UPI USERS BREATHE EASY!

MDR ON TRANSACTIONS OVER RS 2,000 DEFERRED FOR NOW

The new NPCI framework, announced September 15, was scheduled to take effect on October 15.The fresh rule prescribed a 0.4% fee on eligible bank account-funded merchant payments above Rs 2,000, capped at Rs 300 per transaction.

NEW DELHI

In a major relief to UPI users, the decision to levy a Merchant Discount Rate (MDR) of 0.4% on transactions over Rs 2,000 has been deferred, with NPCI on Tuesday saying a new date for the implementation will be decided after Diwali.

According to the National Payments Corporation of India (NPCI) circular issued last month, a 0.4% MDR was to be levied on Person-to-Merchant UPI payments above Rs 2,000 from October 15.

Festive season relief

"UPI and Services Steering Committee today decided that, keeping in mind the festive season, Merchant Discount Rate (MDR) on select Person-to-Merchant (P2M) UPI transactions shall be implemented immediately post Diwali on a date to be notified separately," NPCI said in a statement.

The MDR has to be paid by merchants, not consumers, and capped at Rs 300 for transactions of Rs 75,000 or more.

The decision to defer has come amidst allegations by the Opposition, which termed it a tax, and said that the levy on specified UPI transactions above Rs 2,000 will burden consumers.

Details of proposed MDR As per the circular dated September 15, payments between individuals, as well as the vast majority of everyday merchant payments were to remain free.

DEFERMENT RECAP

The implementation of a 0.4% Merchant Discount Rate (MDR) on UPI transactions above Rs 2,000 has been deferred.

The decision was made by the UPI and Services Steering Committee, citing the festive season.

A new date for the MDR implementation will be announced after Diwali. The MDR is to be paid by merchants, not consumers, and is capped at Rs 300 for transactions of Rs 75,000 or more.

REASON FOR DELAY

The decision follows heavy pushback from trade bodies, MSMEs, and merchant associations, who argued that introducing fees during peak festive shopping would raise business costs and dampen retail consumption.

What the new framework proposes

P2P stays free: Person-to-person (P2P) UPI transfers remain completely free.

Small merchants exempt: Small and eligible merchants as well as transactions up to ₹2,000 remain exempt.

Proposed rates for P2M (Person-to-Merchant) above ₹2,000:

- Standard Rate: A 0.4% MDR on eligible bank account-funded merchant transactions exceeding ₹2,000.
- Cap: Capped at a maximum of ₹300 per transaction for high-value transactions of ₹75,000 and above.
- Flat fees/special sectors: A flat MDR of ₹5 per transaction for select categories (such as fuel, telecom, insurance, railways, and agriculture inputs) over ₹2,000, and a nominal 0.02% MDR (capped at ₹300) for capital market, mutual fund, and stockbroker transactions.

Who pays: The MDR is charged to the merchant, not the consumer.

railways, telecom, fuel, and insurance, were to attract a flat Rs 5 fee per transaction above Rs 2,000. Capital markets transactions (mutual funds, stockbroking) were to get a lower 0.02 per cent rate, also capped at Rs 300.

The National Payments Corporation, which operates the UPI platform, decided to levy MDR on certain UPI transactions aimed at creating a sustainable revenue framework for the digital payments ecosystem.

As per the NPCI, the amount collected will be shared among banks and other entities in the UPI ecosystem.

Of the MDR collected, 40% will go to customers' banks, 30% to payment gateways, 20% to the UPI app and the remaining 10% to the sponsoring bank of the UPI app.

Industry reaction

Welcoming the decision, the Confederation of All India Traders (CAIT) said the government's move to defer the proposed MDR charges on UPI transactions is "timely and pragmatic", particularly during the crucial festive and wedding season, when millions of traders and MSMEs depend on higher business volumes.

"Additional transaction costs could have placed an avoidable burden on merchants operating on thin margins and discouraged the wider acceptance of digital payments," CAIT said.

It shared that the decision follows the meeting held on September 30, 2026, when a delegation of around 20 trade leaders met Finance Minister Nirmala Sitharaman and highlighted the implications of the proposed 0.4% MDR on UPI transactions exceeding Rs 2,000.

Rahul hosts high tea for INDIA bloc, says resistance to continue and will triumph.

NEW DELHI

Leader of Opposition in Lok Sabha, Rahul Gandhi, on Tuesday stepped up his attack on Prime Minister Narendra Modi-led government at the Centre, saying democracy has been "destroyed" under the ruling dispensation, and the Opposition is fighting together to restore "democracy" in the country.

Rahul, who, along with Leader of Opposition in Rajya Sabha and Congress chief Mallikarjun Kharge, has been spreading the INDIA bloc protest alleging "vote theft" by the ruling BJP through Chief Election Commissioner Gyanesh Kumar, vowed that "those responsible, including PM Modi, Home Minister Amit Shah, Gyanesh Kumar, and others, will be brought to justice".

'Can't demand right to protest in Delhi, deny it in Bengaluru: CM

Bengaluru: Asserting that the right to protest must be upheld without double standards across the country, Karnataka Chief Minister DK Shivakumar on Tuesday sought a detailed report on the police action against protesters in Bengaluru.

His remarks came a day after several protesters were detained while attempting to march towards the Karnataka Chief Electoral Officer's office, demanding the resignation of CEC Gyanesh Kumar over alleged irregularities in the SIR. The police crackdown drew sharp criticism after participants alleged forceful detention. Two photojournalists and three reporters were manhandled by four police personnel while performing their duties during the protest.

In an X post, he said the right to peaceful protest was fundamental to democracy and that the government could not demand that right for itself in New Delhi while denying it to others in Bengaluru. "I have taken note of yesterday's incident involving protesters and members of the media. I have sought a full report on the circumstances that led to the police action. If there has been any unnecessary use of force or excess, accountability will follow."

Ashoka demands white paper on K'taka drought management

Bengaluru: Leader of Opposition in the Legislative Assembly R Ashoka on Tuesday demanded a white paper detailing the state government's drought response, accusing Chief Minister DK Shivakumar of focusing on the sting operation controversy and Delhi visits instead of addressing farmers' distress.

Addressing the media here, he said drought had affected 217 taluks, with an estimated loss of ₹46,324 crore, while the government had announced only ₹1,500 crore in relief. He claimed that farmers were returning the ₹2,500 assistance to deputy commissioners, alleging that the amount was inadequate.

Civic poll: Gandhinagar stands with BJP!

Dandhinagar: The ruling BJP retained control of all three urban local bodies that went to polls in Gujarat on October 11, winning 38 of the 44 seats in the Gandhinagar Municipal Corporation (GMC) and securing majorities in the Thara and Okha municipalities.

The Congress won five seats in Gandhinagar, while an Independent candidate won one ward. The AAP, which won one seat in the previous election, failed to secure any seats.

Gujarat CM Bhupendra Patel congratulated the BJP candidates and party workers and said the victory reflected public faith in the party's development agenda.

The BJP's tally in Gandhinagar fell from 41 seats in 2021 to 38 this time, while the Congress improved its tally from two to five. A total of 130 candidates contested the 44 seats across 11 wards.

In Thara municipality in Banaskantha district, the BJP won 19 of the 24 seats, while the Congress secured the remaining five.

In Okha municipality in Devbhumi Dwarka district, the BJP won 29 of the 32 seats for which polling was held. The Congress won three seats.

BLOOMBERG NEW ECONOMY FORUM

'Power to Empower': PM Modi's new mantra

NEW DELHI

Prime Minister Narendra Modi on Tuesday unveiled his "power to empower" vision, emphasising that the real question was not who possessed power but how it was being utilised to benefit people.

Speaking at the Bloomberg New Economy Forum in New Delhi, the PM said the Centre has embodied the principle of Power to Empower in its governance approach and work culture.

"India's progress is rooted in collective growth and shared opportunities," he said, adding that power is not just the ability to move ahead, but it is also the ability to empower others.

'Digital power opened up greater openings for India'

Modi said that in the present era, digital power has emerged as one of the key drivers of this transformation and is playing a significant role in advancing this vision. "The digital power has opened up greater opportunities for India."

The Prime Minister said that India's economic growth is taking place on a strong foundation amidst global uncertainty. The GDP growth stood at 7.8% in the first quarter of this financial year.

He highlighted that today, India's foreign exchange reserves exceed 700 billion dollars and the banking system is in its strongest position in many decades. India's reform express continues to move ahead at high speed.

'India progressing, carrying everyone along'

He said that India's progress in the 21st century is a story of advancing together with everyone and carrying everyone along. Whenever the world needs a steady pillar, India extends its hand in support, recognizing its responsibility.

He further said today, India is home to more than 2,000 Global Capability Centres that are providing services to companies across the world.

The Prime Minister said technology, data, knowledge and innovation have become important sources of power in the 21st century. The government constant endeavour is to ensure that India's capabilities open new doors of opportunity for other countries as well.

"India is the Mother of Democracy and it has over 100 languages, around 80,000 registered newspapers and publications, and more than 1,000 satellite television channels." He highlighted that India had lifted 25 crore people out of poverty over the past decade.

'India's startup ecosystem shows steady growth'

Modi said India's startup ecosystem has expanded significantly since 2014, with the number of startups crossing 2,50,000. He noted that nearly

KPSC scam: SC allows Karnataka to replace 2 SIT members

New Delhi: The Supreme Court on Tuesday modified a Karnataka High Court order directing a fresh probe into two recruitment cases involving the Karnataka Public Service Commission (KPSC), allowing the state to suggest replacements for two members of the Special Investigation Team (SIT).

A bench comprising Justices Manoj Misra and Vijay Bishnoi directed that a revised SIT be constituted within 10 days. The Karnataka DGP will nominate an officer not below the rank of Additional Director General of Police to head the team. The HC will subsequently review the SIT's composition.

The state had challenged the HC's September 21 order, objecting to its selection of SIT members.

Anti-drug activist shot dead by medical store owner in Punjab

CHANDIGARH

Anti-drug activist Parvinder Singh alias Jhota, known for raising his voice against drug abuse and the illegal sale of addictive substances at chemist shops, was shot dead in broad daylight in a busy market in Punjab's Mansa town. Police are on the lookout for the medical store owner, who chased and opened fire on the activist and his companions as the public watched in horror, allegedly enraged over being questioned for the sale of addictive drugs to an elderly man. The incident has invited widespread condemnation from political leaders, who cornered the ruling AAP government over the deterioration of law and order in the state. Following the murder, the activist's supporters held a protest outside the Civil Hospital in Mansa, while his family refused to cremate the body. Jhota's father slammed the AAP government, saying that drugs are sold openly in the state and his son was killed while fighting the menace.

Drones hit ships in Black Sea, sinking one, prompting rescue ops

SOFIA

Drones struck two ships in the Black Sea off Bulgaria on Tuesday, sinking one and prompting emergency rescue operations, Prime Minister Rumen Radev said. Rescuers evacuated all 15 crew members from one ship, the Maltese-flagged Chelsea 3, with five receiving treatment for minor injuries, Radev said in a video posted to social media. The crew, which included seven Ukrainian citizens and eight Azerbaijan citizens, reported the ship's deck and hull were hit by three aerial drones. One crew member from the sunken vessel was rescued, Radev added, without providing details about the others aboard. The strikes on the two ships occurred 18 and 17 miles (29 and 27.5 km) from the Bulgarian coast. During an emergency meeting of Bulgaria's Security Council on Tuesday, Radev called the attacks "absolutely unacceptable" and said Bulgaria was seeking NATO and European Union assistance.

Clean drinking water supply and urban sanitation get priority: Dr. Yathindra

CH NEWS, MYSURU

The State Government will prioritise the supply of clean drinking water and urban sanitation across urban local bodies and municipal corporations in Karnataka, with a focus on planning for the comprehensive development of cities, said Urban Development Minister and Mysuru District Minister in-charge Dr. Yathindra Siddaramaiah.

Chairing a meeting on drinking water supply and solid waste management at the mini conference hall of the Zilla Panchayat in Mysuru on Tuesday, he stressed the need for systematic solid waste management, and said Mysuru was a beautiful city and that maintaining its cleanliness was a shared responsibility. Waste should be segregated at the household level into wet and dry waste before collection. Wet waste should be used for compost production, while dry waste should be processed for recycling and the manufacture of reusable products.

Describing Mysuru as a clean and developing city, he said plans would be formulated to implement various development projects and further improve urban infrastructure.

Odisha's urban development model highlighted
M.G. Mathivathanan, retired Additional Chief Secretary of the Odisha Government, explained how the State had undertaken urban development through various Central and State Government schemes, grants from Members of the Legislative Assembly and Members of Parliament, and Corporate Social Responsibility (CSR) funds.

He said Odisha had maintained urban cleanliness through plans prepared by local engineers. The State had also implemented comprehensive drinking water projects in its cities, providing round-the-clock water supply through household taps.

Large overhead water storage tanks had been constructed to ensure uninterrupted supply. A well-planned project could resolve major urban infrastructure challenges. Once development plans were prepared, the necessary funding was secured through appropriate proposals.

Tap water supply expanded across 115 cities

Mathivathanan recalled that in 2016–17, only 40% of the water supply in Odisha was delivered through pipelines, while just 30% of households had tap connections. The remaining water requirements were met through tankers. This situation allowed private tanker operators to supply water at high prices, leading to the growth of what he described as a tanker mafia. The shortage of clean drinking water also contributed to several diseases caused by contaminated water. Of the 115 cities in Odisha, 105 have achieved 100% household tap water connectivity, while the remaining 10 cities have reached 95% coverage, he said.

To build public confidence in the quality of the water supply, then Chief Minister Naveen Patnaik personally drank tap water, demonstrating its safety to the public. The improved supply of clean drinking water had contributed to better public health, with a reduction in diseases such as jaundice, Mathivathanan said.

Highlighting another aspect of Odisha's urban development, Mathivathanan said the State had earlier faced the challenge of a large number of slums inhabited by people who had migrated from rural areas.

Providing even basic amenities to these settlements had been difficult. He noted that the lack of adequate employment opportunities and sufficient wages to maintain a decent standard of living had contributed to the growth of slums.

Through CSR funding and various government schemes, several slum areas had been transformed into more liveable neighbourhoods, he said.

B.B. Kaveri, Secretary of the Urban Development Department; Mahesh, Managing Director of the Karnataka Urban Water Supply and Drainage Board; Ravindra, Director of the Directorate of Municipal Administration; M.K. Savitha, Commissioner of Mysuru City Corporation; and officials from various departments attended the meeting.

JAC demands Kambala be cancelled, accuses CM of distorting history

CH NEWS, MYSURU

A joint action committee comprising farmers' organisations, the Dalit Sangharsha Samiti (DSS), the 'Parisarkaagi Naavu' organisation, and progressive and pro-Kannada organisations has strongly condemned Chief Minister D.K. Shivakumar for allegedly distorting history to justify the organisation of Kambala, the traditional buffalo race, as part of the Mysuru Dasara celebrations.

In a press statement issued here on Tuesday, Parashuramegowda, general secretary of the committee, said the CM's claim at the Dasara inauguration that the rulers of the Vijayanagara Empire had brought buffaloes for the festival, apparently for use in processions, was far from the truth. It said it was unbecoming of a Chief Minister to make such a statement in the presence of hundreds of religious leaders and several public representatives.

According to historians and heritage experts, there is no documentary evidence to establish that buffaloes participated in the Mahanavami festival celebrated by the rulers of the Vijayanagara Empire.

The committee cited the account of Domingo Paes, the renowned Portuguese traveller and chronicler who visited the Vijayanagara Empire during the reign of the celebrated ruler Krishnadevaraya between 1520 and 1522 AD. In his book Chronica dos Reis de Bisnaga (Chronicle of the Kings of Vijayanagara), Paes reportedly referred to the sacrifices of 25 buffaloes and 125 sheep during the Mahanavami festival.

The statement further pointed out that the horizontal friezes on the Mahanavami Dibba, located within the Royal Enclosure at Hampi, depict animals such as elephants and horses, but not buffaloes. Historians and heritage experts, it said, had drawn attention to the absence of buffalo depictions in these carvings.

The committee alleged that the Chief Minister's remarks were an attempt to justify the organisation of Kambala despite strong opposition from the public and several organisations. It said distorting history to defend the event was unbecoming of someone holding the office of Chief Minister.

Kambala originated in the Tulu region around 600 to 700 years ago, after the paddy harvest, as part of the joyous harvest season. The traditional sport was organised for recreation and to express gratitude to the deities, the statement said.

However, organising Kambala during Mysuru Dasara at a time when farmers and ordinary people were suffering severely due to a devastating drought reflected the Chief Minister's stubbornness, the committee alleged.

Despite widespread opposition to the event over the past three-and-a-half months, the government's decision to proceed with Kambala demonstrated that the Chief Minister was paying little heed to public sentiments, it added.

The committee also referred to the address by Abhinava Gavisiddeshwara Swamiji, who inaugurated the Dasara celebrations and emphasised the importance of environmental protection. It criticised the government for defending the organisation of Kambala, which it alleged

What the committee cites

- Domingo Paes, 1520-1522: 25 buffaloes and 125 sheep sacrificed at the Mahanavami festival
- Mahanavami Dibba, Hampi: friezes show elephants and horses, not buffaloes would cause environmental damage, without giving due consideration to the Swamiji's message. The people of the State would not forgive such disregard for environmental concerns, the statement said.

The joint action committee urged the Chief Minister to reconsider his decision at the last minute and cancel the Kambala event, which it claimed was unwanted by a majority of Mysuru residents. It also demanded that the funds allocated for the event be diverted towards alleviating the hardships faced by farmers.

Women are the strength of society: Dr. Yathindra Siddaramaiah

CH NEWS, MYSURU

Women are the strength of society and the pillars of their families, and they must be given greater opportunities in every field, said Urban Development Minister and Mysuru District Minister in-charge Dr. Yathindra Siddaramaiah.

Speaking after inaugurating the Mahila Dasara (Women's Dasara) organised by the Women and Children's Ambedkar had fought for women's equality. Today, the Constitution had enabled women to attain high positions in various fields. However, it was unfortunate that women in many places still did not enjoy the same freedom as men.

Until October 16

Expressing hope that women would receive equal opportunities in all spheres of life, he invited women to participate enthusiastically in the Mahila Dasara celebrations, which will continue until October 16, and enjoy the festivities.

Celebrate with enthusiasm

Minister for Sericulture and Animal Husbandry C. Puttarangashetty said Dasara was a festival celebrating Goddess Chamundeshwari. He urged women to participate in large numbers and not hesitate to come forward in any field. "This is your programme. Women should participate wholeheartedly and celebrate the festival with enthusiasm," he said, extending his best wishes to the participants.

MLA Harish Gowda, Women's Development Corporation Chairperson Padmavathi, State Vice-Chairperson of the Guarantee Schemes Implementation Committee Pushpa Amarnath, Zoo Authority Chairman Hadya Rangaswamy, District President of the Guarantee Schemes Implementation Committee Arun Kumar, and the chairperson, vice-chairperson and members of the Women and Children's Dasara Sub-Committee were present.

