Karnataka aims to become end-to-end electronics hub

CH NEWS, BENGALURU
Karnataka is seeking to strengthen its electronics ecosystem by bringing design, manufacturing, testing and exports under one integrated industrial framework.
Minister for Large and Medium Industries M.B. Patil said the State has the talent, industrial base and startup ecosystem needed to emerge as a major global destination for electronics. Speaking at the Karnataka Electronics Leadership Summit at Bengaluru International Exhibition Centre on Tumakuru Road, Patil said the Government would provide necessary support to companies and investors.
“Our goal is to ensure that the entire electronics value chain — from design, manufacturing and testing to exports — is carried out within the State. The Government will extend all necessary support towards this,” M.B. Patil, Minister for Large and Medium Industries, said.
The Minister said the electronics sector had become an integral part of modern life and Karnataka had several advantages in attracting investments in the sector. The State has more than 20,000 chip designers and

Parameshwara asks DCs to speed up revenue services

Parameshwara instructs district officials to speed up citizen services, land identification and registration of youth organisations across Karnataka.

CH NEWS, BENGALURU
Deputy Chief Minister G Parameshwara directed Deputy Commissioners to accelerate welfare, land identification and revenue-service delivery across districts.
Deputy Chief Minister and Revenue Minister G Parameshwara on Wednesday reviewed the progress of the Revenue Department with all Deputy Commissioners through video conference from Vidhana Soudha and issued several instructions.
He asked officials to speed up registration of the Bharat Jodo Yuva Sangha, a flagship initiative of the CM. The registration process, including appointment of mentors, had been delayed due to technical issues. Officials were directed to immediately distribute application forms and facilitate their completion. Reviewing the Praja Seva Abhiyan, Parameshwara said a large number of applications related to the Revenue Department were being received. These included RTC corrections, phodi cases and pension-related issues.

He said procedures relating to RTC and phodi had already been simplified. Officials facing difficulties should consult senior officers and take necessary action instead of delaying applications. On providing residential sites to the poor, he said the programme had received a positive response from people. He directed officials in districts where land had not yet been identified to complete the process by month-end.

“The Bharat Jodo Yuva Sangha is the Chief Minister’s dream project. The process of registration and appointment of mentors should be further expedited.”

Women’s night-shift safety covered under OSH Rules

CH NEWS, BENGALURU
The Karnataka Labour Department has clarified that safety safeguards for women working night shifts remain in force under the State’s Occupational Safety, Health and Working Conditions (OSH) Rules.
The clarification came after the Karnataka State IT/ITeS Employees’ Union (KITU) raised objections to the deletion of several provisions from the Karnataka Shops and Commercial Establishments Act, 1961. The union had alleged that the changes could affect safeguards such as driver verification, authorised pick-up and drop routes and confidentiality of women employees’ contact details.
The Labour Department said the provisions were not withdrawn but incorporated into the OSH Rules following amendments to the Shops and Commercial Establishments Act through a September 4, 2026 notification.
“The removal of such provisions from the Shops and Commercial Establishments Act does not mean that safety protections for women employees have been withdrawn,” the Labour Department said.
Under the amended framework, establishments employing fewer than 10 workers will

Fake astrologer allegedly dupes woman of ₹40 lakh gold

CH NEWS, BENGALURU
A 62-year-old woman has complained to police that a man posing as an astrologer allegedly collected her gold jewellery worth about ₹40 lakh for performing puja and later failed to return it.
Shantamma, a resident of Byatarayanapura, approached the Byatarayanapura police against Venkatesh, who is reportedly absconding. According to the complaint, Venkatesh knew the woman and practised astrology near Victoria Hospital, where she frequently visited.
Police said the accused allegedly gained her confidence before visiting her home to conduct a Chowdeshwari Puja. He allegedly told her that keeping and worshipping gold ornaments at his residence would protect her family from negative influences.
Over nearly a year, Venkatesh allegedly collected her ornaments on new moon and full moon days, taking jewellery worth around ₹40 lakh.

The alleged fraud came to light when Shantamma sought the return of her jewellery for Varamahalakshmi festival celebrations on August 19. According to the complaint, Venkatesh claimed he had suffered a serious accident and sent her a video showing a person apparently lying in a hospital with a head injury.
He subsequently switched off his phone. When Shantamma showed the video to her children, they suspected it had been generated using artificial intelligence.
The family then approached the police, following which a case was registered. Police are searching for Venkatesh and investigating the circumstances surrounding the collection of the jewellery and the alleged use of the AI-generated video.
The whereabouts of the jewellery have not yet been established. Police said further investigation is underway.

Bittu Tabahi joins Turahalli Forest cleanup

CH NEWS, BENGALURU
Environmental activist Surendra Singh Choudhary, popularly known as Bittu Tabahi, joined a volunteer-led cleanup drive at Turahalli Forest.
Madhya Pradesh environmental activist Surendra Singh Choudhary, popularly known as Bittu Tabahi, extended his cleanliness campaign to Bengaluru by participating in a waste-clearing drive at Turahalli Forest in Banashankari 6th Stage. Choudhary, 21, gained widespread attention for his efforts to clean the heavily polluted Ajnar River in Biaora, Madhya Pradesh. He documented the campaign on social media, sharing visuals of the river before and after the cleanup.
In Bengaluru, Choudhary joined local residents, civic groups, volunteers and environmentalist A.N. Yellappa Reddy in clearing waste from the periphery of Turahalli Forest. According to reports, the team removed around two tonnes of waste during the drive.

More than 100 people reportedly participated in the campaign, which aimed to address the accumulation of garbage along the forest boundary and create awareness about responsible waste disposal. During the cleanup, the team reportedly found various forms of discarded waste, including medical waste and animal carcasses. The findings raised concerns over improper dumping in and around the forest area.
Choudhary first attracted attention after beginning his Ajnar River cleanup campaign on Republic Day. His efforts later received support from the Biaora municipal corporation, which deployed heavy machinery to remove accumulated waste and plastic from the river. His work also drew international attention. Boyan Slat, founder and CEO of The Ocean Cleanup, publicly invited Choudhary to work with the organisation after seeing his cleanup activities online.

Use CSR funds for rural infrastructure: Shivalingegowda

CH NEWS, BENGALURU
Excise Minister K.M. Shivalingegowda on Wednesday called for greater use of Corporate Social Responsibility (CSR) funds for infrastructure and essential services in rural areas.
Speaking at a meeting with distillery owners and senior officials at Vikas Soudha, Shivalingegowda said CSR funds should be channelled towards projects that directly benefit rural communities.
He suggested using the funds for drainage infrastructure, schools, colleges, hospitals and the purchase of medical equipment. Such targeted spending would ensure that CSR funds are utilised effectively and address key infrastructure requirements in rural areas, he said.
Shivalingegowda, who is also the Hassan district in-charge Minister, chaired the meeting to discuss development programmes that could be taken up under CSR initiatives. The Minister also directed Excise Department officials to strengthen measures against the production and supply of illicit liquor.
He said consumers must be provided with good-quality liquor and called for strict enforcement to prevent illegal manufacturing and distribution.
Officials were instructed to identify tax evaders and take stringent action against those

FARM LOAN RELIEF

Drought-hit farmers get loan repayment relief

CH NEWS, BENGALURU
The State Level Bankers’ Committee has approved a repayment relief package to ease the financial burden on farmers in drought-hit areas.
The package provides a 12-month moratorium on agricultural and allied loan repayments and extends the overall repayment period depending on the severity of drought.
The State Government has declared 101 taluks across 24 districts as drought-hit, with 89 classified as severely drought-hit and 12 as moderately drought-hit. The relief covers Kisan Credit Card (KCC), agricultural and allied loans, including those for dairy, sericulture and fisheries. Farmers in moderately drought-hit taluks will get up to 36 months for repayment, while those in severely drought-hit taluks will get up to 60 months.

“The relief package will provide necessary support to farmers affected by drought, while banks have been directed to ensure timely implementation,” Chief Secretary, Karnataka Government, said.

Banks will also provide fresh loans to farmers, subject to their existing norms, based on

High refill, deposit costs deter 10-kg LPG buyers

BENGALURU
The steep price gap between standard and smaller LPG cylinders is discouraging consumers from choosing the 10-kg option in Karnataka. State-owned oil companies have been promoting 10-kg LPG cylinders as new 14.2-kg domestic connections remain unavailable amid supply constraints following the West Asia war. However, distributors said consumers are reluctant to switch because a 10-kg refill costs ₹1,700-1,800, compared with ₹945 for a 14.2-kg cylinder. The deposit is also higher at ₹3,000 against ₹2,200. More than 36,000 applications for new LPG connections are pending across Karnataka. Distributors said some consumers are opting for induction stoves instead, particularly beneficiaries of the Gruha Jyothi scheme.

CENTRE HIKES EPFO WAGE CEILING

Rs 15,000

Rs 25,000

The EPFO wage ceiling remained unchanged from 2004 to 2014, before being substantially enhanced to Rs 15,000 in September 2014.

NEW DELHI

The Union Government has raised the monthly wage ceiling for Employees' Provident Fund Organisation (EPFO) coverage to Rs 25,000 from Rs 15,000, Union minister Ashwini Vaishnaw said at a Cabinet briefing on Wednesday.

The government will spend around Rs 11,339 crore every year as part of the move, which is aimed at widening social security coverage for employees.

Vaishnaw said the broader coverage would provide greater stability to employees and help employers retain their workforce.

The decision raises the wage threshold used for EPFO coverage by Rs 10,000 a month, expanding the pool of employees eligible for the benefit.

What does this mean?

The change will bring employees earning between Rs 15,000

PROPOSAL HIGHLIGHTS

- Expenditure Finance Committee recommended the proposal.
- Meeting took place on June 16, 2026.
- Annual government expenditure estimated at Rs 11,339 crore.
- Total five-year cost reaches Rs 56,696 crore.
- EPFO administers major provident and pension schemes.
- Labour Ministry will implement cabinet decisions.

REVISION HIGHLIGHTS

- New wage cap: Mandatory contribution threshold raised from Rs 15,000 to Rs 25,000 per month.
- Added workers: Over 51 lakh new employees will join mandatory EPFO coverage.
- Past changes: The limit was last updated in Sept 2014, after remaining unchanged for a decade from 2004.

What this means for employees & employers

Broader protection: Employees earning between ₹15K and ₹25K now automatically receive mandatory PF, pension, and insurance benefits

Retirement corpus: Workers build larger long-term savings through higher mandatory contribution.

Take-home pay: Employees newly-captured under the raised limit may see a slight drop in monthly take-home pay due to the standard 12% basic wage deduction, and Rs 25,000 a month within the mandatory social security framework. In practical terms, more workers will now be covered by the formal retirement and social security system instead of having to remain outside mandatory EPF coverage because their wages exceed the earlier ceiling.

Employer costs: Companies face higher statutory matching costs for a larger pool of eligible staff.

For eligible employees, the expanded coverage means access to provident fund savings, pension protection and insurance cover, subject to the applicable scheme provisions. It also makes these statutory benefits available to a larger section of the formal workforce.

Over 51 lakh more employees to benefit

The government expects the higher wage ceiling to bring more than 51 lakh additional employees under mandatory social security coverage. The proposal was moved by the Ministry of Labour and Employment and approved by the Union Cabinet chaired by Prime Minister Modi.

What benefits are covered?

The expanded framework will provide access to the Employees' Provident Fund, pension benefits under the Employees' Pension Scheme (EPS) and insurance protection under the Employees' Deposit Linked Insurance Scheme (EDLI), subject to applicable provisions.

Why was ceiling revised?

The EPFO wage ceiling was last revised in September 2014, when it was increased to Rs 15,000. Before that, the ceiling had remained unchanged between 2004 and 2014. The government said the latest revision takes into account sustained wage growth, rising incomes and the expansion of formal employment over the intervening period.

What will it cost the govt?

The annual government expenditure following the enhancement is estimated at Rs 11,339 crore, compared with existing annual budgetary support of around Rs 10,250 crore. Over five years, the estimated expenditure is around Rs 56,696 crore.

EPFO in numbers

EPFO currently administers the Employees' Provident Fund, Employees' Pension Scheme and Employees' Deposit Linked Insurance Scheme.

According to the latest EPFO data cited by the government, EPFO has around 7.98 crore contributing members across about 7.68 lakh contributing establishments. The EPS provides pension benefits to around 82 lakh pensioners.

Tax policy debate must go beyond sectoral interests: FM

Finance Minister Nirmala Sitharaman calls for independent tax research in public debate and urges tax professionals to put national interest first.

NEW DELHI

Union Finance Minister Nirmala Sitharaman has called for greater public discussion around independent tax policy research, stressing that debates on taxation should extend beyond the interests of individual sectors.

Speaking at the Eighth International Tax Conference on 'New Age Taxation', organised by the International Tax Research and Analysis Foundation, Sitharaman said tax professionals have a wider role to play in shaping the country's tax policy discourse.

The Finance Minister said discussions on taxation should not remain limited to the concerns of particular industries or professional groups. She urged tax experts to take a broader view while contributing to policy discussions.

"A mature tax policy debate must go beyond sectoral con-

SPEECH SNAPSHOTS

National interest first: Tax proposals should prioritize broader economic goals over narrow sectoral demands.

Space sector & compliance: Lenient taxation should apply to space innovation while commercial activities face taxation, alongside ongoing rationalization of TDS/TCS provisions and reduced criminal liabilities.

