KARNATAKA EYES GLOBAL AI, CHIP, DEEP-TECH LEADERSHIP

CM says Bengaluru ranks eighth among the world's startup ecosystems and second in Asia for AI-native startups...

...highlights startup grants, semiconductor investments, and innovation initiatives.

BENGALURU

Chief Minister DK Shivakumar on Tuesday said the state was positioning itself as a global hub for artificial intelligence, deep technology, semiconductor manufacturing and biotechnology, backed by progressive policies, research institutions, a thriving startup ecosystem and skilled human resources.

Speaking after inaugurating the 29th edition of the Bengaluru Tech Summit, themed 'AI and Beyond', he said Karnataka had consistently been at the forefront of technological advancement and was preparing to lead the next phase of global innovation.

Highlighting the southern state's contribution to the country's technology economy, he said, "Karnataka laid the foundations of modern industry and technology through institutions of learning and research, strong public sector enterprises and the trust of global companies. Some of India's most ambitious scientific and engineering projects have found a home here."

Shivakumar said Karnataka accounted for two out of every five dollars earned by India through software and services exports, amounting to approximately $173 billion last year.

He said Karnataka had received $9.4 billion in FDI equity inflows in the first half of financial year 2025-26, accounting for 26.7% of India's total inflows during that period. The state government's own data also places Karnataka among India's largest FDI destinations.

More than 1,000 Global Capability Centres (GCCs) or about half of India's total, are based in Bengaluru, he said, adding that over 30 new GCCs brought investments exceeding $1 billion into the state in 2025 alone.

"All global companies have trusted us and the most ambitious scientific and engineering projects have found home here. We will bring the talent, the policies and the partnership. You bring your ambition. What lies beyond AI, we want to build here, with you," he said.

On semiconductors, Shivakumar said Karnataka is home to more than 100 fabless chip companies, while three out of every five engineers working in India's semiconductor capability centres are based in Bengaluru. He said the state accounts for about one-fifth of India's electronics exports and is now seeking to move from semiconductor design into manufacturing.

Global companies are investing more than Rs 23,000 crore in semiconductor research and manufacturing facilities in Bengaluru and Mysuru, he said.

Karnataka has already been positioning Bengaluru as a global deep-tech centre, with the government highlighting the city's strengths in AI, nanotechnology, electronics and research.

He also announced that the government's deep-tech accelerator 'Innoverse' would support 35 growth-stage ventures over the next five years.

Under the 'Government First' initiative, the state will also become the first customer for selected startups, with a dedicated allocation of Rs 25 crore to procure innovative solutions developed by them, he added.

Om Birla bats for women's rise from panchayats to Parliament

BENGALURU

Lok Sabha Speaker Om Birla on Tuesday stressed the need to increase women's role in policymaking and governance, calling for elected women representatives to be trained in artificial intelligence and digital technologies to help strengthen democratic institutions.

Opening the Commonwealth Women Parliamentarians (CWP) India Region Conference at Vidhana Soudha here, he also proposed an institutional mechanism to build the capabilities of women representatives at all levels, from panchayats to Parliament, so they can promote transparency and accountability in administration.

"Women are no longer merely participants; today, they are leaders in every field. Their participation in democratic institutions, policymaking, lawmaking and deliberations on important issues will certainly help build a stronger democracy," Birla said.

Women should not be limited to occupying seats in legislatures: DKS

Chief Minister DK Shivakumar said women's reservation and their greater involvement in decision-making were necessary for a stronger democracy. He stressed that women should not be limited to occupying seats in legislatures. "Women must not only occupy the seats. They must influence decisions, shape legislation and determine the direction of governance," he said. Welcoming delegates from different parts of India and the Commonwealth, he described Bengaluru as more than just a city, calling it a "city of talent". He invited them to visit the Bengaluru Tech Summit to see India's strengths in technology and AI. Pointing to Bengaluru's technology workforce, he said the city had 2.6 million IT professionals, compared with 1.3 million in California. Women make up around 42 per cent of Bengaluru's IT workforce, he said. Karnataka produces about 13,940 doctors every year, of whom 42% are women. Women also account for nearly 80% of the state's more than 1.2 lakh paramedical workers. The CM recalled the role played by successive governments and leaders in expanding women's participation in politics, particularly through the 73rd and 74th Constitutional Amendments, which provided for reservation in local bodies. He urged elected representatives to support women who had entered panchayat politics and encourage them to continue in public life instead of allowing male family members to take their place. "Democracy without a woman is like a bird without a wing. It may flap, but it cannot rise to the true heights," he added.