Mysuru Airport marks disaster risk reduction day with life support, fire safety training

CH NEWS, MYSURU

Mysuru Airport observed the International Day for Disaster Risk Reduction in Mysuru on Tuesday with the theme "Resilience Starts at Home" by organising Basic Life Support (BLS) Training and Fire Safety Awareness Training for airport staff.

What the staff learnt

- Basic Life Support
CPR, medical emergencies and first aid, with a practical demonstration
- Fire safety
Fire prevention, fire hazards, evacuation and the use of fire-fighting equipment

The initiative was undertaken to enhance emergency preparedness, strengthen response capabilities, and promote a culture of safety and resilience among all airport stakeholders. The Basic Life Support Training was conducted by Dr. Nayaz Pasha, Resident Medical Officer (RMO), KR Hospital, Mysuru. The session covered essential life-saving techniques, including Cardiopulmonary Resuscitation (CPR), management of medical emergencies, and first-aid measures. A practical demonstration of CPR and other emergency response procedures was conducted, enabling participants to gain hands-on experience in handling critical situations. The training also included an interactive awareness session, during which staff members actively participated and clarified their queries related to emergency medical response. The Fire Safety Awareness

Training focused on fire prevention, identification of fire hazards, emergency evacuation procedures, and the proper use of fire-fighting equipment. The programme emphasised the importance of prompt and effective action during emergencies to safeguard lives and property.

Speaking on the occasion, P.V. Usha Kumari, Airport Director, Mysuru Airport, highlighted the significance of continuous training and awareness programmes in building a resilient workforce capable of responding effectively to emergencies. She stated that preparedness, awareness, and timely response are critical elements in ensuring the safety and well-being of passengers, airport personnel, and all stakeholders. She further emphasised that such initiatives contribute significantly to strengthening disaster risk reduction measures and fostering a proactive safety culture.

The entire programme was successfully coordinated by Vijayan P.C., Fire Station In-charge, Mysuru Airport, whose efforts ensured the effective conduct of the training sessions and awareness activities.

DHARA unveils nature economy framework linking ecological restoration and livelihoods

CH NEWS, MYSURU

DHARA, an initiative of the Anita Humanitarian Foundation, has announced plans to develop an integrated Nature Economy framework that combines ecological restoration, climate resilience, scientific measurement, digital technologies and sustainable livelihood opportunities.

The initiative seeks to establish how nature restoration can become a measurable, accountable and economically sustainable component of development amid growing concerns over climate change, rising temperatures, water scarcity, El Niño-related weather risks and agricultural vulnerability.

It proposes to integrate environmental science, field measurements, sensors, satellite observations, artificial intelligence and digital systems to assess ecological conditions and monitor restoration outcomes. A key component of the proposed framework is the DHARA Balance Sheet, designed to assess indicators such as soil health, water availability, biodiversity, carbon, vegetation, groundwater, food systems and livelihoods. The initiative also proposes an Earth Purity Index to evaluate environmental conditions and track improvements over time.

Beyond carbon credits

Going beyond conventional carbon-credit approaches, DHARA envisions an "El Niño Economy" that connects climate resilience with opportunities in agroforestry, biochar, soil restoration, water conservation, sustainable agriculture, nature-based products and environmental data services.

The initiative intends to explore funding opportunities through corporate social responsibility programmes, climate finance, responsible businesses and eligible environmental markets. It has stated that any environmental claims and carbon-credit participation would be subject to credible baseline assessments, applicable eligibility criteria and independent verification requirements.

It also aims to promote inclusive participation in the emerging nature economy by creating opportunities for young people, women, transgender persons and persons with disabilities through training, entrepreneurship and community-led restoration initiatives.

As an initial step, the organisation is developing a living-laboratory concept in Mayiladuthurai to explore how local ecological restoration can be linked to measurable environmental outcomes and community participation. The pilot's implementation will depend on land permissions, technical assessments and institutional arrangements.

Dr. Anita Prasad, founder and initiative lead of DHARA, said the initiative aimed to bridge the gap between the ecological value of healthy soil, clean water, biodiversity and resilience, and their consideration in development decisions. The long-term objective was to bring science, technology, ecological restoration and inclusive livelihoods together within an integrated framework, Dr. Anita added.

Women must become self-reliant through self-employment: Tanveer Sait

CH NEWS, MYSURU

Narasimharaja Assembly Constituency MLA Tanveer Sait called upon women to make effective use of sewing machines provided by the government and become economically self-reliant through self-employment.

Speaking after distributing sewing machines provided by the Mysuru City Corporation to more than 100 women from the Narasimharaja (NR) Assembly constituency here on Tuesday, he said the beneficiaries had already undergone sewing training and were now being provided with sewing machines to help them earn an honest livelihood and build a better future for themselves. He assured that sewing machines would be provided to other eligible women who had not received them yet in the next phase.

Speaking on the occasion, Syed Iqbal, president of the Aziz Sait Block Congress, said efforts had been underway for the past year, under the guidance of Sait, to secure sewing machines for 100 women. The initiative had now been successfully implemented with the MLA's guidance and support. He urged the beneficiaries to make effective use of the machines to improve their financial condition and achieve economic independence.

M.N. Mahadevu, a senior Congress leader from the NR Assembly constituency, also advised the women to make good use of the sewing machines provided to them. He said the machines would help them earn a livelihood, make

Mysuru glitters in Dasara lights

CIRCLES OF SPLENDOUR, STREETS OF GOLD

SHYAM SUNDAR VATTAM
MYSURU

Mysuru, the city of palaces, has donned a dazzling festive mantle, transforming its important circles, prominent roads and public spaces into a spectacular canvas of light and colour as the Dasara celebrations unfold.

As dusk gives way to darkness, the royal city begins its nightly transformation. Decorative lights sparkle across prominent junctions, colourful illumination outlines architectural features, and brilliantly lit installations add a festive touch to familiar city ing attention with their colourful illumination. The welcome display facing Chamundi Hill adds another distinctive touch, greeting visitors with a festive message that reflects Mysuru's cultural identity.

The illumination is part of an ambitious citywide effort landmarks. The illuminated circles have become visual attractions in their own right, drawing residents and visitors who pause to admire the displays, take photographs and capture memories of the grand festival.

The Jayachamarajendra Wadiyar Circle, popularly known as JCW Circle, and K.R. Circle are among the prominent landmarks attract-by the Chamundeshwari Electricity Supply Corporation (CESC). The arrangements cover 146 km of roads, including 199 roads, 123 circles and 80 installations, turning the city into a sprawling celebration of light.

For Mysureans, the annual spectacle is more than an ornamental exercise. It is an integral part of Dasara, evoking memories of childhood outings, family evenings and the excitement of showing the city to friends and relatives visiting during the festival.

Visitors, too, are drawn into the festive atmosphere. Families stop at illuminated junctions for photographs, children watch the changing patterns with delight, and tourists discover a different charm in the city after sunset.

The illumination also gives local businesses, roadside vendors and transport operators an opportunity to benefit from the increased movement of people during the festive season. However, visitors are advised to remain cautious at busy junctions and avoid stopping vehicles in traffic lanes to take photographs.

As Mysuru celebrates its traditional festival with modern lighting arrangements, the illuminated circles stand as glittering gateways to its royal heritage. Each glowing junction adds another brushstroke to the city's festive portrait, reinforcing its reputation as Karnataka's cultural capital.

For a few enchanting nights, Mysuru does not merely celebrate Dasara; it seems to sparkle with the spirit of the festival itself.

“LITERARY WORKS OFFER DIFFERENT EXPERIENCES TO DIFFERENT READERS”

CH NEWS, MYSURU

Every literary work offers a different experience to different readers, and this is the distinctive quality of literature, said Manasa, Chairman of the Kannada Book Authority.

He was speaking at a function organised on Tuesday to release three books at the Kannada Book Fair held at the Scouts and Guides Grounds in Mysuru. The fair has been organised jointly by the Department of Kannada and Culture, Mysuru Mahotsava Committee and the Kannada Book Authority.

Manasa said that while writers experience their own emotions and perspectives when creating literary works such as short stories, novels and poetry, every reader interprets and experiences the same work differently. A literary work may bring happiness to some readers and distress to others. While some may find it intellectually stimulating, others may be drawn into a meditative state of mind. “This is the strength and

He added that, with the objective of providing opportunities to everyone, the Kannada Book Authority was facilitating the release of books published by other authors in addition to its own publications. This initiative was helping establish connections and encourage meaningful dialogue between writers and readers.

Senior journalist Amshi Prasanna Kumar released three books at the function: Hallihaidana Manadaalada Salugalu, a collection of poems by Dr. Palaniswamy Muduguru; Marulasiddha, a novel by Dr. S. Prasadaswamy; and Hairpin, a novel by V. Balamurali.

The three authors spoke about the circumstances and inspiration behind the creation of their respective works and expressed their gratitude to those who had supported them.

M. Chandrashekar, district coordinator of the Kannada Book Authority's Manegonda Granthalaya (A Library for Every Home) implementation committee, welcomed the gathering and compered the programme. Dr. Kushala Baraguru, a member of the Authority, proposed the vote of thanks.

Prof. C.D. Parashurama, Dr. M. Mahesh Chikkalluru, Suchitra Hegde, M.N. Lokesh, Dr. V. Ranganath, retired Director of the Department of Information and Public Relations N.R. Vishukumar, retired Joint Director of the Department of Kannada and Culture V.N. Mallikarjunaswamy, international athlete M. Yogendra and others were present.

Renowned writer cautions against AI taking over Kannada poetry

CH NEWS, MYSURU

Renowned Kannada writer Vaidehi said poetry was an ever-flowing expression of emotions, with each individual having a unique poetic sensibility according to their personal satisfaction, needs and perceptions.

Speaking after inaugurating the Bahuroopi Kavighoshti, organised by the Dasara Poets' Meet Sub-Committee here on Tuesday, she said poetry had the power to churn society and bring about reflection. The world's first poet was a mother, she said, recalling how a mother sings lullabies and instils devotion and affection in her children. The distinctive quality required for poetry was a sensitive perception of life. Emotions become crystallised through the mind's capacity to observe and reflect. Poetry does not require complicated or grand words; profound thoughts can be conveyed through simple language. Realising this is a sign of self-confidence, she said.

Expressing concern over the growing preference for English at the expense of Kannada, she said this trend was weakening people's emotional attachment to their cultural identity. In the land of Pampa, Kumaravyasa and Basavanna, efforts must be made to preserve the distinct identity of Kannada. Kannada poetry possessed its own natural beauty and emotional world and should not be subjected to artificial intelligence. In the digital age, human beings must continue to experience joy and sorrow naturally. Kannada's beauty, rhythm and emotional richness must continue to inspire songs, poetry, music and dance. The cherished Kannada language must flourish, and its poetry must not fall victim to AI. Protecting Kannada's place in the world would help secure its future.

University of Mysore Vice-Chancellor Prof. N.K. Lokanath said the language people used every day was important because it reflected their identity. Everyone wanted Kannada to be used more widely, he said, expressing concern that today's teachers were not showing as much interest in promoting Kannada as their predecessors had.

While advances in science and technology made life easier, Kannada literature was essential for enriching its values. Literature cultivated values, and Kannada possessed a rich history and the resources needed to meet diverse needs, he said.

Presiding over the programme, Chamaraja MLA K. Harish Gowda said he had studied at the University of Mysore for eight years. With his father's encouragement, he developed an interest in literature and poetry through the university library.

He described the University of Mysore campus as a university in itself, bringing together writers, scientists, historians and professors of commerce. Spending eight years there had been a privilege, he said.

Mysuru city and district were home to many poets and literary personalities. It was a matter of pride that such a programme was being held in the land that had served as the karmabhoomi of Kuvempu, he added.

Veteran film actor Mukhya Mantri Chandru, head of the Kuvempu Institute of Kannada Studies Prof. Nanjappa Honganuru, Dasara Poets' Meet Special Officer M. Dashegowda, Mahadeva, M.K. Lokalakshi, S.D. Shashikala, Dr. Triveni and Dr. Umesh Matad were among those present.

Union Minister Athawale inaugurates Shilp Samagam Mela in Mysuru

CH NEWS, MYSURU

The Union Government is committed to the empowerment of persons with disabilities and socially disadvantaged communities, said Union Minister of State for Social Justice and Empowerment Ramdas Athawale.

Speaking to the media after inaugurating the Shilp Samagam Mela at the Dasara Exhibition Grounds in Mysuru on Tuesday, he said the Union Government's primary objective was to ensure that government welfare schemes reached even the most disadvantaged sections of society. The Ministry of Social Justice and Empowerment was implementing several public welfare programmes for the comprehensive development of Scheduled Castes, Scheduled Tribes, Other Backward Classes, senior citizens and persons with disabilities.

To promote economic self-reliance among exploited and disadvantaged communities, various development corporations of the Union Government were providing loans ranging from ₹1.5 lakh to ₹35 lakh at very low interest rates, he said.

The Minister noted that Samagam Melas and Divya Kala Melas were being organised across the country to provide market access and encouragement to products made by small entrepreneurs, artisans and artists with disabilities. These events were not merely commercial platforms but also offered artisans an opportunity to build independent and sustainable livelihoods.

Referring to reservations, Athawale said that 15% reservation had been provided for Scheduled Castes and 7.5% for Scheduled Tribes, in accordance with the constitutional framework. Similarly, 27% reservation had been implemented for Other Backward Classes based on the Mandal Commission's recommendations, promoting social equality.

He said several flagship schemes, including the Pradhan Mantri Jan Dhan Yojana, Pradhan Mantri Mudra Yojana, Ujjwala Yojana, Pradhan Mantri Awas Yojana and Ayushman Bharat, had brought significant changes to the lives of millions of poor and middle-class people. The direct benefits of these programmes were reaching genuine beneficiaries and strengthening the country economically and socially, he added.

The Shilp Samagam Mela is being held at the Mysuru Dasara Exhibition Grounds from October 11 to 19. Organised in the backdrop of the renowned Mysuru Dasara celebrations, it is the first such fair being organised by the Ministry during the current financial year.

A major attraction of the fair is the 'Bharat Tulip Heritage' stall, which offers high-quality products for sale. Payments are transferred directly to the bank accounts of the respective artisans.

All participating artisans are being provided free stalls, travel expenses, daily allowances, transportation facilities for their goods and meals at no cost, ensuring that they can showcase and sell their products without incurring additional expenses.

265 women showcase artistic flair at Dasara Rangoli contest

CH NEWS, MYSURU

More than 265 women from different districts of Karnataka participated enthusiastically in the State-level Rangoli competition organised on the Mysuru Palace premises in Mysuru on Tuesday as part of the Women and Children's Dasara celebrations.

Inaugurating the competition, Krishnaraja Assembly constituency MLA T.S. Srivatsa said women were being given greater importance, pointing out that the Union Government had appointed Sudha Yadav as the Governor of Karnataka.

He said women had arrived at the Palace premises early in the morning and participated enthusiastically in the competition

Remembering the Navadurgas during the auspicious occasion, the participants created colourful rangoli designs using the nine varieties of grains (Navadhanya), adding to the festive spirit, he said.

The traditional and artistic rangoli designs created in the courtyard in front of the Mysuru Palace attracted the attention of the public and tourists. The designs reflected the rich cultural heritage, traditions and artistic excellence of Karnataka.

Sarasamma wins first prize

The organisers announced the results of the State-level competition, in which more than 265 participants showcased their artistic skills. Sarasamma, a 63-year-old woman from Mysuru (Competition No. 186), won the first prize. Savitri of Gaminahalli in Srirangapatna taluk (Competition No. 56) secured the second prize, while Mala, a resident of Vijayanagar in Mysuru (Competition No. 74), won the third prize for her fine-line rangoli design. Certificates were distributed to all participants in recognition of their participation.

Deputy Commissioner G. Lakshminantha Reddy, Additional Deputy Commissioner R. Aishwarya, Women and Children's Dasara Sub-Committee Chairperson Chudamani, committee secretary R. Nagaraj and sub-special officer K.G.S. Savita were among those present.

Bengaluru's Chakravayuha to be recreated for Durga Puja

CH NEWS, BENGALURU

The RT Nagar Socio Cultural Trust will celebrate its 20th year of Durga Puja with a 7,500-sq-ft theme pandal depicting the Mahabharata's Chakravayuha at Gate 9, Palace Grounds, from October 15 to 21. The theme draws parallels between the legendary formation and Bengaluru life, where residents often feel trapped in complex cycles. The pandal will feature art, craft, technology and mechanical elements, including rotating structures. Organisers expect more than the 2.5 lakh visitors recorded last year. The programme includes folk singer Poushali Banerjee on October 16, performers from Nagaland's Hornbill Festival and a 100-woman Dhunuchi Naach performance on October 17. The Nandi sisters will perform on October 18, while singer Nikita Gandhi is scheduled for October 20. Entry and parking will be free.

K-RERA holds builders liable for project expenses

CH NEWS, BENGALURU

The Karnataka Real Estate Regulatory Authority (K-RERA) has ruled that builders cannot pass on project-related expenses to homebuyers before handing over possession. In an order concerning a Kengeri apartment, the authority directed a private builder to remove 18% GST levied on Bangalore Water Supply and Sewerage Board (BWSSB) charges for domestic water supply and correct the buyer's payment statements. K-RERA said promoters remain responsible for municipal taxes, water and electricity charges, maintenance and other statutory dues until possession is handed over. The authority also rejected the builder's claim for delay interest for more than 600 days, noting the absence of documentary evidence proving payment delays. The buyer had additionally disputed ₹18,487 in extra charges. K-RERA directed the builder to justify the GST collection and issue refunds wherever applicable.

KARNATAKA QUOTA APPEAL

Karnataka to consider SC appeal on quota

CH NEWS, BENGALURU

The Karnataka government will consider approaching the Supreme Court after the High Court struck down provisions of a 2022 law that increased reservation for Scheduled Castes (SCs) and Scheduled Tribes (STs), Deputy Chief Minister G. Parameshwara said on Tuesday. Parameshwara said the state Cabinet would decide the next course of action, including whether to challenge the High Court's order. The ruling concerns the law that raised reservation for SCs from 15% to 17% and for STs from 3% to 7%.

The changes, introduced during the tenure of former Chief Minister Basavaraj Bommai, raised the overall reservation quota in Karnataka from 50% to 56%, including the existing 32% reservation for Other Backward Classes (OBCs).

Siddaramaiah seeks court relief over social media video

The former chief minister has sought judicial intervention as his son alleges a campaign to damage his reputation.

CH NEWS, BENGALURU

Former Karnataka Chief Minister Siddaramaiah has approached a court seeking a stay on alleged false publicity against him on social media, while his son, Minister Yathindra Siddaramaiah, dismissed a controversial video as fake.

Yathindra on Tuesday alleged that the video was part of a conspiracy to tarnish his father's image and spread false propaganda. He said a complaint had also been filed seeking action against those responsible for circulating it.

"There was false publicity against me on social media. Hence, I am seeking a stay," Siddaramaiah told reporters, without elaborating on the legal proceedings.

Rejecting suggestions that the video amounted to a sting operation, Yathindra said it was intended to damage the veteran Congress leader's reputation.

"This is not a sting operation but a conspiracy to spread false propaganda and tarnish someone's image," he said.