Treaties & research: India has updated key tax treaties regarding capital gains, and independent bodies like ITRAF are encouraged to amplify their research in mainstream policy discourse.

siderations," she said, urging tax professionals to "rise above sectoral consideration and put nation first."

Her comments come at a time when taxation and regulatory changes are increasingly being discussed not just by businesses and professionals, but also in the wider public sphere.

Govt rationalises TDS and TCS rules

Sitharaman also highlighted changes made by the government to provisions concerning Tax Deducted at Source (TDS) and Tax Collected at Source (TCS).

According to the Finance Minister, the government has consciously worked towards simplifying and rationalising these provisions. This includes increasing the thresholds applicable to certain requirements and reducing criminal consequences associated with tax-related provisions. The changes are aimed at making compliance requirements more proportionate while easing some of the burdens associated with India's tax framework.

Sitharaman also spoke about India's approach to taxation involving cross-border transactions and investments.

She said India had renegotiated its tax treaties with Mauritius, Singapore and Cyprus. The objective, according to the Finance Minister, was to restore India's right to tax capital gains at the source.

Tax treaties play an important role in determining how income and gains involving residents and entities across different countries are taxed.

CM to launch Rs 1,775 cr projects in Kalaburagi today

KALABURAGI

Chief Minister DK Shivakumar will launch development projects worth ₹1,775.41 crore across the seven districts of Kalyana Karnataka during his two-day visit to Kalaburagi.

Home, IT-BT and e-Governance Minister Priyanka Kharge, who is also the district in-charge minister, announced the programme at a press conference in Kalaburagi on Wednesday. Shivakumar will hoist the national flag and address the Kalyana Karnataka Utsav at the Police Parade Ground on September 17, marking the 79th year of the region's integration with the Indian Union.

Kharge said the Chief Minister would first pay floral tributes to the statue of Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel at SVP Circle at 8.30 am before proceeding to the Police Parade Ground.

The development package includes foundation-laying for 557 projects costing ₹1,071.56 crore and inauguration of 244 completed projects executed at a cost of ₹703.85 crore, he said.

On the drought situation, Kharge said the State could declare drought only in accordance with the guidelines of the National Disaster Response Fund (NDRF).

He said the government would monitor rainfall for another two weeks, obtain reports from districts and decide on further action. He urged BJP leaders to press the Union government to simplify NDRF guidelines and provide relief to drought-hit farmers.

He said the State had repeatedly requested changes to the existing norms, which he claimed were causing difficulties for farmers.

He also criticised the BJP over the Vande Mataram controversy, alleging that the issue was being used to divert attention from drought and unemployment.

GESCOM Chairman Praveen Patil Harawal and MLC Tippannappa Kamaknur were present.

Cong 'very vigilant' on SIR in K'taka: KCV

BENGALURU

AICC General Secretary K C Venugopal on Wednesday said the Congress has taken serious note of the SIR of electoral rolls underway in Karnataka and is "very vigilant" against alleged malpractices in the poll process.

Raising concerns over the "genuineness" of the deletion of names from electoral rolls in the state, he accused the Narendra Modi-led government at the Centre of "manipulating elections" through the Election Commission.

Venugopal, who is in charge of the Congress' organisation at the national level, along with AICC General Secretary in charge of Karnataka Randeep Singh Surjewala, CM D K Shivakumar and KPCC chief B K Hariprasad, held meetings with party leaders, office-bearers and DCC presidents here on Wednesday.

"We had a meeting regarding Special Intensive Revision in Karnataka. BJP is fighting against us using CBI, ED, IT, and now unfortunately the Election Commission of India has joined the list, too. The number of votes being deleted in Karnataka is somewhat surprising; around 23% of total voters have been deleted from the voter list," Venugopal said.

Speaking to reporters here,

BJP is fighting against us using CBI, ED, IT, and now unfortunately the EC has joined the list, too. The number of votes being deleted in Karnataka is somewhat surprising; around 23% of total voters have been deleted from the voter list.

KC Venugopal, AICC General Secretary

he said nobody would have any problem if the deletions were genuine. However, he said the actions of the Election Commission, especially over the last three to four years, had raised concerns that the deletions might not be genuine.

Alleging that about 50 lakh voters were deleted in West Bengal ahead of the elections there, the Congress leader said, "We understand the motive of the Election Commission behind carrying out this SIR exercise."

"Our party today took a very serious note. I'm requesting the CM, who is here, as state government officers are deployed as BLOs—we don't want any undue favouritism from the commission or officials or agencies. We want a free and fair play from the Election Commission of India. I think the Karnataka government will also ensure that those trying to cause mischief through SIR will pay the price." One can win an election with the mandate of the people, but one cannot win with "vote chori", he said.

Study questions added immunotherapy in lung cancer

CH NEWS, BENGALURU
A phase 3 trial has found that adding the immunotherapy drug atezolizumab to stereotactic body radiation therapy (SBRT) does not improve overall survival among certain high-risk, early-stage lung cancer patients. The study involved 417 patients with non-small-cell lung cancer who were medically inoperable or had declined surgery. Among 402 eligible patients, two-year overall survival was 82% for both those receiving SBRT alone and those given the combination treatment. The trial was stopped early for futility, with researchers finding no survival advantage from atezolizumab. Serious adverse events were also higher with the combination.

B’luru police begin shifting 11,341 seized vehicles

CH NEWS, BENGALURU
As part of the Safe Footpath Campaign, Bengaluru police, in coordination with the Greater Bengaluru Authority (GBA), began relocating 11,341 seized vehicles parked around police stations and on public footpaths. The vehicles, including two-wheelers, three-wheelers and four-wheelers, are being shifted in batches to seven off-site locations identified outside Bengaluru. The Revenue Department has allotted 26 acres across these locations for storing the vehicles. Many vehicles have remained near police stations for more than 15 years as they are linked to ongoing court cases involving accidents and criminal offences. Their prolonged presence has turned areas around some police stations into makeshift scrapyards and obstructed pedestrian movement. The relocation drive follows complaints from residents about blocked footpaths and the deteriorating condition of vehicles parked around police stations. Bengaluru Urban Development Minister Krishna Byre Gowda said the police had earlier approached the courts seeking a mechanism to clear the vehicles, including a fast-track arrangement, but the request was not accepted. Gowda said the Revenue Department subsequently helped identify land where the vehicles could be stored until the related cases are disposed of. Owners whose vehicles are involved in ongoing legal cases can claim them from the new storage locations by producing a court order, officials said.

Surjewala says ED targeting Jarkiholi over ST leadership

CH NEWS, BENGALURU
AICC General Secretary Randeep Singh Surjewala on Wednesday alleged that the Enforcement Directorate was targeting Karnataka Minister Satish Jarkiholi because of his influence among ST and poorer communities. Speaking to reporters, Surjewala described Jarkiholi as the “tallest leader” of the ST and poorer communities in Karnataka and said the Congress would stand in solidarity with him. His remarks came after the ED conducted searches at premises linked to Jarkiholi, his family members and associates earlier this month. The ED has said its searches were part of a probe under the Foreign Exchange Management Act (FEMA) into suspected undisclosed overseas investments and financial transactions. The agency searched 21 premises and said it seized unaccounted Indian currency worth about Rs 3.3 crore and foreign currency valued at around Rs 15 lakh. It also said documents and digital material relating to overseas investments and alleged irregularities in PWD contracts were found. Surjewala alleged that central agencies had targeted several Congress leaders, particularly those belonging to SC, ST and OBC communities. He accused the BJP of trying to intimidate Congress leaders and said the party would not be deterred. He also referred to former minister B Nagendra, who resigned following allegations linked to the Karnataka Mahharshi Valmiki ST Development Corporation, and contrasted the case with pending sanctions for prosecution involving opposition leaders. Surjewala further claimed that the ED had filed thousands of cases but had secured convictions in only a small number. These figures were presented by him as part of his criticism of the agency. On the lack of women in the Karnataka Cabinet, Surjewala said discussions were under way and the issue would be resolved after consultations with Chief Minister D K Shivakumar and the KPCC president. He also defended the State government’s decision to restrict Vande Mataram to two stanzas at official functions, saying the government would follow the prescribed protocol when the President, Vice-President, Prime Minister or Governor attends such events.

ASHOKA’S ALLEGATIONS
Opposition Leader R. Ashoka criticised the Congress government over alleged restrictions on Ganeshotsav celebrations and claimed Hindu activists were being selectively targeted. He also raised the T. Narasipura police controversy and questioned the government’s handling of alleged misconduct by an inspector. Ashoka demanded that restrictions on religious processions and loudspeakers be applied uniformly, while reiterating his support for Hindu organisations facing what he described as government pressure.

Chief Minister D.K. Shivakumar over the controversy involving the T. Narasipura police inspector. He alleged that the inspector had misbehaved with organisation workers and questioned the government’s handling of the matter. Referring to restrictions on processions, Ashoka said similar rules should apply uniformly to all communities. He also criticised the government over restrictions on RSS path sanchalan and alleged that Congress governments had failed to enforce court-mandated limits on loudspeakers used for azaan. Ashoka further accused the Congress of practising what he described as “fake Hindutva” and said the government should not take decisions based on electoral considerations. He also criticised the government over Chief Minister D.K. Shivakumar’s statements concerning JD(S) leader H.D. Kumaraswamy, alleging that the issue had become personal.

SYM warns of intensified agitation over teacher recruitment

CH NEWS, BENGALURU
The Solidarity Youth Movement Karnataka has urged the State government to honour its assurance on teacher recruitment for linguistic minority medium candidates. The organisation said thousands of aspiring candidates were disappointed when linguistic minority candidates, including those from Urdu and Marathi medium backgrounds, were not adequately considered during the recruitment process for 15,000 teachers. Following demands from candidates and public interest organisations, the government had verbally assured that it would recruit 800 Urdu and 200 Marathi teachers, the SYM said. Based on the assurance, candidates withdrew their protests and began waiting for a fresh recruitment notification. However, reports that the govt was considering recruitment for fewer posts have caused concern among eligible candidates, the organisation said. The SYM Karnataka and other organisations have repeatedly urged the govt to ensure adequate opportunities for Urdu, Marathi and other linguistic minority candidates in the recruitment process. Any reduction in the promised vacancies would amount to going back on the commitment and create uncertainty over their future, it added. It demanded that the government immediately issue clear orders to fill all the announced posts and reconsider any proposal to restrict recruitment to a smaller number of vacancies.

Citizens across Bengaluru are raising alarms over civic neglect, highlighting a dangerous broken drain cover on Cunningham Crescent Road alongside runaway garbage dumps near residential schools and homes in Seshadripuram and Chikkagowdana Palya.

A broken drain cover on Cunningham Crescent Road, directly in front of Prestige Exotica, is surrounded by loose debris, creating a severe public hazard for pedestrians and motorists alike.

A new garbage dumping spot has emerged on an empty parking site on Seshadripuram 2nd Cross Road (off 1st Main Road), right near the gate of Renaissance Craggs. Situated in a residential area near a busy school with many children, this accumulating waste poses a severe health and safety hazard.

Residents on Seshadripuram 2nd Cross Road (off 1st Main Road) are demanding immediate action after sanitation workers began leaving their garbage carts parked directly against a private home's compound wall. The placement of the cart has turned the residential wall into an unofficial neighborhood dumping ground, compounding the issue with an existing garbage accumulation site located right across the street.

An uncleaned garbage dumping spot on Chikkagowdana Palya Main Road, located right at the corner of Srinivasa Theater, is causing severe distress to local residents. Open dumping and a lack of regular clearance have left the entire residential street overwhelmed by a foul stench.

GBA reports around 2 lakh Ganesha immersions

BENGALURU SAFELY CONCLUDED ITS VIBRANT GANESHA FESTIVAL, WITH AUTHORITIES MANAGING THE ECO-FRIENDLY IMMERSION OF OVER 206,000 STATUES.

BENGALURU

The Greater Bengaluru Authority has successfully managed a massive festive clean-up after two days of religious celebrations. Local authorities confirmed that more than two lakh decorative statues were safely submerged across five major municipal corporation zones without any major hit-downs.

Official numbers show that residents across the region wrapped up their annual festivities by sending off their beloved deities in an organized manner. A staggering total of 206,564 Ganesh idols found their way into designated water bodies and special collection points over the course of the two-day event.

The vast majority of the community completed their rituals on the very first day. Records indicate that 186,820 statues were immersed right away on September 14.

BREAKDOWN OF DAY 2 IMMERSIONS
• West City Corporation:	13,009 idols
• Central City Corporation:	2,070 idols
• East City Corporation:	2,056 idols
• South City Corporation:	2,034 idols
• North City Corporation:	575 idols

Meanwhile, a smaller wave of celebrations wrapped up on the following day, adding another 19,744 statues to the final tally on September 15. Municipal workers worked around the clock to make sure the process went smoothly. Officials set up temporary water tanks, permanent structures, and special mobile tanker trucks right next to local lakes. This thoughtful set-up helped prevent overcrowding and protected natural water resources from getting heavily polluted by toxic paints and plaster materials.

across different neighborhoods. The West City Corporation recorded the highest activity by far, with residents there submerging 13,009 idols.

Other areas saw much smaller numbers as most celebrations had already concluded. The Central City Corporation handled 2,070 statues, closely followed by the East zone with 2,056, and the South zone with 2,034. Lastly, the North City Corporation wrapped up the final day with a modest total of 575 immersions.