Cooperation, not competition, must shape future: PM

Manila: India believes in a free, inclusive and rules-based Indo-Pacific and its future depends on "cooperation, and not competition", Prime Minister Narendra Modi told leaders of the 11-nation grouping ASEAN on Tuesday against the backdrop of growing concerns over China's military muscle-flexing in the region.

At the annual ASEAN-India summit, Modi proposed nine initiatives, including a long-term maritime plan to boost connectivity and ensure seafarers' security, free e-visas for tourists from the bloc's member nations, cooperation on mining and critical minerals, and a framework for technical exchanges in the civil nuclear energy sector.

Devaraja Market rent hike a must for its upkeep: MLA Harish Gowda

CH NEWS, MYSURU

Chamaraja MLA K. Harish Gowda has said that revision of shop rents at the historic Devaraja Market is essential to ensure its proper maintenance and upkeep.

> "If rents have to be reduced, there must be a proper basis for doing so. We will constitute a team of senior officials and divide it into three groups to examine whether the currently proposed rates are excessive. After discussing the findings with the MLA, a decision will be taken at a subsequent meeting."

> Commissioner, Mysuru City Corporation

Chamaraja Constituency MLA K. Harish Gowda chairing a meeting to address the grievances of the shopkeepers of Devaraja Market in Mysuru on Tuesday. MCC Commissioner M.K. Savitha is also seen.

Speaking at a meeting held at the Mysore City Corporation office on Tuesday to discuss the proposed revision of rents for shops in the market, he said that rents should be revised once every 12 years. However, no revision had been made since 2003. If the issue escalated, shopkeepers would eventually face difficulties. They would not be able to win a legal battle against the Corporation or the district administration. The court could even direct them to vacate their shops in the future. So, the shopkeepers must take a collective decision and depute a delegation of five to six representatives, including Mahadevanna, to hold discussions with officials and arrive at a mutually acceptable rent revision.

Pointing out that nobody would offer commercial space at such low rents in a prime location in the heart of the city, he said the market required regular maintenance, including water and electricity supply, roads for public movement, painting and proper garbage disposal. Shopkeepers too should take these responsibilities into consideration.

Corporation officials had already informed the traders about the proposed rent revision, he said, adding that the shopkeepers should convene a meeting among themselves and voluntarily communicate how much rent they would be willing to pay. The supermarkets could not be forced to shut down merely because traditional markets were conducting business. Similarly, street vendors had been carrying on their trade on footpaths since the time of their great-grandfathers, and it would not be right to brand all such activities as wrong. Customers were free to purchase goods wherever they preferred.

? DID YOU KNOW?
The erstwhile Maharajas established Devaraja Market with the vision of bringing traders under one roof

"People's lifestyles are changing, and we must adapt ourselves to these changes," he said.

Advising traders to modify their businesses in keeping with changing times and focus on selling products required for everyday needs, he recalled that the erstwhile Maharajas had established Devaraja Market with the vision of bringing traders under one roof. "We should not allow this historic market to fade into oblivion," he said.

"Of the 694 shops in the market, around 150 to 500 traders may have been carrying on business here since their grandfathers' time. As the cost of maintenance is increasing, rent revision has become necessary. We are not asking traders to pay the rent rates proposed in 2019. Officials working here are human beings too. We are not demanding an immediate 10 per cent hike in rent," he added.

Men who caught chain-snatchers attacked; BJP seeks Goonda Act

CH NEWS, MYSURU

Questions have been raised over the law and order situation in the cultural city of Mysuru following an alleged group assault on Puneeth and his friends, who had reportedly attempted to catch two minors suspected of trying to snatch a woman's gold chain in JP Nagar on Sunday night.

