political developments, including the uncertainty over Cabinet expansion.

Schedule & details

Dates: August 13 to August 27
Location: Vidhana Soudha, B'lu.
Duration: 10 working days.
Summoned by: Governor Thawarchand Gehlot under Article 174(1) of the Constitution.

Major focus areas & background

Cabinet rejig: The session follows the recent induction and portfolio allocation for new ministers, with CM DK Shivakumar retaining major portfolios like Finance and Intelligence.

Expected issues: Proceedings are expected to focus heavily on state development, drought mitigation, regional water-sharing matters such as the Cauvery dispute, and facing opposition questions, including the absence of a woman minister in the Cabinet.

Cauvery: Govt to move SC

The Cabinet is learnt to have decided Thursday to file a petition in the Supreme Court challenging the Cauvery Water Regulation Committee's (CWRC) direction that Karnataka should release 12,000 cusecs of water to Tamil Nadu for the next 15 days. "About 7,000-7,500 cusecs of water is already flowing naturally. We're falling short by some 4,000 cusecs," an official said.

'Sandhya Kirana' for retired staff gets cabinet nod

BENGALURU

The Karnataka state cabinet on Thursday approved the launch of 'Sandhya Kiran' contributory cashless healthcare scheme for state government pensioners and family pensioners aged below 70 years.

The voluntary initiative aims to cover roughly 4.93 lakh beneficiaries, offering secondary, tertiary, and emergency medical care up to ₹5 lakh per family annually.

As per the government, to ensure comprehensive healthcare coverage for retired state government employees and their eligible dependents, this new scheme has been formulated under the regulations of the Ayushman Bharat-Arogya Karnataka (AB-ArK) scheme.

The scheme will be implemented through the Suvarna Arogya Suraksha Trust (SAST).

FEATURES OF THE SCHEME

Coverage & beneficiaries: In the initial phase, approximately 3.11 lakh state government pensioners under 70 years of age and their eligible dependents, bringing a total of about 4.93 lakh beneficiaries, will come under the scope of this scheme.

Healthcare benefits: As a contributory cashless health scheme, it provides cashless access to secondary, tertiary, and emergency medical treatments up to ₹5.00 Lakh per eligible family per year on a floater basis.

Hospital network: Benefit packages and revised package rates applicable under AB-ArK will extend to this scheme as well. Beneficiaries can avail of cashless treatment facilities at enrolled/approved hospitals under the scheme.

Premium contributions

Service pensioners must contribute 1.25% of their basic pension.

Family pensioners must contribute 0.75% of their basic family pension.

Financial impact (Treatment costs)

The scheme is expected to collect an estimated ₹117 Crore annually in premiums, with the annual treatment cost estimated at approximately ₹81.75 Cr.

As per AB-ArK policy, 70% of the treatment cost will be borne by the beneficiaries' share and 30% by the State Government's share.

Accordingly, the annual share will be approximately ₹57.22 Crore from beneficiaries and ₹24.53 Crore from the State Government.

To ensure long-term financial stability and effective corpus management, a mechanism is proposed to automatically increase the current premium rate by 0.05% (5 basis points) whenever corpus utilization exceeds 85%.

Social security significance

This scheme is a vital social security measure ensuring quality, affordable, and cashless healthcare services for state government pensioners and their families, helping significantly reduce the financial burden of unexpected medical expenses.

Phuket incident: Air India expands dope test for all pilots

NEW DELHI: Air India will begin mandatory substance testing for all pilots on Thursday, expanding checks beyond regulatory requirements days after a pilot involved in a serious mid-air incident tested positive for marijuana, according to an internal memo.

The tests will screen for substances and medications prohibited under aviation regulations and will be conducted alongside training sessions at the airline's Gurugram academy, after flights at briefing centres and offices, or at locations designated by pilots' home bases. Pilots at budget subsidiary Air India Express will also be tested.

Air India did not immediately respond to an email seeking comment. Existing rules require airlines to randomly test at least 10% of their flight crew for psychoactive substances each year.

"We nevertheless now feel that it is important to go further," Air India said in the memo, adding that the initiative was intended to uphold safety standards and provide reassurance to passengers and other stakeholders.

The move comes as authorities investigate an August 4 incident involving an Air India Airbus A320neo flying from Phuket to Delhi that suddenly lost about 300 feet (91 metres) of altitude during cruise. The flight's captain tested positive for marijuana in a confirmatory drug test.

AP students take out 'Taksing Chalo, Bharat Bachao'

Guwahati: With the claims by community organisations and Opposition parties about incursion by Chinese forces on the border increasing pressure on the government, a team of the influential All Arunachal Pradesh Students' Union (AAPSU) on Thursday began a march towards Taksing, where they seeks to hoist the tricolor on the Independence Day.

A team led by Mato Bui, AAPSU general secretary, began the march from the state capital Itanagar to Taksing, an interior area in Upper Subansiri district, where, according to local organisations, Chinese PLA forces had allegedly crossed the border recently and even blocked movement of the Indian forces.

Cauvery row: K'taka bandh evokes mixed response

Bengaluru: The Karnataka bandh called by pro-Kannada activist Vatal Nagaraj on Thursday against the Cauvery water release to Tamil Nadu evoked mixed response, with intense protests in Mandya and preventive detentions at several places, while life remained unaffected in major urban centers like Bengaluru and Mysuru as organisations that had backed the agitation initially, later withdrew support.

The bandh was called by the Federation of Kannada organisations led by activist Vatal Nagaraj, in protest against the directions of the Cauvery Water Regulation Committee and the Cauvery Water Management Authority to release 12,000 cusecs of water to Tamil Nadu.

The call lost some momentum after several Kannada organisations withdrew their support. Chief Minister D K Shivakumar said that some activists, including Praveen Shetty and Sa Ra Govindu, had met him and informed him that they were withdrawing the bandh call.

"They have said that they are withdrawing the call, which is very happy news. I congratulate them and thank them for it," Shivakumar told reporters.

Pro-Kannada activist Vatal Nagaraj was taken into preventive custody from his residence in Bengaluru before he could join the planned protests.

In Mandya, the epicentre of the Cauvery agitation, farmers staged protests carrying empty pots and horse gram.

10K fine if ambulance fails to reach crash site in 10-minute

The new norms give ambulances two minutes to start moving after accepting an emergency alert

NEW DELHI

The National Highways Authority of India has set a 10-minute deadline for ambulances deployed on national highways to reach accident sites within a 10-km radius, as part of new rules aimed at cutting delays in emergency response. It said failure to meet the timeline could attract a penalty of Rs 10,000 for each incident.

Under the new guidelines, ambulances will also have to take accident victims to the nearest hospital within one hour of accepting a ticket, with a Rs 10,000 penalty for any failure. The norms, issued on Wednesday, are part of efforts to strengthen the Incident Management System through the NHAI Care System and improve the dispatch of ambulances, cranes and patrolling vehicles.

In its policy guidelines, NHAI said, "Based on location of incident the ambulance should not take more than 10 minutes (from time of the ticket acceptance) for covering any accident within 10-km vicinity." It added, "For incident locations beyond 10 km, allowed time shall be proportionally increased. The same shall be verified through GPS data/ IMS Care Dashboard."

There are around 3,000 ambulances and 1,000 patrolling vehicles and cranes covering about 50,000 km of highways under NHAI. Under the new service-level benchmarks, any emergency ticket rejection by an ambulance will also attract a penalty of Rs 10,000. NHAI said all equipment, medicines and staff must be provided as per contract agreements, failing which a penalty of Rs 10,000 will be imposed.

The agency said AIS-140 compliant GPS devices have been installed on all on-road units, including ambulances, cranes and patrolling vehicles deployed on NHAI projects, to ensure effective implementation of the NHAI Care System.

Hebbal residents fume over vehicles blocking house gates

MYSURU

Residents of Second Cross Road near Surya Bakery in Hebbal are reportedly facing daily inconvenience as car owners allegedly park their vehicles in front of residential gates, blocking access to homes and creating frequent confrontations.

A.R. Satyanarayana Murthy, an advocate and resident of Hebbal, has brought the issue to public attention, stating that residents have been forced to tolerate the problem for a long time. According to him, vehicles are parked indiscriminately in front of house gates without considering the inconvenience caused to occupants trying to enter or leave their homes.

The situation, he said, becomes more serious when residents question the motorists. Instead of moving their vehicles, some car owners allegedly respond aggressively and engage in heated arguments.

In a recent incident, the owner of a car allegedly reacted angrily when questioned for blocking a residential gate. The motorist reportedly claimed that the road was government property and questioned the resident's authority to object to the parking.

Murthy has appealed to the jurisdiction traffic police to intervene and take appropriate action against motorists who block residential entrances and allegedly intimidate residents. He cautioned that repeated parking disputes could escalate into serious law-and-order issues if motorists resort to threats or physical confrontation.

Residents have urged the traffic authorities to regulate parking in the area and ensure that access to residential properties is not obstructed. They said public roads cannot be treated as an excuse to inconvenience homeowners.

'50 Years of bandhs, but what did Karnataka gain?'

MYSURU

Former MLC H. Vishwanath has urged people not to support the Karnataka bandh called by Kannada activist Vatal Nagaraj on August 13, terming it "unnecessary" and warning that repeated shutdowns only inflict losses on ordinary people and small businesses.

Speaking to reporters here on Wednesday, Vishwanath said Karnataka had witnessed bandhs for nearly five decades, but they had failed to produce any meaningful solution.

Over the last 50 years, how many bandhs have been held and what has been achieved? There have only been huge losses. The bandhs primarily hurt small traders, street vendors and ordinary workers, while large five-star hotels and major showrooms often escape the impact. Instead of shutting down the State, the governments of Karnataka and Tamil Nadu should sit across the table and resolve contentious issues through dialogue. The public must not to support the bandh even if attempts were made to enforce it forcibly.

'Siddaramaiah's interference must end'
Taking aim at former Chief Minister Siddaramaiah, Vishwanath alleged that his interference in the functioning of the government had increased considerably.

"Siddaramaiah should immediately stop interfering and allow the new Chief Minister D.K. Shivakumar to function independently," he said, adding that Shivakumar should be given freedom to choose a Cabinet that would enable him to govern effectively.

Vishwanath also accused Siddaramaiah of displaying excessive "son affection" by backing his son, Yathindra Siddaramaiah.

He questioned the decision to appoint Yathindra as Mysuru district in-charge minister, arguing that he lacked the experience required to handle the responsibilities associated with a globally renowned city like Mysuru.

"Mysuru is a world-famous city and major personalities visit it. Handling such responsibilities requires experience," Vishwanath said.

Make Tanveer charge of Mysuru

On the Cauvery issue, Vishwanath praised Chief Minister D.K. Shivakumar for the steps being taken and urged people to support him.

He also suggested that Congress MLA Tanveer Sait be inducted into the Cabinet and given charge of Mysuru district, saying his experience would benefit the city and the district.

BHEEMANA AMAVASYA WOMEN OFFER PRAYERS FOR MARITAL BLISS

MYSURU

The spirit of tradition and devotion filled Mysuru on Wednesday as women across the city observed Bheemana Amavasya, performing special rituals and offering prayers for the well-being, longevity and prosperity of their husbands and families.

From the early hours of the morning, homes and temples witnessed women preparing for the auspicious occasion with traditional decorations, oil lamps and special puja arrangements. The festival, observed during the Amavasya (new moon) in the month of Ashada, holds a special place in Karnataka's cultural and religious traditions.

Women dressed in colourful traditional attire performed the customary puja and sought divine blessings for the welfare of their families. The lighting of lamps formed a significant part of the celebrations, lending a festive glow to households.

In several homes, women prepared traditional offerings and decorated the puja space with flowers, turmeric, kumkum and other auspicious items. The rituals were accompanied by the chanting of prayers and devotional songs, creating a spiritually charged atmosphere.

The festival is also associated with the traditional 'Bheemana Amavasya' ritual, in which women worship symbolic representations of Bheema and his wife Draupadi or a pair of sacred objects representing the divine couple. The rituals are believed to strengthen marital bonds and bring happiness and prosperity to the family.

Temples in different parts of Mysuru also witnessed devotees offering prayers and participating in special pujas. The festival provided an opportunity for families to come together and preserve customs handed down through generations.

For many women, Bheemana Amavasya is not merely a religious observance but also a celebration of family values, affection and togetherness. Elder members of families guided younger women in performing the rituals, helping pass on the significance of the festival to the next generation.

The colourful festivities, traditional attire, fragrant flowers and glowing lamps added to the charm of Mysuru on Wednesday, showcasing the city's rich cultural heritage and deep-rooted traditions.