Yathindra questioned whether the allegations should be allowed to circulate without a response, arguing that people unaware of the facts could mistake the video for genuine material.

"They are spreading false propaganda. Can we simply sit back and watch?" he asked.

Asked about the political climate that had prompted his father to seek legal intervention, Yathindra said even senior leaders were increasingly facing what he described as baseless allegations.

Yathindra said his father had informed him about the video soon after it surfaced and expressed his intention to file a complaint. He advised Siddaramaiah to proceed after obtaining legal advice.

YATHINDRA DEFENDS FATHER

Karnataka Minister Yathindra Siddaramaiah has defended his father amid a social media video controversy. He rejected the suggestion that the video was a sting operation, describing it instead as an alleged conspiracy to spread propaganda. Yathindra said his father decided to file a complaint after the video surfaced and acted on legal advice. He also expressed concern that people unfamiliar with the facts could believe the video was genuine.

The minister added that there was no reason to feel disheartened if one had done nothing wrong, while expressing concern over the state of the political system.

"Once we enter politics, we have to face whatever comes our way," he said.

Zameer sets four-month deadline for housing project

CH NEWS, BENGALURU

Housing Minister Zameer Ahmed Khan has directed officials to complete the construction of houses at Mangala Grama in Maligondanahalli, under the Yeshwanthpur Assembly constituency, within four months and hand them over to beneficiaries with all basic amenities.

During his visit to the locality, the minister inspected the ongoing construction work being undertaken by the Slum Development Board and instructed officials to expedite the project to meet the deadline.

He stressed that the houses should be completed within the stipulated period and handed over only after ensuring the availability of basic infrastructure and essential facilities. The direction is aimed at ensuring that beneficiaries can occupy their houses with the necessary amenities in place.

Samatha Sainika Dal representative Venkataswamy and Slum Development Board Commissioner Raghavendra were present during the inspection.

The minister's visit provided an opportunity to review the progress of the housing project and issue directions regarding its timely completion.

Govt to review police action against anti-CEC protesters

The state government has promised scrutiny of police conduct after demonstrators and journalists reportedly faced force during Monday's protest.

CH NEWS, BENGALURU

The Karnataka government will review Bengaluru police action against anti-Chief Election Commissioner (CEC) protesters following criticism over the detention of demonstrators and alleged manhandling of journalists during Monday's protest.

Home Minister Priyank Kharge said the police had been instructed to ensure that peaceful demonstrations were not disrupted. The protest was organised against CEC Gyanesh Kumar and the Special Intensive Revision (SIR) of electoral rolls.

The police action drew criticism after demonstrators alleged forceful detentions. Two photojournalists and three reporters were also allegedly manhandled by four police personnel while covering the protest.

Responding to the controversy, Kharge reiterated that peaceful protest was a fundamental democratic right and should be protected by the authorities.

"The right to peaceful protest is fundamental to our democracy. It must be respected, protected and never suppressed," he said in a post on X.

The minister said the police had been directed to ensure that peaceful demonstrations were not disrupted in the future. He emphasised that law enforcement agencies must protect citizens' rights and create an environment in which people could express dissent without fear.

He added that peaceful dissent should not be treated as a Kharge also appealed to protesters to cooperate with the police and inform the authorities about demonstrations to ensure the safety of participants and the protection of others' rights.

"The police are here to protect your rights, not to stand in the way of your voice," he said.

The government's announcement comes amid questions over the handling of the demonstration and the treatment of media personnel covering the protest. The proposed review is expected to examine the police response as the government reiterates its commitment to safeguarding peaceful dissent.

IAS officer booked for assault on police in Bengaluru pub

CH NEWS, BENGALURU

An Indian Administrative Service (IAS) officer of the Andhra Pradesh cadre and three others have been booked for allegedly assaulting police personnel and obstructing them from discharging their duties during a late-night inspection at a bar and restaurant in Bengaluru.

The case was registered at Cubbon Park police station on October 10 against Vikas Marmat, Special Officer of the Kuppam Area Development Authority in Andhra Pradesh, and three others identified as Abhay Uday Singh, Nitish and Roshan.

According to the FIR, the incident occurred between 1 am and 1.30 am on October 10 at Cavore, a bar and restaurant on Residency Road.

Police Inspector Arun Salunke of the Special Enquiry Wing of the Central Crime Branch (CCB), who filed the complaint, said he and his team were inspecting bars and restaurants under the Cubbon Park and Ashok Nagar police station limits on the directions of the Bengaluru City Police Commissioner.

When the team reached the establishment and began checking customers' identity cards to verify their age, the four men allegedly picked a quarrel with the police personnel.

KIA showcases K'taka's heritage for Dasara

CH NEWS, BENGALURU

Kempegowda International Airport (KIA) is celebrating Dasara 2026 with live cultural performances, traditional art installations and interactive experiences showcasing Karnataka's rich artistic and cultural heritage. The festivities will continue until October 17 across the airport's terminals.

A major attraction is the Dasara Gomme display at the Terminal 2 arrival forecourt, curated by Padma Shri award-ee and puppeteer Anupama Hoskere. The airport will also host a Togalu Gombeyatta shadow-puppetry performance by ninth-generation puppeteer Gunduraju and his team on October 16, from 6 pm to 8 pm at the T2 arrival forecourt.

Passengers can participate in hands-on activities celebrating the State's traditional crafts. The Channapatna Experience Centre offers opportunities to paint traditional lacquered wooden toys, while the Terracotta Experience Centre allows visitors to paint figurines inspired by Karnataka's terracotta traditions.

Traditional Karnataka board games, including Huli Kuri, Saalu Aata, Aligulimane and Chowkabara, will feature in a dedicated games zone, offering travellers an opportunity to explore indigenous recreational traditions.

Dollu Kunita, the traditional drum dance, is among the cultural performances being presented as part of the celebrations.

According to KIA, the initiative aims to make cultural discovery an integral part of the passenger experience rather than limiting celebrations to festive decorations. The activities are rooted in authentic Karnataka art and craft forms, allowing travellers to engage with the stories and skills behind the State's traditions.

Dasara, celebrated as Naada Habba or the State festival, is particularly associated with Mysuru, where elaborate festivities mark Karnataka's cultural identity. Through the airport-wide programme, KIA seeks to bring the State's living heritage to residents and visitors travelling through Bengaluru.

Karnataka plans overseas offices to attract more investments

Patil stressed that Karnataka must compete for global investments by studying each country's industrial strengths and specialised sectors before planning strategies.

CH NEWS, BENGALURU

The Karnataka Government is considering opening Invest Karnataka Forum (IKF) offices in the United States, Japan, Taiwan, South Korea and France to attract more foreign investment into the state's industrial sector, Minister for Large and Medium Industries M.B. Patil said on Tuesday.

The proposal was discussed at a meeting of the IKF Board of Directors held at Khanija Bhavan. Patil directed officials to examine the benefits and challenges of opening offices in these countries, consult relevant stakeholders and submit a detailed report before taking further steps.

"There is strong competition among states to attract industrial investment. Some states have already taken steps to establish offices in these countries. Karnataka cannot afford to fall behind. We must study each country's industrial strengths and specialised sectors before deciding on the right approach," Patil said.

He noted that Karnataka's economy was entering an important phase, with growing opportunities in manufacturing, semiconductors, aerospace and defence. Attracting investments from international markets has therefore become a priority for the government.

The minister said discussions had also covered appointing qualified professionals to head IKF offices in selected countries. In other loca-

Patil warns KIADB plot defaulters of cancellation

Minister for Large and Medium Industries M.B. Patil has directed officials to cancel industrial plot allotments under KIADB rules if entrepreneurs fail to make payments within the prescribed period.

At a review meeting at Khanija Bhavan, he warned that officials who failed to enforce the rules would face action.

Allottees must pay 30 per cent of the amount within one month. An additional month may be granted upon request, with 10 per cent interest. If payment remains pending, the allotment must be cancelled.

Patil said high demand required strict enforcement and urged officials to allot recovered plots to financially capable investors. Senior Industries Department and Karnataka Udyoga Mitra officials attended the meeting.

There is strong competition among states to attract industrial investment. Karnataka cannot afford to fall behind."

— M.B. Patil, Minister for Large and Medium Industries

He stressed that Karnataka must engage directly with potential investors in their home countries to explain the state's industrial opportunities. Without such efforts, investors could choose other states for their projects, he warned.

Aequs Group CEO Aravind Melligeri attended the meeting virtually. Industries Department Principal Secretary S. Selvakumar, Commissioner of Industries Khushboo Goyal and IKF Chief Operating Officer Praveen were also present.

Gadag reservation list review sought for panchayat elections

CH NEWS, GADAG

Kanth Pujar, Gadag district president of the State SC/ST Fake Caste Certificate Prevention Committee, has demanded a review of reservation allocations for the upcoming Taluk Panchayat and Zilla Panchayat elections.

In a public statement, Pujar said the draft reservation list for the 2026 Gadag Taluk Panchayat elections had been released. According to him, all seven constituencies reserved for Scheduled Tribes (ST) in Gadag taluk had been allotted to ST women, leaving male social workers, party activists and community leaders without an opportunity to contest from these seats.

Pujar argued that the reservation process should follow the rotation system under the Karnataka Panchayat Raj Act, 1993. He said constituencies reserved for women in one election term should be considered for the general ST category in the subsequent term, wherever applicable under the rules.

He expressed concern that allocating all seven ST-re-

7 Taluk Panchayat seats reserved for STs in Gadag taluk, all allotted to ST women in the draft list served constituencies to women could limit opportunities for ST male candidates. He urged the authorities to review the draft list and consider distributing the seats more evenly between ST men and women.

The committee has demanded that at least three or four of the seven constituencies be allotted to ST general candidates, with the remaining seats reserved for ST women, subject to the applicable legal provisions and rotation rules.

Pujar appealed to the concerned authorities to examine the issue seriously and ensure fair opportunities for eligible candidates. He said a review of the reservation list was necessary to address the concerns raised by ST male aspirants ahead of the elections.

Tangadagi says opposition sting operation plot will be exposed

CH NEWS, BENGALURU

Kannada and Culture Minister Shivaraj S. Tangadagi has alleged that a conspiracy by opposition parties behind the reported sting operation against him would soon be exposed. Speaking to reporters at Arasu Bhavan on Tuesday, he accused opposition leaders of trying to damage the state government's image because they could not tolerate its development initiatives.

Tangadagi alleged that opposition parties were waiting for opportunities to level accusations against the government and create divisions within its ranks. He said Chief Minister D.K. Shivakumar had advised ministers to remain cautious. Referring to Union Minister H.D. Kumaraswamy's repeated claims about possessing a pen drive, Tangadagi said the government was taking precautions against possible allegations. These were the minister's claims, and he did not provide evidence to establish the alleged conspiracy.

He said political opponents were natural in public life but should appreciate good work regardless of party differences. He criticised leaders who, according to him, were making allegations despite failing to undertake development projects while in power. Tangadagi added that he had no personal experience with sting operations and was willing to speak openly with the media.

The minister also discussed the selection process for Karnataka Rajyotsava Awards. Five sub-committees have been formed to examine nominations and recommend eligible candidates in a one-to-two ratio. Their reports will be considered at the next advisory committee meeting.

'Officials must act against waste and water shortages'

District In-charge Secretary Dr. N. Manjula with officials during her visit to Chintamani taluk.

CH NEWS, CHIKKABALLAPURA

District In-charge Secretary Dr. N. Manjula has directed officials to launch a special drive to clear plastic and other waste from roads connecting towns across Chikkaballapura district.

She issued the instructions while chairing a Disaster Management Committee meeting at the Chintamani Taluk Panchayat Hall on Tuesday.

Manjula stressed the need for proper waste disposal across all urban local bodies. Although GPS systems have been installed in garbage collection vehicles, senior officials must regularly monitor the data and ensure timely waste clearance. She called for better supervision to maintain cleanliness along roadsides and in urban areas.

The meeting also reviewed the district's drinking water situation. With rainfall recorded at 51 per cent below normal, all eight taluks have been declared severely drought-affected. Currently, 48 villages are facing drinking water shortages, and another 285 villages may experience similar problems if there is no rainfall over the next two months. Officials were instructed to identify private borewells and seek owners' cooperation to ensure water supply. Eleven urban wards are already facing shortages, requiring advance planning to address further difficulties.

The secretary reviewed the progress of the Agriculture, Horticulture, Animal Husbandry, Rural Development and Panchayat Raj departments, along with urban local bodies. She provided guidance to officials on improving implementation and addressing local issues.

Before the meeting, Manjula visited Vasanthahalli village under Kotagal Gram Panchayat in Chintamani taluk and heard residents' concerns about drinking water. She later inspected the Science Park at the Government High School in K. Raguttahalli village. She also visited the Government First Grade College and Post-Graduate Centre, Ambedkar Bhavan, and the Government Women and Children's Hospital in Chintamani to review their conditions.

District Panchayat Chief Executive Officer Dr. Y. Naveen Bhat, Additional Deputy Commissioner Dr. N. Bhaskar, Assistant Commissioner D.H. Ashwin, Deputy Secretary Atiq Pasha, and other district and taluk-level officials attended the meeting.

Students learn disaster safety and emergency response

BAGEPALLI: My Bharat Chikkaballapura organized a disaster management awareness programme at the Government ITI College in Bagepalli on Tuesday to mark the International Day for Disaster Risk Reduction.

Students learned about natural and human-made disasters, their risks, safety precautions, emergency response and post-disaster relief and rehabilitation. The session highlighted ways to prevent loss of life and property during emergencies.

Organizers stressed that preparedness, timely action and public cooperation are essential for disaster management. Students were encouraged to spread awareness in society.

District Youth Officer A. Mahendra Reddy, Principal Manjunatha Gowda, Taluk Fire Officer Lakshman, fire department representative Balappa, faculty members and students attended.

Mandya prepares for Chief Minister's visit on October 31

CH NEWS, MANDYA

Chief Minister D.K. Shivakumar is scheduled to visit Mandya district on October 31 to inaugurate completed development projects and lay foundation stones for new works. Deputy Commissioner Dr. Kumar has directed officials to complete all preparations well in advance to ensure the programme runs smoothly.

Chairing a preparatory meeting at his office, Dr. Kumar instructed departments to submit verified lists of projects ready for inauguration or foundation-laying. The details must include accurate technical information and official signatures. He said draft lists would not be accepted. Project details, including costs and progress, must be finalized in coordination with the respective MLAs.

The programme will be held on the Mandya University campus. Officials have been directed to arrange the stage, seating, drinking water, food, sanitation and public access facilities. Committees have been formed, with responsibilities assigned to ensure proper coordination among departments.

Officials must also submit detailed information about government welfare schemes and beneficiaries. Records should clearly show the number of people who have already received benefits, assistance ready for distribution and the progress of ongoing schemes. Accurate statistics will be required for the Chief Minister's programme.

As around 40,000 people are expected to attend, arrangements for food and drinking water must be adequate. Departments have also been asked to establish exhibition stalls showcasing their schemes, achievements and public services.

District Superintendent of Police Dr. Shobharani V.J. said around 800 buses were planned to transport visitors. Designated parking areas, signboards and traffic management measures would be arranged. Barricades and security arrangements would also be made at the helipad where the Chief Minister's helicopter is expected to land. Officials will ensure cleanliness, public safety and law and order.

The meeting was attended by Project Director Chandrashekhar, Agriculture Department Joint Director Jayaswamy G.S., Food and Civil Supplies Joint Director Prateek Hegde, District Health and Family Welfare Officer Dr. Bettaswamy, Mandya University Vice-Chancellor Kalpashree and other district-level officials.

Chitradurga records 44,073 voters for graduates' poll

Polling stations have increased from 22 in 2022 to 55 this year, with around 350 election personnel undergoing training in Bengaluru for various polling duties

CH NEWS, CHITRADURGA

A total of 44,073 graduate voters in Chitradurga district are eligible to vote in the Karnataka South-East Graduates' Constituency election scheduled for October 23. Deputy Commissioner S. Ramya announced that 55 polling stations have been established to conduct the election smoothly.

Speaking at a press conference, she said the final electoral roll contains 25,551 men and 18,522 women.

The previous list had 41,358 voters, and 2,715 new voters were added without removing any names from the earlier list.

The number of polling stations has increased from 22 in the 2022 election to 55 this year. Around 350 election personnel have been appointed and are undergoing training in Bengaluru. The team includes presiding officers, assistant presiding officers, polling officers and micro-observers.

Ten candidates remain in contest

The nomination process ended on October 6, and ten candidates remain in the contest after scrutiny. They include Congress candidate Shashi Hulikunte Math, BJP candidate K.M. Suresh/Someshwara and Sarva Janata Party candidate G.C. Patil, along with seven independent candidates.

Voting will take place using ballot papers, with voters required to mark their preferences.

The district administration and the District SVEEP Committee have prepared a demonstration video to explain the voting process. Voters can check the electoral roll online or contact helpline 1950 for assistance.

Verification process completed

Deputy Commissioner Ramya later met political party representatives and said verification of all 2,372 voters who received notices during the special electoral roll revision had been completed. Final orders will be issued shortly. She also clarified that no eligible voter's name had been removed based on Form 7 applications.

Chitradurga has the highest number of graduate voters among the five districts covered by the constituency, which together have around 1.78 lakh voters. Officials said additional polling stations were established to manage the turnout.

Election officials and political party representatives attended the meeting, where the final electoral roll with photographs was released.

Manjunath seeks justice for SC reservation in Hunsur

CH NEWS, HUNSUR

Former MLA H.P. Manjunath has assured Scheduled Caste (SC) leaders that he will work towards resolving alleged injustice in the reservation allocation for Zilla Panchayat constituencies in Hunsur taluk.

Speaking at a press conference at the local Journalists' Association office, he said SC leaders from various political parties had submitted a written representation highlighting errors in the provisional reservation list. He assured them that legal steps would be taken to address the issue.

Objections to be filed before October 19

Manjunath said he had examined the draft list and identified points for a legal objection. He plans to submit the objection before the October 19 deadline. He has also informed District In-charge Minister Dr. Yathindra Siddaramaiah and Panchayat Raj Minister Eshwar Khandre about the matter. He intends to meet the Chief Electoral Officer to seek corrective action.

He said his experience as an MLA had taught him the importance of so-

Dalit leaders seek SC reserved seat in Hunsur

The absence of a Scheduled Caste (SC) reserved seat in the Hunsur taluk Zilla Panchayat election has sparked concern among Dalit community leaders.

Leaders submitted a memorandum to former MLA H.P. Manjunath, urging him to bring the issue to the government's attention. They noted that previous Zilla Panchayat elections had reserved at least one constituency for the SC community.

Manjunath expressed concern over the omission and acknowledged the community's support for him. He said he had contacted the concerned minister and senior officials by telephone and memorandum, seeking a reservation.

He assured the leaders that he would personally meet officials and make efforts to resolve the issue. Dalit community leaders were present during the meeting.

Manjunath expressed concern over unresolved issues in Hunsur taluk. He said farmers living near Nagarahole had lost cattle and other livestock in wildlife attacks. He claimed to have provided financial assistance to 114 farmers who lost 44 cows, 29 sheep and 41 goats.