Civic leaders praised residents for cooperating with environmental guidelines during the festival. City cleaning crews immediately started clearing leftover floral offerings and trash from the tank sites to keep public spaces neat. Authorities released detailed zone-wise statements for anyone wanting to look closer at the official municipal records and statistics.

BNCC Commissioner launches direct phone-in for citizens

BENGALURU

People living in the northern part of Bengaluru now have a direct line to city officials to resolve their everyday civic troubles. The local municipal corporation has introduced a brand-new weekly phone-in program designed to bridge the gap between residents and the government.

The main goal of this initiative is to listen closely to public complaints without any middleman. Local authorities want to make sure that common neighborhood problems get fixed much faster than before.

The upcoming telephone session is scheduled for this Friday, September 18, 2026. Citizens can call in early in the morning between 7:00 a.m. and 9:00 a.m. to talk about what is bothering them in their neighborhoods.

During these two hours, callers can report a wide variety of public infrastructure issues. People frequently struggle with damaged roads, broken streetlights, and irregular garbage pickup. Others might want to discuss the danger of falling tree branches, the rising mosquito population, or the growing menace of stray dogs. Residents can also bring up matters concerning local parks, illegal banners on streets, blocked footpaths, and problems with official property documents like the e-Khata.

City officials have set up a smooth tracking system to handle every call. Once a citizen shares a problem, workers will instantly enter the details into a digital complaint portal known as Sahaaya 2.0. The system will then route the issue straight to the correct department head. Furthermore, callers will receive text messages on their phones containing complaint reference numbers and the names of the officers assigned to help them.

If people cannot call during the live event, they still have other ways to reach out. The municipal control room remains open through a designated mobile number and WhatsApp line, alongside traditional landline numbers. Residents can also type out their grievances and upload photos directly through the official mobile application from the comfort of their homes.

Local leaders hope this transparent approach will encourage more community participation. By giving ordinary citizens a voice, the city aims to clean up neighborhoods and improve daily life for everyone across the northern zone.

Yediyur Lake halts immersions for cleaning work

BENGALURU

Residents planning to visit the Yediyur Lake immersion facility need to change their schedules for the upcoming festival days. Local authorities have announced a temporary shutdown of the popular Ganesha idol immersion tank to clear out accumulated debris and refresh the water.

Municipal officials explained that the designated immersion pond has nearly reached its maximum capacity. Months of continuous use have left the tank crowded with heavy layers of silt, mud, and leftover festive waste. Because there is simply no more room left for new statues, maintenance crews must step in immediately to clear out the mess.

To tackle this problem, the Bengaluru West City Corporation has scheduled intensive cleaning operations on two specific dates. The immersion tank will be completely closed to the general public on Thursday, September 18, and again on Tuesday, September 22, 2026.

During these temporary closures, entry to the waterfront zone will be heavily restricted. Maintenance teams will scoop out accumulated soil and festive remnants, pump out the murky water, and refill the basin with fresh water. Officials want to ensure the tank remains safe, clean, and fully functional for citizens who still need to complete their late-season religious rituals before the fes-

BENGALURU SOUTH OVERHAULS RULES TO BOOST GOVERNANCE

BENGALURU

The municipal administration in the southern zone of Bengaluru is undergoing a massive administrative overhaul designed to trim bureaucratic fat and sharpen day-to-day public service delivery. Top government officials met this week to finalize a comprehensive restructuring plan focused on decentralization, strict accountability, and modern digital governance across all local departments.

A high-level steering session took place under the leadership of Shri T.M. Vijay Bhaskar, who serves as the Chairman of the Cadre and Recruitment Rules Committee for the Greater Bengaluru Authority. Alongside Corporation Commissioner Shri K.N. Ramesh, the committee laid down strict rules to eliminate redundant senior positions that have historically slowed down decision-making. By cutting through bureaucratic layers, the administration aims to fast-track localized problem-solving for residents.

A major highlight of the new framework involves empowering grassroots administrative units. Officials discussed scientifically reorganizing sub-divisions to align neatly with assembly constituencies. Under this model, Assistant Revenue Officers will take direct charge of every four wards in dense urban cores and every three wards in outlying peripheral neighborhoods, specifically covering both the revenue and engineering wings.

Solid waste management also received critical attention during the discussions. To permanently solve urban garbage challenges, authorities mapped out precise duties for Medical Officers of Health, Junior Health Inspectors, and Ward Marshals. Strict performance targets will now govern door-to-door waste pickup, mandatory source segregation, and the total eradication of illegal trash blackspots.

MULTIPLEXES HIT WITH FINES

South Corporation fines PVR and Forum Mall

BENGALURU

Municipal authorities in the southern zone of the city have cracked down heavily on commercial negligence, collecting substantial penalties from major entertainment hubs. Commissioner K.N. Ramesh announced that inspection teams successfully penalized prominent multiplex and retail management groups for ignoring basic sanitation guidelines and environment protection laws.

The latest enforcement drive targeted well-known commercial spots to check compliance with local waste disposal standards. Officials first raided the popular PVR INOX multiplex located on Hosur Main Road within the Lakkasandra Ward. Inspectors discovered that the cinema management had completely disregarded mandatory Solid Waste Management regulations.

Instead of keeping organic and dry refuse apart, workers had mixed everything together without source segregation. Furthermore, staff members were caught using prohibited single-use plastic items, including disposable food and beverage containers. Consequently, authorities levied a

Drain encroachment sparks flooding woes in Hunsur

CH NEWS, HUNSUR

Severe waterlogging has triggered intense distress among residents of Nandini Layout following illegal encroachment on a major drainage channel, stated Satyappa, President of the Satya NAS Foundation, on Wednesday. Speaking to reporters, Satyappa revealed that a private owner dumped soil on public land adjacent to a costly government septic tank behind Shastri School. This raised ground level drastically narrowed the stormwater channel, which accommodates runoff from nearly half the town and requires at least a ten-foot width. As a consequence of this bottleneck, recent rains caused sewage-mixed water to back up directly outside houses in Ward 30. Despite regular tax collection, municipal authorities and the local councilor have failed to provide relief after a single perfunctory inspection. Satyappa criticized the local administration and the unaware MLA for neglecting taxpayers' grievances.

Police launched a search in August after Venkatesh allegedly attempted an explosion; five accomplices were arrested, while he fled into wilderness

CH NEWS, TUMAKURU

A fugitive masquerading as an insurgent was captured following a massive manhunt across the Pavagada hills, ending a month of heightened alarm, law enforcement officials announced on Wednesday. The suspect, identified as Kanikalabande Venkatesh, had evaded authorities after being named in multiple criminal cases involving extortion and explosive devices. Acting on credible intelligence that he was taking refuge in the rugged terrain of the Kadamalakunte hills near Pavagada town, district police deployed a specialized combing force of over 250 personnel. Officers cordoned off the rocky area overnight, tracked him down, and took him into custody without incident. He was subsequently subjected to a medical examination before formal questioning. Police had launched the high-stakes search operation in August, after Venkatesh allegedly attempted to trigger a crude explosive near an agricultural pump set in Kanikalabande village. The blast attempt spread panic across the taluk. While officers quickly arrested five accomplices—including his wife, Savitramma, and two sons—Venkatesh fled into the wilderness, remaining on the run. Investigations revealed that he also operated an extortion racket using insurgent threats. He allegedly left letters written in Telugu under the banner of the outlawed outfit 'CPI People's War Janashakti Devanna Dalam' near private farmland in Gangasagara, demanding five lakh rupees from a local farmer named Nagabhushana.

Additionally, he faces charges for intercepting commuters and extorting money on rural roads. Records show Venkatesh has a history of crime, with ten previous cases filed between 2012 and 2019 across Pavagada for theft and robbery. Officials advise pulse sowing amid September showers

CH NEWS, MANDYA

Following widespread showers across Mandya, Maddur, and Malavalli, agriculture officials have advised farmers to utilize accumulated rainwater for sowing pulses and Hingaragi ragi. With the meteorological department forecasting light to moderate rain through September 19, growers can sow cowpea, field bean, and horse gram, or plant ragi where assured irrigation exists. The department recommended using short-duration varieties alongside four tonnes of farmyard manure per acre. Farmers should sow across slopes using seed drills and form ridges every three to four meters to conserve water. For ragi, growers must soak seeds for 18 hours, shade-dry them, and coat them with zinc sulphate. Pulses require seed treatment with a calcium chloride solution. Officials also advised applying over half of nitrogen fertilizers as a basal dose. Additionally, farmers must complete mandatory e-KYC via Grama One or Common Service Centers before September 30 for PM-KISAN benefits. They must also register land under the Kharif crop survey, the Joint Director of Agriculture stated.

Gadag hosts World Suicide Prevention awareness programme

CH NEWS, GADAG

A comprehensive awareness program marking World Suicide Prevention Day 2026 was held on Wednesday at D.G.M. Ayurvedic Medical College, jointly organized by the district administration, health departments, and local medical bodies. Inaugurating the event, Senior Civil Judge C.S. Shivanagoudra expressed deep alarm over increasing suicides, particularly among students. Calling life invaluable, he remarked that preventing self-harm is a noble service. He identified modern social isolation and loneliness as key drivers of mental distress, urging vulnerable individuals to seek counseling or dial the free Tele-MANAS helpline (14416). Releasing awareness pamphlets, District Health and Family Welfare Officer Dr. S.S. Neelagunda revealed that a suicide occurs every 40 seconds globally, claiming over 700,000 lives each year, with India reporting upwards of 100,000 deaths annually. He noted that strained relationships, family discord, and poor coping skills exacerbate the crisis.

District Mental Health Programme Implementation Officer Dr. G.S. Palleda noted that the international observance began in 2003, while guest speaker Dr. Shyamundar Balehosura of K.H. Patil Institute of Medical Sciences educated attendees on clinical triggers and intervention methods. Presiding over the gathering, Principal Dr. S.M. Gadag stadium project sparks massive public outrage

Malingaraya Pujar
CH NEWS

Costly development works undertaken at the prestigious K.H. Patil District Stadium have triggered intense public suspicion, following abrupt legal maneuvers by government officials. The stadium, which serves as the district's only sports ground and the revered site for national flag-hoisting ceremonies, is undergoing major renovations. Allocations include 386 lakh rupees for a football turf and 2,114 lakh rupees for high-mast floodlights under the Sports Department's 2025-26 action plan. Work commenced after an initial 25 percent grant release. However, widespread skepticism arose because operations began in complete secrecy without any official foundation ceremony or formal announcement. Public anxiety deepened after department authorities approached the Dharwad Bench of the Karnataka High Court to file a preemptive caveat. The petition aims to prevent any stay order against the project, which is being funded by public tax money. Four local activists—Aravind Hullura, Prabhu Patil, Raju Khanappa, and Ravikanth Angadi—were named as respondents without prior notice. The petition was moved on behalf of the Principal Secretary, the Sports Commissioner, the Deputy Commissioner, and the Assistant Director of Youth Empowerment and Sports.

The sudden legal preemptive strike provoked strong condemnation from local groups. Protesters questioned why officials rushed to court if the project was transparent and lawful, asserting that citizens

Three years Of integrated Kalyana K'taka development

KALABURAGI

The developmental journey of Kalyana Karnataka represents the continuation of a decades-long struggle against regional imbalances, deeply rooted in the political legacy of Congress president Mallikarjun Kharge and former Chief Minister late N. Dharam Singh, who secured constitutional special status under Article 371(J). Over the past three years, the Kalyana Karnataka Region Development Board (KKRDB), led by Chairman Dr. Ajay Dharam Singh, has systematically translated that constitutional vision into tangible grassroots progress.

Transitioning from a mere grant-disbursing agency into a structured, sector-wise planning body, KKRDB has overseen unprecedented financial acceleration. Between 2023-24 and 2026-27, the State Government allocated ₹18,000 crore to the Board. Across Dr. Singh's three completed fiscal years—2023-24, 2024-25, and 2025-26—the Board recorded a total expenditure of ₹9,286.78 crore, with spending rising progressively from ₹2,009.53 crore to ₹3,145 crore, and reaching ₹4,132.25 crore in 2025-26.

Education has formed the core of this developmental framework, with 25% of total board allocations dedicated to learning initiatives. Flagship programs like Akshara Aavishkara and Kalikase, alongside Karnataka Public Schools and higher education upgrades, have received extensive support. School and college infrastructure witnessed investments worth ₹2,170.46 crore, while ₹2,202.81 crore was deployed under Akshara Aavishkara. Healthcare witnessed comparable momentum under the Arogya Aavishkara banner, highlighted by the Jayadeva cardiac hospital in Kalaburagi, new nursing colleges, and a fleet of 32 fully equipped advanced ambulances. Meanwhile, rural connectivity has expanded through the Kalyana Patha scheme, sanctioning 1,150 km of rural roadways valued at ₹1,000 crore across 38 rural assembly constituencies in seven districts, linking remote villages to essential services and regional economic markets.

Youth empowerment and livelihood sectors have advanced via Udyog Aavishkara, GTTC multi-skill hubs, and the Kalike Jothe Kaushalya program, which received ₹12.69 crore. Additionally, agriculture, forestry, and allied irrigation sectors received ₹384.36 crore, complemented by ₹425 crore sanctioned for minor irrigation and lake restorations. Social justice initiatives prioritized 34 new hostels for backward-class students alongside dedicated facilities for Scheduled Castes, Scheduled Tribes, and minorities. Beyond brick-and-mortar execution, Dr. Singh's administration institutionalized scientific data analytics, commissioning the Prof. M. Govinda Rao Committee across 236 taluks, introducing the 2026-31 Perspective Plan, and establishing a dedicated Planning and Policy Wing to secure long-term, equitable regional progress.