'A good friend is equal to a library': Prof. Chandrashekar

MYSURU

Just as temples are filled with devotees, libraries too should be filled with students, said Prof. M. Chandrashekar, senior professor, Department of Library and Information Science, University of Mysuru.

Speaking at a programme organised by the City Central Library to mark the birth anniversary of Dr. S.R. Ranganathan, regarded as the Father of Library Science in India, as Librarians' Day. Prof. Chandrashekar who inaugurated the programme by offering floral tributes to the portrait of Dr. S.R. Ranganathan, said a good book is equal to a hundred friends, while a good friend is equal to a library.

Speaking on the occasion, Amshi Prasannakumar, a senior journalist, explained the close and inseparable relationship between journalism and libraries and highlighted the importance of making effective use of library resources.

Rakhi Chennabasavanna advised students not to depend solely on artificial intelligence but to cultivate the habit of reading books. Reading makes a person complete, writing makes one precise and speech prepares one for life," she said.

G. Anand, Assistant Professor at Sharada Vilas Degree College, said books have the power to transform individuals into cultured and responsible citizens.

Dr. B. Mallikarjunaswamy, Vice-Principal of Government Girls' High School, People's Park, and a member of the City Library Authority, who presided over the programme, said he had faced difficulties in life due to not having a close association with libraries and urged students to make continuous and meaningful use of library facilities.

Certificates and prizes were distributed to students who emerged winners in various competitions held as part of the programme.

Deputy Director of City Central Library Manjunath B., Deputy Director of District Central Library Suma B. Kodihalli, Chief Librarian Padmashree T., Assistant Librarian of People's Park Library Sowmya S., Librarian of City Central Library Syed Noorussabha Salar, Office Superintendent Latha H. and First Division Assistant Shobha L. were among those present.

Pro-Kannada activists stage novel protest in Mysuru

Demand immediate Mekedatu foundation stone

MYSURU

Stepping up their opposition to the release of Cauvery water to Tamil Nadu, the Mysore District Kannada Activists Association staged a unique protest in front of the Cauvery Irrigation Development Corporation (CADA) office here on Thursday.

Led by association president B.A. Shivashankar, the protesters expressed strong resentment against the alleged repeated pressure exerted by Tamil Nadu before the Cauvery Water Regulation Committee (CWRC), Cauvery Water Management Authority (CWMA) and the Supreme Court for securing water from Karnataka, even during periods of water scarcity in the State.

As part of the protest, activists beat portraits of prominent Tamil Nadu political leaders with the broomsticks, including Chief Minister M.K. Stalin, AIADMK leader Edappadi K. Palaniswami and Congress leader Manickam Tagore, condemning the directions to Karnataka to release 12,000 cusecs of Cauvery water daily for 15 days.

Addressing the protesters, Shivashankar alleged that the CWRC and CWMA were functioning in favour of Tamil Nadu and demanded that such orders be withdrawn immediately. "This decision amounts to a death sentence for Kannadigas," he said, stressing the need to protect Karnataka's drinking-water requirements before releasing water to neighbouring States.

He urged the Union Government to implement the National Water Policy by prioritising the filling of canals, tributaries and lakes in the Cauvery and Kapila river basin to ensure adequate water for people, livestock and agriculture.

Shivashankar also demanded that Karnataka Deputy Chief Minister D.K. Shivakumar take an uncompromising stand on the Cauvery issue and immediately lay the foundation stone for the proposed Mekedatu project, envisaged with a capacity of 67 TMC and 400 MW power generation.

"The project is within Karnataka's territory and has the backing of seven crore Kannadigas. The State government should not yield to pressure and must move ahead with Mekedatu," he asserted.

The protesters said Karnataka's interests should be safeguarded while taking decisions on Cauvery water sharing and called for a long-term solution to the recurring water dispute.

Representatives of several pro-Kannada organisations participated in the protest.

Another group of Kannada activists slept on the footpath to indicate that the state government was in the deep slumber and not taken any step to protect the interest of the people.

Another group of farmers also slept on the main road near the CADA near the MCC and raised slogans against the state government for its failure to explain the current situation before the authorities concerned. When the Karnataka farmers were waiting for the release of water to save the withering crops, the state government was releasing 12,000 cusecs of water daily to Tamil Nadu for the next 15 days. By doing that, the KRS and Kabini Dam would go empty and the people of Karnataka had to struggle even for a drop of water.

Later, the activists were taken into custody.

KARNATAKA BANDH FALLS FLAT IN MYSURU

Buses roll, shops open, autos ply as city refuses to slow down

MYSURU

The Karnataka bandh called by various Kannada organisations to protest the Cauvery Water Management Authority's (CWMA) direction to release 12,000 cusecs of water to Tamil Nadu failed to make an impact in Mysuru on Thursday, with normal life continuing across the city.

The bandh call was issued in protest against the water release order at a time when Karnataka is facing uncertainty over the monsoon and the storage position in its reservoirs. However, the proposed shutdown received little support in Mysuru, with major trade, transport and hotel associations staying away from the protest.

City buses operated as usual, while autorickshaws continued to ply on the roads. Shops, hotels, commercial establishments and markets remained open, ensuring that the city's daily routine was largely unaffected.

'Mysuru chose normalcy'

The Mysuru Hoteliers Association, Autorickshaw Drivers and Owners Association and several other organisations did not extend their support to the bandh. As a result, the call failed to evoke the expected response. "There was no disruption to normal life. Public transport, autos, shops and business establishments functioned as usual. The people of Mysuru have chosen normalcy," a city resident said.

Educational institutions

also remained open, and students attended classes as usual. Government offices functioned normally without any major disruption.

Inter-State government buses too operated according to their regular schedules, providing relief to passengers travelling to neighbouring districts and States.

Police keep a tight vigil

Although the bandh had little impact on the city, the police did not take any chances. Elaborate security arrangements were made at important junctions, government offices, bus stands and other sensitive locations as a precautionary measure.

Police personnel were deployed at several places to prevent any untoward incident. Small groups of activists who staged demonstrations in different parts of the city were taken into custody as a preventive measure.

"Our priority was to ensure that the bandh did not disturb public life or lead to any law-and-order problem. Adequate security was deployed across the city as a precaution," a police official said.

The peaceful movement of traffic and uninterrupted functioning of commercial establishments presented a picture of a city largely indifferent to the bandh call.

The bandh organisers had sought public support against the CWMA's order, arguing that Karnataka should not be compelled to release water to Tamil Nadu when the State itself is facing water concerns.

However, the lack of support from key sections of the transport, hotel and business community meant that the protest failed to translate into a citywide shutdown.

By evening, Mysuru had remained largely peaceful and busy, with buses running, autos moving, shops doing business and educational and government institutions functioning normally.

In total, the Cauvery bandh call may have raised slogans on the streets, but it failed to bring Mysuru to a standstill.

Nagar in Zone 2; near Sayyaji Mosque and on Nazarbada Main Road in Zone 6; near the Ganapati Temple at Natanahalli in Zone 7; opposite Sumana School and near RGA School at Kalyanagiri in Zone 9; and the Eden Garden area of Rajiv Nagar 2nd Stage in Zone 8.

As many as 568 people, including MCC officials and staff, representatives of various organisations and local residents, participated in the drive. A total of 173.66 metric tonnes of waste was removed during 39 man-hours of cleaning operations.

The transformation went beyond simply removing garbage. The cleaned locations were given a fresh look through painting, beautification works, plantation and public awareness activities, turning neglected dumping spots into cleaner and more attractive neighbourhood spaces.

Speaking at the programme held at Eden Garden, MCC Commissioner Savitha M.K. stressed the need for sustained vigilance to prevent the transformed sites from becoming garbage dumping grounds again. She urged local residents and organisations to work closely with the civic body to preserve the cleanliness and beauty of the revamped spaces.

Sanitation Ambassador Sooraj appealed to citizens not to dump waste indiscriminately and to segregate waste at source before handing it over to MCC collection vehicles. Such responsible practices, he said, would help in building a cleaner Mysuru.

With Thursday's exercise, 40 GVPs have now been transformed under the campaign. The MCC has set a target of converting the remaining 40 sites within the stipulated period.

The civic body said the transformed locations would be kept under continuous monitoring for 30 days to prevent fresh dumping. It also warned that those found illegally dumping waste in public places would face penalties as per the rules.

MCC officials, engineers, health inspectors, pourakarmikas, representatives of voluntary organisations and local residents participated in the campaign.

CAUVERY FLOW TURNS FIERCE

Kabini releases 10,000 cusecs, KRS adds 2310 cusecs to Tamil Nadu

MYSURU

The Cauvery basin is witnessing a sharp escalation in water releases, with the Kabini reservoir releasing a massive 10,000 cusecs into the river on Thursday, even as the KRS reservoir near Mandya was releasing around 2,310 cusecs.

The combined outflow from the two key reservoirs has triggered fresh concerns among farmers and water conservationists over the availability of water in Karnataka during the coming months.

According to the reservoir position on Thursday, Kabini stood at 2,282.36 ft against its maximum level of 2,284 ft. The reservoir was receiving an inflow of 8,448 cusecs, while its outflow was significantly higher at 10,000 cusecs.

At KRS, the water level stood at 109.74 ft against the maximum of 124.80 ft. The reservoir was receiving 4,875 cusecs, while about 2,310 cusecs was being released.

The high-volume discharge from Kabini assumes significance as Karnataka is already facing concerns over the uneven monsoon and the need to preserve water for drinking and irrigation requirements in the Cauvery basin.

Farmers have questioned the wisdom of maintaining such heavy releases when the monsoon is yet to stabilise. They fear that continued releases at the present rate could rapidly eat into the live storage of the reservoirs, leaving Karnataka with limited water reserves when the dry season sets in. The situation is particularly worrying because Kabini's outflow alone is more than its current inflow, indicating that storage could decline if the trend continues. Any prolonged reduction in inflows could put additional pressure on the reservoirs.

With the Cauvery Water Management Authority directing releases to Tamil Nadu, the latest discharge figures are likely to intensify the political and farmers' debate in Karnataka over balancing the State's own water security with downstream obligations.

Water activists have warned that if the reservoirs are depleted now, Karnataka could face a serious water crunch well before the onset of summer.

PROTESTERS BLOCK ROAD IN MYSURU

Demand cabinet berth for Dr H.C.Mahadevappa

MYSURU

Progressive and Dalit organisations, along with supporters of senior Congress legislator Dr. H.C. Mahadevappa, staged a massive protest in the city on Thursday, condemning the decision not to induct him into the Cabinet headed by Chief Minister D.K. Shivakumar.

The protesters assembled before the statue of Dr. B.R. Ambedkar at the Town Hall and raised slogans demanding justice for Mahadevappa. They shouted slogans such as "Give him a ministerial berth," "We want justice," and "The struggle will not stop until he is made a Minister," besides criticising the incumbent CM and former Chief Minister Siddaramaiah.

The protesters later took out a procession and formed a human chain at Chamaraja Wadiyar Circle, blocking traffic for some time and causing temporary disruption to vehicular movement.

The protesters said Mahadevappa was one of the senior-most Dalit leaders of the Congress and had played a significant role in the party's victory in the 2023 Assembly elections. They alleged that despite his experience, administrative ability and stature, he had been deliberately ignored while forming the Cabinet.

They recalled his contributions as Public Works and Social Welfare Minister and said his effective implementation of SCSP-TSP funds had benefited the Dalit community. Denying him Cabinet representation, they alleged, amounted to an injustice to the community.

The protesters also accused Siddaramaiah of sidelining his long-time associates for political reasons and claimed that Mahadevappa had played a key role in retaining the support of the Dalit community for Siddaramaiah. The Congress high command to reconsider the decision and warned of a more intense agitation if Mahadevappa was not given Cabinet representation.

The protesters alleged that the Congress had repeatedly failed to adequately represent Dalit leaders, citing the political careers of Mallikarjun Kharge, G. Parameshwara and the late V. Sreenivasa Prasad. They said the Dalit community should not be treated merely as a vote bank and demanded meaningful political representation.

They warned that the party would face electoral consequences if the demand for representation to Mahadevappa, a senior leader from the Old Mysuru region, was ignored.

Former Mymul president R. Cheluvvaraju, Devalapura Siddaraju, Maridevaiah, Tumbasoge Naganna, Chinnanna, Jnanaprakash, Basavaraju, Kumar Ontikoppalu, Ravi Kolaghatta and several others participated in the protest.