He also criticised the lack of progress on irrigation problems and education-related concerns. He

Tara hospital organises free health camp for senior citizens

CH NEWS, KOPPAL

Tara Clinic/Hospital organised a free health check-up and treatment camp at Surabhi Old Age Home in Koppal to commemorate the late Dr. L.B. Kalal and his wife. The camp aimed to provide healthcare services and essential support to underprivileged senior citizens.

Dr. Sushil Kumar Kalal, head of the hospital, led the programme, continuing his father's ideals of social service and compassionate medical care. He said his father believed that serving patients was like serving the Divine and that providing quality healthcare to everyone was the best tribute to his memory.

Free Medical Services Provided

Senior citizens and women at the home received health screenings, medical consultations and essential medicines free of cost. Blood tests, urine tests and ECG examinations were also conducted to assess their health conditions.

Doctors provided information about major diseases and explained the importance of preventive healthcare. The organisers said the camp helped residents access medical services and treatment without financial burden. As part of the Dasara celebrations, new clothes, uniforms, essential supplies and medicines were distributed to needy residents.

BJP Mahila Morcha protest ends with police detentions

CH NEWS, SHIVAMOGGA

The Shivamogga district BJP Mahila Morcha staged a protest at Sheenappa Shetty Circle, condemning allegations of sexual harassment against Jawaharlal Nehru University professor and Congress MP Dr. Angomcha Bimol Akojiam. Police detained protesters when they attempted to lay siege to the Congress office.

The protesters demanded an impartial investigation into the allegations involving 11 female students. They said women's safety, dignity and security must be protected, especially within educational institutions.

The Mahila Morcha called for a comprehensive inquiry under the law and university regulations. It also demanded adequate protection for the students and measures to prevent pressure, intimidation or retaliation against them.

The protesters urged authorities to strengthen women's safety laws, improve awareness programmes and establish effective grievance redressal systems in educational institutions. They insisted that the allegations be investigated transparently and that appropriate action be taken based on the findings.

The organisation also criticised the police response, comparing it with an incident involving Union Minister V. Somanna's visit to Shivamogga the previous day. According to the protesters, Congress youth activists had displayed black flags, blocked the minister's vehicle and allegedly insulted him during the visit.

The BJP Mahila Morcha questioned the difference in police arrangements during the two incidents. It alleged that heavy police deployment during its protest appeared to favour the Congress party and condemned the action.

The protesters submitted a memorandum to the President of India through the Deputy Commissioner, seeking action against the Congress MP over the allegations.

District Mahila Morcha president Madhura Shivanand, city president Rashmi Srinivas, secretary Surekha Muralidhar and several other party leaders participated in the protest. BJP district president N.K. Jagadish, city president Mohan Reddy and other local leaders were also present.

The protesters reiterated their demand for a fair investigation, protection for the students and accountability in handling the allegations.

Woman murdered while walking with daughter in Chintamani

CH NEWS, CHINTAMANI

A 35-year-old woman was murdered in a brutal attack while walking with her daughter on Filter Bed Road in Chintamani city, Chikkaballapura district, on Monday night.

The victim, identified as Sumitramma, was a resident of the area near Filter Bed Circle. The incident occurred around 8 pm when she was returning from a vegetable shop with her daughter, Vishnu Priya.

According to reports, an unidentified assailant followed the mother and daughter on a two-wheeler. The attacker intercepted them on a less-crowded stretch of the road and assaulted Sumitramma with a lethal weapon before fleeing the scene.

Neighbours rushed to help

after hearing the daughter's screams. Sumitramma was taken to a hospital in critical condition but succumbed to her injuries.

Reports stated that Sumitramma had previously married Venkatarreddy, but the couple separated following frequent disputes. She reportedly married Ramesh, a resident of Kapalli village, a year ago.

The motive behind the murder remains unknown, and police are investigating the circumstances surrounding the incident.

Deputy Superintendent of Police Raghu visited the crime scene and the hospital to inspect the situation. A case has been registered at Chintamani City Police Station, and further investigation is underway to identify the accused and establish the reason for the attack.

DC warns of action against hospitals denying snakebite first aid

CH NEWS, MANGALURU

Deputy Commissioner H.V. Darshan has warned of strict action against hospitals that turn away snakebite victims without providing essential first aid and simply refer them to other medical facilities.

Chairing a meeting on snakebite prevention and reviewing fatalities in the district, Darshan stressed that immediate treatment is crucial in such emergencies. He noted that delays in receiving adequate medical care had contributed to deaths in cases where hospitals referred patients elsewhere without administering even basic treatment.

The Deputy Commissioner directed the District Health and Family Welfare Department to issue notices to hospitals found guilty of such lapses.

He said all Primary Health Centres (PHCs) in the district were equipped with medicines and facilities to provide initial treatment for snakebites. He advised people to take victims to the nearest PHC without delay.

Darshan also instructed the health department to intensify public awareness campaigns and ensure that information on snakebite prevention and emergency response was shared during Gram Sabha meetings.

District Health and Family Welfare Officer Dr H.R. Thimmaiah said the State government had recently declared snakebite a notifiable disease.

Snakebite cases in the district

2024	625
2025	752
2026 (to Sept)	527

Deaths: four in 2024, five in 2025, four in 2026 up to September

Consequently, all hospitals and clinics are required to report every snakebite case to the health department.

District Surveillance Officer Dr Naveen Chandra Kulal presented figures showing an increase in reported cases. The district recorded 365 snakebite cases in 2023, followed by 625 cases and four deaths in 2024, and 752 cases and five deaths in 2025.

Up to September 2026, the district had reported 527 cases and four deaths.

Wenlock District Hospital Superintendent Dr Shivaprakash, representatives of private hospitals and officials from allied departments attended the meeting.

The Deputy Commissioner emphasised that timely first aid and prompt access to treatment must remain priorities in preventing avoidable snakebite deaths.

CH NEWS, HASSAN

Lawyer and BJP leader Devarajegowda has demanded a judicial inquiry into alleged financial irregularities worth crores of rupees during last year's Hasanamba festival in Hassan.

Speaking at a press conference, he presented documents obtained under the Right to Information (RTI) Act and alleged that public money was misused. His demand comes shortly after the district in-charge minister instructed officials to avoid excessive spending during this year's festival.

According to the documents cited by Devarajegowda, more than ₹15 crore was spent on the 14-day festival, with alleged irregularities exceeding ₹9 crore.

BJP leader demands probe into Hasanamba festival spending

More than ₹15 crore was spent on the 14-day festival, with alleged irregularities exceeding ₹9 crore

He claimed that a bill of ₹25 lakh was raised for cultural programmes on the opening day, although no such activities took place. He also questioned expenses of ₹99.75 lakh for distributing laddu prasada and ₹85 lakh for done prasada.

Other expenses reportedly included ₹98 lakh for queue barricades, German tents, mats and fans; ₹50 lakh for shamianas, LED arrangements and sound systems; and ₹80 lakh for city lighting.

Devarajegowda further alleged that ₹60 lakh each was spent on temporary toilets and a war room. He claimed that funds were spent beyond actual requirements and alleged that kickbacks were received after contractor bills were cleared.

He also alleged that new cars, gold jewellery and expensive furniture worth lakhs of rupees were purchased. The allegations were directed at the Hassan Deputy Commissioner and former and current Assistant Commissioners.

Devarajegowda demanded a comprehensive investigation, including an examination of phone call records following payments to last year's contractor. The allegations have renewed questions about festival spending, and a judicial inquiry could help establish the facts and accountability.

FIR registered against 20 activists over Somanna car gherao

CH NEWS, SHIVAMOGGA

Police have registered a suo motu FIR against 20 Youth Congress and NSUI activists for allegedly surrounding Union Minister V. Somanna's car and displaying black flags on B.H. Road in Shivamogga on Monday. According to police, the incident occurred when Somanna was travelling from the city's private bus stand towards Parekh Vinayaka Mall to attend a private event. The activists allegedly surrounded the moving vehicle, displayed black flags along with Congress and NSUI flags, and raised slogans against the BJP-led Central Government. They also reportedly attempted to block the minister's vehicle. Police personnel intervened immediately and removed the protesters from around the car, clearing the way for the minister to continue his journey.

Anna Seve App launches statewide for easy ration e-KYC

Food Minister Rizwan Arshad announced in Bengaluru an initiative enabling PDS and Anna Bhagya beneficiaries to complete processes without visiting shops or offices

CH NEWS, BENGALURU

Karnataka's Department of Food, Civil Supplies and Consumer Affairs will make the Anna Seve mobile app available across the state from October 14, allowing ration card beneficiaries to complete their electronic Know Your Customer (e-KYC) verification from home. Food Minister Rizwan Arshad announced the initiative in Bengaluru, stating that the app would help beneficiaries of Public Distribution System (PDS) schemes, including Anna Bhagya, complete the process without visiting fair price shops or government offices. Developed jointly by the National Informatics Centre (NIC) and the Department of e-Governance, the app uses facial authentication technology provided by the Unique Identification Authority of India (UIDAI). Beneficiaries can download it free from the Google Play Store.

e-KYC Deadline Set For October 20

The app was initially tested in eight districts, including Bengaluru, Udipi, Uttara Kanna-da and Ballari. During the pilot phase from October 1 to 12, around 1,60,267 beneficiaries completed their e-KYC using the app.

According to the department, Karnataka has approximately 2.67 crore PDS beneficiaries, of whom more than 2.06 crore have already completed the verification process.

However, the department has clarified that beneficiaries who completed their e-KYC a year ago must also repeat the process. The final deadline for completing the verification is October 20.

Relief For Elderly Beneficiaries

The new facility is expected to make verification easier for elderly people and others who find it difficult to travel to ration shops or stand in long queues.

Through facial authentication, eligible beneficiaries can complete the required verification using their mobile phones. The initiative aims to simplify the process and improve access to essential public distribution services. The department has urged ration card holders to complete their e-KYC before the deadline to avoid delays in the verification process.

Koppal farmers advised to choose crops based on soil moisture

CH NEWS, KOPPAL

The Agriculture Department has advised farmers in Koppal district to select suitable crops and varieties based on soil moisture for the 2026-27 Hingaru (rabi) season to improve yields and reduce cultivation costs. The Joint Director of Agriculture urged farmers to consider soil type, available moisture, rainfall and irrigation facilities before sowing. Farmers were advised to avoid large-scale sowing during the current rainfall deficit and ensure sufficient moisture for crop growth. Crop Selection Based On Soil Conditions Farmers with deep black soil can grow Bengal gram, sorghum and safflower, which are suitable for retaining residual moisture. In medium-depth black soil, sowing decisions should depend on available moisture. Short-duration varieties of Bengal gram and sorghum are recommended for red soil and areas with low moisture retention. In fields lacking sufficient moisture, sowing should be delayed until adequate rainfall occurs.

Bengaluru lawyers demand CEC Gyanesh Kumar's resignation

CH NEWS, BENGALURU

Lawyers staged a protest outside Gate 1 of the Karnataka High Court in Bengaluru on Tuesday, opposing the arrests of lawyers and students during a demonstration in Delhi demanding the resignation of Chief Election Commissioner Gyanesh Kumar.

The protesters raised concerns over allegations of voters' names being deleted from electoral rolls and police action against demonstrators. They called for the protection of voting rights and the independence of constitutional institutions.

Lawyers Raise Concerns Over Electoral Process

Lawyer S. Balan accused the Chief Election Commissioner of misusing his constitutional position and alleged that citizens were being deprived of their voting rights. He questioned the statements made to the Supreme Court regarding Form 6 and claimed that Form 7 was being used to target minority communities. He demanded legal action against Kumar and called for his removal.

Balan also criticised Prime Minister Narendra Modi and Union Home Minister Amit Shah over alleged political interference in constitutional institutions.

Protesters Condemn Police Action

Lawyer and legal activist Narasimhamurthy condemned the alleged police action against lawyers, students and journalists. He said attacks on legal and media professionals were unacceptable and referred to previous arrests of activists, including G.N. Saibaba and Father Stan Swamy, as well as cases linked to Bhima Koregaon.

Appeal For Supreme Court Intervention

M. Muniyappa, president of the Scheduled Castes and Scheduled Tribes Lawyers' Association, expressed concern over alleged deletions from electoral rolls and urged the Supreme Court to investigate the matter.

He called on lawyers' asso-

Protection of voting rights and the independence of constitutional institutions

ciations and civil society organisations to join a wider movement to protect democratic rights. He also demanded a review of the 2023 law governing appointments to the Election Commission to safeguard its independence.

Muniyappa criticised the arrests of protesters in Delhi and the removal of students demonstrating at Freedom Park in Bengaluru. He announced plans to lead a delegation to submit a memorandum to the Governor, seeking intervention to protect voting rights and ensure the integrity of the electoral process.

The allegations raised during the protest remain subject to verification.

Spend all welfare funds within timelines: DC

CH NEWS, KARWAR

Deputy Commissioner K. Lakshmi Priya directed all department officers to utilize welfare funds released under Scheduled Caste and Scheduled Tribe schemes within their stipulated deadlines.

Chairing a progress review and District-Level Vigilance and Monitoring Committee meeting at her office hall on Tuesday, she stated that welfare delivery must brook no delay. She stressed that funds earmarked for community facilities must directly reach eligible beneficiaries without bureaucratic roadblocks.

Turning to safety and legal protection, Priya instructed officials to provide immediate financial and medical assistance to victims whenever cases of atrocities against SC and ST individuals are reported. Authorities must actively inform these victims about available rehabilitation support. Additionally, she directed officers to immediately inspect sites and clear any encroachments detected on land reserved for community welfare.

Senior officers attended the session, including Zilla Panchayat Deputy Secretary M.S. Allabaksh, Urban Development Cell Project Director Zaheer Abbas, and Social Welfare Department Deputy Director Umesh Y.K. The administration reaffirmed its collective commitment to safeguarding rights, securing reserved lands, and ensuring community members gain total access to every rupee allocated for their ongoing socio-economic progress.

Koppal plans simple Valmiki Jayanti celebration

CH NEWS, KOPPAL

Sri Maharshi Valmiki Jayanti will be celebrated in a simple and symbolic manner across Koppal district on October 26. This quiet observance comes due to the enforcement of the election model code of conduct for the North-East Teachers' Constituency.

Deputy Commissioner Dr. Suresh B. Itnal announced this plan during an official preparatory meeting on Tuesday. The Social Welfare Department organised the gathering at the Deputy Commissioner's office hall.

Dr. Itnal explained that strict election rules prevent large public gatherings right now. However, he assured the public that a grand celebration will be held once the election code of conduct ends. The administration will choose the final date after consulting Valmiki community members. Dr. Itnal urged local leaders to discuss the matter together, select a suitable date, and inform district officials soon.

For the official event on October 26, leaders will offer floral tributes and prayers before Sri Maharshi Valmiki's portrait at 10 am inside the Deputy Commissioner's office hall. The Deputy Commissioner instructed all regional government offices and Gram Panchayats to follow this exact routine by holding quiet prayers on their premises.

Key officials attended the planning session, including Zilla Panchayat Chief Executive Officer Varnit Negi, Project Director Manjunath Gundur, and Deputy Director Ajjappa Sogalada. Prominent community leaders, such as Dr. K.N. Patil and Suresh Donni, also participated actively. Everyone agreed to honour the revered sage with deep devotion, while fully respecting the legal election boundaries.

NEPAL'S HIMALAYAN DISASTER: A STARK WARNING INDIA CANNOT AFFORD TO IGNORE

LALIT GARGG

The devastating floods and landslides that struck Nepal have once again exposed a harsh truth: when human intervention disrupts nature and the fragile Himalayan ecology is ignored, the consequences can be catastrophic. In the Bhote Koshi river system, the collapse of a massive section of glacier, accompanied by an enormous flow of ice, rocks and debris, temporarily obstructed the river. The sudden release of the accumulated water and debris subsequently triggered a devastating flood, causing widespread destruction in Nepal and Tibet's adjoining areas of China.

According to reports available up to August 29, 579 deaths have been confirmed in Nepal and five in Tibet, while nearly 2,482 people are reported missing. Thousands have been rescued, but relief and rescue operations remain extremely challenging because of difficult terrain and the continuing threat of further disasters. This is not merely a natural calamity affecting Nepal; it is a frightening warning for the entire Himalayan region.

Preliminary scientific assessments suggest that a large portion of the glacier broke away and plunged downhill, generating a massive flow of ice, rock, soil and debris. This obstructed the river, and the pressure of the accumulated water and debris eventually produced a sudden and destructive flood. Experts caution that describing the event simply as a "flood" would be misleading. It represents a multi-hazard disaster, in which glacial collapse, landslides, debris flows and river flooding became interconnected and intensified one another.

The most significant message emerging from this tragedy concerns climate change. The Himalayas are not merely a snow-covered mountain range; they are the foundation of Asia's water security. As temperatures rise, glaciers are retreating rapidly and new glacial lakes are forming. According to the International Centre for Integrated Mountain Development (ICIMOD), the Hindu Kush Himalaya region has around 25,000 glacial lakes, and rising temperatures are increasing the risk of glacial lake outburst floods (GLOFs). Nepal has recorded more than 90 GLOF events since the 1920s.

It would, however, be scientifically incorrect to attribute the Nepal disaster solely to global warming. Seismic activity, geological instability, extreme rainfall, avalanches and weakened mountain slopes can all play significant roles. Climate change should instead be understood as a risk multiplier, a factor that is creating a more vulnerable background in which such hazards can become more frequent, intense or destructive. Scientists have rightly cautioned against declaring any single disaster a direct consequence of climate change without examining long-term climatic and geological changes together.

The Nepal disaster carries an equally profound warning for India, and India must learn from it. The Kedarnath tragedy, the 2021 Rishi Ganga disaster, and the recurring floods, landslides and cloudbursts across the Himalayan states have already demonstrated that the mountains' capacity to absorb human intervention is not unlimited.

Roads, tunnels, hydropower projects, hotels, settlements and other infrastructure are expanding rapidly in the Himalayas in the name of development. But a fundamental question must be asked: Are we adequately assessing the ecological and geological carrying capacity of these fragile mountains before undertaking such projects? Development is essential, but development that comes at the cost of hollowing out the mountains can ultimately become a threat to both human life and development itself.

The greatest need today is to move beyond "relief after disaster" to "preparedness before disaster." Advanced satellite surveillance, drones, weather radar, river sensors, continuous monitoring of glaciers and glacial lakes, and artificial-intelligence-based forecasting systems must be developed and deployed extensively across the Himalayan region.

Early-warning systems must not remain confined to capitals or administrative headquarters. Warnings must reach the remotest mountain village through mobile alerts, sirens, radio networks and trained local volunteer groups. The possibility of another glacial lake outburst even after the present disaster has demonstrated a crucial reality: one disaster can create the conditions for another.

Rivers do not recognize political boundaries. For transboundary river systems such as the Bhote Koshi, real-time exchange of information among Nepal, China, India and other Himalayan countries on river flows, rainfall, landslides, glacial lakes and avalanches is essential. A critical warning available to one country can save thousands of lives in another. The Himalayan region therefore needs a shared regional disaster early-warning network, supported by real-time data sharing and coordinated emergency response mechanisms.