CH NEWS, MANGALURU
The grieving parents of a 21-year-old youth who was declared brain-dead following a road accident have consented to donate his vital organs, giving fresh hope to multiple critical patients. The deceased, Varshit Kulal, was a fabrication worker residing in Ayere Bettu near Kuttaru. The mishap took place on Monday around 7:30 PM near the Koragajja Aadi Kshetra Katte in Kuttaru. While riding his motorcycle home, he suffered a head-on collision with an oncoming scooter in front of Durga Auto Works. Varshit sustained severe head trauma and was rushed to Yenepoya Hospital in Deralakatte, where medical specialists subsequently declared him brain-dead. His parents, Gopal and Vedavathi, agreed to harvest his kidneys, liver, heart, and lungs to aid needy recipients across hospitals through a dedicated zero-traffic green corridor. The injured scooter rider, Dheeraj, remains hospitalized for medical care. Varshit is survived by his parents and a brother, while the South Traffic Police have registered a case to probe the crash.

BAMUL urges govt to hike milk prices

'Dairy farming requires twice-daily milking, while rising feed, fodder, and maintenance costs leave farmers with little profit'

CH NEWS, MAGADI

Bengaluru Milk Union Limited (BAMUL) has formally urged the state government to increase the milk procurement price paid to dairy farmers by ₹10 per liter, BAMUL Director H.N. Ashok announced on Wednesday. Speaking after launching road and drainage development works in Mayanayakanahalli village under the Kalya Gram Panchayat, Ashok voiced serious concern over mounting financial distress in the rural sector. He pointed out that while the current procurement rate stands at ₹37 per liter, the federation has appealed to the authorities to fix the minimum price between ₹45 and ₹46 per liter, transferring funds directly into farmers' bank accounts.

Ashok stressed that dairy farming demands rigorous labor, requiring farmers to milk livestock twice a day without fail. At the same time, input costs have surged drastically. Feed, fodder, and general cattle maintenance expenses have reached unsustainable levels, to the extent that even cattle manure is no longer available free. Consequently, prevailing procurement rates barely cover day-to-day upkeep, depriving cultivators of viable profit margins.

Addressing farmer grievances regarding sub-standard cattle feed supplied by KMF, Ashok acknowledged that livestock were refusing the feed. He attributed this disruption to administrative lapses during the board's interim absence. To permanently resolve this shortage,

- AT A GLANCE
- BAMUL seeks ₹10 per litre procurement price hike.
 - Current milk procurement rate stands at ₹37.
 - Proposed minimum procurement price reaches ₹45–₹46.
 - Rising feed costs are squeezing dairy farmer margins.
 - New modern cattle feed plant planned in Channapatna.
 - Magadi-Kudur supply 2.25 lakh litres milk daily.

a major modern feed manufacturing plant is being established in Channapatna. Highlighting regional contributions, Ashok noted that Magadi and Kudur supply 2.25 lakh liters of milk daily, compared to 3.5 lakh liters from Channapatna. Citing the Nanjundappa Committee report on regional imbalances, he demanded taluk-level units to boost local animal husbandry. Prominent local leaders attended the launch, including Block Congress President K. Krishnamurthy, T.G. Venkatesh, former Zilla Panchayat member M.K. Dhananjaya, JP Foundation President J.P. Chandregowda, former Taluk Panchayat President Narayanappa, and village functionaries.

Rapid development in Magadi answers local critics

Ongoing development across Magadi Taluk provides a clear answer to political critics, stated BAMUL Director H.N. Ashok during an inauguration event in Kalya village on Wednesday. Highlighting priority projects, Ashok announced a ten-lakh-rupee drinking water unit for devotees visiting the Sri Lakshmi Narasimha Swamy temple. He explained that extensive civic upgrades worth six crore rupees—including improved roads, drainage networks, and drinking water facilities—are underway across four villages in Kalya Gram Panchayat with state government and Asian Development Bank funds secured by Minister H.C. Balakrishna.

Ramanath Rai welcomes coastal cabinet meeting decision

CH NEWS, MANGALURU

Former Minister and KPCC Vice President B Ramanath Rai welcomed the state government's decision to hold a cabinet meeting in the coastal region of Udupi and Mangaluru, and urged the Centre to take concrete steps towards including Tulu in the Eighth Schedule of the Constitution. Addressing a press conference at the Congress Bhavan on Wednesday, Rai said the cabinet meeting would provide an opportunity to discuss and address key developmental issues concerning the coastal region. Recalling the Congress party's welfare-oriented initiatives, Rai said Dakshina Kannada was among the major beneficiaries of land reforms, particularly the Land Reforms Act, which provided ownership rights to tenant farmers. He also highlighted bank nationalisation, debt relief measures introduced during the Devaraj Urs government, waiver of electricity charges for agricultural pump sets, and regularisation of land under Bagair Hukum and Section 94C. Rai said Dakshina Kannada, particularly Bantwal, had benefited significantly from the distribution of land titles under Section 94C. He recalled inviting former revenue minister Kagodu Thimmappa to Bantwal to initiate the distribution of such titles and praised Thimmappa for his efforts for poor and landless families. He also referred to the Congress government's welfare programmes, including pensions and housing assistance, and said his priority was to ensure that benefits meant for weaker sections reached them without difficulty. Rai urged the BJP-led Union government and elected representatives from the coastal region to make concrete efforts to include Tulu in the eighth schedule of the Constitution. He said the demand for eighth schedule status for Tulu was longstanding and called upon the prime minister to give an assurance regarding its inclusion.

Rai said Bantwal benefited greatly from Section 94C land-title distribution, recalling Kagodu Thimmappa's role and praising his efforts for poor, landless families. If the prime minister gives such a commitment, Tulu will receive the recognition and respect it deserves, Rai said. He questioned why BJP leaders, who have been raising the demand for Tulu recognition, could not use their influence at the Centre to pursue its inclusion in the eighth schedule. Rai highlighted several major infrastructure and institutional developments in the district, including the airport, seaport, roads, bridges, university, and regional passport office, and attributed several of these initiatives to successive Congress governments. Rai also appealed to political parties to cooperate with the cabinet meeting instead of threatening black-flag protests or creating disruptions.

BJP’s K’taka Conundrum: Ballari Triumph, Bengaluru Trouble

The Bharatiya Janata Party may be basking in the political afterglow of its ‘Ballari Chalo’ padayatra, but beneath the saffron celebrations lies a much more complicated reality. The march from Bengaluru to Ballari, organised to highlight the alleged multi-crore irregularities in the Valmiki Scheduled Tribe Development Corporation during the tenure of B. Nagendra, has given the BJP a much-needed political weapon against the Congress government. Yet, the party’s own house remains far from orderly.

The real battle for the BJP is not merely on the streets of Ballari. It is being fought inside the party.

A section of BJP leaders continues to be at loggerheads with State president B.Y. Vijayendra. Dissenting leaders have repeatedly travelled to New Delhi, seeking the intervention of the central leadership and demanding a change at the helm in Karnataka. Their argument is that the party needs a different face to take on the Congress in the 2028 Assembly elections.

But the BJP’s central leadership appears reluctant to open that door.

With roughly 18 months still remaining before the Assembly elections, the party high command seems inclined to give Vijayendra time to consolidate his position. There is also the enduring political calculation surrounding former Chief Minister B.S. Yediyurappa, whose influence among the Lingayat community continues to be regarded by the BJP leadership as an important electoral asset.

This, however, raises a larger question: How long can a national party continue to depend on one towering personality to manage its Karnataka politics?

The BJP’s biggest challenge today is not merely finding a leader. It is building a credible second line of leadership.

The Congress, despite its own internal contradictions, has managed to keep several generations of leaders in political circulation. The BJP too needs to create a leadership pipeline rather than repeatedly falling back on established names whenever elections approach.

The apparent success of the Ballari padayatra has only sharpened the internal fault lines. While Vijayendra and his supporters may see the mobilisation as evidence of his growing stature, not everyone in the party appears willing to hand him the political credit. For some leaders, the success of Ballari was less a BJP victory and more a Vijayendra victory and that distinction matters in a faction-ridden party.

At the same time, another interesting political drama is unfolding.

Several veteran leaders who were expelled or suspended from the BJP for various reasons are now eager to return. They apparently see the 2028 elections as an opportunity for a major saffron comeback and do not want to remain outside the party when the electoral tide turns. The central leadership, too, may be tempted by the prospect of reconciliation, while simultaneously sending a message that no individual is bigger than the organisation.

That message, however, cuts both ways.

If the BJP wants discipline, it must apply the same yardstick to every faction. If it wants unity, it must create space for dissent without allowing dissent to become sabotage. And if it wants victory in 2028, it must settle the leadership question well before the election campaign reaches fever pitch.

Meanwhile, a third camp has already begun projecting Vijayendra as the BJP’s strong future leader in Karnataka. The political irony is that his supporters are building his image at precisely the moment when a sizeable section of the party remains uncomfortable with his leadership.

Thus, the BJP finds itself caught between legacy, loyalty and leadership.

Should Vijayendra lead the party into the 2028 battle? Should the BJP look for a more broadly acceptable senior leader? Should it bring back experienced leaders who are currently outside the organisational fold? Or should it invest aggressively in younger leaders and finally build a leadership structure that does not revolve around a single family or personality?

These are not cosmetic questions. They could determine whether the BJP merely creates political noise in Karnataka or actually returns to power.

The Ballari march may have given the BJP a temporary spring in its step. But electoral victories are not built on padayatras alone. They are built on organisation, unity, credibility, leadership and a clear political narrative.

The Congress may be the BJP’s principal opponent in 2028. But before taking on the Congress, the BJP must first answer a more uncomfortable question:

Who is going to lead the saffron army into battle?

Until that question is settled, the BJP’s Karnataka campaign may remain a curious spectacle — victorious on the streets, but uncertain in the corridors of its own house.

UNSPOKEN COURAGE, THE QUIET ARCHITECTURE OF MATERNAL DEVOTION

In the quiet, unscripted moments of everyday life, an extraordinary force operates without fanfare or expectation of reward: a mother’s love. Long before society debated the nature of leadership or altruism, motherhood established the baseline for unconditional devotion. It is an instinctual commitment that quietly underpins human continuity, shaping character, sustaining families, and serving as the invisible foundation upon which resilient communities are built.

To speak of maternal sacrifice is not merely to recount acts of dramatic heroism, though history and literature are full of them. Rather, it is to acknowledge the steady, daily erosion of selfhood that defines the journey of raising a child. A mother’s love is inherently sacrificial, requiring the constant recalibration of her own ambitions, comfort, physical energy, and time to prioritize the well-being of another. From sleepless nights spent cradling an ailing infant to the quiet endurance of financial and emotional hardship, mothers consistently trade their immediate ease for their children’s future security.

This selflessness extends far beyond physical caretaking. The true depth of maternal sacrifice lies in its emotional weight. A mother acts as an emotional shelter, absorbing her child’s fears, frustrations, and uncertainties while projecting a sense of calm and stability. She becomes the ultimate listener, celebrating minor triumphs with genuine fervor and cushioning life’s early failures with gentle grace. Long after a child steps out into the wider world, it is the memory of that unconditional sanctuary that provides the confidence to face adversity.

Yet, society frequently takes this profound devotion for granted, treating maternal sacrifice as an obligation rather than a conscious, noble choice. We celebrate mothers in grand seasonal gestures, but often fail to offer the structural support, systemic equity, and social empathy they deserve. Recognizing the depth of maternal love requires more than sentimental praise; it demands a collective commitment to valuing their labor, safeguarding their mental and physical well-being, and respecting their individuality beyond the maternal role.

Ultimately, a mother’s devotion is an exercise in the art of letting go. The fundamental paradox of parenting is that a mother pours her entire existence into nurturing an individual so that they may one day survive without her. Her sacrifice culminates not in keeping her child close, but in empowering them to fly toward their own horizons.

As we navigate an increasingly complex and divided world, the values modeled by maternal love patience, empathy, selflessness, and fierce resilience offer a vital blueprint for human connection. A mother’s love remains our earliest lesson in what it means to care deeply for another human being. It is a quiet architecture of devotion that structures our lives, leaving an indelible imprint long after the child has grown and the mother’s hands have rested.

1980 RETURNS, CLOTHES HAVE CHANGED, BUT CHILDHOOD HAS NOT RETURNED

Fashion has a strange way of travelling through time. Styles that were popular in the 1980s are returning today bright colours, loose clothing, denim, retro designs, old-school hairstyles and vintage accessories. What was once considered outdated is now being presented as stylish and modern.

But behind this revival lies an interesting question: If the fashion of the 1980s can return, why can’t the childhood of that era return?

The 1980s were very different from today. Childhood was largely free from smartphones, social media, online classes and constant digital entertainment. Children spent more time outdoors, playing traditional games, cycling through neighbourhoods, visiting friends and enjoying simple moments with family.

A playground did not need expensive equipment to become a world of imagination. A ball, a bicycle, a kite or even a few friends were enough to create hours of happiness. Children invented their own games and learned cooperation, patience and friendship through direct interaction.

Today, children have access to remarkable technology. Smartphones, tablets, video games and streaming platforms offer entertainment and educational opportunities that earlier generations could not imagine. Technology has made learning faster and communication easier. Yet it has also changed the nature of childhood.