SIR ROWPrakash Raj accuses poll officials of cover-up

CH NEWS, BENGALURU

Actor Prakash Raj has accused Karnataka election authorities of a "cover-up" over his voter registration status in Bengaluru amid the ongoing Special Intensive Revision (SIR) exercise. Raj had claimed on August 11 that his name was deleted from the electoral rolls. Election officials later clarified that his registration remained active in the Shantinagar Assembly constituency. They said a Booth Level Officer's door-to-door verification found that Raj had shifted from his previously registered address at Garden Apartments four years ago. His status was subsequently marked as "Permanently shifted", officials said, advising him to submit Form 6 to register his new address. In a follow-up video, Raj challenged the explanation, alleging that officials changed their position only after his post gained widespread attention. He claimed officials initially told him that a mistake had occurred and later changed the website status from "Permanently shifted" to "Shifted". Raj also questioned the circumstances surrounding a late-evening visit by the BLO to his former residence, describing it as "natak and drama". He alleged that the exercise was conducted to create footage portraying him as being at fault. The actor said the issue was not merely about his voter registration but about the dignity and rights of citizens during electoral verification. He questioned whether ordinary voters would receive similar attention and said he would release more videos and hold a press conference.

What election officials said
Election authorities said Raj's voter registration remained active and denied arbitrary deletion. A Booth Level Officer verified his previous address and found that he had moved away four years ago. Officials said his status was marked "Permanently shifted" following the verification and advised him to submit Form 6 to register his current address. Raj disputed the explanation, alleging officials changed the status only after his public protest gained widespread attention.

Priyank Kharge targets BJP over 'Har Ghar Tiranga' campaign

Home Minister Priyank Kharge questioned BJP's patriotism narrative, urging the 'Har Ghar Tiranga' campaign to begin at RSS headquarters.

CH NEWS, BENGALURU

Karnataka Home Minister Priyank Kharge on Thursday criticised the BJP over its 'Har Ghar Tiranga' campaign, saying the initiative should begin at the Rashtriya Swayamsevak Sangh (RSS) headquarters in Nagpur. Kharge questioned the RSS's history of hoisting the national flag at its headquarters, claiming that the tricolour was officially hoisted there only in 2002. He also questioned why the organisation's ideological association with the Bhagwa Dhvaj took precedence over the national flag for decades. He asked whether RSS route marches had seen uniformed swayamsevak carrying the Indian tricolour, accusing the BJP of issuing “Desh Bhakti” certificates to others while questioning their patriotism. His remarks came amid the 'Har Ghar Tiranga' campaign being promoted as part of Independence Day celebrations. Prime Minister Narendra Modi had urged citizens to hoist the tricolour at their homes and described the campaign as a tribute to freedom fighters and a pledge towards a developed India.

Kharge said the BJP should first explain the RSS's historical position on the national flag before lecturing citizens about patriotism.

CH NEWS, BENGALURU

Karnataka Deputy Chief Minister Dr G. Parameshwara has strongly condemned the reported "purification ritual" conducted at a ground in Haldwani, Uttarakhand, after Congress president Mallikarjun Kharge attended a party event there.

Kharge participated in a Congress public programme at Ram Leela Maidan on August 8. Parameshwara said he was deeply hurt by reports that the venue was subsequently subjected to a purification ritual because Kharge belongs to the Dalit community.

He said the incident exposed the continuing reality of caste discrimination and untouchability in Indian society. Pointing out that India had reached the Moon's south pole, Parameshwara said it was unfortunate that society still struggled to accept a Dalit as an equal.

He alleged that caste discrimination, untouchability and regressive practices continue despite constitutional safeguards. Calling those who oppose constitutional values "anti-national", he said vested interests were attempting to keep such practices alive.

Parameshwara questioned whether India was returning to the era of Manusmriti under the Narendra Modi government and asked what the incident meant for ordinary Dalits if such treatment could be directed at a senior national leader.

He urged Prime Minister Narendra Modi to ensure that cases were registered against those responsible and that they faced stringent punishment under the law. He also called upon Dalit and marginalised communities within the BJP to introspect over the forces they were supporting.

Karnataka HC upholds police power to freeze bank accounts under BNSS

CH NEWS, BENGALURU

The Karnataka High Court has upheld the statutory authority of police officers to debit-freeze bank accounts during crime investigations under Section 106 of the Bharatiya Nagarik Suraksha Sanhita (BNSS), 2023, without obtaining a prior court order.

Justice M. Nagaprasanna passed the ruling, according to Karnataka Cyber Command Director General of Police Pranab Mohanty. He said police are required to freeze the account during an investigation and report the action immediately to the jurisdictional Magistrate.

The judgment quashed earlier orders of the Principal City Civil and Sessions Court, Bengaluru, which had directed the release of seized gold and silver and the de-freezing of bank accounts in a case registered by Koramangala Police Station against M/s JAR Gold Retail Pvt Ltd under the Banning of Unregulated Deposit Schemes (BUDS) Act. The High Court clarified the distinction between Sections 106 and 107

KEY RULING
The Karnataka High Court has clarified that police can debit-freeze bank accounts during investigations under Section 106 BNSS without prior court permission. However, officers must report the action immediately to the jurisdictional Magistrate. Section 107 separately governs judicial attachment and forfeiture, requiring prescribed approvals and court proceedings. The ruling is significant for cyber-crime investigations, where rapid action may help prevent suspected proceeds from being transferred or withdrawn before judicial intervention.

of the BNSS. While Section 106 enables police to take immediate protective action to prevent suspected proceeds from being siphoned off, Section 107 deals with formal judicial attachment and forfeiture. The court observed that insisting on prior judicial permission for every account freeze could hamper investigations, particularly in cyber-crime and digital financial fraud cases, where funds can be rapidly transferred.

Drainage, Road Works
Contractors were directed to complete rajakaluve desilting immediately to prevent monsoon waterlogging. Officials were also asked to restore the road near Elenahalli Government School, dug up for BWSSB and BESCOM works.

Waste Collection, Safety
Five additional autos will be deployed for door-to-door waste collection following residents' complaints. Officials were also directed to protect two acres of government land in Survey No. 15 at Hanumangudda from encroachment. Streetlight maintenance will be strengthened, while Animal Birth Control operations will be undertaken to control stray dogs.

Court seizes Gadag office equipment over dues

MALINGARAYA PUJAR

CH NEWS

A court-ordered seizure at the Gadag District Administration Building on Thursday has drawn attention to years of delay in paying a contractor for completed government works. Electronic office equipment was seized after the Gadag Additional District Sessions Court directed officials to recover unpaid dues, which had increased greatly because of accumulated interest. The dispute goes back to 2012-13, when several development works were completed under an urban development project in Lakshmeshwar, Mulgund and Shirahatti towns. Contractor S.S. Police Patil reportedly completed the assigned work within the required period. However, the district administration did not release the pending Rs 18 lakh for years. Repeated visits to government offices failed to settle the issue, leaving the contractor with no option but to approach the court for relief. With the case pending, the unpaid principal continued to attract interest. The amount that was originally Rs 18 lakh has now risen to about Rs 60 lakh, according to the details presented in the case. The court took a serious

Court staff seized 35 office items, including 19 monitors, 15 CPUs and a Xerox machine, while officials, the district magistrate and contractor's lawyer were present view of the prolonged non-payment and ordered action to recover the dues. The order also allowed seizure of property and office items linked to the district administration. During the seizure operation, court staff reached the administration building in the presence of officials. Gadag District Magistrate C.N. Sridhar was reportedly present as the process was carried out. A total of 35 office items were seized, including 19 computer monitors, 15 CPUs and a Xerox machine. Contractor's lawyer S.S. Gattirdihal was also present with the relevant documents and a copy of the court order. The incident has raised questions about delays in clearing legitimate government bills and the cost such delays can create for public funds. It also sends a clear message that unpaid dues can grow into a much larger burden when official action is delayed. For contractors, the episode underlines the importance of timely payments, while for officials, it shows that ignoring pending bills can eventually increase the financial burden on the government and create avoidable legal trouble and public embarrassment for the administration as well.

Dr. Krishna warns officials over food security failures

DEVANAHALLI

Karnataka State Food Commission Chairman Dr. H. Krishna warned officials that any lapse in providing food to children, women, vulnerable people and elderly citizens through the public distribution system would invite action. Speaking at a progress review meeting held at the District Collector's Court Hall in the Bengaluru Rural district administration building, Krishna said the National Food Security Act, 2013, makes food a basic right and government duty for poor and needy citizens.

During inspections of government schools, colleges and hostels, he directed officials to address shortages of drinking water, hot water, toilets, doors, mosquito nets, libraries, quality food and cleanliness. He also stressed that hostel and institutional kitchens must have regular blood tests for cooks and food servers. The chairman said fair-price shops must keep food stocks safely and maintain clean warehouses. Shopkeepers were told to treat customers respectfully. Officials at farm-er contact centres must maintain proper fertilizer and medicine stocks, while pensions should reach elderly beneficiaries on time. He urged departments to work transparently and responsibly within the law. From August 11 to 13, the chairman and commission members visited government hospitals, schools, colleges, hostels and fair-price shops across four taluks to inspect food safety and cleanliness. District Collector Dr. K.N. Anuradha, CAO Dr. Vasanthi Amar, commission members Lingaraj Kote, Sumanth Rao, Maruti M. Doddalanganavar and taluk officials attended meeting. ‘Sewing training helps women become financially independent’

HUNSUR

Tailoring training can help unemployed women become financially independent, Varsha Harish Gowda, wife of MLA Harish Gowda, said. She was speaking at a free tailoring training programme organised by JSS in nearby Karnakuppe village. She urged women to learn useful skills instead of spending their time watching television or chatting. She said women could build self-employment through tailoring, handi-crafts, embroidery, blowtorch work, candle making, household products and architectural design. She also encouraged dairy farming, bag making and cottage industries. A woman's firm decision, she said, can strengthen family finances, support children's education and create a more secure future. She noted that rural women often face difficulties because livelihoods depend on rainfall. Skill-based training, she said, can open new earning opportunities and help families cope with uncertain incomes. She appealed to women to use training programmes seriously and become confident earners. JDS leaders Harave Sridhar, K.M. Rajanna, Midevappa, Ashok, trainer Kavitha, Chaitra and Pankaja attended the programme and were also present at the programme.

BEHIND THE FIVE-STAR: DEPARTMENT RAID RAISES QUESTIONS

Five-star hospitality is built on trust. Guests pay a premium not merely for luxury and presentation, but for an assurance that the food served meets the highest standards of freshness, hygiene and safety. Recent scrutiny of procurement and storage practices in the hospitality sector, however, raises serious questions about whether commercial pressures are sometimes undermining those standards.

Hotel procurement normally follows a structured system: requirement identification, vendor approval, product sampling, quotations, price negotiation, rate contracts, purchase orders, delivery inspection, invoicing and payment. The Purchase or Materials Department generally handles commercial negotiations, while the Executive Chef and Food & Beverage team are expected to determine specifications and verify quality.

The weakness can emerge after the contract is awarded. Hotels often negotiate aggressively to obtain prices substantially below prevailing market rates. While competitive pricing is legitimate, unrealistic rates may create pressure on suppliers to protect their margins by compromising on grade, freshness, storage or consistency. A sample approved during vendor selection may be excellent, but what ultimately matters is whether every subsequent delivery maintains that same standard.

If inferior, ageing or improperly stored products enter hotel kitchens, culinary skill, seasoning and presentation must never become tools for concealing deficiencies. Equally serious are allegations of collusion or personal commissions involving vendors and hotel personnel. Such claims should not be treated as established facts without evidence, but they warrant investigation wherever credible irregularities arise.

Recent enforcement action by health authorities should therefore serve as a warning to the entire hospitality industry. Procurement cannot end with negotiating the lowest price. Hotels must conduct continuous vendor audits, random quality checks, proper cold-chain verification and strict receiving inspections.

In five-star hospitality, reputation begins long before food reaches the dining table.

THE CHAI NEVER GOES COLD

SHARON FAUSTINA J.
CH NEWS, BENGALURU

Chai is the new addiction now, it has all the flavours I ever need, and most of it always comes with a smell I can never forget. There is something profoundly grounding about the way the steam rises from a freshly brewed earthen cup, carrying with it the robust notes of crushed cardamom, fresh ginger, and warm cinnamon. It is a sensory awakening that instantly anchors me to the present moment, turning an ordinary morning into a quiet, meditative ritual.

I need it in the morning, I need it at night, I need it every time I don't feel light. Chai comes to me and I will "Never Say Never". When the heavy shadows of exhaustion creep in or when the weight of the day threatens to pull me under, this golden elixir acts as a steady hand on my shoulder. It clears the fog of fatigue, whispering promises of warmth and renewed energy when I need it the most.

All the forms of drugs in the world lost on the battle field with the Goliath called drugs and my small cup of Chai called David. Chai is a blessing, came to me as "An Angel in Disguise". While the world often seeks fleeting, destructive escapes through artificial highs, my sanctuary is found in a simple, honest brew. It calms the restless storms within my mind without ever asking for anything in return, proving to be a gentle savior in a chaotic world.