In a press statement, Mysuru City BJP Media Co-Convenor B.M. Santosh Kumar strongly condemned the incident and demanded stringent action against all those involved, including invoking the Goonda Act against the accused, subject to legal provisions. The incident reportedly occurred near Kavitha Bakery in the prominent JP Nagar locality. Two minor youths allegedly attempted to snatch a woman's chain, following which local resident Puneeth and his friends caught them and decided to hand them over to the police. However, a group of people allegedly associated with the two youths arrived at Kavitha Bakery Circle and assaulted Puneeth and his friends.

Condemning the attack, Santosh Kumar said Puneeth and his friends had acted responsibly by attempting to apprehend the suspects and hand them over to the police. "Is it wrong for citizens to question wrongdoing and hand over those involved to the police? Do those who take the law into their own hands and indulge in group assaults have no fear of the law?" he asked.

He questioned who would protect ordinary citizens if those who assist the police in apprehending suspected offenders themselves became victims of assault. Such incidents, he said, would create fear among the public and undermine confidence in the police and the law enforcement system.

According to the statement, the group allegedly involved in the assault fled the scene after the incident. Puneeth has reportedly lodged a complaint with the police. Santosh Kumar urged the police to identify and arrest every person involved and initiate stringent legal action. Failure to curb such acts of group violence would erode public confidence in the rule of law and create an atmosphere of insecurity among residents, he added.

Former Mysuru MP Pratap Simha and Krishnaraja constituency MLA T.S. Srivatsa visited the police station along with local residents on the night of the incident and obtained details of the case. The incident has triggered anxiety and fear among residents of JP Nagar, he said,

> "Is it wrong for citizens to question wrongdoing and hand over those involved to the police?"
> — B.M. Santosh Kumar, Media Co-Convenor, Mysuru City BJP

urging the police to take decisive steps to prevent the recurrence of such incidents.

Calling upon the newly appointed Mysuru City Police Commissioner Vishnuvardhan to take strict measures, Santosh Kumar demanded that all the accused be brought to book and that provisions of the Goonda Act be invoked against those involved, wherever supported by evidence and applicable under the law.

"Yoga must become an integral part of life to reap its full benefits"

CH NEWS, MYSURU

To derive the full benefits of yoga, it should not be treated merely as a form of exercise or a mechanical routine but should be made an integral part of everyday life, said Dr. Srivatsa, Principal of the Government Ayurveda College.

He was speaking after inaugurating a new yoga class on Sunday at GSS Chirayu Wellness Centre, located on Adichunchanagiri Main Road in Kuvempunagar, Mysuru. The classes have been launched in collaboration with the GSS Yogic Research Foundation.

Dr. Srivatsa said that different dimensions of yoga, including Raja Yoga, Bhakti Yoga and Hatha Yoga, contribute to an individual's physical, mental and spiritual development. The body, the dimension connecting an individual with the world, the mind that controls the senses, and the soul that provides life energy to all these aspects are integral components of human existence. The objective of yoga is to improve the quality of all these dimensions and establish harmony among them.

He observed that a single form of yoga would not be suitable for everyone, as individuals differ in their lifestyles, physical abilities and life goals. Therefore, people should understand their own capabilities and requirements and choose yoga practices that support their overall development. Yoga practice should not become mechanical. Instead, practitioners should introduce freshness and innovation into their daily routines and give importance to learning different asanas. They should avoid comparing themselves with others and progress gradually according to their individual abilities.

Only through regular practice and by making yoga a part of everyday life can one experience its true benefits, he added.

Srihari, head of the GSS Group of Institutions, said that modern lifestyles, work-related stress, irregular eating habits and disturbed sleep patterns were adversely affecting people's health. In particular, those working night shifts were experiencing changes in their body's natural biological rhythms.

> Yoga practice should not become mechanical

Hence, it was important to set aside time every day for yoga, pranayama and meditation. Such practices for maintaining good health were among the best investments one could make, he said.

Srihari also demonstrated various yoga asanas and explained their significance and health benefits.