India should seriously consider developing a dedicated Mountain Safety Policy for its Himalayan states. Before constructing roads or tunnels in fragile mountain areas, scientific assessments of geological risks, natural drainage channels, landslide susceptibility and local ecology should be mandatory. Uncontrolled deforestation, unplanned construction along riverbanks, unnecessary cutting of mountain slopes and excessive pressure from tourism must be strictly regulated. Local communities should become the first line of disaster preparedness, because they are usually the first to suffer when calamity strikes and often the first capable of providing immediate assistance.

The world can learn valuable lessons from Japan, Switzerland and other mountainous countries in disaster management, building safety, early-warning systems and community-based preparedness. But the Himalayas cannot continue to be viewed merely as a destination for tourism and economic expansion. They must be recognized as a living, fragile and highly sensitive

This can become a powerful warning and a catalyst for a new environmental consciousness aimed at protecting the mountains, safeguarding human lives and securing the future of generations yet to come.

ecological system. The greater humanity's ambition to control nature, the more devastating nature's resistance can become.

The tragedy in Nepal, therefore, is not merely an occasion for mourning; it is a moment for deep introspection and decisive action. We must understand that the mountains are not meant to be conquered; we must learn to live in harmony with them. The pace of development must be aligned with nature's capacity. The impacts of climate change must be mitigated. Scientific warnings must be taken seriously. Ecological carrying capacity must guide infrastructure planning, and cross-border cooperation must be strengthened.

If India and the world learn these lessons in time, the water that swept through Nepal will not remain merely a story of destruction.

GEN Z AND THE CHANGING FACE OF INDIAN POLITICS

Indian politics is witnessing a generational shift, with Generation Z increasingly using social media, public debates and protests to question those in power. For these young citizens, politics is no longer confined to elections, party offices and campaign speeches. It is about jobs, education, rising prices, corruption and whether elected representatives deliver on their promises.

Unlike traditional political engagement, much of Gen Z's participation begins online. A video, report or public statement can trigger nationwide debate within hours. Young people are demanding evidence, transparency and accountability rather than accepting political claims at face value. Social media has given them platforms to challenge official narratives and bring local concerns to wider public attention.

Yet, the digital revolution comes with challenges. Misinformation, manipulated videos and partisan propaganda can distort public opinion. Information shared rapidly is not necessarily accurate, and popularity does not guarantee credibility. The ability to distinguish verified facts from misleading content is therefore essential. Questioning authority must go hand in hand with responsible sharing of information and a willingness to consider evidence that challenges personal beliefs.

Gen Z is not politically uniform. Its members hold diverse ideological views and come from different social, economic and regional backgrounds. Some actively support political parties, while others challenge the political establishment itself. Their concerns and priorities cannot be reduced to a single ideology or electoral preference. What matters is whether democratic institutions remain open to scrutiny, regardless of which party holds power.

Allegations of corruption must be investigated fairly, wrongdoing established through due process and the rights of those accused protected. Political influence should never be used to silence legitimate questions. Equally, accusations should not automatically be treated as proof of guilt. A healthy democracy depends on independent institutions, transparent procedures and equal application of the law.

Social media outrage, however, cannot substitute for sustained civic participation. Voting, understanding public policy, attending community meetings and monitoring representatives are equally important. Democracy requires more than criticism; it demands informed participation, respect for differing opinions and commitment to constitutional values. Young citizens can make their voices count by engaging with local governance, examining candidates' records and following up on promises after elections.

Political leaders must recognise that concerns over employment, affordable education, equal opportunities and transparent governance cannot be dismissed as temporary youth discontent. These issues require credible policies, clear explanations and measurable results. Young people also need opportunities to participate meaningfully in discussions that shape their future, rather than being approached only during election campaigns.

Gen Z's political influence will ultimately depend not on online followers or viral posts, but on its ability to seek the truth, ask informed questions and participate consistently in public life.

India's future depends partly on whether its young citizens remain spectators or become active participants in shaping governance. Their questions deserve clear answers, while their democratic responsibilities demand equal seriousness. A healthy democracy must welcome questioning voices, not fear them.

WOMEN AND OPPORTUNITY: THE CHANGING GENDER LANDSCAPE OF IITS AND IIMS

For decades, the campuses of India's premier institutions were often seen as predominantly male spaces. The Indian Institutes of Technology (IITs) became symbols of engineering excellence, while the Indian Institutes of Management (IIMs) emerged as gateways to management, leadership and corporate careers. Women were present in both systems, but their representation was comparatively limited, particularly in some technical and quantitative disciplines.

That picture is gradually changing.

More women are now entering prestigious higher-education institutions, competing successfully in demanding entrance examinations and moving into professional careers that were once heavily dominated by men. The changing gender landscape of IITs and IIMs is not simply a story about numbers. It reflects wider changes in aspirations, educational access, family attitudes, career choices and the participation of women in India's professional economy.

From the Classroom to the Boardroom

The journey of a woman entering an IIT or IIM does not end with admission. For many students, these institutions provide access to laboratories, research opportunities, internships, industry networks, entrepreneurship programmes and global exposure. At IITs, women are increasingly visible across engineering, science, technology and interdisciplinary programmes. At IIMs, women have expanded their presence in management education and are preparing for careers in consulting, finance, technology, marketing, entrepreneurship, public policy and other sectors.

This creates an important chain:

Education → Skills → Opportunity → Employment → Leadership.

When more women participate at every stage of this chain, the effect can extend beyond individual careers.

Why Is the Change Happening?

Several factors are contributing to the changing landscape. First, awareness about professional education has increased. Families in towns and villages are increasingly familiar with competitive examinations, scholarships, coaching resources, online learning and career opportunities. Second, digital education has reduced some traditional barriers. A student does not necessarily need to live in a major metropolitan city to access lectures, study material, test series, mentoring and information about competitive examinations. Third, changing social expectations have encouraged more girls to consider careers in engineering, management, science, technology and research. Fourth, the visibility of successful women matters. When young students see women working as engineers, scientists, entrepreneurs, professors, administrators, managers and corporate leaders, professional success becomes more imaginable.

IITs: Changing the Engineering Classroom

Engineering education has historically had a gender imbalance, particularly in several branches of engineering. Increasing female participation therefore represents an important transformation. Women entering IITs are not simply increasing the number of female students. They are participating in areas that shape the future including artificial intelligence, computer science, biotechnology, electronics, renewable energy, mathematics, data science and other emerging fields.

The importance of this participation goes beyond employment. The technologies designed today influence healthcare, transportation, education, agriculture, finance and communication. Greater diversity among students and professionals can bring a wider range of experiences and perspectives into these fields. However, representation should not be measured only by admission figures. The more meaningful question is whether women receive equal opportunities to participate in research, leadership, internships, entrepreneurship and high-growth professional sectors.

IIMs: Women and the Changing Management Classroom

Management education has also witnessed significant changes in female participation. Business schools are training future managers, entrepreneurs, consultants, policymakers and corporate leaders. As more women enter management programmes, the classroom becomes more representative of the society and workforce that these institutions serve.

Women graduates are increasingly entering sectors that were once perceived as predominantly male. They are building careers in finance, consulting, technology, consumer businesses, healthcare, education, startups and public administration. The presence of women in management education can also influence younger generations. A girl who sees women leading companies or managing major projects may begin to regard leadership not as an exception but as a realistic career possibility.

Placement Packages Are Only One Part of the Story

Higher salary packages and strong placement opportunities naturally attract students toward premier institutions. But the value of IITs and IIMs should not be reduced to the highest salary package announced during a placement season. A quality education provides knowledge, analytical ability, communication skills, professional networks and the confidence to solve complex problems. Salary is an important outcome for many students, but it should be considered alongside job role, learning opportunities, career progression, workplace culture, location, work-life balance and long-term professional development. For women in particular, the transition from campus to workplace also raises broader questions about workplace equality, safety, flexibility, parental responsibilities and opportunities for advancement.

The Next Challenge: From Representation to Retention

Getting more women into prestigious institutions is only the beginning. The larger challenge is ensuring that women remain and progress through the professional pipeline. A student may successfully enter an IIT or IIM, obtain a degree and secure a good job. But professional equality requires opportunities to reach senior positions as well. This means institutions and employers need to pay attention to mentoring, fair evaluation, workplace flexibility, parental support, professional development and transparent career progression. The goal should not simply be more women entering the pipeline. It should be more women successfully moving through the pipeline.

The Importance of Role Models

Every generation needs role models. When girls meet women engineers, scientists, managers, entrepreneurs, professors and administrators, they receive a powerful message: professional ambition is compatible with being a woman. Schools therefore have an important role to play. Career counselling should begin before students reach the stage of choosing a college. Girls should be encouraged to explore mathematics, science, technology, business and other fields according to their interests and abilities. At the same time, boys should also be educated about gender equality. A balanced professional world is not a women's issue alone; it is a social issue.

Opportunity Must Reach Beyond Metropolitan India

One of the most important questions is whether the changing gender landscape is reaching students from rural areas and smaller towns. Talent exists everywhere, but opportunities are not distributed equally. A girl from a small town may have the ability to enter a premier institution but may lack access to high-quality preparation, mentoring or reliable career information. Scholarships, digital learning, affordable coaching, improved school education and career guidance can help narrow this gap. The future of Indian education should therefore focus not only on increasing female participation but also on making that participation socially and geographically diverse.

A Larger Economic and Social Impact

When women receive high-quality education and meaningful employment, the benefits can extend to families and communities. Educated women can contribute to household income, support children's education, participate in decision-making and become role models for younger generations. Their professional experiences can also influence social attitudes toward women's careers. At the national level, greater participation of women in skilled professions can contribute to India's human-capital development. But participation must be accompanied by genuine opportunity. A degree alone does not guarantee equality. Equal access to professional growth is equally important.

Beyond Numbers

The changing gender landscape of IITs and IIMs should ultimately be understood as part of a broader transformation in Indian society. The question is no longer simply whether women can enter the country's most competitive institutions. Women have already demonstrated their ability to compete, learn and succeed in demanding academic environments. The more important questions are: What opportunities will they receive after graduation? How many will move into leadership? Will workplaces provide conditions that allow them to build long-term careers? And will girls from every social and geographical background have a fair chance to participate?

The answers will shape the next phase of India's educational and professional development. IITs and IIMs are more than campuses. They are institutions that influence the aspirations of millions of young Indians. As more women enter their classrooms, laboratories, hostels, placement programmes and leadership networks, they are helping redefine what India's professional future can look like.

Rising Online Scam Menace

Online frauds are rising daily. People get fake calls claiming to be banks, courier services or police. Many, especially senior citizens, lose life savings. Cyber police must run awareness drives in Kannada and English. Banks should simplify reporting. Digital India must be safe, not scary, for common citizens to trust.

Protect Street Dogs Humanely

The stray dog issue in Bengaluru needs a humane solution, not cruelty. Daily attacks on children are reported, but killing dogs is not the answer. BBMP must scale up ABC (Animal Birth Control) and vaccination drives sincerely. Feeding zones and public awareness will ensure safety for both humans and animals.

EXCESS SCREEN TIME IS STEALING OUR LIVES SLOWLY

In the last decade, screens have moved from being tools to becoming our world. From the moment we wake up to the notification buzz to the last scroll before sleep, our eyes are glued to phones, laptops, tablets and televisions. What began as convenience has now become compulsion, and the cost is being paid by our health, relationships, and minds.

The most visible damage is physical. Ophthalmologists in Bengaluru report a sharp rise in digital eye strain, dry eyes, and early myopia in children as young as eight. Hours of staring at blue light without blinking enough is damaging vision. Then comes the posture crisis. The bent neck looking at a phone, now called ‘text neck’, and the hunched back from laptops are leading to chronic spine problems in teenagers, a problem once seen only in the elderly. Sleep is another casualty. The blue light from screens suppresses melatonin, the sleep hormone. We scroll till 1 am and then complain of fatigue, irritability, and lack of focus the next day. It is a vicious cycle we have created ourselves.

“It is time we looked up from our screens and looked at life around us, before we forget how to live without them.”

But the deeper damage is mental. Excess screen time has rewired our attention span. We cannot read a full article or watch a full movie without checking our phone, or sit idle for five minutes. We need constant stimulation. Studies link excessive social media use to anxiety, depression, and low self-esteem, especially among adolescents. We compare our real lives with the filtered highlight reels of others and feel inadequate. A child who should be playing in the park is now chasing likes online. This is stardom online, loneliness offline.

Children are the worst affected. During the pandemic, screens became classrooms, and that habit has stayed. Today, a typical urban child spends 6 to 8 hours on screens, far above the recommended two hours. This is replacing outdoor play, leading to obesity, and delaying language and social skills. Parents often give a phone to calm a crying toddler, not realising they are handing over a digital pacifier that will later become an addiction.

Family and social bonds are also fraying. Four people sit in a living room, each on a different screen, in different worlds. Conversations have become shorter, eye contact rarer. We have 1,000 friends online but no one to talk to when we are truly low. Empathy is declining because we are more comfortable with emojis than emotions.

What is the solution? Not rejecting technology, but regulating it. We need digital discipline. Schools must enforce no-phone classrooms and promote sports and arts. Offices should respect log-off hours. Parents must model behaviour; a child will not reduce screen time if parents are always on their phones. Simple rules like no screens during meals, no phones in bedrooms, and one hour of outdoor play daily can make a huge difference.

The Karnataka government’s recent discussions on regulating mobile phone use in schools are a welcome step. But regulation alone will not work. Awareness is key.

Screens are here to stay. They have given us knowledge, connectivity, and opportunity. But when we use them excessively, we lose what makes us human: health, attention, sleep, and real connection.

DARK CHOCOLATE IS A DELICIOUS, HEALTHY SUPERFOOD

For years, chocolate was branded as a guilty pleasure, something to be eaten secretly and regretted later. Parents hid it from children, doctors warned against it, and health-conscious people avoided it. But not all chocolates are equal. Dark chocolate, with 70% or more cocoa, is breaking that myth. Science now says a small piece of dark chocolate every day can actually be good for you.

The magic lies in cocoa. Cocoa beans are packed with flavonoids, powerful antioxidants that fight free radicals in our body. Unlike milk chocolate, which is loaded with sugar and milk, dark chocolate keeps the goodness of cocoa intact. Think of it as a fruit that happens to taste like dessert.

Let’s talk about the heart. This is the most researched benefit. Flavonoids in dark chocolate improve blood flow, lower blood pressure, and reduce the risk of blood clots. A study published in the British Medical Journal found that people who ate dark chocolate regularly had a 37% lower risk of heart disease. In a country like India where heart disease is rising even among young people, a small habit of eating 20–30 grams of dark chocolate could be a sweet preventive step. It also helps raise good cholesterol (HDL) and protects bad cholesterol (LDL) from oxidation.

It is food for the brain.

Dark chocolate increases blood flow to the brain, improving memory, focus, and reaction time. Students in Bengaluru preparing for exams often report feeling more alert after a piece of dark chocolate than after a second cup of coffee, but without the jitters. The theobromine in cocoa is a mild stimulant that lifts mood. It also triggers the release of endorphins and serotonin, the happy hormones. That is why we crave chocolate when we are sad. It is not weakness; it is chemistry. For people struggling with stress and anxiety in busy city life, a small square can calm the mind.

It is surprisingly good for skin and immunity. The antioxidants protect skin from sun damage and improve hydration. The minerals in dark chocolate — iron, magnesium, copper and zinc — strengthen immunity. One bar of 70% dark chocolate contains more than half the daily requirement of iron, crucial for many Indian women who suffer from anemia.

But here comes the important disclaimer: benefits come only with moderation and quality. We are not talking about the sugary, palm-oil filled chocolate bars near the checkout counter. Real dark chocolate should have at least 70% cocoa, less sugar, and cocoa butter, not vegetable fat. And quantity matters. Just one or two small squares (about 20 grams) is enough. Eating a full 100-gram bar daily will add calories and reverse the benefits.

There is also a sustainability angle. As demand for dark chocolate grows, we should support cocoa farmers who practice ethical farming. In Karnataka, especially in Dakshina Kannada and Kodagu, cocoa is being grown as an intercrop with areca nut. Promoting Indian-origin dark chocolate can support our own farmers and reduce imports.

In the end, dark chocolate teaches us an important lesson: healthy living is not about punishment and bland food. It is about making smarter choices. We don’t need to give up pleasure to be healthy. We just need to choose the darker, richer, truer version of it.

So the next time you want to reward yourself, skip the milk chocolate and pick a bar of 70% dark. Let it melt slowly. It is not junk food.

“Dark chocolate is a small, daily luxury that is good for your heart, brain and soul.”

ONLINE GAMING ADDICTION IS RUINING YOUNG LIVES

For many children and teenagers today, the day begins and ends with a game. Not on a playground, but on a mobile screen. PUBG, Free Fire, Candy Crush, betting apps disguised as games — names that have become household addictions. What was once a harmless pastime has become a serious public health and social crisis called online gaming addiction.

The scale is alarming. India is now one of the largest online gaming markets in the world with over 500 million gamers. According to a recent survey, 10 to 15 percent of young gamers show signs of addiction: irritability when not playing, lying about gaming hours, skipping meals, and losing interest in studies and friendships. In Bengaluru, police and hospitals have reported cases of students losing lakhs in in-game purchases, teenagers becoming aggressive when parents take away phones, and even tragic cases of suicide after losing in online betting games.

Why is it so addictive? Modern games are not designed just for fun, they are designed to keep you hooked. Developers use psychology: daily rewards, level-ups, loot boxes, flashing colours, and social pressure from teammates saying “one more game”. For a 14-year-old, this virtual world gives instant achievement that real life does not. A win in a game feels bigger than a good mark in school. Slowly, the brain starts craving that dopamine hit, just like with drugs or alcohol.

The consequences are deep. Academically, students are failing. Teachers across Karnataka report children sleeping in class because they played games till 3 am. Physically, there is obesity from no movement, severe eye strain, headaches, and carpal tunnel pain in fingers. Mentally, gaming addicts suffer anxiety, depression, and loneliness. They lose empathy because they spend more time killing virtual enemies than talking to real people. Family life is breaking. Parents say their children lock themselves in rooms, shout if disturbed, and have no interest in family functions.

The financial trap is the newest danger. Many games are free to download but push in-app purchases. Children steal parents’ UPI passwords to buy skins, weapons, and coins. Worse are online money games and fantasy apps that promise quick money. Youngsters borrow money, lose it, and fall into debt and shame. Several states have banned online betting, but enforcement is weak and new apps appear daily.

So what should we do? First, acknowledge that this is not just “kids being kids”; it is an addiction recognized by the World Health Organization as Gaming Disorder. Parents need to set boundaries early: no phones before age 14, no gaming after 10 pm, and keeping gaming consoles in common areas, not bedrooms. Schools must include digital wellness in curriculum, counsel students, and promote sports and clubs where real achievements happen.

The government also has a role. Karnataka was one of the first states to attempt regulation of online gambling, and that must be strengthened with stricter age verification and a ban on pay-to-win mechanics targeting minors. Game companies must be made to disclose addiction risks and spending limits, just like cigarette packets.