Every time I see my beautiful Mother gets me my flavoured Chai with her Tea, my heart blooms like the way "Daffodils" were described by William Wordsworth. Those quiet moments shared across the kitchen counter transcend the simple act of drinking tea; they are wrapped in generations of care, unspoken affection, and the timeless comfort of home. Her presence, paired with the familiar aroma of the brew, fills the room with a golden light that chases away every shadow.

Chai Chai! Never let me down, let me embrace you like the sun going down. As the day surrenders to the twilight, wrapping the sky in hues of amber and deep violet, my hands wrap tightly around the warm mug. It is a comforting closure to the hours gone by, a quiet promise that no matter how unpredictable the world might be, this steadfast comfort will always be waiting for me at the end of the road.

Chai! Chai! Our love story never ends, let me love you, like Rose loved Jack with an never ending beginning. This profound connection is not merely a habit; it is a romance written in steam and spice. It is an infinite loop of comfort and devotion that defies the passage of time, growing deeper and richer with every single sip we share together.

Dear Chai, let me love you, like the day we first met, you never disappoint me, like I am Father's pet. That very first taste years ago felt like coming home, and that feeling has never wavered. Through every triumph and every quiet disappointment, my cup of chai has remained a constant, loving presence, offering unyielding sweetness and unconditional solace.

Chai! Chai! Let me love you, never let me down, like Charles did to Diana, then you will always be remembered like the Queen of My Heart! Unlike the fickle promises of the world that often fade or break under pressure, this brew remains fiercely loyal, standing tall as the undisputed

WHAT ARE YOU BEING SERVED, WHAT LIES BEHIND THE PERFECT MEAL?

PRADIVYA NAMBIAR

Food safety is not a premium feature. A modest establishment can maintain excellent standards, just as an impressive-looking establishment can have serious shortcomings behind the scenes. The price of a meal, the décor of a restaurant, the reputation of a chef or the number of followers on social media cannot guarantee that the food is safe. When we eat outside our homes, we place our trust in the people behind the meal. We trust that the food has been handled properly. We trust that ingredients have been stored at appropriate temperatures. We trust that employees understand basic hygiene. We trust that the kitchen is being maintained properly.

In most cases, we have no way of verifying these things ourselves. That makes the responsibility of the food business even greater. At a time when food-safety and hygiene concerns are receiving increasing public attention, scrutiny of food establishments is rightly becoming stronger. The Food Safety and Standards Authority of India (FSSAI) and other relevant authorities have an important role in ensuring that food businesses comply with the standards expected of them. But regulation cannot carry the entire responsibility. It begins with the people who own and operate the establishment. Hygiene cannot be something that matters only when an inspection is expected. It has to be part of the everyday culture of the business. That culture is built on fundamentals: proper hand hygiene, suitable protective clothing, appropriate food handling, clean preparation areas and responsible storage. Even something as simple as wearing gloves requires the right understanding. Gloves may be useful for certain food-handling tasks, but they are not a substitute for hand washing. Across India, fires at restaurants, hotels and other commercial premises have repeatedly shown how quickly an ordinary day can become a life-threatening emergency. When a fire breaks out, the quality of the food and the beauty of the dining room are irrelevant. What matters is whether the establishment was prepared. Are fire extinguishers available, accessible and maintained? Are emergency exits clearly marked and unobstructed? Are electrical systems properly maintained? Are LPG cylinders, gas lines and cooking equipment handled safely? Are exhaust systems and grease-prone areas cleaned? Are required alarms and other fire-safety systems functioning? Do employees know what to do if an emergency occurs? Can customers leave the premises quickly? These are not questions that should arise only after an incident. Fire safety cannot be treated as paperwork completed for a licence or certificate and then forgotten. It has to be part of the operation. A restaurant may have beautiful interiors and a sophisticated menu, but those things mean very little if basic safety systems have been neglected. The same standard should apply whether the establishment is a small local eatery or a large hotel. Safety should not depend on the size of the bill.

"Because when we sit down to eat, we are not simply paying for what is on the plate. We are trusting the people behind it. The customer may only see the plate. The responsibility lies behind it".

Modern technology can help food businesses manage some of these responsibilities more effectively. Digital systems can record stock movements, expiry dates, storage requirements and temperature readings. Alerts can help staff identify products that require attention. Digital checklists can support cleaning schedules, equipment maintenance and routine safety inspections. Technology can also help owners and managers understand whether procedures are actually being followed. But technology is not a substitute for responsibility. An app cannot wash someone's hands. A camera cannot clean a preparation surface. A digital checklist cannot train an employee. A monitoring system cannot replace a functioning fire-safety system. Technology is useful when people use it to strengthen good practices not when they use it to create the appearance of compliance. If a business is capable of closely monitoring sales, inventory, finances, customer reviews and deliveries, the kitchen and its safety systems deserve the same level of attention. This brings us to enforcement.

A business that serves food is responsible not only for the quality of the meal but also for the conditions in which that meal is prepared and served. Perhaps there is one simple test every food establishment should apply to itself: If the customer could see everything that happens behind the kitchen door, would the business be proud of what they saw? Not just the plating. Not just the service. Not just the dining room. Everything. The food industry should continue to celebrate beautiful presentation, innovative menus and memorable dining experiences. There is nothing wrong with making food beautiful. But presentation should never become a curtain hiding poor practices behind the scenes. The perfect meal does not begin with the final garnish. It begins with clean hands, safe handling, responsible storage, well-maintained equipment, trained employees, proper supervision and a safe environment.

BEYOND THE MARKSHEET: HOW RESILIENCE SHAPES REAL SUCCESS

In education, success is often pictured as a straight line a neat progression of test scores, achievements, and honors. But the actual student experience rarely follows a straight path. It's full of setbacks, wrong turns, second-guessing, and unexpected obstacles. What separates students who thrive from those who don't isn't whether they hit these bumps everyone does. It's how they respond. That capacity to respond well has a name: resilience.

Talk to any teacher with a few years of experience, and they'll tell you the same thing: the students who go on to do remarkable things are rarely the ones who never struggled. They're the ones who struggled and stayed in the game anyway.

Why It Matters Now More Than Ever
Today's students face pressure from every direction exams, projects, internships, and the weight of expectations from family and society. Social media adds another layer, constantly putting everyone else's highlight reel on display and making ordinary struggles feel like personal failures. Knowledge and skill will only take a student so far. It is resilience the ability to absorb a setback and keep going that carries students through when plans fall apart. It's worth saying plainly: resilience isn't something you're simply born with or without. It's built, slowly, through practice much like a muscle that strengthens with use. There's also a quieter cost to consider. Students who never learn to sit with discomfort often struggle the moment life outside school stops being predictable a first job, a difficult relationship, an unexpected loss. The classroom, in many ways, is a training ground. What's practiced there tends to carry forward.

Where Resilience Shows Up
Academic setbacks, no one aces every test or nails every project. Students who bounce back treat mistakes as lessons, not verdicts. Time and stress management, juggling coursework, extracurriculars, and a personal life takes flexibility and the willingness to protect one's own wellbeing along the way. Life outside the classroom, personal challenges don't wait for a convenient time. Resilience is what helps students stay grounded and keep their eyes on what matters. Peer pressure and comparison, watching classmates seem to sail through school effortlessly can be discouraging. Resilient students learn to run their own race instead of measuring themselves against someone else's timeline. Uncertainty about the future, not knowing exactly where a degree or a chosen path will lead can be unsettling. Resilience helps students sit with that uncertainty without letting it paralyze them. Financial and family pressures, for many students, academic stress is tangled up with real-world concerns tuition, part-time jobs, or responsibilities at home. Resilience here looks like showing up anyway, even when the odds feel stacked.

The Hidden Cost of "Toughing It Out"
There's a common misconception that resilience means gritting your teeth and pushing through no matter what, without ever pausing to acknowledge the difficulty. That's not resilience that's just endurance, and it tends to run out. True resilience makes room for rest, for asking for help, and for admitting when something is genuinely hard. A student who takes a mental health day isn't giving up; they're often practicing one of the most mature forms of resilience there is knowing your limits and respecting them.

Small Habits That Build Resilience
Treat failure as feedback, every misstep carries a lesson, if you're willing to look for it. Stay connected, friends, mentors, and family can offer support that makes hard times easier to weather. Practice mindfulness, journaling, exercise, and meditation are simple ways to steady emotional balance. Set realistic milestones, breaking a big goal into smaller steps makes the climb feel manageable instead of overwhelming. Celebrate small wins, progress doesn't always look dramatic. Recognizing the quiet victories along the way keeps motivation alive. Ask for help without shame, reaching out to a teacher, a counsellor, a friend isn't a sign of weakness. It's often the smartest, most resilient move a student can make. Reframe the narrative, instead of asking "why is this happening to me," resilient students learn to ask "what can this teach me." The shift in language changes the entire experience. Give yourself permission to rest, recovery isn't a detour from progress it's part of it. Even the most resilient among us need downtime to keep going.

The Role of Schools and Families
Resilience doesn't grow in isolation. Teachers, parents, and mentors all play a part in creating an environment where it's safe to struggle, safe to fail, and safe to try again. A classroom that only rewards perfect outcomes teaches students to fear mistakes. A classroom that values effort and growth teaches them to embrace the process setbacks included. The same is true at home; the way families respond to a child's disappointment often shapes how that child learns to respond to disappointment for the rest of their life. Schools that actively teach emotional literacy through counselling programs, peer support groups, or simply making space for open conversation tend to raise students who handle adversity with far more confidence. Resilience, in this sense, isn't just an individual trait. It's also a culture that institutions can choose to build.

Real Resilience Looks Different for Everyone
It's important to remember that resilience doesn't have one face. For one student, it might mean returning to campus after a difficult personal loss. For another, it might mean simply finishing an assignment on a day when getting out of bed felt like an achievement in itself. Comparing one person's resilience to another's rarely helps what matters is the quiet, personal act of choosing to continue.

A Word to Students
Remember this: education isn't just about marks and certificates. It's about growth intellectual, emotional, and social. Every difficulty you face is quietly shaping you into someone stronger, wiser, and more capable of empathy. Resilience is what ensures that, whatever comes your way, you keep moving forward. And on the days when moving forward feels impossible, remember that even standing still without giving up counts as resilience too. You are not defined by the setback. You are defined by what you choose to do the moment after it.

The Bottom Line
In a world where education and life keeps shifting under our feet, resilience may be the single most valuable skill a student can develop. It's what turns setbacks into lessons and failure into fuel. Success was never really about how high you climb. It's about how well you get back up when you fall and how many times you're willing to do it again.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

1. RBI's Steady Hand Amid Inflationary Pressures
The Reserve Bank of India's decision to maintain the repo rate reflects a calculated balancing act. While our nation proudly retains its status as the fastest-growing major economy, the looming shadow of rising food and crude oil prices cannot be ignored. Inflation places an immediate, heavy burden on ordinary households. Monetary policy must remain deeply vigilant. Sustainable long-term growth requires protecting the common citizen's purchasing power alongside robust industrial expansion.

2. Cracking Down on Compromised Food Supply Chains
Recent regulatory raids targeting commercial warehouses and hospitality kitchens expose an alarming disregard for public health. When systemic cost-cutting allows expired or unlabelled goods into the market, consumer safety is severely compromised. Oversight cannot stop at retail inspection; accountability must extend deep into wholesale networks and procurement desks. Authorities must enforce rigid compliance relentlessly. Public trust is built on safety, and strict penal action against violators is necessary to protect citizens.

The Cockroach Movement That Toppled a Minister

The most consequential protest wave began in an unlikely place a Supreme Court courtroom. In May 2026, Chief Justice Surya Kant compared unemployed youth and social-media activists to "cockroaches" and "parasites" who "attack the system". Within days, a 20-something digital strategist named Abhijeet Dipke, working from Boston, turned the insult into a movement, founding the satirical "Cockroach Janta Party" (CJP) as a direct rebuke. The timing was combustible. That same month, the National Testing Agency cancelled the NEET-UG 2026 medical entrance exam after discovering the same small pool of subject experts who set the paper had also been asked to translate it; a single point of failure that let the paper leak wholesale, forcing more than two million students to retake the test. Grief over students who died by suicide amid the chaos fused with the "cockroach" insult, and CJP's online satire became a physical occupation of Jantar Mantar in central Delhi by early June. What followed was six weeks of escalating confrontation. Ladakhi activist Sonam Wangchuk joined with an indefinite hunger strike on June 28, losing over 9 kilograms before police forcibly hospitalised him on July 18 — a move organisers called an abduction. Two days later, on July 20, tens of thousands marched toward Parliament on the opening day of the monsoon session; police met them with tear gas, baton charges, and water cannon, injuring more than 150 protesters and 118 police personnel by official counts. International outlets described it as the largest anti-government demonstration in New Delhi in years. The government blinked. On July 25, Education Minister Dharmendra Pradhan resigned the man CJP had branded "Pradhan Go Back" and the administration agreed to withdraw cases against non-violent protesters and compensate the families of students who died by suicide. Parliament also passed the Public Examinations (Prevention of Unfair Means) Amendment Act, 2026, providing for fast-track courts. For a Bharatiya Janata Party government that had "outmaneuvered opponents" and "squeezed the space for dissent" for over a decade, per CNN's analysis, it was a rare and startling retreat

WHY PROTESTS ARE HAVING A MOMENT IN INDIA?