Many children now spend long hours in front of screens. Instead of meeting friends physically, they may communicate through messages or online games. Instead of running outside, they may remain indoors. The result is that children can be more digitally connected while becoming less connected with nature, neighbours and even family members.

The difference is not simply about old versus new. Every generation has its own advantages. The real concern is balance.

The difference is not simply about old versus new. Every generation has its own advantages. The real concern is balance.

We should not romanticise the 1980s and pretend that everything was better. Those years also had limitations. Education, communication and access to information were not as convenient as they are today. Modern technology has brought enormous benefits and should not be rejected.

But perhaps we can bring back some of the values of that childhood.

We can encourage children to play outdoors, read physical books, spend time with grandparents, participate in family conversations, explore nature and develop hobbies beyond screens. A few hours without digital devices can create opportunities for imagination and genuine human connection.

The return of retro fashion reminds us that society often looks backwards for inspiration. Perhaps we should do the same with childhood not by bringing back every feature of the past, but by recovering its simplicity.

Fashion can return because clothes can be redesigned. Childhood cannot return in exactly the same form because time moves only forward. But the joy, curiosity, freedom, friendship and simplicity associated with an earlier childhood can still be protected.

The real challenge is therefore not to recreate the 1980s. It is to create a modern childhood that combines the best of technology with the timeless values of human connection.

The clothes of the 1980s may come back into fashion. But if we want today’s children to experience the richness of childhood, we must bring back something more important than old styles the freedom to play, imagine, explore and simply be children.

LETTERS TO EDITOR

Echoes of a vanished childhood

Walking through our city streets today, one cannot help but notice the striking contrast between past and present. While fashion trends from the 1980s have made a triumphant comeback with corduroy, retro prints, and vintage cuts filling store windows the essence of childhood from that era remains entirely lost. Today’s children are weighed down by intense academic pressures, digital distractions, and structured schedules, leaving little room for the carefree, unstructured play we once enjoyed. We may successfully revive the aesthetic style of the 1980s, but we are failing to restore the simple, unburdened innocence that truly defined that golden era.

Honoring unsung maternal sacrifice

Your recent commentary on maternal devotion deeply resonated with me. Society frequently praises mothers with sentimental words, yet consistently overlooks the immense physical, mental, and economic sacrifices they make every day. From setting aside personal ambitions to acting as emotional anchors for their families, mothers quietly build the foundation of our society without expecting recognition. It is time we move beyond annual celebrations and offer mothers genuine structural support, equal opportunities, and social empathy. True respect lies not in taking their selflessness for granted, but in actively easing their burdens and valuing their individuality alongside their maternal roles.

SOFT PINK PETALS SIGNAL SPRING’S QUIET AWAKENING

The annual arrival of the cherry blossom, or sakura, is far more than a simple change of season; it is a global cultural phenomenon and a quiet, beautiful reminder of the impermanence of time. Every spring, delicate canopies of pale pink and white blooms erupt across branches, transforming urban avenues, quiet parkways, and riverbanks into breathtaking, cloud-like corridors. For a brief, magical window often lasting no more than a single week at peak bloom the world slows down to look up.

Rooted deeply in Japanese tradition, the practice of hanami, or flower viewing, dates back over a millennium. Historically, poets and emperors gathered beneath blooming trees to contemplate nature, craft verse, and reflect on life’s transient quality. Today, that ancient impulse has gone global. From the iconic Tidal Basin in Washington, D.C., to the historic parks of Kyoto, millions of people step outside each spring to participate in this shared moment of wonder.

What makes the cherry blossom so captivating is its exquisite brevity. Unlike evergreen foliage or summer blooms that linger for months, the sakura operates on a tight, uncompromising clock. A single heavy rain or a sudden gust of spring wind can sweep away millions of petals in an instant, scattering them across ground and water like soft, pink snow. This rapid cycle of blooming, peaking, and fading serves as a poignant living metaphor. It urges us to practice mindfulness to appreciate beauty and presence precisely because we know they cannot last.

In our hyper-connected, fast-paced modern life, the blossoming season offers an invaluable pause button. It breaks the monotony of digital screens and packed schedules, compelling us to gather outdoors with friends, family, or quiet thoughts. The sight of thousands of people sitting together under a canopy of blossoms, sharing food and conversation, reminds us of our innate human need for connection with nature and with one another. Ultimately, the cherry blossom is a universal emblem of renewal, resilience, and hope. After the cold, barren stretches of winter, these fragile blossoms emerge as proof that warmth, color, and vitality will always return.

BEYOND THE ARENA: THE UNIFYING POWER OF SPORTS

In an increasingly divided world, few cultural phenomena possess the transcendent power of sports. Whether it is a local grassroots tournament played on a dusty neighborhood field or a global spectacle watched by billions, athletics consistently bridge social, economic, and political divides. Beyond the scores, trophies, and statistics, sports serve as a vital force for personal development, community cohesion, and societal growth.

At its core, athletic engagement instills fundamental human values that extend far beyond the playing field. Participating in sports teaches individuals essential life skills: discipline through rigorous training, resilience in the face of defeat, and the value of teamwork over individual glory. Learning how to lose with grace and win with humility prepares individuals for the complex challenges of everyday life. These mental and emotional attributes foster personal integrity and personal accountability, shaping active, responsible citizens.

On a community level, sports function as a powerful social glue. Local clubs, school teams, and public parks provide shared spaces where people of diverse backgrounds come together around a common passion. The emotional investment in a home team creates a collective identity, generating a profound sense of pride and belonging. During moments of tension or crisis, athletic events frequently serve as neutral ground, offering a temporary respite from division and a platform for shared joy and reconciliation.

Furthermore, sports play an essential role in public health and development. Encouraging athletic participation combats sedentary lifestyles, reducing the risk of chronic health conditions and promoting mental well-being. For youth, structured sports programs offer constructive outlets, steering young people away from risky behaviors while providing mentorship and opportunities for advancement. Today, sports also serve as a driver for gender equality and inclusivity, as female athletes and adaptive sports competitors break barriers and challenge longstanding stereotypes on global stages. However, preserving the integrity of sports requires constant vigilance. Commercialization, performance-enhancing drugs, and systemic inequities threaten to compromise the true spirit of competition.

SANCTUARIES OF SOLACE: WHY MODERN TRAVELERS SEEK RESORTS

Furthermore, the rise of remote work has transformed how society views leisure time. With lines between professional and personal spheres blurring, travelers are increasingly seeking spaces that allow for seamless transitions. Resorts have adapted swiftly, catering to extended-stay guests who wish to work productively during the morning and unwind by an infinity pool in the afternoon. This shift has elevated the resort from an occasional splurge to a vital component of a balanced, sustainable lifestyle.

Critically, the best resorts also recognize that true relaxation does not require isolation from culture. Today’s premier properties serve as gateways to authentic local heritage. By offering curated excursions, highlighting regional artists, and sourcing ingredients from neighboring farms, resorts allow travelers to connect meaningfully with a destination’s culture without sacrificing the peace of a private retreat.

Ultimately, the enduring appeal of the resort lies in its ability to offer something increasingly rare: uninterrupted time. By taking care of life’s daily friction points, resorts create a rare buffer zone where travelers can pause, recalibrate, and rekindle relationships with loved ones or simply with themselves. As the world continues to accelerate, these self-contained havens of hospitality will remain essential sanctuaries, offering far more than just a getaway: they offer a path back to balance.

GUARDIANS OF ORDER ON OUR UNFORGIVING STREETS

Every single day, as millions of commuters rush through city veins to reach offices, schools, and homes, a steady presence stands amid the chaos. Positioned at choked intersections, under scorching suns, and through blinding downpours, traffic police officers form the vital shield between urban mobility and complete gridlock. They are the unsung conductors of our daily commute, translating chaotic human urgency into a disciplined flow of motion.

Yet, the role of a traffic police officer extends far beyond mere hand signals and whistle signals. It is a demanding test of physical endurance and psychological resilience. Standing on asphalt for up to twelve hours a day, these officers routinely inhale toxic vehicular exhaust, endure deafening noise pollution, and brave extreme weather conditions. The toll on their physical health is severe, leading to chronic respiratory issues and joint fatigue, while the constant friction with impatient drivers introduces a heavy emotional burden.

Despite these harsh conditions, traffic officers remain the first line of defense for public safety. Their vigilant presence deters reckless speeding, prevents dangerous lane changes, and reduces pedestrian hazards. Beyond enforcing traffic laws, they act as immediate emergency responders when collisions occur, securing accident scenes, directing medical aid, and clearing blocked routes to ensure ambulances reach hospitals in time. During sudden power outages or severe flooding, when automated traffic lights fail, it is their manual intervention that keeps cities moving safely.

However, the effectiveness of traffic management cannot rest solely on the shoulders of enforcement officers. The real key to safe and orderly streets lies in a culture of civic responsibility. Drivers frequently view traffic regulations as inconvenient hurdles rather than essential safety protocols, directing their frustration at the officers tasked with maintaining order. True urban safety requires a cultural shift: motorists must recognize that every signal given by an officer is aimed at protecting human lives.

As cities grow denser and traffic congestion intensifies, supporting our traffic force becomes an urgent priority. Investing in modern traffic infrastructure, automated monitoring systems, better protective gear, and dedicated health programs for officers is critical. Ultimately, respecting traffic rules and recognizing the quiet dedication of traffic police officers is the simplest, most effective way to ensure everyone makes it home safely each day.

SPARKS OF JOY OR HAZARDS IN DISGUISE

Fireworks have long served as the centerpiece for humanity’s most cherished celebrations. From ringing in the New Year and commemorating national independence to lighting up seasonal festivals, these vibrant pyrotechnic displays evoke awe and unity. Their ability to turn a dark night sky into a canvas of shimmering color creates unforgettable shared moments. However, beneath the captivating spectacle lies a complex debate regarding environmental degradation, public safety, and human health.

The environmental footprint of traditional fireworks is a growing concern for modern cities. The brilliant colors that captivate audiences are produced through chemical reactions involving heavy metals, perchlorates, and sulfur compounds. Upon detonation, these pyrotechnics release fine particulate matter alongside toxic gases into the atmosphere. In many densely populated areas, post-celebration mornings are marked by thick hazardous smog, severely degrading air quality and lingering in the local ecosystem for days. Additionally, fallout chemical residues settle into nearby soil and water sources, posing long-term ecological risks to plant and aquatic life.

Beyond environmental pollution, fireworks present immediate risks to public health and animal welfare. The sudden, high-decibel explosions cause immense distress to household pets, livestock, and local wildlife, often triggering severe anxiety, disorientation, or physical injury as animals attempt to flee the noise. For humans, the risks range from acute respiratory aggravation particularly for children, the elderly, and individuals with asthma to traumatic physical injuries caused by accidental misfires or improper handling. Emergency rooms routinely record spikes in burns, eye injuries, and hearing damage following major fireworks-heavy holidays.

Addressing these concerns does not require abandoning tradition, but rather evolving it. Modern innovation offers viable, safer alternatives that preserve the celebratory spirit. Eco-friendly “green fireworks,” which utilize alternative oxidizers to significantly reduce smoke and particulate emissions, represent an incremental step forward. On a larger scale, light-emitting diode (LED) light shows and synchronized drone displays have emerged as sustainable, visually stunning alternatives. Drones provide dynamic, customizable visual storytelling in the sky without fire hazards, chemical pollution, or deafening noise.

Ultimately, the future of public celebrations depends on balancing cultural traditions with civic responsibility. As urban environments grow denser and environmental challenges become more pressing, shifting toward cleaner pyrotechnic technologies and quieter alternatives ensures our moments of collective joy do not come at the expense of public health, animal well-being, and the environment.

THE HEARTBEAT OF HERITAGE: FESTIVALS IN BENGALURU

gular norm, festivals stand as guardians of local traditions. Through music, art, food, and story-telling, they serve as a dynamic library, passing down values, history, and customs to younger generations. While a static textbook might describe a ritual, participating in a festival is what allows a new generation to truly experience it, integrate it, and, inevitably, make it their own.

However, a festival’s importance isn’t purely backward-looking. The very best festivals are not fixed in time but adapt and evolve. This inherent creativity the introduction of new artistic elements, the reinterpretation of ancient stories ensures that the festival remains a vibrant, relevant force. They become platforms for innovation, where traditional craft might meet modern design or classical music might inspire a contemporary composition. In this space of dynamic exchange, cultures do not just exist; they flourish and grow.

Furthermore, we must not ignore the significant economic impact festivals can have. They are powerful drivers for tourism and local businesses, from the artisans selling their crafts to the restaurants preparing festival foods. For many communities, a major festival provides a crucial economic boost that can sustain local industries for the remainder of the year. This intersection of culture and economy creates a virtuous cycle where cultural preservation is linked directly to community well-being.

Ultimately, festivals remind us that life is not just for the mundane. They offer moments of collective joy, transcendence, and profound connection that are all too rare. They challenge us to step outside our routines and engage with our neighbors and our heritage. By participating fully by learning the songs, tasting the foods, and understanding the stories we do more than just celebrate; we help to ensure that the unique and colorful thread of our specific culture continues to be woven into the grand tapestry of human expression. Let us always cherish and protect these crucial markers of our humanity.