Most importantly, we must give children alternatives. A child addicted to gaming is often a child who is bored, lonely, or stressed. We need better playgrounds, affordable sports coaching, libraries, and safe public spaces in our cities. Parents must spend time with children, not just give them a phone to keep them quiet.

Online games are not all bad. Some improve strategy and teamwork. But when a game controls you instead of you controlling it, it is time to pause, delete, and seek help.

SWEATING DAILY IS ESSENTIAL FOR HEALTHY LIVING

In an age of air-conditioned offices, air-conditioned cars, air-conditioned gyms and even air-conditioned streets inside malls, we have forgotten one of the most basic functions of the human body: to sweat. We see sweating as something embarrassing, something to be stopped with strong deodorants and cold air. But the truth is, we need to sweat, and we need to sweat every day.

Sweating is not a flaw in our design. It is a brilliant cooling system. When our body heats up, our two to four million sweat glands release water and salt to bring the temperature down. Without it, we would overheat and collapse. But its benefits go far beyond cooling.

First, sweating is detoxification, the original detox. While our liver and kidneys do the main job of cleaning our body, sweat removes traces of heavy metals, BPA from plastics, alcohol, and excess salt. That is why after a good sweaty workout, your skin glows. You have literally flushed out waste through your pores. No expensive juice cleanse can do what 30 minutes of sweating can.

Second, sweating is the best medicine for stress. In Bengaluru’s IT corridors, anxiety, insomnia, and burnout are common. When you sweat through exercise or even a brisk walk in the sun, your brain releases endorphins and serotonin. These are natural antidepressants. People who sweat daily report better sleep, calmer minds, and sharper focus. A morning run that makes you sweat is more effective than two cups of coffee.

Third, it is protection against modern lifestyle diseases. India is now the diabetes capital of the world, and Karnataka is seeing a rise in obesity even among children. Sweating through physical activity improves insulin sensitivity, burns calories, and strengthens the heart. A study found that people who sweat through exercise for at least 150 minutes a week have a 40% lower risk of heart disease. Sweat is a sign that your metabolism is working, your heart is pumping, and your muscles are alive.

Yet, we are becoming a non-sweating society. The average office worker in Bengaluru takes less than 4,000 steps a day, spends 10 hours sitting, and rarely sweats except when the power goes off. Children are not sweating either. They go from AC home to AC school bus to AC classroom. Playgrounds are empty, screens are full. The result is weak immunity, frequent colds, lethargy, and low stamina.

We need to bring sweat back into our culture. Our grandparents sweated daily working in fields, cycling, walking to markets, playing in the sun. They did not need vitamin D supplements. Today we need to consciously create opportunities to sweat.

It does not have to be a gym membership. Walk fast for 40 minutes till your shirt gets damp. Cycle to the nearby shop. Play badminton with your children in the evening. Take the stairs. Do Surya Namaskar in the terrace sun. Work in your garden. Dance in your living room. Let the sweat drip. It is not ugly; it is proof that you are alive and moving.

Employers and schools also have a role. Offices should encourage walk-and-talk meetings and five-minute stretch breaks. Schools must make physical education compulsory and joyful, not just a free period.

In our obsession with fairness creams and staying cool and dry, we have made sweating a shame. It is time to reverse that. Deodorants can mask body odour, but they cannot replace the health benefits of sweat.

“So today, ask yourself: did I sweat today? If not, put on your shoes and go out. Let your body do what it was made to do. A good sweat a day keeps the doctor away and keeps the mind happy too.”

—JOHNSON RAJAN

OILY FOOD IS SILENTLY DAMAGING YOUR HEALTH

We Indians love oil. A samosa is not a samosa unless it drips oil. A puri must puff in hot oil. Biryani must have a layer of ghee floating on top. Our festivals, our celebrations, our comfort foods — everything revolves around deep-fried, oil-soaked delights. But this love affair with oily food is now becoming a fatal attraction.

Walk into any diagnostic lab in Bengaluru today and you will see young people in their late twenties and early thirties getting lipid profiles done, with cholesterol and triglycerides shooting off the charts. Cardiologists will tell you that heart attacks are no longer an old man’s disease.

The culprit, in most cases, is not genetics alone, but our daily plate full of reused oil, vanaspati, and excessive ghee.

The science is simple and brutal. When we consume too much oily and fried food, the extra fat gets deposited in our blood vessels. Over years, it narrows the arteries, a condition called atherosclerosis. This leads to high blood pressure, heart attack, and stroke. India is already the capital of heart disease and diabetes, and our oily diet is a major driver. One study found that Indians consume almost 30% more oil than the recommended daily allowance. The WHO recommends about 20–25 grams of visible fat per day, but many households use double that in just one meal.

And it is not just the heart. Oily food overloads the liver, leading to fatty liver disease, which is now seen in 1 in

3 urban Indians. It causes weight gain, not just because oil is calorie-dense (one gram gives 9 calories), but because it slows metabolism and triggers overeating. Fried food is also directly linked to acidity, bloating, and sluggishness. Have you noticed how sleepy you feel after a heavy, oily lunch? That is your body struggling to digest.

Worse is the practice of re-using oil. Every street stall and even many homes reuse the same oil for days to fry vada, bonda, and chips. When oil is reheated, it releases toxic compounds like aldehydes and trans fats that are carcinogenic. That tasty, dark-brown fried snack from outside could be increasing your cancer risk.

Does this mean we must stop eating oil completely? No. Our body needs healthy fats for brain function, hormone balance, and absorbing vitamins. The key is quantity and quality. We need to shift from quantity to quality.

Reduce, don’t eliminate. Use a spray or brush to apply oil instead of pouring freely. Adopt methods like roasting, air-frying, steaming, and grilling instead of deep-frying. A roasted masala peanut can be as tasty as a fried one if done right.

Choose better oils. Rotate oils: groundnut oil, mustard oil, coconut oil in small amounts, and rice bran oil are better than palm oil and vanaspati. Cold-pressed oils in moderation retain nutrients. And ghee, while better than Dalda, is still saturated fat; a teaspoon, not four spoons, is enough.

The Karnataka government’s move to display calorie counts and health warnings is good, but real change must start at home. Mothers and cooks hold the key. If they reduce oil by 30% in daily cooking, family health will improve without anyone feeling deprived.

Our taste buds are trained, not born. If we slowly cut oil, within a month we will start enjoying the natural taste of vegetables and dals. Food will feel lighter, and the body will thank us with more energy, better skin, and a healthier heart.

“It is time to fall out of love with oily food, before it kills our love for life itself.”

Blast in PoK village kills four, triggers alert

JAMMU

A powerful blast in Pakistan-occupied Kashmir (PoK), near the Line of Control (LoC), killed four residents on Monday and triggered a security alert along the Indian border. The explosion occurred in the Satwal-Naki area while villagers were reportedly laying water pipes. The victims were identified as Faizan Sagheer, Waqas Sharief, Ishtiaq and Asim Rafiq. The blast is suspected to have involved an improvised explosive device (IED). Meanwhile, Army personnel discovered two landmines in Mendhar sector and destroyed them safely. Nearly a dozen landmines have been detected recently, with heavy rainfall sometimes bringing buried explosives to the surface.

Anti-drug activist shot dead in Punjab's Mansa

MANSA

An anti-drug activist was shot dead by a medical store owner in Punjab's Mansa district on Tuesday while questioning the alleged sale of certain drugs, police said. The activist, Parvinder Singh, popularly known as Jhota, was confronting the store owner over medicines allegedly being sold to a man. He was recording their argument on his mobile phone when the incident took place. A video of the confrontation reportedly captured Jhota saying that the store owner had taken out a pistol. The owner then allegedly opened fire at the activist, with the incident being recorded on the phone. Jhota was rushed to a hospital after the shooting but died from his injuries, police said. His death has raised concerns about the risks faced by people who expose suspected illegal drug sales. The activist was known for highlighting the illegal sale of addictive drugs at chemist shops in Mansa. He had previously exposed several such cases in the district. Further details about the investigation and any arrests were not available.

Lucknow businessman's death triggers murder probe

LUCKNOW

The death of 28-year-old businessman Shiva Sharma has triggered a murder investigation after his mother accused his girlfriend, social media influencer Shraddha Dubey, and others of murder, assault and blackmail. Sharma died after falling from the fourth floor of an apartment in Lucknow on October 9. The post-mortem report recorded multiple injuries, including damage to his lungs, liver and spleen. Police are examining CCTV footage, messages and a white Audi reportedly seen at the apartment after the fall. The FIR names Dubey and four others. The allegations remain unproven, and the investigation continues.

Bengal erupts in protest against Election Commission

Party leaders alleged restrictions on demonstrators, accusing authorities of using police and central forces to prevent supporters from reaching the protest site.

Kunal Ghosh accused the Bharatiya Janata Party (BJP) and the administration of preventing supporters from reaching the protest site through police and central force deployment. TMC protesters raised slogans, including "Vote Chor, Ghosh said the party's youth and student wings had organised the rally under the leadership of Mamata Banerjee and informed the police about the programme in advance through email. However, he alleged that security personnel blocked routes across parts of the city from Tuesday morning. Ghosh further claimed that people travelling to the demonstration were stopped across North and Central Kolkata. He maintained that the gathering was entirely peaceful and accused the BJP of opposing the protest. The TMC leader also alleged that Gyanesh Kumar had rigged votes to benefit the BJP, making serious accusations against the poll body chief without providing further details. The protest comes amid wider opposition concerns over alleged irregularities in the Special Intensive Revision (SIR) of electoral rolls. On Monday, former West Bengal Chief Minister Mamata Banerjee said elections should be held using existing electoral rolls until every eligible voter's name was included in the lists. Her position focused on ensuring that eligible

Separately, INDIA bloc leaders and supporters, led by Rahul Gandhi, marched along Barakhamba Road towards the Supreme Court of India on Monday over the alleged SIR irregularities. The group filed a petition in the apex court. The developments highlight continuing opposition protests over electoral roll revisions, with the TMC's Kolkata rally adding to calls for scrutiny of the process and concerns about access to voting rights.

Coast Guard seizes boat suspected of diesel smuggling off Mumbai

MUMBAI

The Indian Coast Guard has apprehended an Indian fishing boat suspected of smuggling diesel at sea off the Mumbai coast. The vessel, named Haridwar Krupa, was intercepted during a surveillance operation near Prongs Lighthouse after it allegedly ignored warnings and attempted to escape. The boat, its crew and seized evidence were later escorted to Mumbai Harbour for further investigation. The operation began after Coast Guard ships received instructions to closely monitor suspicious maritime movements in the area. During patrol, personnel spotted the fishing boat operating near a merchant vessel. When challenged through the VHF maritime communication channel, the boat reportedly failed to respond and ignored repeated warnings. It then attempted evasive manoeuvres, prompting a Coast Guard ship to begin a pursuit that ended with its successful interception. A specialised boarding team subsequently searched the vessel and conducted a preliminary investigation. During questioning, the boat's master reportedly admitted that approximately 4,000 litres of illicit diesel had been received at sea. Investigators also found that around 500 litres of the fuel had been discharged overboard during the chase, allegedly in an attempt to destroy evidence and avoid detection. The boarding team confiscated relevant operational documents and six mobile phones to support the investigation. A joint investigation involving the Indian Coast Guard, Indian Navy, State Intelligence Bureau and State Police has been initiated to examine the suspected smuggling activity and establish the circumstances surrounding the incident. Officials said the operation demonstrated the force's surveillance and response capabilities against suspected illegal networks operating at sea.

Delhi Police files FIRs over fake posts during SIR protests

NEW DELHI

Delhi Police has registered more than four first information reports (FIRs) against social media handles allegedly spreading false information and misleading narratives during protests over the Special Intensive Revision (SIR) of electoral rolls. According to sources, several Pakistani social media handles have also been identified for allegedly circulating anti-India content. Around 500 social media posts allegedly spreading rumours or attempting to disturb public order have been taken down so far. The action comes amid wider police measures following Monday's Opposition march towards the Supreme Court. Delhi Police registered FIRs at Connaught Place, Tilak Marg, Barakhamba and Mandir Marg police stations over alleged violations of prohibitory orders under Section 163 of the Bharatiya Nagarik Suraksha Sanhita (BNSS).

The march was led by Rahul Gandhi and involved INDIA bloc leaders and supporters protesting against alleged irregularities in the SIR exercise. Eleven Opposition leaders subsequently filed a petition in the Supreme Court challenging decisions taken by the Election Commission in connection with the electoral roll revision. Meanwhile, the Supreme Court Registry flagged 14 defects in the writ petition filed by Gandhi, Congress president Mallikarjun Kharge and nine other Opposition leaders. The Registry also sought clarification on why Chief Election Commissioner Gyanesh Kumar and Election Commissioners SS Sandhu and Vivek Joshi had been named as respondents in a petition filed under Article 32 of the Constitution.

BJP alleges Rahul Gandhi pushed pregnant journalist

NEW DELHI

The Bharatiya Janata Party (BJP) has accused Congress leader Rahul Gandhi of pushing journalist Richa Parashar during an INDIA bloc protest march in New Delhi on October 12. BJP leaders claimed that Parashar, who is reportedly three months pregnant, sustained injuries and received hospital treatment. The allegations have not been independently verified. BJP leader Rajesh Bhatia said Parashar's sister approached his office in Rajendra Nagar at around 8.30 pm seeking assistance. According to Bhatia, she reported that her sister had been injured in the alleged incident and needed medical care. Bhatia said he contacted BJP MLA Umang Bajaj and other party leaders, who later visited the hospital to enquire about her condition. BJP national spokesperson Pradeep Bhandari also shared a video of his hospital visit on social media, alleging that Parashar was pushed while performing her professional duties. BJP leaders condemned the alleged incident and called for accountability. MLA Umang Bajaj said public representatives should answer journalists' questions rather than engage in physical confrontations. The incident reportedly occurred during an INDIA bloc march against the Special Intensive Revision (SIR) of electoral rolls and alleged electoral irregularities. BJP leaders are reportedly preparing to approach the National Commission for Women and Delhi Police, seeking an investigation. As of October 13, no immediate official response from Gandhi or Congress leadership had been reported. Congress supporters described the allegations on social media as politically motivated.

Centre forms panel to probe death of IIIT-Ranchi student

RANCHI

The Ministry of Education has formed a three-member committee to investigate the death by suicide of a first-year student at the Indian Institute of Information Technology (IIIT), Ranchi, amid student protests over alleged delays in providing emergency medical assistance. The students have demanded the resignation of institute director Rajeev Srivastava and better medical facilities on campus. The committee, chaired by Professor Rajni Abbi, director of the University of Delhi's South Campus, has been asked to submit its report within 15 days. Its other members are Dr Jitendra Nagpal, a senior psychiatrist at Delhi's Moolchand Hospital, and Heera Lal Poonia, deputy secretary in the Ministry of Education's Department of Higher Education. The panel was constituted through an order dated October 12.

The incident necessitates a closer examination of the implementation of these measures at the institutional level and identify any deficiencies requiring corrective action."

— Ministry of Education

The committee will examine whether the institute has implemented the ministry's July 2023 guidelines on emotional and mental well-being in higher education institutions. It will review basic facilities, counselling and mentoring arrangements, institutional support systems and student grievance redressal mechanisms. The panel will also identify gaps, examine records, interact with stakeholders and recommend measures to prevent similar incidents. The ministry said interim administrative arrangements would also be made to ensure the institute functions smoothly. The student's death came to light on the night of October 10 after hostel residents found his room locked from inside and alerted the authorities. The administration informed the police, and a case of unnatural death was registered. Khelgaon police station officer-in-charge Nirbhay Kumar said an investigation was underway to establish the circumstances surrounding the death. The agitation also affected academic activities, with examinations scheduled for Monday postponed. IIIT registrar Munuren Samson Champia said the institute's chairperson visited the protest site and attempted to hold discussions with students, but a standoff occurred before formal talks could begin. The committee's findings are expected to help assess the institute's student support systems and identify corrective steps.

KERALAM ASSEMBLY CLASH OVER PUBLIC HEALTHCARE CRISIS

THIRUVANANTHAPURAM

The Keralam Assembly witnessed heated exchanges on Tuesday over alleged medicine shortages and problems in public healthcare, with opposition members walking out after the Speaker denied permission for an adjournment motion. Health Minister K Muraleedharan rejected claims of a healthcare crisis, acknowledged shortages of 24 medicines and said urgent measures had been taken to address the problem. The opposition raised the issue through a motion submitted by MLA K V Sumesh, alleging serious failures in the state's healthcare system. Muraleedharan blamed the previous government for leaving substantial dues unpaid to pharmaceutical companies, which he said had affected medicine procurement. The minister also addressed the death of a patient following alleged medical negligence at Kottayam Medical College, saying a preliminary inquiry had been completed and a detailed report was expected within a week. His remarks triggered protests and noisy exchanges in the House. Opposition leader Pinarayi Vijayan challenged the government's explanation, alleging inadequate medicine supplies, staff shortages and disruptions in public hospitals. He said the previous administration had completed procurement procedures, including tenders, and issued purchase orders for 493 medicines. Vijayan attributed the difficulties partly to the absence of a head at Kerala Medical

UNDERAGE DRINKING CRACKDOWN

Keralam vows action against bars serving minors

THIRUVANANTHAPURAM

The Keralam government has vowed stringent action against bars serving alcohol to people below the legal drinking age of 23, following a fatal Mini Cooper crash near Kochi that claimed three young lives. Excise Minister M Liju told the Assembly on Tuesday that the department had registered cases against three bars allegedly involved in serving liquor to the accused. Responding to a question from Ernakulam MLA T J Vinod about Sunday's accident, Liju said he had directed senior excise officials to act promptly after learning about the incident. He stressed that the government would not compromise on enforcing the rules and was considering stricter guidelines to prevent bars from serving alcohol to people below 23. He said the existing Abkari Act contained provisions to take action against establishments violating age restrictions, while the government was examining additional measures to strengthen enforcement. The accident occurred at Nedumbassery near Kochi in the early hours of Sunday. Three youngsters, including two women and a man, all aged around 21, were killed when a speeding Mini Cooper allegedly driven by a 19-year-old youth rammed into their scooter. Police alleged that the driver was under the influence of alcohol at the time of the crash. The accused, identified as Kochi native Suhail, was arrested and booked for culpable homicide not amounting to murder. Police said his mother had gifted him the luxury car for his birthday and that investigators had found videos purportedly showing him driving at speeds exceeding 200 kmph.

UP man kills stepfather over mother’s remarriage

RAMPUR

A 30-year-old businessman, Navjot, was allegedly shot dead by his 22-year-old stepson, Avdeep Singh, in Uttar Pradesh’s Rampur district on October 10. Police said Avdeep opposed his mother Kamal Kaur’s remarriage and conspired with his cousin, Rajandeep Singh, 23, to commit the murder. Navjot was attacked at his car service centre in Kumhariya Kalan around 5 pm. The accused allegedly arrived in a grey Alto car, opened fire and fled. Police arrested both suspects within 48 hours using CCTV footage and other evidence. They recovered the car, three firearms, six live cartridges and two empty cartridges. Avdeep had reportedly returned from New Zealand five days before the incident. Police said the murder appeared to have resulted from a family dispute.