India is in the middle of one of its most disruptive stretches of youth-led unrest in years, and the through line connecting street protests from Delhi to Jharkhand is remarkably specific: broken exams, not broken ideology.

Why This Movement Succeeded Where Others Stalled?

Political scientist Rahul Verma of the Centre for Policy Research offered the sharpest explanation for why CJP broke through when farmers' protests, anti-CAA demonstrations, and demonetisation backlash had not: this was the "first movement driven by administrative failure" rather than policy or ideological disagreement, which meant the government couldn't rally its base with a counter-narrative. Verma also noted the demographic problem for the BJP specifically the protesters were largely middle- and lower-middle-class youth, "a demographic that has traditionally formed an important pillar of BJP support".

The numbers underlying the anger are structural, not incidental. India has more than 360 million people aged 15 to 29, and a recent report found nearly 40% of graduates aged 25 and under are unemployed. Independent tracking of exam integrity failures compiled from court records shows roughly 135 confirmed major paper leaks between 2004 and 2026, with 59 of them — nearly as many as the previous seventeen years combined — occurring in just the last five years. Across 45 major leak cases since 2002 involving more than a lakh candidates each, 1,658 people have been arrested but only 18 convicted. For a generation that did everything asked of it; studied, competed, queued for exams and still found the system rigged against it, this was not an abstract grievance.

Social media amplified rather than merely reported the anger. Mainstream television initially ignored the protests; students filmed their own Instagram reels, memes, and livestreams, and by the time TV networks caught up, the movement already had national momentum. Modi himself, known for a controlled public image, was reduced to posting selfie-style video messages to students; reshooting one after mockery of the camera angle a striking departure from his usual command of the narrative.

The Aftershocks Are Still Spreading

The CJP's core demand was met, but the underlying anger over examination integrity has not gone quiet; it has diffused geographically. On August 10, just over two weeks after Pradhan's resignation, police in Jharkhand used tear gas, batons, and water cannon against thousands of youth marching on the state legislature over alleged wrongdoing in civil service exams. The pattern that started in Delhi young people, exam grievances, a march on a legislature, a forceful police response repeated itself almost exactly, in a different state, over a different exam.

This matters because CJP leaders explicitly framed their withdrawal from Delhi's streets as tactical, not terminal. Founder Dipke's parting words at Jantar Mantar were blunt: "This is not the end. We will meet again soon". Protester Devansh Gupta told media the movement had become "a fight for the youth" that put "all problems the youth have... in front of the government" for the first time in years. Whether that translates into a durable political force or fades as a single-issue flash point is the open question — India's next general election isn't until 2029, giving both the movement and the government years to see whether this energy calcifies into something electorally significant.

The Test Ahead

The government's concessions; Pradhan's resignation, fast-track courts, compensation, a new anti-cheating law address the immediate triggers but not the structural rot that produced 135 leaks in two decades with a conviction rate near 1%. The Jharkhand march suggests the anger CJP tapped into is bigger than any single exam, minister, or protest camp. Whether India's institutions can now move faster than its streets is the question this monsoon session and the years leading to 2029 will answer.

A Signing New Delhi Can't Ignore, But Won't Confront

On August 7, in the Saudi holy city of Mecca, the leaders of Pakistan, Saudi Arabia and Turkey signed a document that received remarkably little sustained attention in the Indian press given what it represents: the region's dominant Sunni-majority military powers binding themselves to treat an attack on any one of them as an attack on all three. Four days later, India's Ministry of External Affairs offered the diplomatic equivalent of a shrug, saying only that it was "closely following the development" and "examining its implications". That measured non-response is, in itself, the story worth examining, because it captures how little leverage New Delhi currently has over a re-alignment happening in its own strategic backyard.

The text of the Mecca Joint Defence Agreement is sparse by design. The joint statement says only that "any armed attack against any one of the three states shall be regarded as an attack against them all," and that the pact "provides for the enhancement of all aspects of defence cooperation". No annexes, no force commitments, no clarity on what obligations actually get triggered. This is not incidental vagueness. As strategic analyst Bashir Ali Abbas has pointed out, credible mutual-defence pacts are usually public and hierarchical precisely so adversaries know what they are deterring; NATO's Article 5, or the Gulf Cooperation Council's own three-decade-old joint defence agreement, both spell out sequenced obligations in documents anyone can read. The Mecca Pact does the opposite, and that opacity should worry New Delhi at least as much as its substance, because it means India cannot even calculate with confidence what scenario would draw Ankara or Riyadh into a conflict involving Islamabad.

THE MECCA PACT AND THE LONELINESS OF INDIA'S WEST ASIA POLICY

Three Worries Folded Into One Signing

For India, three separate concerns are folded into this one signing. The first, and most immediate, is Turkey. Recep Tayyip Erdogan's government has for years been the most consistently hostile of any major Muslim-majority power toward New Delhi on Kashmir, and Ankara's military relationship with Islamabad is not aspirational but proven: Turkish drones and cooperation featured directly in Pakistan's playbook during its brief but intense clash with India in April and May of last year. A formal defence pact that gives Turkey a treaty-based reason to deepen that cooperation further, rather than merely a friendly inclination to do so, changes the baseline for how India must plan its western and northern defence postures simultaneously. Pakistan and Turkey are already co-producing advanced hardware; the KAAAN fifth-generation fighter for Islamabad, the Akinci drone platform that has already seen combat use. A formal pact professionalises what was informal collaboration into treaty-backed industrial policy.

The second concern is more structural and, in the long run, probably more damaging: Saudi Arabia's slow drift into a security architecture built around Pakistan and Turkey, with China quietly supplying much of the underlying military-industrial muscle. India has spent a decade and considerable diplomatic capital building what both governments describe as a "strategic partnership" with Riyadh; energy ties, labour migration, investment flows, counter-terrorism cooperation, a genuine and hard-won warming that outlasted decades of Saudi Arabia treating Pakistan as its default partner in the Islamic world. That investment was never going to erase Riyadh's older, deeper relationship with Islamabad, but it was meant to balance it. The Mecca Pact suggests the balance may be tilting back. Saudi Arabia's own vulnerability is driving this: reports indicate the kingdom burned through roughly 86% of its pre-war Patriot interceptor stockpile in the opening weeks of its exchanges with Iran and Iran-aligned forces, leaving Riyadh anxious about a US security umbrella it no longer fully trusts and eager for alternative suppliers of hardware and expertise. Pakistan, as the only nuclear-armed state in the Islamic world and an already-integrated defence partner to both Ankara and Beijing, becomes an indispensable node in that hedging strategy; indispensable in a way India, for all its economic weight, cannot easily displace.

The third concern is the hardest to game out precisely because the pact's own signatories seem uncertain about it themselves: what this means for a "Sunni axis" that Israeli officials, including former prime minister Naftali Bennett, have already started naming aloud, and that Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu has warned against in terms vague enough to function as self-fulfilling prophecy. Al Jazeera's regional correspondents argue the pact's real target isn't Iran, despite Tehran's missile and drone strikes on Gulf infrastructure being the proximate trigger for the original Saudi-Pakistan agreement a year earlier, but Israel; a read reinforced by Turkey's escalating friction with Israeli forces over Syria, where Ankara's influence over the al-Sharaa government now runs headlong into Israeli operations from the south. If that assessment holds, the Mecca Pact is less a response to Iran than the opening structure of a broader Sunni-Muslim security bloc positioned against Israel, with Iran as a secondary, situational threat.

Washington's Retreat, Everyone Else's Hedge

There is also a quieter, more uncomfortable lesson in why the pact came together at all. Analysts across the ideological spectrum from Al Jazeera's correspondents to the American defence consultant Harlan Ullman converge on the same diagnosis: this is fundamentally a hedge against declining confidence in the United States as a security guarantor, driven by an erratic Trump administration whose foreign policy in West Asia has visibly prioritised Israel above traditional Gulf and Turkish security concerns. "Our allies are looking elsewhere," as Ullman put it. If Riyadh and Ankara no longer trust Washington's security commitments enough to rely on them exclusively, India should draw the obvious inference for its own planning: the assumption that American strategic backing will reliably counterbalance a hostile regional grouping cannot be taken for granted either. India's own partnership with Washington, however deep on trade and technology, has never included the kind of binding mutual-defence language that Pakistan just secured from two separate, serious regional powers.

None of this demands panic, and Pakistan's own foreign minister, Ishaq Dar, has gone out of his way to describe the pact as "purely defensive" and open to new members rather than aimed at any one adversary. But India's calm, wait-and-watch posture should not be mistaken for a strategy; it is, more honestly, an admission that Indian diplomacy has not yet built the tools to shape outcomes in a re-forming West Asian security order, only to react to them after the fact. The countries that matter most to India's western flank — Saudi Arabia above all — are recalculating their alliances around threats and vulnerabilities that have little to do with New Delhi's preferences. If India wants to be a shaper of this new architecture rather than merely an anxious observer of it, the coming months, as Turkey pushes to expand the pact to Egypt, Qatar, Syria or the UAE, will be the moment to find out whether its "wide-ranging strategic partnership" with Riyadh amounts to genuine influence or just a well-worded phrase in ministry statements.

What a Sharper Indian Response Would Look Like?

What might a more assertive Indian response look like? Three tracks suggest themselves, none dramatic, all overdue. The first is diversifying defence-industrial partnerships in the Gulf itself, so India is not merely a buyer of Gulf capital and seller of labour but an active co-producer of the hardware Pakistan and Turkey now offer Saudi Arabia. India's defence-export ambitions give New Delhi a genuine card to play, if played with the urgency Ankara and Islamabad have shown. The second is accelerating the India-Middle East-Europe Economic Corridor, announced with fanfare in 2023 but slowed since by the Gaza war's regional aftershocks; an India economically indispensable to Gulf infrastructure plans carries more security leverage than one that shows up only for summits. The third is simply talking to Riyadh and Ankara with more candour about what the pact means for India specifically, rather than repeating the boilerplate "closely following" language now issued twice, almost verbatim, across two separate Pakistan-Saudi defence announcements a year apart.

PEACEFUL GANESH CELEBRATIONS

Ganesh Utsav in Belagavi set to inspire nation: DC

BELAGAVI
Deputy Commissioner Mohammad Roshan on Thursday urged residents, Ganesh mandals and officials to celebrate Ganesh Utsav as a model of harmony, peace and discipline across the country. At a preparatory meeting at Kumar Gandharva Bhavan, he said public cooperation would help make the festival grand and orderly. He asked mandals to install CCTV cameras at pandals and follow rules on idol height, electrical decorations and structures. Music systems must stay within sound limits and DJs are banned. He also warned against obscene songs and loudspeaker use after 10 p.m., urging organisers to prevent untoward incidents. The district administration said preparations would be completed before Ganesh Chaturthi. Roshan said L&T had been directed to repair potholes on roads and finish pending works. He said he would inspect sites with the police commissioner and commissioner to ensure compliance. Police Commissioner Bhushan Borase said Belagavi could see its population rise to nearly 14 lakh during the festival. With only about 1,540 police personnel, including traffic staff, he sought cooperation from mandals. Regular patrols and stationary teams will be deployed at sensitive locations. Belagavi City Corporation officials said priority would be given to road repairs, pothole filling and cleaning public spaces and water bodies. Financial assistance will be provided to Ganesh mandals for electricity bills and other festival needs. PETITION TARGETS PRIYANKA GANDHI OVER REMARK

More than 14,000 people have backed a petition seeking Lok Sabha Speaker Om Birla's intervention over Priyanka Gandhi Vadra's controversial remark against IIT Madras director V Kamakoti

NEW DELHI

More than 14,000 people who identify themselves as members of the academic and scientific community have signed a petition seeking Lok Sabha Speaker Om Birla's intervention over Congress MP Priyanka Gandhi Vadra's remark about IIT Madras Director V Kamakoti.