SBN declared terrorist organisation under UAPA

NEW DELHI
The Central government on Wednesday declared the Shahzad Bhatti Network (SBN) a terrorist organisation under the Unlawful Activities (Prevention) Act (UAPA). The Ministry of Home Affairs said the network is linked to cross-border smuggling of arms, explosives and narcotics. Authorities have also alleged that the network attempts to radicalise vulnerable youths and petty criminals. The network has been mentioned in connection with the wider gangster-terror ecosystem and rivalry involving jailed gangster Lawrence Bishnoi. Investigators have also examined alleged links between the network and criminal activities, including the murder of Punjabi singer Sidhu Moosewala. The government's designation places SBN under the legal framework applicable to organisations listed as terrorist organisations under the UAPA. The move comes amid continued action against alleged organised crime and terror networks operating across borders.

'Adults can nominate queer partners for medical decisions'

NEW DELHI
The Centre has told the Delhi High Court that adults can nominate their queer partners to make medical decisions on their behalf, subject to applicable legal and medical procedures. The response came during a petition filed by Arshiya Takkar, seeking guidelines to recognise non-heterosexual partners as medical representatives. Such recognition would allow a nominated partner to participate in important treatment decisions when a patient cannot communicate or provide consent. The petition highlights challenges faced by queer couples when hospitals seek family members or recognised representatives. The Centre's submission will be considered by the High Court as it examines the legal and procedural framework for medical representation.

Narendra's ongoing Trump appeasement: Cong's dig on UPI

The opposition party demanded that this “anti-national” decision should be immediately withdrawn, and UPI should be kept free of charge as before.

NEW DELHI

The Congress has questioned the Centre's recent move concerning the Unified Payments Interface (UPI), alleging that the decision could benefit American companies. Congress general secretary (in-charge of communications) Jairam Ramesh raised questions about the government's decision and linked it to what he described as Prime Minister Narendra Modi's approach towards US President Donald Trump. Ramesh used the phrase “Narendra's Ongoing Trump Appeasement” while criticising the government over the UPI-related development. He also said the Prime Minister had “redefined NOTA” in reference to the move. His remarks were part of the Congress party's criticism of the government's handling of India-US economic and trade-related issues. The Congress leader also questioned the government's decision concerning the Merchant Discount Rate (MDR), a charge associated with digital payment transactions. He asked whether the move had been taken with the interests of US companies in mind. The comments come amid continuing political debate over India's digital payments ecosystem and its international implications. UPI has become a major component of India's digital payment infrastructure, with transactions involving banks, payment service providers and merchants. Ramesh's remarks represent the Congress's political criticism of the government's decision. The government's position and the stated rationale behind the UPI and MDR-re-

RaGa attacks Modi over UPI charges

Congress leader Rahul Gandhi on Wednesday criticised Prime Minister Narendra Modi over the Centre's new Merchant Discount Rate (MDR) framework for selected UPI transactions. Gandhi urged the government to withdraw what he described as a “UPI tax.” Under the new framework, a 0.4% MDR will apply from October 15 to specified merchant UPI transactions above Rs 2,000, subject to a maximum charge of Rs 300. Person-to-person UPI transfers will remain free. Gandhi also alleged that the move was linked to pressure from the United States and criticised Modi over his approach towards US President Donald Trump. These are political claims made by Gandhi and are not established facts. The government, meanwhile, has said the MDR is not a tax and will not be collected by the government or NPCI. It said the framework is intended to support the sustainability and expansion of the UPI ecosystem.

Abdullah said Jammu and Kashmir had experienced what he described as the consequences of relying on promises made by the Bharatiya Janata Party-led Union government. He urged Ladakh's leadership to seek clear and documented commitments on issues concerning the Union Territory. His remarks come amid continuing discussions over demands and concerns raised by different groups in Ladakh. SC questions majority test amid MLA disqualification

The Supreme Court has questioned whether a legislative majority test can be considered a safe basis for deciding a political dispute when some of the MLAs involved are facing disqualification proceedings. The question was raised during the hearing of the Shiv Sena dispute involving the Eknath Shinde-led faction. The court highlighted the legal difficulties that could arise if the numerical strength of legislators is relied upon while their eligibility to remain members of the House is itself under challenge. The bench posed the question to the Shinde faction as it examined issues connected with the Maharashtra political crisis. The proceedings involve questions over the status of MLAs, the authority of the political parties and the constitutional process to be followed when legislators face disqualification. The court's observation focuses on the relationship between a floor test based on legislative numbers and pending disqualification proceedings. The issue is significant because the strength of a faction could change depending on the outcome of disqualification petitions. The Supreme Court is examining several legal questions arising from the Shiv Sena split and the events that followed. The dispute has involved proceedings before constitutional authorities, including the Maharashtra Assembly Speaker, over the status of legislators. The latest hearing forms part of the court's continuing consideration of the complex constitutional and legal issues arising from the political developments in Maharashtra.

‘Never asked for its removal’: Kerala CM on AI dance video

THIRUVANANTHAPURAM

Kerala Congress leader V.D. Satheesan has clarified that he never asked for the removal of an artificial intelligence-generated dance video featuring him, saying he had publicly stated that he enjoyed watching it. Satheesan said the controversy surrounding the video arose after reports suggested that there could be legal issues connected with its creation and circulation. He maintained that he had not personally demanded that the video be taken down from social media platforms. The AI-generated video showed a digitally created version of Satheesan dancing and subsequently attracted attention on social media. Its circulation led to discussions about the growing use of artificial intelligence in political and public communication, particularly when digitally created material features public figures. Satheesan said he had openly acknowledged that he enjoyed the video. He questioned the suggestion that he had sought its removal and said the media had reported that legal concerns surrounded the content. His clarification was aimed at distinguishing his own position from reports about possible legal action. The incident has also highlighted concerns surrounding AI-generated videos, which can create realistic but digitally manipulated representations of individuals. Such content can be difficult for viewers to distinguish from genuine footage when it is widely shared online without clear information about how it was created. The issue comes amid increasing political and public debate over the use of artificial intelligence in creating images, videos and other forms of digital content. While such technology is being used for entertainment and communication, its use to portray public figures has also raised questions about consent, authenticity and potential legal concerns. Satheesan reiterated that he had not sought the removal of the video. He said his public comments about enjoying the content should not be interpreted as a request for it to be taken down. The clarification comes as the video continues to draw attention and discussion over the appropriate use of AI-generated material.

Delhi HC rejects challenge to NSUI, ABVP participation

NEW DELHI

The Delhi High Court on Wednesday rejected a petition challenging the participation of candidates affiliated with political student wings, including NSUI and ABVP, in the Delhi University Students' Union (DUSU) elections. A bench led by Chief Justice D.K. Upadhyaya said political parties must not interfere in the polls, while noting that student wings must be distinguished from their parent parties. The court said Lyngdoh Committee recommendations prohibit political party association but membership of a student wing alone does not establish such association. It directed the university to ensure only bona fide students participate and monitor campaigns. DUSU elections are scheduled for September 18.

SC PIL seeks national framework against fake medicines

NEW DELHI

A public interest litigation (PIL) filed in the Supreme Court has sought a national framework to tackle the manufacture and distribution of fake medicines and ensure faster investigation and trial of such cases. The petitioner has sought directions to the Centre and state governments to complete investigations into cases involving counterfeit or fake medicines within three months. It has also sought directions for trials in such cases to be completed within one year. The plea highlights concerns over the availability and circulation of fake medicines and the need for a coordinated mechanism to deal with such cases. It seeks stronger and time-bound action from authorities responsible for investigating offences related to the manufacture, sale and distribution of medicines. The petitioner has urged the Supreme Court to consider measures that could bring greater uniformity to the handling of fake medicine cases across the country. The proposed national framework is aimed at ensuring that investigations and prosecutions do not face prolonged delays.

The plea also seeks accountability from the authorities concerned and faster judicial proceedings once cases reach the courts. It argues that delays in investigation and trial can affect efforts to hold those responsible for the manufacture or supply of fake medicines accountable. The petition comes against the backdrop of concerns over public health risks associated with counterfeit medicines. Such products may fail to provide the intended treatment and can pose serious risks to consumers, depending on their composition and the circumstances in which they are used.

The Supreme Court's consideration of the PIL could bring renewed attention to the regulatory and legal mechanisms governing the pharmaceutical sector. The petition seeks coordinated action by the Centre and states, along with fixed timelines for investigations and trials. The matter raises broader questions about enforcement, coordination among agencies and the speed of judicial proceedings in cases involving fake medicines. Further proceedings before the Supreme Court will determine how the petition's requests are examined.

Defection: WB Assembly issues notices to 10 rebel TMC MLAs

KOLKATA

The West Bengal Assembly Secretariat has issued notices to 10 Trinamool Congress (TMC) MLAs in connection with a petition seeking their disqualification from the state Assembly. The notices have been served on Leader of Opposition Ritabrata Banerjee and nine other legislators. The development comes amid a political dispute over the status of the MLAs and their association with the ruling party. The disqualification plea has prompted the Assembly Secretariat to seek responses from the legislators concerned. The notices are part of the process through which the claims and objections raised in the petition can be examined before any further decision is taken. The issue is linked to the political position of the 10 MLAs, who have been described as rebel TMC legislators. Their status and conduct have become the subject of proceedings before the Assembly authorities. The matter is expected to involve arguments from both sides regarding the applicable rules and constitutional provisions governing disqualification of legislators. Leader of Opposition Ritabrata Banerjee is among those who received the notice. The other nine legislators will also be required to respond to the issues raised in the disqualification petition. The notices do not by themselves amount to a final decision on the legislators' membership of the Assembly. Disqualification proceedings involving elected representatives are governed by constitutional provisions and Assembly rules. Such proceedings can involve examination of the circumstances under which legislators changed their political position or allegedly acted in violation of applicable rules. The latest development adds another layer to the political dispute in West Bengal. The Assembly Secretariat's notices provide the legislators an opportunity to present their position on the allegations and the request for disqualification. Further proceedings will determine how the petition is considered and whether additional hearings or submissions are required. Any final decision regarding the legislators' membership will depend on the outcome of the proceedings before the competent Assembly authority.

RJD outreach to Nitish raises NDA questions

PATNA

The Rashtriya Janata Dal's (RJD) recent invitation to JD(U) leader Nitish Kumar to leave the NDA and form a government with its support has triggered discussion over the possible political implications of the move. RJD leader Bhai Virendra recently urged Nitish Kumar to break ties with the BJP and join hands with the RJD. His appeal came amid differences between the BJP and JD(U) over the proposed implementation of the Uniform Civil Code (UCC) in Bihar. The JD(U) has said it will examine the provisions before taking a final position. The RJD's outreach has been viewed in some political circles as an attempt to highlight differences within the

NDA. The party has sought to position itself as an alternative partner for Nitish Kumar, while publicly arguing that the JD(U)'s ideological position differs from that of the BJP on certain issues. Questions have also been raised over the future role of Nitish Kumar's son, Nishant Kumar, in the JD(U). SC to hear plea on standard election manifestos

The petition sought directives for the Ministry of Law and Justice to hold political parties accountable for rational election manifesto promises.

NEW DELHI

The Supreme Court on Wednesday agreed to list for hearing a plea seeking a standard format for election manifestos issued by political parties. The petition seeks to make the intentions, policy positions and proposed promises of parties clearer to voters before elections. The petition was filed in 2022 by advocate Ashwini Kumar Upadhyay. It sought directions to the Ministry of Law and Justice to take appropriate steps to make political parties accountable for what the petitioner described as essential and rational promises made in their election manifestos. The plea argues that a common format could help voters understand and compare the policies and commitments of different political parties more clearly. It seeks greater clarity in the presentation of manifesto promises, particularly on issues that may have a direct impact on public finances and governance.

Independents gain strong presence in Rajasthan local polls

JAIPUR

Independent candidates and smaller political formations have emerged as an important factor in Rajasthan’s urban local body elections, securing more than 30 per cent of the votes outside the BJP-Congress contest and winning over 2,200 wards across the state. The results have given independents a significant role in several local bodies where neither of the two major parties has secured a clear majority. In such places, independent councillors could influence the formation of governing boards and the election of chairpersons. Bharatpur recorded a notable performance by independent candidates. They won 36 of the 65 wards in the Municipal Corporation, while the BJP secured 20 and the Congress seven. In Sadulshahar municipality in Sri Ganganagar district, independents won 22 of 25 wards. The BJP won two and the Congress one. Reports have indicated that some independents were backed by BJP rebels. The results have also renewed discussion about the political space available outside the BJP and Congress. However, whether the performance develops into a sustained third political platform at the state level remains uncertain. The upcoming Zila Parishad and Panchayat Samiti elections will provide another opportunity to assess the strength of smaller parties and independent candidates. Rajasthan has witnessed third-force politics and strong independent performances at different points in its electoral history. In the 1990 Assembly elections, the BJP won 85 seats, Janata Dal 55 and Congress 50. The two parties later formed the government, with BJP leader Bhairon Singh Shekhawat becoming chief minister. In the 1952 Assembly election, independents won 35 seats, while the Ram Rajya Parishad secured 24 and Congress won 82 seats in the 160-member House. The recent alliance between the Rashtriya Loktantrik Party and AIMIM has added another element to the state’s political landscape. RLP leader Hanuman Beniwal and AIM-IM chief Asaduddin Owaisi jointly appeared in Jaipur ahead of the local elections, with the alliance presenting itself as an alternative political platform.