Air India cancels Saudi flights until Oct 17

NEW DELHI

Air India has cancelled all flights to and from Riyadh, Dammam and Jeddah until October 17, 2026, due to the evolving situation in Saudi Arabia. The airline announced the decision on Tuesday, saying it was closely monitoring developments and assessing when safe operations could resume. The airline said affected passengers would be offered a full refund if they cancelled their bookings. It added that the safety and security of passengers and crew remained its highest priority. The latest extension follows an earlier decision to suspend flights to and from Riyadh until October 15. Air India said it would continue monitoring the regional situation before resuming services. IndiGo has also extended the suspension of flights to and from Riyadh, Jeddah, Dammam and Madinah until October 17. It said updates were being shared through the contact details provided during booking and that support teams were available to assist passengers. Akasa Air has also suspended flights to and from Riyadh and Jeddah until October 17. The airline said the decision followed an assessment of the changing situation, with passenger safety remaining its main concern. All three airlines said they would continue monitoring developments and assess conditions before resuming safe operations.

Amit Shah calls for regional unity against terrorism

Addressing the first BIMSTEC Home Ministers’ Meeting in New Delhi, the Union Home Minister urged joint action against cross-border security threats.

NEW DELHI

Union Home Minister Amit Shah on Tuesday called on BIMSTEC member countries to strengthen regional cooperation to fight terrorism, disrupt terrorist financing and organised crime, and prevent terrorist networks from finding safe havens. He reaffirmed India’s policy of zero tolerance towards terrorism while addressing the first BIMSTEC Home Ministers’ Meeting in New Delhi. Shah said BIMSTEC had become an important platform for regional integration, economic cooperation and collective security. He stressed that the security arrangements of each member country should support the safety of others through shared responsibility and coordinated action. “India has always adopted a ‘zero tolerance’ policy against terrorism,” Shah said. He urged member countries to ensure that terrorist groups

The Home Minister also called for closer coordination among law enforcement agencies and the exchange of verified, actionable intelligence. He said countries should share information about terrorists, their associates, criminal networks, financial channels and cross-border activities to strengthen regional security. Shah further urged BIMSTEC members to improve cooperation on mutual legal assistance and extradition, in accordance with their national laws and relevant agreements. He said such measures would help authorities bring criminals to justice and prevent them from escaping legal action across borders. Highlighting the connection between drug trafficking, organised crime and terrorism, Shah called for a coordinated regional strategy to tackle narcotics smuggling.

He said the illegal proceeds from drugs could strengthen criminal groups and support terrorist activities. “We must adopt a whole-of-region approach,” Shah said, adding that the diversion of precursor chemicals and transactions through the dark web had made the challenge more complex. He emphasised that individual countries could not effectively address these threats without collective efforts. Nilekani proposes last-minute papers to prevent exam leaks

Infosys Chairman recommends a large question bank and late paper generation to strengthen exam security and reduce opportunities for illegal sales.

NEW DELHI

Nandan Nilekani, Infosys Chairman and head of the high-powered task force on examination reforms, has proposed generating question papers at the last minute to prevent leaks. Speaking at the Bloomberg New Economy Forum in Delhi on Tuesday, he said creating a large bank of questions and preparing papers shortly before examinations could reduce the incentive to sell them illegally. Nilekani explained that having a fixed question paper creates opportunities for people to obtain and sell it before the examination.

He suggested maintaining a massive question bank and generating the paper for each examination only at the last moment. He said this approach could help address the root causes of paper leaks and make examinations more secure. The six-member task force was announced by Prime Minister Narendra Modi after Dharmendra Pradhan resigned on July 25 following student protests at Jantar Mantar. Although Nilekani did not reveal its recommendations, he said Modi was keen to implement the panel’s suggestions. The task force has held about 18 panel meetings and 40 consultations, receiving more than 50,000 suggestions from students, parents, doctors and examination agencies. Nilekani also called for expanding the network of computer-based testing centres. He said around 1.5 lakh locations currently conduct examinations and that the number should increase. Moving towards computer-based testing would require better infrastructure, including secure facilities, information technology tools and reliable internet connections. Nilekani said paper leaks could be solved by addressing their underlying causes systematically.

Andrabi denies issuing order on uniform Friday sermons

SRINAGAR

Jammu and Kashmir Waqf Board chairperson Darakhshan Andrabi on Tuesday denied issuing any order requiring uniform Friday sermons, following a controversy over a proposed initiative. Her clarification came after Chief Minister Omar Abdullah, chief cleric Mirwaiz Umar Farooq and Peoples Democratic Party president Mehbooba Mufti opposed the reported move. Addressing a press conference in Srinagar, Andrabi said the Board had issued no directive requiring religious preachers to deliver common sermons. She stressed that religious scholars and preachers remained free to decide what they wanted to discuss during Friday prayers. Rejecting allegations of interference in religious matters, she said, “There is no order. There is no order anywhere.” Andrabi explained that religious scholars had discussed social concerns, including drug abuse and problems affecting young people. According to her, the proposed initiative aimed to address such issues through sermons, while leaving the final choice of topics to individual preachers. She maintained that the plan was not intended to control religious discourse or impose a common message on mosques across the region. Responding to Omar Abdullah’s allegation of BJP interference in Muslim religious affairs, Andrabi questioned the claim and asked, “Where did BJP interfere?” She also said she was proud to be associated with the party. Andrabi clarified that a proposed core committee would consist of religious scholars and that she herself would not be a member. She reiterated that preachers would have the freedom to choose their sub- topics without interference from the Board. The controversy followed reports about plans for common Friday sermons focusing on social issues in Kashmir.

MUMBAI

Sindhudurg district in Maharashtra’s Konkan region has launched a community-driven campaign to build 10,000 Vanrai bunds to conserve rainwater and tackle drought. Around 5,000 bunds have already been completed, with residents joining efforts to improve groundwater levels and strengthen water security across villages. Vanrai bunds are low-cost, temporary structures built across small streams and drainage channels using locally available materials. They slow the flow of water, allowing it to remain in an area longer and seep into the soil. The initiative aims to improve groundwater recharge and reduce the risk of drinking water shortages in the coming months. State Fisheries and Ports

Minister Nitesh Rane, who is also Sindhudurg’s guardian minister, said all eight talukas in the district were facing drought-like conditions. He described the campaign as a community-driven effort to prevent similar situations in the future.

Sindhudurg Collector Trupti Dhodmise and Zilla Parishad Chief Executive Officer Dr Apoorva Basur are leading the initiative. They have mobilised residents, women’s self-help groups, students, elected representatives and government officials to take part in the work. The bunds are expected to help retain rainwater and recharge groundwater, potentially improving water availability in nearby wells. However, villagers have also requested a permanent bund at the site to meet their long-term water needs.

Telangana to hold special voter enrolment camps

HYDERABAD

The Election Commission of India has directed officials across Telangana to hold special voter enrolment camps on October 15 and 16 for eligible citizens whose names are missing from the draft electoral rolls published on August 17. The initiative aims to help first-time young voters and others left out of the draft lists register themselves. Chief Electoral Officer

C Sudharshan Reddy said instructions had been issued to the Greater Hyderabad Municipal Corporation commissioner, who also serves as Hyderabad’s district election officer, and all district collectors to organise the camps. Electoral Registration Officers will conduct the exercise at every polling station on both days. Eligible applicants can submit Form-6 to seek inclusion in the electoral rolls. The facility is intended for first-time electors and citizens whose names were not included in the draft lists. “The Electoral Registration Officers (EROs) should conduct the special camps on these two days at every polling station, where applicants whose names did not figure in the draft electoral rolls can file applications in Form-6 for enrolling themselves as voters in the electoral rolls,” Reddy said.

AIADMK alleges corruption in TN’s power procurement

CHENNAI

AIADMK general secretary Edappadi K. Palaniswami on Tuesday accused the Tamilada Vettri Kazhagam (TVK)-led Tamil Nadu government of corruption in power procurement. He alleged that the government had purchased electricity from private companies at rates as high as Rs 35 per unit, worsening the financial condition of the Tamil Nadu Power Distribution Corporation (TNPDC). Palaniswami said frequent power cuts had caused hardship for residents. He blamed the government’s planning and administrative decisions, alleging that public difficulties were being used to support corrupt practices. According to Palaniswami, the TNPDC awarded contracts to five private companies to procure 4,400 megawatts of electricity daily between October 12 and 31. He questioned the reported procurement rates of Rs 32 to Rs 37 per unit, comparing them with Andhra Pradesh’s reported rates of Rs 16 to Rs 20 per unit for October. The AIADMK leader also alleged that the government had cancelled earlier power procurement contracts in May over corruption concerns. He said the government had promised cheaper, long-term agreements in June but later turned to short-term purchases at higher prices. Palaniswami further claimed that revised electricity billing policies had increased bills for some households from around Rs 1,500 to nearly Rs 4,000. He warned that expensive power purchases could increase TNPDC’s debt and eventually lead to privatisation. The allegations were made in a statement by the AIADMK leader.

Benchmark equity indices rebounded sharply on Tuesday, recovering from the previous session's losses as investor sentiment improved after Finance Minister Nirmala Sitharaman indicated openness to discussions on key market-related taxes, including long-term capital gains (LTCG) tax and securities transaction tax (STT). The Finance Minister said she would be keen to hear the views of market participants on LTCG tax and STT, describing such debates as healthy. Her comments boosted investor confidence and sparked broad-based buying across sectors.

Rupee jumps 77 paise, logs sharp gains for second day

NEW DELHI
The Indian rupee appreciated by 77 paise against the US dollar in early trade on Tuesday, supported by RBI measures aimed at reducing immediate dollar demand and curbing excessive positions in the foreign exchange market. The domestic currency opened at 95.17 and then gained ground to touch 95.05, up 77 paise over its previous close. The measures, including a dedicated dollar window for oil marketing companies through designated banks and higher costs for certain foreign exchange hedging transactions, are expected to reduce dollar demand in the spot market and curb speculative positions against the rupee.

On the outlook for the rupee, experts expect the Indian currency to trade in a 95.60-97.50 per dollar range by end-2026, with most projections clustering around the 96-97 per dollar mark. Earlier in October, the Reserve Bank of India tightened rules governing forex derivatives trades to curtail speculative bets against the rupee and asked banks to create a 20 per cent reserve for dollar purchases of over $2 million. Meanwhile, the dollar index, which gauges the greenback's strength against a basket of six currencies, was trading 0.15 per cent lower at 102.43.

Singapore DyPM on India trip to bolster bilateral economic ties

NEW DELHI
Singapore's Deputy Prime Minister and Energy, Trade, and Industry Minister Gan Kim Yong is on an India trip from October 13 to 15, with the visit reaffirming the long-standing and multifaceted bilateral relationship between the two countries, according to a Singapore government statement. Deputy Prime Minister Gan will be in New Delhi on Tuesday and Wednesday, where he will participate in the 8th Bloomberg New Economy Forum and speak on a panel on how countries are moving towards self-sufficiency globally. A member of the BNE Advisory Board, he will also meet senior Indian government officials and business leaders on the sidelines of the forum. He will visit Chennai on October 15.

FM keeps door open to LTCG tax ahead of Budget 2027

ON THE RUPEE, NIRMALA SITHARAMAN SAID THE RBI WAS FOCUSED ON CURBING EXCESSIVE VOLATILITY RATHER THAN DEFENDING A PARTICULAR EXCHANGE RATE.

NEW DELHI

Finance Minister Nirmala Sitharaman on Tuesday declined to rule out changes to the long-term capital gains (LTCG) tax regime, saying preparations for the next Union Budget have begun but it was too early to indicate the government's position. Speaking at the Bloomberg New Economy Forum, Sitharaman acknowledged that investors in India and abroad have been raising concerns about the country's capital gains tax framework. She said the government would carefully consider views on the issue as it prepares the Union Budget for 2027-28, scheduled to be presented on February 1, 2027.

The minister also highlighted the securities transaction tax (STT) as a related matter, noting that market participants have questioned whether different asset classes should be treated similarly. She indicated that the government would listen closely to feedback on both taxation issues. Under the current rules, long-term capital gains on listed equities and equity mutual funds held for more than one year are taxed at 12.5 per cent. Gains of up to Rs 1.25 lakh annually are exempt from the tax.

These provisions were introduced in the July 2024

Budget, when the government raised the LTCG tax rate from 10 per cent and increased the annual exemption threshold from Rs 1 lakh.

The Union Budget 2026 retained the existing capital gains tax structure despite expectations among some market participants for a lower rate or a higher exemption limit. However, it increased the STT applicable to futures and options trades.

Industry groups and foreign portfolio investors have argued that India's tax framework affects the competitiveness of domestic equity markets and investment flows. Foreign investors have also remained net sellers of Indian

India, Czech Republic agree to expand defence industrial ties

NEW DELHI

Defence Minister Rajnath Singh on Tuesday held talks with Czech Republic Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of Industry and Trade Karel Havlicek in New Delhi, reviewing bilateral defence industrial cooperation and agreeing to expand collaboration in the sector.

The meeting comes as India seeks to strengthen domestic defence manufacturing under the Atmanirbhar Bharat initiative while expanding partnerships with international partners. Both sides reviewed progress in existing defence industry collaborations and expressed satisfaction with the performance of joint ventures involving Indian and Czech entities.

Singh said the discussions focused on building on the achievements of these partnerships and widening cooperation through the India-Czech Joint Defence Committee. The mechanism is expected to support further engagement between the two countries in defence production and industrial collaboration.

He added that both sides had acknowledged progress in joint ventures and agreed to deepen collaboration to advance India's domestic defence manufacturing objectives.

India has increasingly emphasised indigenous production of military equipment, technology development and industrial partnerships as part of its broader defence strategy. Cooperation with international partners can provide opportunities for technology exchange, manufacturing collaboration and strengthening domestic industrial capabilities.

India's flex office market likely to hit 160 MSF by 2030

NEW DELHI

India has retained its position as the world's most mature flexible office market and is expected to cross the 100 MSF mark in 2026, expanding to about 160 million square feet by 2030, a report said on Tuesday.

The country's flexible office inventory reached 88.7 million square feet in the first half of 2026, accounting for 10.5 per cent of the country's office stock, the report from Cushman & Wakefield said. Moreover, the country scored 100 per cent on the firm's Flexible Office Market Maturity Index and flexible workspace is evolving from an amenity into a strategic component of occupier real estate portfolios, it added.

According to an Upfex analysis, India's share of global bookings increased sharply from 2.2 per cent in H1 2025 to 10.2 per cent in H1 2026, making it the second-most active market globally after the United States, the report noted.

India continues to demonstrate strong momentum across occupier demand, supply growth and operator activity. The expansion is being underpinned by sustained occupier demand.

Flexible office operators leased 8.4 MSF across India's top eight cities in H1 2026, their strongest-ever first-half performance, while flexible workspace now accounts for around 20 per cent of overall office leasing in India.

In addition, operators leased 44.1 MSF of space, representing more than 720,000 flex seats between 2023 and 2025, while managed office requirements averaged between 350 and 500 seats, the report noted.

Meanwhile, seat demand has expanded consistently despite periods of macroeconomic volatility, growing nearly 7-fold from nearly 38,000 seats in 2020 to an estimated 3 lakh in 2026.

"Greater institutional participation is bringing long-term capital and discipline into the sector, while evolving occupier expectations are

'India regulating AI without stifling innovation, investment'

MUMBAI

India is taking a very smart approach to regulation when it comes to artificial intelligence (AI), regulating to the point where it is not stifling innovation and investment, Sandip Patel, MD, IBM India and South Asia, said on Tuesday, adding that AI governance is very, very critical at this crucial juncture.

On the sidelines of the 'IBM Think 2026' conference here, Patel said this balanced approach would continue for a while as AI technology evolves.

Digital sovereignty, he said, is not just an India issue but a global one. For Patel, digital sovereignty means 'Digital Swaraj'.

"I think it's important, both from an AI and infrastructure standpoint. You have to maintain a level of sovereignty that is aligned to the regulations that you are governed by as an enterprise, but also the kinds of workloads that you are, in fact, working with," he said.

The government plans to bring out a consultation paper on AI regulations soon, with a key focus on ensuring AI safety and curbing the danger posed by deepfakes. The consultation paper will focus on skilling, safety, and ensuring that no one is left behind as the AI technology advances.

According to Union Electronics and IT Minister Ashwini Vaishnaw, AI cannot be governed through legislation alone and "We have to bring a techno-legal solution".

Data provenance, data accuracy, whether an enterprise uses only the data it is supposed to use and whether it is clear about how it uses that data all come with governance, Patel said.

"Model governance is also the key, which means what models are you using, when are you using it. Are you updating the models? Is your model relevant for what you are trying to use it for? Those are all questions that come into model governance," said Patel.

"I think the bigger question that we should be asking ourselves is how do we drive digital sovereignty? And the issue of sovereignty, it's not just an India issue; it's global."

LEADERS STEP UP ENGAGEMENT

India-Canada relations better than ever: Canadian envoy

NEW DELHI

The chemistry between Prime Minister Narendra Modi and his Canadian counterpart Mark Carney is "excellent", and the two nations have never had as "good a relationship" as they have right now, Canadian High Commissioner to India Christopher Cooter said on Tuesday.

Speaking ahead of Canadian Foreign Minister Anita Anand's arrival in New Delhi later in the day, Cooter went over recent engagements between the leadership of the two countries, among them meetings between External Affairs Minister (EAM) S

Jaishankar and Anand. He also spoke about the coming visit of Canada's Trade Minister Maninder Sidhu.

"I think it is fair to say that we never had as good a relationship as we have right now. Starting at the highest level, the chemistry between our two Prime Ministers is excellent. They have met four times in just over a year. Officials are also meeting regularly. We recently had our National Security Advisor here for discussions with his Indian counterpart, and our Foreign Minister is coming here. This will be her 10th meeting with India's External Affairs Minister over the past year," the Canadian High Commissioner told media persons.

"Our Trade Minister will also visit next week, leading a delegation of 300 Canadian business representatives. I believe this is the largest trade delegation we have ever taken anywhere, certainly to India. They will be here for a week, going to several cities in southern India. We have got dialogues on energy, migration and defence, and we expect a defence-related visit in the near future. We had at least six other ministers visiting India over the past year. Our Prime Minister of course came here in March. Prime Minister Narendra Modi is expected to come to Canada in early December. At that point, we are hoping to sign our first Free Trade Agreement during that visit."

BILATERAL TIES IN A NUTSHELL

As diesel prices soar, Bolivian farmer turns trash into tractor fuel

LAJA

Etson Machaca, a resident of the Bolivian Altiplano, where rising fuel costs are threatening farmers' livelihoods, has built a small plant that converts plastic bags, old tires and used oil into energy for his tractors. The operation is small, turning out only 80 to 150 liters of gasoline and diesel a day, but the savings have been a lifesaver for Machaca since Bolivia's centrist government ended state diesel subsidies last month to shore up public accounts. His plant makes fuel for 7 to 10 bolivianos ($0.60 to $0.86) a liter, while diesel on the open market costs about double that, at 18 bolivianos ($1.54) a liter.