The petition, launched on Change.org on August 1, asks Vadra to withdraw her reference to Kamakoti as a "gau mutra expert" and express regret over what the petitioners described as a personal and derogatory comment. The group said the petition has received support from people from different disciplines, institutions and states, as well as Indian scientists living in more than 38 countries.

In its appeal to Birla, the group said the expression was inappropriate for parliamentary debate and went beyond legitimate political criticism. It argued that personal remarks of this nature could sion on examination reforms, when Vadra questioned the members of a government panel proposed to reform the National Testing Agency. Her comments about Kamakoti followed his earlier public remarks supporting a scientific claim involving cow urine. The petition comes after earlier objections from academics, who had also criticised Vadra's statement and sought clarification. The latest campaign has brought the issue back into public discussion, with the petitioners calling for respectful political debate and greater restraint when referring to individuals and institutions in Parliament. They said debate must remain focused on public issues.

ED raids 11 Punjab properties over plot allotments

NEW DELHI

The Enforcement Directorate (ED) on Thursday said it conducted searches at 11 properties in Punjab as part of a money laundering investigation into the alleged illegal allotment of industrial plots by a state-run corporation.

The searches were carried out from August 4 to 6 in Amritsar, Gurdaspur and Ludhiana. According to the agency, the properties belonged to officials of the Punjab Small Industries and Export Corporation (PSIEC) and people linked to them. The ED also surveyed the PSIEC office as part of the investigation.

The complaint accused PSIEC officials and private individuals of corruption and irregularities in the allotment of industrial plots.

Enforcement Directorate

The federal agency said the case was taken up after it examined a complaint filed by the Punjab Vigilance Bureau. The complaint accused PSIEC officials and private individuals of corruption and irregularities in the allotment of industrial plots.

The ED alleged that some allottees exploited a loophole in the rules to delay taking possession of plots for several years. The delay was treated as a "zero period", which allowed the allottees to postpone payments without having to pay interest during that period.

The agency said its investigation is focused on the alleged financial irregularities and the role of officials and private individuals involved in the plot allotments. The searches are part of efforts to trace the money trail and gather documents and other evidence linked to the suspected wrongdoing. Further action will depend on the findings of the ongoing investigation.

SC presses FSSAI on warning food labels

NEW DELHI

The Supreme Court has criticised the Centre and the Food Safety and Standards Authority of India (FSSAI) for delaying action on front-of-pack food labels. The bench said warning labels were needed to help consumers identify packaged foods high in sugar, salt and saturated fat. A bench led by Justice J B Pardiwala stressed that such labels could improve public awareness, among children who are increasingly attracted to unhealthy packaged foods. The court questioned why authorities appeared reluctant to introduce warnings when health was at stake.

In February, the Supreme Court had directed FSSAI to respond within four weeks on a front-of-pack labelling framework. The proposal included warning symbols for products containing high levels of sodium, sugar or saturated fat, along with a positive logo for healthier choices.

During the hearing, the bench observed that the government appeared unwilling to act and raised concerns that industry interests could be influencing the process. The court said manufacturers might oppose the move because it could affect their business, but argued that consumers should be given clear information and allowed to make informed choices. It also said responsibility for making healthier decisions should not fall on consumers alone when product information is difficult to understand.

The court also stressed the importance of protecting public health, especially that of children. It said India should demonstrate concern for the health of its citizens and urged authorities to move ahead with the labelling framework.

4 Mumbai domino's outlets shut over hygiene lapses

MUMBAI

Four Domino's Pizza outlets in Mumbai have had their licences suspended after food safety officials found major hygiene and safety violations during inspections conducted under the Maharashtra government's "Safe Food, Safe Maharashtra" campaign.

The inspections were carried out on August 11 by the Maharashtra Food and Drug Administration (FDA) as part of a wider crackdown on food safety violations across the state. Officials found conditions that raised concerns about hygiene and possible pest risks, prompting authorities to take action against the outlets.

The affected Domino's outlets are located in Vile Parle West, Borivali West and R-City Mall in Ghatkopar West. The FDA suspended their licences following the inspection findings. The action has raised questions about food safety standards at outlets operated by major restaurant chains, which serve large numbers of customers every day.

The inspections are part of a broader statewide drive targeting restaurants and food businesses for violations of safety and hygiene rules. The FDA has been carrying out checks to ensure that food establishments maintain proper cleanliness and follow required safety standards. The department's action against the four outlets highlights the importance of maintaining hygiene even at well-known international brands.

Customers in Mumbai expressed surprise after learning about the action against the popular pizza chain. The FDA's findings have renewed attention on the need for regular inspections and strict compliance with food safety rules. Authorities are expected to continue checking food outlets across Maharashtra, while the affected businesses will have to address the violations before their licences can be fully restored. Further action will depend on their compliance.

The attack has raised concern among political circles, with attention now focused on Badal's condition and the circumstances that led to the incident. Authorities said further details would emerge as the investigation progresses and the role and motive of the suspect are established.

YOUTH RAISE VOICES CJP founder backs MP student protest

NEW DELHI

Cockroach Janta Party founder Abhijeet Dipke has backed a protest by school students in Madhya Pradesh and linked it to the wider student movement over education issues.

Dipke reacted to reports of school students in Vidisha protesting against an alleged fee hike. Sharing a video of the demonstration on X, he questioned whether the resignation of one minister could solve the larger problems facing India's education system.

"Ek Dharmendra Pradhan ke resignation se kya hoga? I hope you all have got your answers now," Dipke wrote in his post.

The video showed female students raising slogans, including a demand to reduce bus fares, during the protest.

Former Education Minister Dharmendra Pradhan resigned on July 25, following a month-long student protest led by the CJP at Jantar Mantar in Delhi. The agitation had focused on allegations surrounding the NEET-UG examination and called for action over concerns about the education system.

Dipke has also announced a nationwide campaign aimed at improving government schools in villages. Under the initiative, parents will be encouraged to conduct social audits of basic facilities, while village sarpanches will be asked to take responsibility for improving school infrastructure. The campaign is intended to push local communities to take a greater role in addressing problems faced by government schools.

Parliament passes bill to rename Kerala as ‘Keralam’

Parliament has cleared a Bill to rename Kerala as Keralam, following unanimous state Assembly support and proposed constitutional amendments to formalise the change

NEW DELHI

Parliament has passed a Bill proposing to change the name of Kerala to Keralam, following a unanimous resolution by the Kerala Assembly supporting the change.

Minister of State for Home Affairs Nityanand Rai said the Kerala Assembly had passed a resolution in 2024 asking the Centre to introduce legislation to officially change the state’s name. The state government forwarded the resolution to the Centre in June 2024. The proposal was later referred to the state legislature for its views, after which the Assembly unanimously supported the Bill.

The Kerala (Alteration of Name) Bill provides for the change and includes amendments to the Constitution and other related provisions. The First Schedule of the Constitution will be amended to replace the name Kerala with Keralam under Article 3. Rai said the proposed change represents the pride of Kerala’s people and reflects India’s diverse languages, cultures and traditions.

During the debate, Rai linked the proposal to the government’s broader aim of removing what it describes as symbols of colonial rule and promoting India’s cultural heritage. He said the change was consistent with the idea of “One India, Best India”, where different traditions and languages contribute to national unity.

Rai also raised the issue of action taken by the Kerala government against teachers over a controversial quiz question about Hindutva ideologue VD Savarkar. He criticised the action and described Savarkar as a freedom fighter who made significant sacrifices. The renaming Bill now provides the legal framework for officially recognising the state as Keralam, marking a significant change in its constitutional identity.

Kharge calls Haldwani ritual an insult

DEHRADUN

The alleged purification ritual at a stage used by Congress president Mallikarjun Kharge during an August 8 rally in Haldwani reached the Rajya Sabha on Thursday, triggering a political confrontation.

Kharge said a ‘havan’ was performed at Ramliha Gaurav after his public meeting and alleged that people linked to the BJP conducted it to “purify” the stage. He described the incident as an insult to him and the constitutional principle of equality and demanded criminal action against those involved.

Speaking in the Rajya Sabha, Kharge said he did not want to turn the matter into a political dispute but believed it had wider social implications. Identifying himself as a member of a Scheduled Caste, he questioned how such an act could take place in a democracy and alleged that it treated him as an untouchable.

Union Minister and Leader of the House JP Nadda called the incident deeply regrettable and said the BJP did not support such behaviour. He assured Kharge that the matter would be investigated and condemned the incident. However, Nadda objected to blaming the BJP as an organisation for the alleged act.

Congress leader Priyanka Gandhi Vadra criticised the BJP and RSS, calling the alleged ritual a reflection of what she described as a degraded mindset. Congress leaders Kumari Selja and Uttarakhand spokesperson Garima Dasouni also condemned the incident and demanded strict action. Dasouni said the controversy concerned the dignity and rights of marginalised communities. The Congress has sought a detailed investigation and accountability from the authorities.

Rahul draws battle line against Modi and Shah

NEW DELHI

Congress leader Rahul Gandhi on Thursday said opposition parties would continue to challenge the BJP-led government until Prime Minister Narendra Modi and Home Minister Amit Shah step down. Addressing the Ratchnatmak Congress National Convention, Gandhi said the opposition had begun expressing itself and described the movement as “unstoppable”.

Gandhi said the opposition would keep Modi and Shah “awake”, arguing that the political fight was about protecting the country’s values, ethos and culture. He criticised the government’s political approach, alleging that the BJP sought to impose an order that benefited the party and certain other groups.

The Congress leader also criticised the government over Pakistan’s role in the ongoing West Asia crisis. He said India could have played a more active role because of its friendly relations with countries involved in the conflict. Gandhi argued that India should use its relationships and influence to contribute to efforts aimed at addressing the crisis.

His remarks came as Congress and other opposition parties have stepped up their criticism of the government on several issues. Gandhi said the opposition’s political expression had gathered momentum and would continue. He maintained that the campaign was not simply about changing political leadership, but about defending the country’s broader democratic and cultural values.

The Congress leader’s comments are expected to add to the political debate between the ruling party and opposition. He said the opposition would remain united in raising questions before the public. With both sides taking stronger positions on national and international issues, the confrontation is likely to remain a key feature of parliamentary and public political discussions in the coming days.

Congress says Modi govt rattled

NEW DELHI

The Congress on Thursday accused the Modi government of being “scared and rattled” during the Monsoon Session, alleging that BJP leaders avoided parliamentary proceedings while opposition unity remained strong.

Congress general secretary Jairam Ramesh said Prime Minister Narendra Modi and Home Minister Amit Shah were largely absent from Parliament and appeared only shortly before the House was adjourned sine die. He alleged that the government was avoiding questions raised by the Opposition on several issues.

Ramesh said the Opposition had several achievements during the session. He claimed that the proposed ‘One Nation, One Election’ legislation was delayed, while the report of the joint committee examining the Viksit Bharat Shiksha Adhishthan Bill was also not presented.

He also cited the delay in another constitutional amendment concerning the removal of leaders after prolonged detention.

He said the referral of the Foreign Contribution Regulation Act Bill to a joint

Jairam Ramesh said PM Modi and Amit Shah stayed away from parliamentary proceedings, appearing only on the last day before adjournment committee was another achievement, although the Opposition wanted the legislation withdrawn. Ramesh also claimed that an amendment related to delimitation could not be introduced because the government lacked the required two-thirds majority.

Congress Deputy Leader in the Lok Sabha Gaurav Gogoi alleged that important issues, including examination irregularities and alleged corruption, were not allowed adequate discussion. He also criticised the passage of some Bills without debate and demanded the resignation of Education Minister Dharmendra Pradhan, a statement from Home Minister Amit Shah on alleged action against students, and an apology from the Prime Minister. The Congress said the session highlighted the Opposition’s unity.

Five killed defusing explosive device Sevastopol

Sevastopol
Five people were killed while attempting to de-fuse an explosive device in Russian-controlled Sevastopol, regional governor Mikhail Razvozhayev said on Thursday. Four emergency service bomb-disposal specialists and a security guard were conducting clearance operations after a Ukrainian drone attack when the device exploded. The incident occurred amid intensified air attacks between Russia and Ukraine, now in the fifth year of Moscow's full-scale invasion. Russia's Defence Ministry said its air-defence forces intercepted or destroyed 362 Ukrainian drones overnight across several Russian and Russian-controlled regions, including Crimea. Russia seized and annexed Crimea from Ukraine in 2014.