WHAT THE PETITION SEEKS

A new petition urges a common manifesto format for clearer voter comparison of party policies and public finance commitments. While the Supreme Court previously ruled these aren’t corrupt practices, it has agreed to hear this latest plea. The issue of election manifestos has previously come before the Supreme Court. In its 2013 judgment in S. Subramaniam Balaji v. Government of Tamil Nadu, the court examined the nature of manifesto promises and held that promises made in election manifestos could not, by themselves, be treated as corrupt practices under the Representation of the People Act. The Election Commission of India also has guidelines relating to election manifestos. Its published material refers to Supreme Court directions concerning guidelines for manifestos and the role of the Election Commission in framing them. The latest development does not amount to a final ruling on whether political parties must adopt a uniform manifesto format. The court has only agreed to list the petition for hearing. The proceedings will determine how the court considers the petitioner’s requests and the existing legal and regulatory framework governing election manifestos. The case comes as political parties continue to issue detailed manifestos during elections, covering areas such as welfare schemes, employment, infrastructure, taxation and other policy matters. The proposed standard format could bring the structure and presentation of such documents before the court for further consideration.

Kharge criticises government over US tariff threat

NEW DELHI

Congress president Mallikarjun Kharge on Wednesday criticised the Narendra Modi government over growing pressure from the United States linked to India’s purchases of Russian oil. His remarks came after the U.S. House of Representatives advanced legislation that could authorise President Donald Trump to impose tariffs of up to 100% on countries buying Russian energy. The legislation, known as the Lindsey O. Graham Sanctioning Russia and Iran Act of 2026, seeks to increase economic pressure on Russia and also includes provisions related to Iran. The U.S. House moved the measure forward, bringing it closer to a possible vote. Reuters reported that the bill would give the U.S. President additional authority to impose tariffs on countries such as India and China over their reliance on Russian energy. Reacting to the development, Kharge questioned the government’s handling of India’s foreign and trade policy. He alleged that repeated U.S. pressure had exposed weaknesses in the government’s approach and said New Delhi was giving in to American demands. Kharge’s comments were made in the context of the possible tariff action over Russian oil purchases. The proposed U.S. measure has raised concerns because India remains a major

Cong uses informal outreach to engage Gen-Z in Indore

INDORE

The Congress has adopted a more informal approach to connect with Generation Z in Indore ahead of Rahul Gandhi’s scheduled event, moving beyond traditional political meetings and public meetings. Party workers are reaching out to young people through cafes, libraries, hostels, cricket grounds and music sessions. The campaign has focused on meeting students and young residents in places they regularly visit. Instead of depending only on speeches, stages and formal gatherings, workers are holding conversations and organising activities to encourage interaction. Cricket matches and informal musical “jamming” sessions are among the activities being used. The initiative comes ahead of Gandhi’s visit to Indore and is aimed at increasing engagement with younger sections of the city. Party workers are using the period before the event to interact with students and youth and discuss their concerns. The Congress has also moved some of its outreach programmes into spaces such as cafes, libraries and hostels. These settings allow party workers to interact with young people in a less formal environment. This Officials alleged that the Amrit Group and its directors collected substantial amounts of money from members of the public through various deposit schemes by promising high returns. The agency is investigating allegations that the promised returns were not repaid, resulting in losses to investors. During the searches, ED teams examined documents and other materials found at the premises. differs from conventional rallies and stage events. The outreach effort highlights the growing importance of Generation Z in political communication. Young people increasingly encounter political messages through social media, community activities and informal conversations. Political parties have therefore been experimenting with different ways of reaching them beyond traditional campaign formats. In Indore, the Congress campaign is combining sports, music and face-to-face discussions as it prepares for Gandhi’s event. The activities are intended to create opportunities for interaction with young people and bring party workers closer to student and youth communities. The campaign has replaced conventional methods, such as indoor meetings and formal receptions, with more casual engagements. Whether through a cricket pitch, a library, hostel or music session, the focus remains on direct contact with young residents ahead of the event.

Russian President Vladimir Putin also discussed bilateral ties and economic cooperation during their recent meeting in New Delhi. The tariff provision is part of wider U.S. efforts to increase economic pressure on Russia over its war in Ukraine. The legislation has received strong support in the U.S. Senate, while some lawmakers have raised concerns about giving the President wider tariff powers. For India, the issue could have implications for trade and energy costs if the proposed tariff powers are ultimately used. The legislation still has to complete the U.S. legislative process before any such tariff action can take effect. Meanwhile, Kharge’s remarks have added to the domestic political debate over India’s response to pressure from Washington and its continuing energy relationship with Russia.

SC notice over plea to revive Sridevi’s property suit

NEW DELHI

The Supreme Court has issued notice on a plea seeking revival of a civil suit concerning actor Sridevi’s property in Chennai. The court has sought responses from her husband Boney Kapoor and daughters Janhvi Kapoor and Khushi Kapoor. A bench comprising Justices K.V. Viswanathan and Arun Pillai issued the notice while hearing the plea. The petition seeks reconsideration of proceedings related to the property dispute and asks that the earlier suit be revived. The case concerns a property in Chennai associated with the late actor Sridevi. The dispute involves questions relating to the legal rights and claims concerning the property and the earlier proceedings initiated before a court. The Supreme Court’s notice gives the respondents an opportunity to present their position on the plea. Boney Kapoor, Janhvi Kapoor and Khushi Kapoor have been asked to respond to the issues raised by the petitioner. The court’s decision to seek responses does not amount to a final finding on the claims made in the petition. The matter will be considered further after the respondents place their submissions before the court.

TikTok parent ByteDance revenue rises 30%

NEW DELHI
ByteDance, TikTok's parent company, recorded more than 30 per cent revenue growth in the first half, reaching $120 billion, as international advertising, livestreaming and TikTok e-commerce businesses expanded. However, net profit fell to $20 billion as the company increased spending on artificial intelligence to compete with rivals in China and the United States. People familiar with the matter said easing regulatory uncertainty surrounding TikTok in the US also supported revenue growth. ByteDance has been increasing AI investment as competition intensifies. The results highlight stronger business growth alongside pressure on profitability from rising technology spending and continued investment in artificial intelligence capabilities.

Rooftop solar capacity could reach 132 GW by 2030

NEW DELHI
India's rooftop solar capacity has the potential to rise to 132 GW by 2030 from the current 17 GW, according to the Indian Solar Manufacturers Association (ISMA). The association estimates annual rooftop solar demand could range between 9 GW and 15 GW through 2030. It identified nearly 115 GW of untapped potential in the residential segment. ISMA said the expansion could boost domestic manufacturing of solar cells, modules, inverters and other balance-of-system components, while reducing dependence on foreign supply chains. The PM Surya Ghar Muft Bijli Yojana has also expanded adoption beyond traditionally viable states. ISMA said the scheme's affordability impact could widen the consumer base and support India's local solar supply chain.

NITI Aayog Vice Chairman Ashok Kumar Lahiri said India needs stronger policies to help domestic firms compete effectively in global markets. Speaking at the launch of the latest Trade Watch Quarterly, Lahiri highlighted export diversification, deeper global value-chain integration and stronger domestic capabilities in strategic sectors. India's total merchandise and services trade reached $506.9 billion in Q1 FY27, growing 15.5 per cent annually. Bill Gates says India is key example for AI development

Bill Gates says AI could transform society, with India showing how technology can deliver rapid social and developmental benefits.

NEW DELHI

Microsoft co-founder Bill Gates has described artificial intelligence (AI) as fundamentally different from previous technological revolutions, warning that societies may not yet be prepared for the scale and speed of changes it could bring.

Gates highlighted the potential of AI to deliver social and developmental benefits and pointed to India as an important example. He said India could demonstrate how AI can be deployed quickly for positive outcomes. "It's a stunning set of capabilities," Gates said, adding that India could show how "we can drive the good stuff as fast as possible".

In a conversation with NDTV, Gates said the world should consider slowing the development of AI if doing so would provide societies with more time to prepare. He said AI was different from the personal computer and internet, two technologies he helped shape during his years at Microsoft, and cautioned against assuming its effects would be similarly manageable.

"AI is a very unique technology," Gates said, warning that its impact could be harder to manage than previous technological changes. He said the rapid and broad development of AI had made him question whether its pace itself should be reconsidered.

"If we could slow things down, I think we should consider that because of this need to get ready for such a rapid change," Gates said. He added that although he had spent his life championing innovation, AI could be so broad and dramatic that society might not be ready.

Gates also identified cybersecurity as an immediate concern, saying AI tools could strengthen offensive cyber capabilities.

He stressed that defensive systems would need to develop rapidly as well. He further raised questions about whether increasingly capable AI systems could always remain under human control, citing unexpected behaviour observed in reinforcement-learning experiments.

PMAY-U delivers over one crore homes to urban poor

NEW DELHI

More than one crore pucca houses have been completed and handed over to beneficiaries across India under Pradhan Mantri Awas Yojana-Urban (PMAY-U) and PMAY-U 2.0, according to a government factsheet issued on Wednesday. A total of 1.25 crore houses has been sanctioned under the two schemes till August 9, 2026. The government said the figure marks a significant increase from earlier housing programmes. Between 2005 and 2014, around eight lakh urban houses were completed under previous schemes. PMAY-U was launched in 2015 to expand affordable housing access for people living in urban areas. Women have been a major focus of the housing programme. Of the 1.25 crore houses sanctioned under PMAY-U and PMAY-U 2.0, around one crore has been allotted to women either in the name of the female head of the household or through joint ownership. The scheme mandates ownership or co-ownership in women beneficiaries' names. The mission also prioritises housing for Scheduled Castes, Scheduled Tribes, Other Backward Classes, minorities, senior citizens, persons with disabilities and transgender persons. Under PMAY-U 2.0, around 18.38 lakh houses had been sanctioned as of August 9. The scheme aims to provide assistance to one crore additional urban poor and middle-class families between 2024 and 2029.

Apple eyes server return with Nvidia Tech

CUPERTINO

Tech giant Apple is reportedly exploring a return to the enterprise server market by developing an in-house artificial intelligence inference server. According to reports, the company has discussed integrating Nvidia's NVLink Fusion networking technology to link its own high-performance M8 Ultra processors. Apple discontinued its last dedicated server hardware line over a decade ago. While this new custom server project could launch in future years, it remains in early planning stages. The potential collaboration marks a surprising twist given their historical rivalry, potentially bridging two major industry competitors to advance high-end data center capabilities.

support a vertically integrated process covering silicon ingot production and processing for advanced semiconductor technologies and leading-edge nodes. Lam Research also plans to expand its India Center for Engineering, which supports global customer programmes in design, testing, validation and next-generation technology development.

Rangesh Raghavan, corporate vice president and managing director of Lam Research India, said India is an important part of the company's global innovation and growth strategy. He said the expansion reflects confidence in India's talent pool, growing semiconductor ecosystem and policy environment. The company also plans to work with the government, academia, suppliers and startups.

The investment is expected to create opportunities for partnerships with Indian suppliers providing specialised materials, precision components, gases, chemicals, metrology solutions and manufacturing services. Lam Research said the expansion will bring specialised manufacturing capabilities to India while supporting advanced engineering, high-technology manufacturing and workforce development.

Oracle begins fresh job cuts, 3,000 India roles at risk

NEW DELHI

Oracle has reportedly begun another round of global job cuts, with around 3,000 employees in India potentially affected, according to industry estimates. The reductions could take the company's India workforce down to about 27,000 from 30,000. The latest cuts follow Oracle's earlier elimination of around 21,000 jobs globally, including nearly 12,000 positions in India, as the company shifted spending towards artificial intelligence (AI) infrastructure. Industry expert Pareekh Jain said new AI-related hiring would not fully offset the losses, as recruitment would be limited and largely case-by-case. Reports of the layoffs have also surfaced on social media, with some users claiming to be Oracle employees in India describing short notice before their positions were eliminated. However, the company's official position on the reported number of affected employees was not provided in the report. The developments come amid workforce reductions at several multinational companies operating Global Capability Centres (GCCs) in India.

EU warns against ultra-nationalism and interference

STRASBOURG
European Commission President Ursula von der Leyen urged the bloc to stand strong against external threats during her annual address. Speaking in Strasbourg, she warned that ultra-nationalists, anti-European groups, and foreign disinformation campaigns are actively trying to divide member states and weaken democratic values. Highlighting a tougher security landscape and rising defense spending, von der Leyen stressed that unity is vital to protect the continent's future. Her remarks followed sharp political shifts in Germany and drew criticism from Moscow, as leaders clashed over the region's future direction and stability.

Yemen Houthis deny drone strike in Mecca

SANAA
Yemen's Houthis movement has strongly dismissed Saudi claims that the group launched a drone toward the holy city of Mecca, labeling the allegations as total fabrications. A Houthi military spokesperson insisted that their ongoing operations strictly target military bases and oil facilities, staying far away from sacred religious sites. This denial follows an announcement by the Saudi-led coalition stating that air defenses successfully intercepted a hostile drone south of Mecca. Meanwhile, both sides continue exchanging intense accusations regarding recent airstrikes and escalating regional conflicts across Yemen.

US House limits Trump's Iran war powers

WASHINGTON
The US House of Representatives has voted 220-204 to approve a war powers resolution introduced by Democratic Representative Seth Moulton, directing the administration to withdraw American forces from hostilities with Iran. This legislative maneuver marks the third time the lower chamber has moved to check presidential military authority since the inception of the conflict, reflecting escalating bipartisan frustration on Capitol Hill over an engagement initiated without formal congressional authorization. The latest vote displayed a notable shift in Republican alignment, with seven GOP lawmakers breaking ranks to support the measure. This exceeded the cross-party backing observed during previous iterations in June and July. Among them were Representatives Mariannette Miller-Meeks and Zach Nunn of Iowa, and Nancy Mace of South Carolina, who joined perennial cross-party votes like Thomas Massie, Tom Barrett, Warren Davidson, and Brian Fitzpatrick. Defending his stance, Rep. Nunn emphasized his refusal to support open-ended foreign military commitments while stressing the absolute necessity for Congress to reclaim its constitutional oversight responsibilities. The legislative action coincides with mounting economic and human costs tied to the operations.