Russia hits energy targets despite Trump ceasefire announcement

KYIV

Russia struck at least six energy targets in deadly air attacks across Ukraine, Ukrainian President Volodymyr Zelenskyy said, adding that this showed Moscow had no interest in the energy ceasefire announced by US President Donald Trump. Trump, under pressure over high energy prices before next month's US midterm elections, caught Kyiv and its European allies off guard over the weekend when he declared that Ukraine and Russia had agreed not to hit each other's energy systems. "It is increasingly evident that Russia is unwilling to accept an energy ceasefire proposed by the United States and intends to continue its terrorist air attacks against our people and communities," Zelenskyy said on X.

8 hurt in supermarket stabbing in South Korea's Incheon

SEOUL
A stabbing at a supermarket in the South Korean city of Incheon on Tuesday wounded eight people, one of whom suffered a cardiac arrest, police said. Officers called to the scene arrested a male suspect and were investigating the motive and circumstances of the attack, a police spokesperson said by telephone. According to a witness, the suspect appeared to have knives tied to both hands and went through several floors of the shopping complex attacking people until bystanders overpowered him and handed him over to police. South Korean media reports described the suspect as a man in his 60s who was wearing an electronic monitoring ankle bracelet. The victims were six women and two men, and the woman in cardiac arrest was in her 20s, the reports said. Incheon, west of Seoul, is home to South Korea's main airport and is part of the wider Seoul metropolitan area. A series of stabbing rampages in 2023, including attacks that left several people dead and injured, shook South Korea. In a more recent case in May, a man in his 20s fatally stabbed a 17-year-old girl and wounded another teenager in the southwestern city of Gwangju.

Saudi halted alerts before deadly airport strikes

The deadly Riyadh airport strikes killed at least 18 people and wounded over 300, raising questions about security preparedness and government communication.

RIYADH

Saudi Arabia stopped issuing public warnings of imminent military attacks days before a series of deadly strikes on Riyadh airport killed at least 18 people and wounded more than 300, raising questions about the kingdom's preparedness and public safety measures.

The government has not explained why its national early warning system remained silent before four attacks on the Saudi capital over the past week. The absence of alerts has prompted concerns among regional officials and political analysts about the country's vulnerability to further attacks and its ability to protect residents and visitors.

The warnings had previously highlighted the violence threatening Saudi Arabia's efforts to project an image of stability during its conflict with Yemen's Iran-aligned Houthis. Analysts said the decision to withhold alerts also appeared aimed at maintaining a sense of normalcy despite the growing security risks.

"They want to have it both ways: to launch a military operation and at the same time try to give confidence to the population and external stakeholders," said Sultan Alamer, a US-based Saudi academic and Senior Resident Fellow at the Middle East Policy Council.

Saudi Arabia's civil defence authority, which operates under the interior ministry and manages emergency alerts, did not respond to questions about the absence of warnings. The government media office also did not respond to requests for comment.

No alerts to public before 4 Riyadh attacks

- Riyadh airport strikes killed at least 18 people and injured more than 300.
- Public threat alerts reportedly stopped after September 29.
- Saudi Arabia has since resumed alerts.
- Analysts questioned the impact of the silence on public confidence and security preparedness.

The authority resumed issuing alerts, warning of potential threats in Riyadh and southern cities.

Saudi Arabia introduced its mobile-phone and social-media warning system in May. Its last alert before the recent strikes was issued on September 29 for the southern province of Najran.

Drone strikes sink cargo ship off Bulgaria

SOFIA

Eleven sailors were missing on Tuesday after a drone attack sank a cargo ship off Bulgaria's Black Sea coast, prompting Sofia to summon Russia's ambassador amid concerns over a possible second deadly maritime incident in the region within a week.

Bulgarian officials said two cargo ships were struck by drones overnight, with one sinking near the village of Krapets. Five crew members from the sunken vessel were rescued, while a search and rescue operation continued for the missing sailors. President Iliana Iotova identified the ship as the Guinea-Bissau-flagged HS Dignity.

A second vessel, the Malta-flagged Chelsea 3, was hit by three drones. All 15 crew members, comprising seven Ukrainians and eight Azerbaijanis, were rescued, with no serious injuries reported.

Russian Ambassador Eleonora Mitrofanova said she had no information from Russia's Defence Ministry about attacks on commercial vessels and suggested the incidents could have been a provocation by a third party.

The attacks drew condemnation from Ukraine and the European Union. European Commission President Ursula von der Leyen described the Black Sea as another front in the escalation of Russia's war against Ukraine, adding that those responsible should be held accountable.

Ukrainian Foreign Minister Andrii Sybiha accused Moscow of disregarding civilian lives and warned that attacks on Black Sea shipping threatened global food security.

The latest incidents follow the sinking of another vessel in Bulgaria's Black Sea exclusive economic zone a week earlier, when nine Syrian sailors and one Egyptian were lost.

Orban denies ordering seizure of Ukrainian gold convoy

BUDAPEST

Former Hungarian Prime Minister Viktor Orban has denied directing authorities to seize two Ukrainian cash-in-transit vehicles carrying $82 million in cash and gold, saying Hungarian officials acted independently during the March incident.

Seven Ukrainian nationals transporting the assets were briefly detained by Hungarian authorities on suspicion of money laundering. The seizure heightened tensions between Budapest and Kyiv ahead of Hungary's April election, which ended Orban's 16-year tenure as prime minister.

Ukraine's state-owned Oschadbank said its employees had been transporting the money and gold from Austria to Ukraine as part of a routine operation. The bank said similar transfers had been conducted weekly since Russia launched its full-scale invasion of Ukraine in 2022.

Hungarian prosecutors subsequently opened an investigation into the handling of the case, including allegations of unlawful detention and mis-

Ex-gang leader faces maximum penalty of life in prison

LAS VEGAS

A former gang leader was due to be sentenced on Tuesday for orchestrating the 1996 drive-by shooting that killed hip-hop star Tupac Shakur in Las Vegas, bringing to a close the only prosecution over a long-unsolved murder that shaped the golden age of rap music.

Duane "Keffe D" Davis, 63, who was found guilty of first-degree murder in August, was scheduled to return to a Las Vegas courtroom, where he faced a maximum penalty of life in prison without the possibility of parole.

Davis has said he will appeal his conviction. Until his arrest in 2023, the killing of Shakur, who was shot dead in the passenger seat of an SUV driven by his record executive, Marion "Suge" Knight, had remained one of America's most notorious cold cases for nearly three decades.

Davis was tried and convicted of hurriedly masterminding the murder in revenge for the beating of his nephew by Shakur and members of the rapper's entourage inside the MGM Grand casino on the Las Vegas Strip on September 7, 1996.

The casino clash grew out of hostility between two Los Angeles-area street gangs: the South Side Compton Crips, of which Davis was the self-described leader, and Mob Piru, which was linked to Shakur, Knight and their music label, Death Row Records.

Members of both groups were in Las Vegas that night to watch a world heavyweight title fight between Mike Tyson and Bruce Seldon.

Within hours of the brawl, Davis drove his nephew and two other associates out in a white Cadillac to look for Shakur and Knight, deter-

Will prioritise welfare reform over popularity: Merz

FRANKFURT

Friedrich Merz, the German Chancellor, said on Tuesday that he was prepared to risk declining popularity to push through long-delayed welfare reforms, arguing that changes were necessary to improve the prospects for younger generations.

Speaking at a conference organised by an employers' association, Merz said his priority was to put Germany on the right path rather than win public approval. He stressed that reforms should help secure better opportunities for young people amid mounting concerns about the country's social security systems.

"I have no intention of becoming the nation's darling. My intention is to set this country on the right course so that, above all, we can once again offer the younger generation decent prospects," Merz said.

His remarks come as his governing coalition faces growing political uncertainty following defeats in state elections last month and a decline in opinion poll ratings. The situation was further complicated by the resignation of Germany's labour minister, who belonged to the centre-left Social Democratic Party (SPD).

The minister's departure has added pressure on the coalition as it seeks to advance reforms amid political disagreements and public concerns over economic and social policies.

Merz also highlighted the urgent need to overhaul Germany's pay-as-you-go pension system, saying the country was at least 30 years late in addressing the issue. Under this system, contributions from current workers and employers help finance payments to existing retirees.

The chancellor warned that demographic changes would require difficult decisions to ensure the system remains sustainable. He said pension contributions paid by workers and employers would have to increase temporarily to accommodate these changes.

Hezbollah announces housing aid for war-hit families

BEIRUT

Lebanon's Hezbollah will provide financial assistance of up to $14,000 to families whose primary homes were destroyed or rendered uninhabitable during this year's war with Israel, Executive Council chairman Ali Damoush announced on Tuesday.

Under the assistance plan, eligible families in Beirut and its southern suburbs will receive $14,000, comprising

$8,000 for furniture and $6,000 for rent. Families elsewhere in Lebanon will receive $12,000, including $8,000 for furniture and $4,000 for rent. The rates remain unchanged from those offered in 2024.

The programme covers families whose homes were destroyed, severely damaged or declared uninhabitable following technical assessments. However, eligibility is restricted to households that used the affected properties as their primary residences and do not own a second home.

Payments will be distributed in four instalments over one year. The first payment will amount to $3,500 for eligible families in Beirut and its southern suburbs and $3,000 for families elsewhere in Lebanon.

Damoush said eligibility and assistance would be determined through criteria assessing the extent of damage to each property. He did not disclose the total amount Hezbollah would allocate to the programme.

The announcement follows reports that Hezbollah received $200 million from Iran last month to support displaced Lebanese families. Two people familiar with the transfer provided that figure, although the United States disputed the report, saying the money was "not there". Iran has not commented publicly.

Israel's bombardment and ground invasion have displaced hundreds of thousands of people since Hezbollah entered the regional conflict in support of Iran on March 2.

Ellyse Perry re-enters top 10 ODI batters

DUBAI

The latest update to the International Cricket Council (ICC) Women's Player Rankings reflects the sweeping dominance of the Australian national team during their ongoing home One Day International (ODI) series against Bangladesh. Capitalizing on a powerful start that has secured an unassailable 2-0 lead in the three-match bilateral campaign under the ICC Women's Championship umbrella, several key Australian players have made massive upward strides across the batting, bowling, and all-round standings.

Veteran all-rounder Ellyse Perry headlines the changes for the batting group, climbing two spots to re-enter the elite top 10 rankings. Perry's consistent poise and ability to anchor the innings continue to anchor Australia's formidable top order. Meanwhile, rising star Georgia Voll made one of the most eye-catching leaps of the update, surging eight places to claim 28th position following her exceptional match-winning contributions in Brisbane.

In the bowling department, Annabel Sutherland and Megan Schutt cemented their status as two of the world's premier wicket-takers. Sutherland, who delivered a sensational spell of four wickets complemented by an unbeaten 25 runs in the opening fixture at Allan Border Field, climbed to fourth place among bowlers and 17th in the batting charts. Veteran pace spearhead Megan Schutt also advanced two positions to secure fifth place in the bowling rankings following her clinical four-wicket haul in the second encounter.

Despite trailing in the series, visiting Bangladesh side members found positives through individual milestones. Captain Nigar Sultana Joty jumped 11 places to share 24th position in the ODI batting list, while teammate Sobhana Mostary climbed 11 spots to share 35th place.

Concurrently, the latest rankings captured stellar T20I performances from the West Indies and Zimbabwe series.

West Indies leg-end

Stafanie Taylor made a remarkable resurgence following a brilliant 64 off 39 balls that secured a clean 3-0 sweep against Zimbabwe. Taylor vaulted seven places to 40th among T20I batters and skyrocketed 29 spots in the all-rounder rankings to reach 39th.

Australia sweeps headlines as international women's cricket rankings shift following stellar performances across thrilling global series.

Nurul anticipates Afghanistan's spin bowling strategy

DHAKA

As the Bangladesh cricket squad packs its bags for the upcoming One Day International tri-series in the United Arab Emirates, wicketkeeper-batter Nurul Hasan has shared his tactical expectations. The multi-nation tournament, which also includes Zimbabwe, kicks off in Abu Dhabi on October 17 and serves as a vital preparatory stepping stone for upcoming marquee events like the Asia Cup and the ODI World Cup.

Speaking to reporters at the airport prior to their departure, Nurul pointed out that Afghanistan will likely alter their strategy for the limited-overs games. Although their current Test setup relies heavily on a pace-oriented approach, the return of world-class spin maestro Rashid Khan alongside other elite slow bowlers means they will likely favor turning tracks in the shorter format.

To counter such challenges, Bangladesh has injected fresh variety into their own bowling lineup by handing a maiden ODI call-up to mystery spinner Aliss Al Islam. Nurul believes that having a specialized mystery spinner provides a massive tactical advantage, especially when playing matches on foreign soil

I think they will try to back their strong zone, and their spin attack is good, so I feel they may opt for a little bit more spinning wicket.

- Nurul Hasan, Wicketkeeper-batter where unexpected variations can trouble opposing batting line-ups.

Looking at the bigger picture, Nurul emphasized that the squad is traveling with absolute confidence and a clear championship mindset. Rather than treating the tri-series as mere practice, the team views it as a crucial platform to establish winning momentum and boost team morale ahead of demanding international tournaments. Addressing concerns about the severe heat in the UAE, the experienced cricketer noted that extreme weather conditions remain an equal challenge for all competing nations, meaning adaptability and teamwork will ultimately decide who lifts the trophy.

GILL AND SHAFALI CLAIM ICC MONTHLY HONORS

DUBAI

Indian cricket celebrated a remarkable double today as national team stars Shubman Gill and Shafali Verma claimed the prestigious ICC Men's and Women's Players of the Month awards for September 2026. This phenomenal clean sweep marks only the third time in history that both honors have gone to representatives from the Board of Control for Cricket in India simultaneously.

Gill extended his record-breaking streak by securing his fifth monthly accolade in the men's division, tying him with West Indies captain Hayley Matthews for the most career wins. His latest triumph stems from a historic batting masterclass during India's home ODI series against the West Indies. After anchoring the opening match with a brilliant 110 runs to guide his side to an eight-wicket victory, Gill delivered a performance for the ages.

In the subsequent fixture, the right-handed maestro smashed an astonishing 223 runs off just 133 deliveries, etching his name into the record books by scoring the fastest double-century in one-day international history. His explosive innings successfully hunted down a daunting 406-run target, thrilling home fans and cementing India's dominance. Reflecting on the honor, Gill expressed immense gratitude while emphasizing the shifting landscape of modern cricket. He noted that the rapidly accelerating pace of ODI matches requires instant adaptation and sharp tactical awareness. With the upcoming ICC Men's Cricket

World Cup scheduled in southern Africa next year, Gill stressed that the squad remains fiercely dedicated to elevating their standards and building a resilient, balanced team prepared to conquer future global challenges.

Meanwhile, destructive opening batter Shafali Verma captured her second career monthly award following a stellar run of form across major continental tournaments. Shafali finished as India's leading run-scorer during their triumphant Women's Asia Cup campaign, piling up an astonishing 360 runs at an astonishing strike rate of 184.61 while also chipping in with six valuable wickets.

She seamlessly carried that momentum into the Asian Games, playing a pivotal role in her team's gold-medal charge. Her standout moments included a magnificent, unbeaten century against Bangladesh in the semi-final, followed by a crucial 48-run knock in the final against Sri Lanka. This honor adds to her previous win in November 2025, which followed her match-winning exploits in the Women's World Cup final.

Kerkez urges Liverpool to bounce back

NEW DELHI

Following a painful 3-0 defeat against rival powerhouse Manchester City at Anfield, Liverpool defender Milos Kerkez has stepped forward to emphasize that securing victories is the absolute priority for the club. The weekend loss marked the first major setback under the leadership of manager Andoni Iraola, halting the team's early-season momentum in the English Premier League. However, the squad has little time to dwell on the disappointment, with an important European fixture approaching fast.

The high-stakes domestic clash remained tightly contested and scoreless for more than an hour, with both tactical units canceling each other out in a tense battle. Liverpool displayed immense discipline and resilience during the opening forty-five minutes, successfully thwarting waves of attacking pressure while creating moments of promise. The momentum shifted dramatically in the sixty-second minute when midfielder Ryan Gravenberch received a second yellow card, resulting in a red card that reduced the hosts to ten men.

Kerkez admitted that the dressing room felt immense frustration over the final scoreline, noting that the team went toe-to-toe with their opponents until numerical disadvantage took its toll. Once Manchester City gained a player advantage, they capitalized on open spaces and controlled possession to secure three second-half goals.

Looking ahead, Liverpool aims to channel this frustration into positive energy as they travel to face Austrian side LASK in the UEFA Champions League. Kerkez stressed that winning is embedded in the club's culture, and an immediate response is required to restore confidence.

Meg Lanning returns as Melbourne Stars Captain

NEW DELHI

Cricket legend Meg Lanning is stepping back into the captaincy role for the Melbourne Stars ahead of the 12th season of the Women's Big Bash League. She takes over the leadership duties from star all-rounder Annabel Sutherland, who led the team for the past two seasons.

Sutherland made the brave and unselfish choice to step aside to reduce her heavy workload and focus entirely on her personal performance with bat and ball. Newly appointed head coach Richard Pyrah praised Sutherland for her incredible humility and character, noting that putting the team's needs first takes genuine strength. Pyrah expects this change to bring out the absolute best in Sutherland, who has been in phenomenal form recently, including starring in Australia's T20 World Cup victory and earning Player of the Tournament honors in The Hundred.

Although Lanning

admitted that taking on the captaincy again was not initially part of her plans, she embraced the challenge without hesitation. Having previously led the Stars for five seasons, she is eager to guide the squad when the new campaign kicks off on October 28. This time, leadership will be a collaborative effort.

Lanning, Sutherland, and Kim Garth plan to share the responsibility to ensure no single player bears too much weight.

Meg Lanning returns as Melbourne Stars captain, while Annabel Sutherland steps down to focus on peak performance and shared leadership.

Chris Green to lead Australia in Hong Kong Sixes

HONG KONG

Versatile all-rounder Chris Green will step up to captain Australia's seven-man squad for the upcoming Hong Kong Sixes 2026 tournament. The action-packed three-day competition is scheduled to run from October 30 to November 1, bringing high-energy cricket back to international fans worldwide. Australia enters the global showcase with high hopes of capturing their second championship title. Their only previous tournament victory came back in 2010. To achieve this goal, selectors have assembled a balanced lineup tailored specifically for the fast-paced, high-scoring demands of the six-a-side format.

Captain Green will anchor the side alongside seasoned fast bowler Kane Richardson. The squad also features explosive batting talents and utility players including Jack Wood, Max Bryant, Nick Hobson, Alex Ross, and Matt Kelly. This blend of international experience and dynamic stroke play is designed to match the aggressive tempo of the historic tournament.

Organizers have expressed immense excitement over Australia's confirmation. Anuraag Bhatnagar, Director of Marketing and Commercial at Cricket Hong Kong, China, highlighted that the team's competitive spirit will elevate the tournament's overall quality and deliver an unforgettable spectacle for cricket enthusiasts.

The 2026 edition introduces several exciting milestones, including a landmark partnership with JSW Sports as the official commercial partner. Fans eager to catch the explosive hitting and innovative shot-making can purchase tickets for HKD 780 to secure full access across all three days.