Meloni faces youth backlash ahead of election

Rome
Italian Prime Minister Giorgia Meloni is facing growing dissatisfaction among young voters ahead of next year's national election, with polls showing her government's approval among under-35s at just 25%. Analysts say young Italians are increasingly supporting centre-left parties, which together command nearly 50% support among voters under 35, compared with less than 30% for Meloni's right-wing coalition. Experts blame limited economic reforms, weak youth employment opportunities and low education spending for the growing discontent. Italy has the euro zone's lowest employment rate among 15- to 24-year-olds, while many young graduates leave the country for better opportunities abroad. Meloni also faces competition from far-right leader Roberto Vannacci, whose National Future movement is polling around 7% and has attracted some younger anti-immigration voters. Security measures targeting protests, cannabis, squatting and juvenile crime have further angered young people. Analysts say youth turnout could prove decisive in the 2027 election. Furthermore, experts warn that addressing these systemic structural challenges will require aggressive, long-term investments rather than short-term political fixes.

Trump says law blocks third term bid

RATIFIED IN 1951, THE 22ND AMENDMENT LIMITS ANY INDIVIDUAL TO BEING ELECTED TO THE PRESIDENCY TWICE.

WASHINGTON

US President Donald Trump has acknowledged that he would like to seek a third term in the White House in 2028, but said the law remains a major obstacle to such a bid.
Asked about the possibility of running for another term, Trump's remarks come amid continuing speculation among his supporters about whether he could remain in office beyond the constitutionally permitted two elected terms. The US Constitution's 22nd Amendment states that no person can be elected president more than twice.
Trump began his second presidential term in January 2025 after defeating Democratic candidate Kamala Harris in the 2024 election. He had previously served as president from 2017 to 2021. A successful third-term bid would therefore require overcoming the constitutional restriction.

"I'd love to, but the law is very strong." He added that he is frequently asked about the issue and indicated that the legal restrictions on presidential terms would make another campaign difficult.
Donald Trump, US President

TRUMP THIRD TERM
TRUMP ACKNOWLEDGED STRONG SUPPORTER INTEREST IN A POTENTIAL THIRD PRESIDENTIAL TERM WHILE CANDIDLY RECOGNIZING THE DEFINITIVE CONSTITUTIONAL BARRIER THAT CURRENTLY PREVENTS HIM FROM LEGALLY RUNNING FOR ANOTHER OFFICE AGAIN.

The possibility of Trump seeking another term has repeatedly generated political debate in the United States. Some of his supporters have promoted the idea, while Trump has occasionally made comments that have fuelled speculation without presenting a clear legal or political plan to pursue a third term.

His latest response appeared to acknowledge both his personal interest and the legal barrier. Trump said that "everybody wants me to do" it, while reiterating that the law is strong on the matter.
The comments are likely to keep the third-term debate alive among Trump's supporters and opponents. However, any attempt to run in 2028 would face significant constitutional questions and would require changes to the existing legal framework. For now, Trump's statement stops short of announcing any formal effort to seek a third term.

UN panel blames AQIS for red fort blast

NEW YORK

A United Nations Security Council terrorism monitoring team has attributed the deadly Red Fort suicide car bombing to Al-Qaida in the Indian Sub-continent (AQIS), warning that the group is developing new networks and expanding its presence across South Asia.
According to a report prepared by the Analytical Support and Sanctions Monitoring Team, the attack, which killed 11 people last November, was "officially attributed to AQIS". The report said the organisation has evolved from a fragmented group into a regional terrorist entity, relying on decentralised cells rather than large formations.
The team said AQIS has established logistics and financial networks and is increasingly operating through small, scattered cells. It also warned that the group was attempting to exploit Bangladesh to establish new cells, amid broader concerns over the intensifying terrorist threat in South Asia.
AQIS was founded in 2014 by former Al-Qaida leader Ayman al-Zawahiri. The UN monitoring team, based in New York, comprises 10 experts who track terrorism threats linked to Al-Qaida, Islamic State and their affiliates. Its findings assist the Security Council's sanctions committees in identifying groups and individuals for possible sanctions.
The latest assessment appears to strengthen earlier indications regarding the Red Fort attack. A February report had said Jaish-e-Mohammed was reportedly linked to the bombing, while the new report directly attributes the attack to AQIS. The report also noted close ties between JeM and Al-Qaida.
The bombing marked a worrying pattern in which highly qualified professionals were allegedly drawn into terrorism.
At least four doctors were arrested in connection with the case, while the suicide bomber, Umar-un-Nabi, was identified as an assistant professor of general medicine at a university in Faridabad.
The UN team also highlighted activities of Tehrik-e-Taliban Pakistan, including its restructuring and creation of separate divisions focused on Kashmir and Gilgit.

The group also sought to exploit Bangladesh for new cells amid escalating terrorist threats across South Asia.

Turkey, Pakistan, Saudi Arabia deepen defence pact

Although likened to NATO's collective defense principle, officials emphasize the pact is merely a framework for trilateral cooperation.

ANKARA

Turkey, Pakistan and Saudi Arabia will establish political and military mechanisms to coordinate their activities under a joint defence agreement signed last week, Turkey's Defence Ministry said on Thursday.
The three countries signed the Mecca Joint Defence Agreement on August 7, strengthening security cooperation among the regional powers. The pact was agreed as the countries faced growing concerns over instability in the region and Iranian missile attacks targeting Gulf states.
The agreement states that an armed attack against any one of the three countries would be considered an attack against all members. The arrangement has been compared with NATO's collective defence principle, although officials have described the pact as a framework for closer cooperation among the three countries.
Speaking at a weekly briefing in Ankara, Turkey's Defence Ministry said the new coordination mechanisms would bring together the defence ministers, foreign ministers and military chiefs of Turkey, Pakistan and Saudi Arabia.
The ministry said the three countries were also planning joint military exercises as part of the agreement. Such exercises are expected to strengthen coordination, improve operational cooperation and enhance the countries' ability to respond collectively to security threats.
Defence industry cooperation will also form an important part of the partnership. According to the ministry, Turkey, Pakistan and Saudi Arabia could pursue joint defence production,

Mecca Joint Defense Agreement

- Collective Defense Principle: An armed attack against any one of the three member countries (Turkey, Pakistan, or Saudi Arabia) will be considered an attack against all of them, drawing comparisons to NATO's mutual defense model.
- Coordination Mechanisms: Regular platforms and briefings will be established to bring together the defense ministers, foreign ministers, and military chiefs of all three nations.
- Joint Military Exercises: The nations plan to conduct collaborative military drills aimed at strengthening tactical coordination, boosting operational cooperation, and improving collective responsiveness to security threats.
- Defense Industry Collaboration: The partnership emphasizes joint defense production, technology sharing, and cooperative projects designed to bolster their respective domestic military manufacturing capabilities.
- Geopolitical Alignment: The pact unites three predominantly Sunni Muslim nations that share close historical and strategic ties with the United States while independently pursuing their own regional security objectives.
- Scope and Future Outlook: While officials have not explicitly stated whether the framework will evolve into a formal, highly integrated military alliance on par with NATO, the agreement marks a major expansion of trilateral defense cooperation technology sharing and other projects aimed at strengthening their domestic military capabilities.

The agreement brings together three predominantly Sunni Muslim countries that maintain close ties with the United States while also pursuing their own regional security interests. Turkey is a NATO member, while Pakistan and Saudi Arabia have longstanding strategic relationships with Washington.

The new mechanisms are expected to provide a regular platform for political consultations and military coordination among the three partners. Officials have not indicated whether the arrangement will develop into a formal military alliance comparable to NATO, but the agreement signals a significant expansion of defence cooperation between Ankara, Islamabad and Riyadh.

Japan condemns Putin visit to disputed Islands

TOKYO

Japanese Prime Minister Sanae Takaichi has strongly criticised Russian President Vladimir Putin's visit to the disputed Kuril Islands, calling the move "absolutely unacceptable" and saying it hurt the sentiments of the Japanese people. Putin visited Iturup, one of the four southern Kuril Islands claimed by Japan, on Thursday.
Takaichi said Tokyo considers the islands, which Japan calls the Northern Territories, to be an inherent part of Japanese territory. Her comments came after Putin's first reported visit to the island chain, which has remained a major source of tension between Russia and Japan since the end of World War II.
During his visit, Putin toured a fish-processing facility and other local sites and met officials from Russia's Sakhalin region. The Russian president reiterated Moscow's position that its sovereignty over the islands is supported by international agreements and post-war arrangements. Russia has controlled the islands since Soviet forces seized them in the final stages of World War II. Japan disputes Russia's sovereignty over Iturup, Kunashir, Shikotan and the Habomai Islands. Tokyo has repeatedly demanded the return of the four territories, while Moscow maintains that the islands are legally Russian territory. The disagreement has prevented Russia and Japan from concluding a formal post-World War II peace treaty. Relations between Moscow and Tokyo have deteriorated further since Russia's invasion of Ukraine in 2022, with Japan joining international sanctions against Russia. Putin's latest visit is therefore likely to add to existing diplomatic tensions. Japanese officials have reaffirmed that Tokyo will continue to defend its territorial position and seek a resolution to the long-running dispute through diplomacy.

Swiss government urges rejection of EU initiative

ZURICH

The Swiss government on Thursday urged parliament to reject an initiative that seeks to block a new agreement with the European Union, warning that the proposal could create legal uncertainty and undermine Switzerland's political and economic stability. The so-called "Kompass Initiative", backed by billionaire founders of Swiss asset manager and private equity firm Partners Group, seeks to protect Swiss independence by expanding the use of compulsory referendums for international treaties.

Farage faces Count Binface in Clacton election

LONDON

Voters in the English seaside constituency of Clacton went to the polls on Thursday in a closely watched election featuring Reform UK leader Nigel Farage and his unusual main challenger, comedian Count Binface.
Farage resigned from Parliament last month to seek a fresh mandate after facing scrutiny over allegations that he failed to properly declare a £5 million donation from a wealthy backer. He has denied wrongdoing and said the election would allow voters to judge the allegations and his political record.
The contest has attracted unusual attention because major political parties decided not to field candidates, leaving Farage facing more than

Nigel farage faces Count Binface in Clacton

- Unusual Contest Setup: Major political parties are sitting out the Clacton by-election, leaving Reform UK leader Nigel Farage facing over 30 rivals, most notably the satirical novelty candidate Count Binface.
- The Satirical Challenge: Count Binface (created by comedian Jonathan Harvey) is running a humorous campaign, presenting an unconventional hurdle for Farage in a race drawing heavy media attention.
- Motivations and Momentum: Farage triggered the snap vote to re-establish his local mandate and prove his enduring voter backing.
- Financial Scrutiny: The election follows an ongoing parliamentary standards investigation into an undeclared £5 million donation/gift. If found in breach of rules, Farage could face sanctions and potential electoral consequences.
- Local Context: Clacton is an economically challenged seaside constituency in eastern England where Farage previously secured 46 percent of the vote in 2024, making Thursday's outcome a critical measure of his grassroots support.

30 rivals. The long list includes independent candidates and novelty figures, with Count Binface expected to provide the strongest challenge.
Count Binface, the silver-clad character created by comedian Jonathan Harvey, has contested elections against several senior British politicians over the past decade. His campaign is known for satire and humorous political messaging, making the contest an unusual test for Farage and Reform UK.

When the ball goes soft: Morkel’s blueprint

GALLE

India’s bowling coach Morne Morkel has warned his pace attack to prepare for tough conditions ahead of their upcoming 2 Test series against Sri Lanka, which begins from August 15th. Speaking to the media, the former South African fast bowler emphasized that handling extreme heat, heavy humidity, and an aging ball will require absolute mental toughness from the squad.

The visiting seam department faces a major setback after star bowler Jasprit Bumrah was ruled out due to a knee injury.

With Bumrah sidelined, Mohamed Siraj steps up as the most experienced leader of the attack.

He will be joined by younger bowling options including Prasidh Krishna, Gurnoor Brar, and newly added squad member Auqib Nabi.

Morkel pointed out that the Kookaburra red ball typically loses its hard core relatively quickly in subcontinental weather.

He noted that the leather usually softens down after just 25 to 30 overs, forcing players to change their tactics.

Because of this rapid change, bowlers must rely on short, explosive spells while pouring maximum energy into hitting accurate areas.

The coach stressed that maintaining high intensity and building tight pressure will be vital, especially since the team lacks recent red-ball match practice.

India bowling Coach Morne Morkel warned his pace attack about tough conditions for the upcoming Test series against Sri Lanka.

Once the shine wears off, Morkel wants his players to be street smart by utilizing the bowling crease creatively and mixing in clever short deliveries to trouble opposing batters.

The opening match of the series kicks off in Galle on August 15, followed by the second Test in Colombo starting August 23.

Morkel remains confident that hitting the deck hard on good lengths can still yield positive results if the pacers adapt quickly to the tricky island conditions.

Will years of waiting pay off for Dubey?

NEW DELHI

Spinner Praveen Dubey is ready to prove his worth in the Indian Premier League. After spending many seasons waiting on the bench and learning from cricket legends, the talented leg-spinner believes he finally has the skill and confidence to make his big chance count.