SL Prez inaugurates India funded health project

FRIENDSHIP BETWEEN NEIGHBORING NATIONS TOOK A BRIGHT NEW STEP FORWARD TODAY. SRI LANKA'S TOP LEADERS AND INDIAN OFFICIALS CAME TOGETHER TO START CONSTRUCTION ON A VITAL MEDICAL PROJECT.

COLOMBO
Sri Lanka and India are growing closer every single day. Just recently, Sri Lankan President Anura Kumara Dissanayake laid the very first stone for a brand new emergency medical building. This modern two-storey accident and trauma unit is going up at the District General Hospital in the quiet town of Mannar. India is fully funding this important project. They are providing a generous grant worth 600 million Sri Lankan rupees to make sure the hospital gets built properly. India spotlights clean energy at G20

HOUSTON
India is taking big steps forward on the world stage. Union Foreign Minister Manohar Lal Khattar recently traveled to Houston, Texas, to share India's impressive progress at the G20 Energy meetings. He spoke about strengthening energy security, growing clean power, and making rules simpler and faster for new infrastructure projects. During the ministerial sessions, Minister Khattar proudly announced that India's total installed power capacity has reached an amazing 552 gigawatts. Even better, more than half of that power now comes from non-fossil fuel sources. He pointed out major achievements in solar energy, advanced energy storage systems, nuclear power, and clean cooking access for families. India firmly believes in keeping energy choices open, inclusive, and friendly to new technologies. He also highlighted global teamwork efforts like the International Solar Alliance and the Global Biofuels Alliance. When discussing regulatory efficiency, Khattar explained how India uses smart digital platforms like the National Single Window System and PM Gati Shakti. These tools help speed up approvals so that vital energy projects can be built without unnecessary delays. On the sidelines, the minister held important one-on-one talks with top global leaders. He met with US Energy Secretary Chris Wright to chat about powering future artificial intelligence data centers and expanding nuclear energy. They agreed to keep working closely under the US-India Energy Security Partnership. Khattar also met with Canadian official Corey Hogan to discuss low-emission technologies and deep-sea exploration. He invited Canadian businesses to invest in India's growing energy sectors. By building strong international friendships and adopting forward-thinking strategies, India is proving its dedication to safe, reliable, and affordable power for everyone. These smart efforts help protect the planet while ensuring a bright and stable energy future for citizens everywhere.

Canada offered historic EU Associate status

BRUSSELS
In a historic policy shift that could reshape global economic and geopolitical alliances, European Commission President Ursula von der Leyen has officially invited Canada to become the European Union's very first "associate member." Delivering her landmark State of the Union address in Brussels, von der Leyen outlined a vision for a tightly integrated future between the 27-nation bloc and Ottawa. Because the EU's foundational treaties explicitly restrict full membership to European sovereign states, this newly minted "associate member" framework provides an innovative legal and diplomatic pathway to bridge the Atlantic divide, taking integration far beyond traditional trade agreements. The announcement signals a decisive evolution from the Comprehensive Economic and Trade Agreement, known as CETA, which has governed EU-Canada commerce since its provisional rollout in 2017. Von der Leyen explicitly called for transitioning from CETA to an ambitious "Alliance for the Future," designed to forge a unified space of mutual prosperity and economic security. Under this sweeping new framework, bilateral cooperation would expand exponentially into vital sectors. Leaders are eyeing a joint technological pact, integrated defense industrial bases, and a strategic Arctic partnership. Furthermore, the collaboration is set to encompass critical minerals, advanced energy grids, battery supply chains, and complex security frontiers like artificial intelligence, quantum computing, and advanced cybersecurity. This bold diplomatic maneuver arrives amid mounting turbulence in global trade dynamics. Canada, deeply integrated with the United States economy, has faced severe economic exposure and trade strains due to protectionist measures and tariff threats enacted by the administration of US President Donald Trump. Consequently, Ottawa has aggressively pursued a strategy of international trade diversification. Simultaneously, European capitals are striving to insulate their supply chains from external shocks and diminish long-term strategic vulnerabilities. Adding heavy symbolic and political weight to the proceedings, Canadian Prime Minister Mark Carney attended the European Parliament as the distinguished guest of honor. Greeting a packed chamber, Carney received a thunderous, prolonged standing ovation led by European Parliament President Roberta Metsola. Prime Minister Carney is slated to deliver a major address to the parliament, setting the stage for intensive bilateral talks. The momentum will continue when Canadian and European leaders reconvene in October for a high-stakes summit in Montreal. There, discussions will crystallize around defense coordination, critical material security, Arctic exploration, and technology sharing. As traditional global trade norms face unprecedented pressure, this pioneering partnership underscores a shared resolve between Ottawa and Brussels to forge a resilient, forward-looking alliance built on shared democratic values and economic defense.

DRDO displays advanced weapons at AAD Expo

TSHWANE
India is proudly displaying its growing military strength on the global stage. The Defence Research and Development Organisation is currently showing off advanced weapons systems and homegrown defense technologies at a major international expo in Tshwane, South Africa.

The Africa Aerospace and Defence Exhibition runs through September 20. Visitors stopping by the Indian stall can view an impressive lineup of cutting-edge equipment. Highlights include long-range maritime reconnaissance planes, airborne warning systems, special armored vehicles, and portable sonar units. The display also features powerful missiles like the Astra and Akash, showing the world how far Indian engineering has advanced.

Back home, India is also taking big steps to boost local manufacturing. Defense Minister Rajnath Singh recently unveiled new policies to help small businesses and tech start-ups enter the defense sector. These changes offer direct funding, better incubator support, and open access to testing facilities. Officials also handed out multiple technology transfer agreements to manufacturing partners to speed up mass production.

IPL 2027 auction to be held in India after 3 years

The IPL 2027 player auction will return to India after three years, with the mini-auction venue and city yet to be finalised.

NEW DELHI

The IPL 2027 player auction will be held in India after a three-year break, following a decision by the IPL Governing Council at its meeting on Tuesday. The upcoming auction will be a mini-auction, while the venue and city are yet to be finalised.

The IPL auction was last held in India in Kochi in 2023. The subsequent three editions were staged overseas in Dubai, Jeddah and Abu Dhabi. The Board of Control for Cricket in India (BCCI) decided to bring the event back after considering concerns from franchises over the logistical and operational challenges of sending their delegations abroad for a mini-auction.

The host city will be selected based on the availability of accommodation for franchise officials and their delegations. The BCCI requires more than 100 rooms for a couple of nights. The wedding season in India between October and December is also expected to affect the choice of venue.

The decision follows assurances given to franchises that the auction could return to India. BCCI members are understood to have considered feedback from teams after last year's auction in Abu Dhabi.

Meanwhile, the Governing Council did not take a final decision on the Impact Player rule. Another meeting is expected to be held in about a month, when the future of the rule will be discussed.

The BCCI had sought feedback from franchises on the rule, which allows teams to substitute a player during an IPL match. Several franchises are understood to favour retaining it for at least another season, arguing that their squads were built with the rule in mind. The final decision is expected after further discussions with stakeholders.

CHRIST hosts blind cricket match for inclusion

BENGALURU

A friendly cricket match between the Samarthanam Blind Cricket Team and the CHRIST (Deemed to be University) cricket team gave students an opportunity to understand the sport from the perspective of visually impaired players.

The match was organised by the Department of Commerce as part of its Student Service-Learning Programme, in association with Docathon, the department's Sports Association. The initiative aimed to raise awareness about physical disabilities and encourage a more inclusive understanding of disability. Before the match, university players and faculty members were introduced to the rules of blind cricket. They were also asked to play while blindfolded, allowing them to experience how visually impaired players depend on sound, communication and coordination during the game.

The Samarthanam team featured Indian blind cricket players Kavya NR and Bhas-kar K, along with members of the Karnataka State Blind Cricket Team led by captain Javare Gowda. Their participation allowed students to witness the skills and coordination required to compete in cricket with visual impairment. The match remained closely contested and was decided on the final ball, with the Samarthanam team emerging victorious. The initiative also reflected the objective of service learning by connecting classroom discussions with experiences outside the university.

Rather than learning about disability only through academic material, students interacted directly with athletes competing despite visual impairment. For participants and spectators, the experience offered a perspective that focused on skill, adaptation and participation rather than limitations.

Rugby coaching reaches remote Lahaul for U-19 talent

LAHAUL-SPITI

Rugby coaching and talent identification for Under-19 players has reached Trilokinath in Himachal Pradesh's remote Lahaul-Spiti region, with the area's Government School hosting a special training programme at more than 9,000 feet above sea level.

Rugby Association Himachal Pradesh (RAHP) coach-cum-selector Navpet Singh conducted a refresher course for schoolchildren and identified promising players for Under-19 boys' and girls' teams. The programme is being held alongside a school sports meet involving around 150 students from 19 schools.

The initiative comes after the Himachal Pradesh government introduced rugby in Under-19 school games on a trial basis during the current academic session. District-level teams are being formed through trials, followed by a proposed state-level rugby tournament in October. Lahaul ADPEO Vinod Kumar welcomed the initiative, saying specialised coaching in remote areas would give students an opportunity to explore rugby and develop their sporting potential. The programme is also aimed at encouraging more schools and children to participate in sports.

Trilokinath, located at approximately 2,760 metres above sea level, is among the remote Himalayan locations where RAHP is expanding grassroots rugby. Selected players from district trials could progress to state representation. Rugby is also part of the School Games Federation of India programme, with the Under-19 National School Games scheduled in Delhi from October 31 to November 5.

Messi to play his farewell match for Argentina

BUENOS AIRES

Lionel Messi has been included in Argentina's squad for three upcoming home friendlies, giving the veteran forward an opportunity to say goodbye to international football before the home fans after announcing his retirement from the national team.

Argentina will face Bolivia on September 30 at the Mario Alberto Kempes Stadium in Cordoba. The team will then play Burkina Faso on October 3 and Benin on October 6 at River Plate's Stadium. Messi, Rodrigo De Paul and Giovanni Lo Celso are expected to feature in the final friendly on October 6.

Messi announced his international retirement earlier this month, ending a decorated career that began with his senior debut in 2005. He became Argentina's most-capped player and all-time leading scorer, making 203 appearances and scoring 203 goals.

The 39-year-old endured several years of disappointment before finally winning a major international title. Argentina lost the 2014 World Cup final to Germany and the 2016 Copa America final to Chile before Messi helped the team win the 2021 Copa America, ending a 28-year wait for a major trophy.

James Rodriguez retires from international football

BOGOTÁ

Colombia stalwart James Rodriguez has announced his retirement from international football, ending a career in which he became one of the country's most recognisable players. His final appearance for Colombia came at the 2026 FIFA World Cup, where the team exited in the Round of 16 after losing to Switzerland.

Rodriguez announced his decision in an emotional social media message. "The moment has come. Thank you for every match, every joy, every tear, and every dream we shared together. Representing the Colombian national team was one of the greatest honours of my life. Thank you, Colombia, and forever," he wrote.

The former Real Madrid midfielder rose to global prominence during the 2014 World Cup in Brazil, where he won the Golden Boot after scoring six goals and helped Colombia reach the quarterfinals.

Rodriguez later represented Colombia at the 2018, 2022 and 2026 World Cups. He finished his international career with 131 caps, 31 goals and 43 assists.

He also played an important role in Colombia's Copa America campaigns. Rodriguez helped the team reach the 2024 final, where they lost to Argentina, and also contributed to Colombia's runners-up finish in the 2016 edition.

Across 14 Copa America appearances, Rodriguez recorded one goal and eight assists. His performances across major tournaments and international competitions established a lasting legacy with the Colombian national team.

UC Cricket Challenge connects cricket with education

BENGALURU

The University of Canberra (UC) Cricket Challenge concluded its third edition in India, bringing together 24 Under-16 school teams and more than 300 cricketers and support staff for a weeklong tournament combining cricket with international education opportunities.

Held from August 30 to September 4 at Jain International Residential School in Bengaluru, the 2026 edition adopted a T20 format, giving students a platform to compete and develop their skills. The tournament featured 16 boys' teams and eight girls' teams, reflecting growing participation by women in school cricket.

Schools from Bengaluru and other parts of India, including Ajmer, Kolar, Coimbatore and Indore, participated in the event. Live-streamed matches attracted an audience of more than 30,000 viewers, extending the tournament's reach beyond participating schools.

The challenge was delivered in partnership with Cricket ACT, the governing body for cricket in the Australian Capital Territory, under a partnership established with UC in 2024. Alongside matches, students attended coaching masterclasses, talent activities and information sessions about higher education in Australia.

University of Canberra Vice-Chancellor Professor The Honourable Bill Shorten said the tournament demonstrated the university's commitment to helping people pursue sporting ambitions alongside education. Cricket ACT CEO Anthony Iltott said the event helped strengthen connections between India and Australia through sport and education.

The next stage of the UC Cup will be held in Canberra from September 30 to October 2, where Indian teams will compete against Australian teams. UC said its wider India engagement also includes scholarships, Work Integrated Learning opportunities and coach development programmes.