Dubey started his IPL journey with Royal Challengers Bengaluru back in 2016. Later, he moved to Delhi Capitals and now plays for Punjab Kings. During these years, he did not get enough chances to show his true talent. Instead of feeling sad, he used that time to improve his game in domestic matches and local leagues.

While at RCB, Dubey spent time talking with Virat Kohli. Those chats helped him build a strong mental mindset. Later, during his time with Delhi, he got a chance to play and even reached the final in the year 2020. Now, at Punjab Kings, he gets to share the dressing room with Yuzvendra Chahal. Since they were teammates in the past, Dubey enjoys talking with the star spinner, learning how to bowl against tough batters, and hoping they might play together when pitches help spin. When it comes to bowling, Dubey loves to take wickets rather than just stop runs. He believes that attacking the best batters forces them to take risks and make mistakes.

India welcomes World Badminton Championships

NEW DELHI

The Indian Olympic Association warmly welcomes global badminton stars to New Delhi for the BWF World Championships. Starting August seventeen at the Indira Gandhi Indoor Stadium, this prestigious event reinforces India’s deep dedication to the Olympic Movement and sports growth. IOA President P. T. Usha shared her excitement, noting that hosting top players proves India’s ability to run world-class sports events. With strong backing from the government, India is quickly becoming a preferred global hub for international sports. Fans are especially thrilled to watch local heroes like two-time Olympic medallist P. V. Sindhu lead the home challenge.

‘Hardik Pandya is my ultimate idol..’

GUWAHATI

Young all-rounder Doikho Das is turning heads in the inaugural Assam Premier League 2026, currently shining as the top wicket-taker for the table-topping Dibrugarh Warriors. Representing a side that boasts 5 wins from 6 games, Das revealed that Indian star cricketer Hardik Pandya serves as his ultimate idol and inspiration.

The talented seamer has already claimed 13 crucial wickets across 6 matches at a steady economy rate of 7.80. His standout performance came during a brilliant spell where he picked up 4 wickets for 33 runs against the Charaideo Sunrisers. Das stated that he actively models his aggressive bowling approach and mindset directly after Pandya.

According to the young pacer, hitting the deck hard with an attacking style brings him the best results. He relies heavily on the short delivery as his stock weapon, noting that helpful pitch conditions have allowed him to maximize this strength. Although he has done major damage with the ball, Das views himself as a true all-rounder and eagerly waits for a chance to showcase his batting skills.

Maintaining discipline has been a core part of his game plan throughout the tournament. Instead of getting intimidated by opposing batters, Das keeps a clear mindset by focusing entirely on his bowling lengths and sticking firmly to the team strategy. He believes this simple approach stops him from getting distracted during intense match situations.

Despite his stellar individual numbers, the youngster insists that personal milestones take a backseat to team victories. He remains unsatisfied with his current form, vowing to keep working hard to push his squad forward. With the Warriors sitting comfortably at the top of the standings, Das hopes to finish the tournament by lifting the championship trophy.

Egyptian challengers oust Chand in Semifinal

KOLKATA

Indian smquash hopes suffered a major setback as top women’s seed Tanvi Khanna and 4th seeded men’s player Suraj Kumar Chand exited the HCL Squash PSA Challenger Tour at the semifinal stage in Kolkata. Both athletes fought hard but ultimately fell to tough Egyptian opponents after thrilling matches.

Tanvi Khanna went down fighting against Egypt’s 3rd seed Sohayla Hazem. After winning the opening game comfortably, Tanvi lost her momentum as Sohayla bounced back with strong rallies, taking the next 3 games to seal the match with scores of 6-11, 11-2, 11-7, 11-7. Earlier in the tournament, Tanvi had shown great form by defeating Vasundhara Nangare and compatriot Nirupama Dubey in straight games.

Meanwhile, Suraj Chand faced a tough challenge against Egyptian top seed Mohamed Gohar. Coming off a recent singles crown at the World University Championships, Suraj put up a brave fight but lost in straight games with a scoreline of 8-11, 2-11, 7-11. His journey to the final four included brilliant wins, notably a grueling seventy-three-minute five-game thriller against Egypt’s Hassan Menshawy in the pre-quarterfinals.

Following these semifinal matches, the tournament heads toward exciting all-Egyptian finals on 14th August. In the women’s division, Sohayla Hazem will face second seed Menna Walid for the championship trophy. Meanwhile, Mohamed Gohar will lock horns with third seed Seif Refaay to claim the men’s crown.

The ongoing Kolkata leg features a total prize fund of nine thousand dollars each for both the men’s and women’s sections. As part of the wider Professional Squash Association second-tier circuit, the tour has already traveled successfully through Indore, Mumbai, and Chennai, bringing top-class international squash action to fans across India.

From India to Central Stags, Malan’s journey

CHRISTCHURCH

Heinrich Malan is back in New Zealand cricket. The experienced coach has signed a fresh 3 year deal to lead the Central Stags team. He takes over the coaching role from former captain Greg Hay and former batter Ben F. Smith, ready to bring new energy to the squad.

Malan brings deep international experience to the domestic scene. His most recent big job was coaching the Ireland national team. He ended that chapter on a very high note by guiding Ireland to a historic two-nil T20 series win against India, the reigning world champions.

Before his time abroad, Malan had a great first run with the Stags starting in 2013. Over several successful years in Napier, he helped the team win the Plunket Shield, The Ford Trophy, and the Super Smash title. Later, he coached the Auckland Aces to more championship wins and also worked with New Zealand ‘A’ and the Black Caps.

During his early years with Central, Malan played a huge role in shaping young talents. Stars like fast bowler Blair Tuckner and spinner Ajaz Patel credit him for helping their development. He loves working hands-on during practice sessions and is eager to meet the newer players in the group.

‘Learning from legends’, Avinash embraces IPL journey

NEW DELHI

Punjab Kings young star Pyla Avinash is ready to make a big mark in the Indian Premier League. The talented player from Andhra Pradesh believes his brave and attacking style of play can turn him into a true match-winner.

Bought by Punjab Kings for 30 lakh rupees after showing great skill in the local league, Avinash wants to keep his natural aggressive nature. However, he is also learning how to play with more care and responsibility when the pressure is high.

Avinash’s journey to the big stage started after 3 solid seasons. His biggest moment came when he smashed an unbeaten 105 runs from just 58 balls, hitting 11 massive sixes.

During that special knock, he even hit 5 sixes in a single over. While that feat brings back memories of Yuvraj Singh, Avinash admits that hitting 6 sixes in 1 over is a big dream he hopes to achieve soon.

Getting picked for the big league came as a huge shock. He did not expect it at all. When he joined the team, he felt nervous because he was surrounded by many cricket legends. But the franchise owners, coaches, and staff made him feel very welcome. They took great care of him both on and off the field.

Working with head coach Ricky Ponting has been like a dream come true. Avinash grew up watching the Australian legend play on television. Now, getting tips from him has helped him fix small technical details in his batting style.

Even though he wants to be smart, Avinash does not want to lose his fearless attitude.

He spends time watching senior players to learn how they handle tough bowlers. He likes to stay calm at the crease, whether it is the first ball or the last ball of the match.

Avinash also gives huge credit to his elder brother, who introduced him to the sport and guided him like a mentor. With strong family support and big dreams, the young batter is fully prepared to help his team win every single game.

Hard work finally rewarded: Saransh Jain

GALLE

Madhya Pradesh off-spinner Saransh Jain has finally earned his maiden India Test call-up. After 10 years of hard work in domestic cricket, he is part of the squad for the upcoming 2 game tour of Sri Lanka, starting August 15th in Galle.

Jain was heading to a temple when he noticed multiple missed calls and messages telling him about his selection. The 33 year-old said he did not feel nervous joining the national squad because he has already played alongside most of his new teammates in domestic circuits.

Having made his Ranji Trophy debut back in the 2014 – 15 season, Jain noted that patience is crucial for success. His long journey required massive sacrifices and a belief that his hard work would eventually pay off. His father, a former Ranji Trophy player, always told him to stay patient and trust the process.

With 54 first-class matches under his belt, Jain has claimed 188 wickets and scored 2223 runs. He played a massive role in helping Madhya Pradesh win their maiden Ranji Trophy title in 2022. His stellar form continued into the 2025 – 26, where he scored over 500 runs and took 30 wickets, followed by a Player-of-the-Series display in the Duleep Trophy.

After years of grinding in domestic matches and serving as a net bowler, Jain is now ready to showcase his talent on the biggest international stage. With his deep experience, family backing, and clear mindset, he stands on the verge of making a dream Test debut for his country.

India can challenge anyone, says Savita

NEW DELHI

Experienced goalkeeper Savita Punia believes the Indian women’s hockey team has what it takes to challenge any opponent at the upcoming FIH Hockey Women’s World Cup. Heading into her third consecutive global tournament, the veteran player feels ready to guide her squad with a fresh sense of confidence.

The team enters the World Cup following a massive morale boost after winning the FIH Nations Cup. According to Savita, that gold medal proved that India can go toe-to-toe with powerhouse nations like the Netherlands, Argentina, and Germany.

Hard-fought matches in past Pro League games taught the players that they truly belong among the world’s best.

Beyond recent victories, Savita highlighted a major shift in how the players prepare. Unlike past years when athletes relied solely on coaches, today’s squad takes full personal responsibility for their fitness, diet, and recovery. Extra training hours have become normal routine, especially for goalkeepers who put in multiple extra weekly sessions to stay sharp under pressure.

As a senior leader, Savita aims to lead by example, remaining calm and steady when matches get tough. She also praised team captain Salima Tete and vice-captain Navneet Kaur, noting that their strong partnership and energetic playing style help keep the squad tightly united. With great speed in the midfield and strong defensive organisation, the team feels thoroughly prepared.

Every single match at the World Cup will present a tough challenge, and nobody expects an easy path to victory. However, the squad’s physical conditioning, tactical awareness, and mental toughness give them a genuine shot at a podium finish. The players are fully focused on executing their game plan and playing to their absolute strengths.

For Savita and her teammates, this tournament is not just about participation; it is a golden chance to show the entire world how far Indian women’s hockey has truly evolved.

The countdown to glory has officially begun, and the entire nation stands firmly behind them as they chase history.

Microsoft slowly pulls back from China

BEIJING

Tech giant Microsoft has quietly shut down at least 15 branch offices and joint ventures across China over the past five years. Facing intense pressure from strict U.S. export controls and China's strong push for domestic software, the company has chosen to scale back its operations in the region. Corporate filings show that Microsoft even considered completely leaving the Chinese market in 2023. Leadership felt the rising geopolitical risks outweighed the financial returns, especially since China accounts for a tiny 1.5% of the company's total global revenue. However, executives ultimately decided to stay to maintain access to world-class local engineering talent and service massive clients. Instead of targeting government contracts like it did in the 1990s, Microsoft found a profitable niche helping Chinese firms expand globally. Companies such as TikTok's owner ByteDance and retailer Shein rely on Microsoft's cloud services to manage overseas data. Furthermore, Microsoft offers these enterprises exclusive access to cutting-edge Western artificial intelligence tools that are otherwise unavailable within the mainland market.

INDIA'S JULY EXPORTS SURGE DESPITE TENSIONS

India's merchandise exports climbed nearly 20 per cent in July, even as geopolitical tensions and higher crude prices widened the trade deficit.

NEW DELHI

Trade Snapshot:

July exports: $44.24 billion

July imports: $76.22 billion

Trade deficit: $31.98 billion

West Asia exports: $5.7 billion

April-July exports: 173.78 billion

April-July imports: 292.38 billion

India's merchandise exports rose 19.6 per cent to $44.24 billion in July from $40.41 billion in June, despite continued uncertainty in global markets caused by the ongoing conflict in the Middle East.

Commerce Secretary Rajesh Agarwal said the increase was driven by higher shipments of electronics, engineering and marine products, along with petroleum goods. India's exports to West Asian countries also increased 8.62 per cent to $5.7 billion during July.

However, imports recorded a sharper increase, rising to $76.22 billion in July from $70.84 billion in June. The rise was attributed largely to higher global crude oil prices amid continued disruptions around the Strait of Hormuz, $31.98 billion in July from $30.43 billion in June.

The government, however, said the widening deficit largely reflected higher imports of essential and productive goods required for economic growth, industrialisation and export competitiveness, rather than a structural weakness in the external sector.

Crude oil, electronic goods, machinery, capital goods, gold, precious stones, fertilisers and intermediate inputs account for a significant share of India's imports. These are needed for domestic consumption, energy security, manufacturing, infrastructure and industrial expansion. During April-July, exports increased 17.04 per cent to $173.78 billion, while imports rose 19.27 per cent to $292.38 billion.