Bharat Swabhiman Trust, Mysuru, president Shashikumar; retired AYUSH officer and Liaison Officer of GSS Chirayu Dr. Hariganesh; Mysuru Yogalaya head Ranganath; Prathinidhi magazine Editor-in-Chief C.K. Mahendra; and Dr. M.S. Bharath were present.

CH NEWS, MYSURU

Mysuru-Kodagu MP Yaduveer Krishnadatta Chamaraja Wadiyar chaired a meeting in Mysuru on Tuesday to discuss the implementation of the proposed Arjuna Memorial at LIC Circle, also known as Arjuna Circle, in Mysuru.

Narasimharaja MLA Tanveer Sait and officials from the Mysore City Corporation (MCC), Department of Tourism and other concerned departments participated in the meeting.

The meeting held detailed discussions on the Comprehensive Detailed Project Report (DPR) for the proposed memorial, including its design, project blueprint, implementation strategy and coordination among various departments. The participants also discussed expediting the administrative and technical procedures required to take up the project.

The memorial is proposed in honour of Arjuna, the legendary Dasara elephant who was an integral part of Mysuru's Dasara celebrations and occupied a special place in the hearts of people across the State. The primary objective of the project is to preserve his legacy and familiarise future generations with his contribution to Mysuru's cultural heritage.

'Yes, I am an adopted son. So what?'

MYSURU: The MP directly addressed recent disparaging remarks by Congress leaders who questioned his political legitimacy and rights as an "adopted son" of the erstwhile Mysuru royal family. Dismissing the attacks as entirely irrelevant, he emphasized constitutional equality. "Yes, I am an adopted son—that is a factual reality. So what?" Yaduveer retorted. "Under the Indian Constitution, everyone is a citizen, and no one holds a special, elevated status. Whether one is an adopted son or born into a family, we are all equal citizens. Personal criticisms yield no benefit to society. The people expect politicians to debate policies, rules, and developmental issues, not engage in personal mudslinging." Yaduveer further escalated his critique of the Congress party, taking aim at Leader of the Opposition Rahul Gandhi, and accused the opposition of failing in its core democratic duties and resorting to the "path of anarchy." "Instead of utilizing Parliament to debate and express their opinions, they are conducting mock parliaments at home. What should legitimately happen on the floor of the Parliament is happening on the streets," he remarked. Responding to a question about Sonia Gandhi's recent book, he quipped that reading it would certainly not provide his critics with accurate information about his developmental work, urging his detractors to follow credible local news instead. Amid speculation about a potential leadership change in the state BJP on the completion of the current State President's tenure, Yaduveer categorically ruled himself out of the race. "My focus remains solely on my committed duties as an MP and a local party worker," he affirmed, noting that the BJP is already mobilizing at the grassroots level for the upcoming Zilla and Taluk Panchayat elections.

Libraries offer wisdom for life, books build lasting knowledge

CH NEWS, MYSURU

The National Library Week celebrations, jointly organised by the Mysuru City/District Central Library, Mysore Librarians and Information Scientists Association (MyLISA) and Balya Foundation (Regd.), Mysuru, were inaugurated with enthusiasm and grandeur.

Sri Shivarathri Deshikendra Mahaswamiji lent special significance to the occasion. Regional Commissioner Nitesh Patil, Deputy Commissioner G. Lakshmikanth Reddy and other dignitaries on the dais inaugurated the celebrations by offering floral tributes to the portrait of renowned library scientist Dr. S.R. Ranganathan and lighting the ceremonial lamp.

B. Manjunath, Deputy Director of the City Central Library, welcomed the gathering and explained the objectives and significance of the celebrations.

Inaugurating the programme, Reddy said libraries were invaluable centres that provided knowledge and information every day. Although Google offered thousands of pieces of information, it was essential to study books in libraries to distinguish accurate and reliable information from misleading content.

Delivering a special lecture, Dr. C.P. Ramasheesha, retired Librarian of the University of Mysore and member of the City Central Library Authority, said the National Library Week should be celebrated meaningfully by purchasing books, reading them and putting the knowledge gained into practice.

He observed that several countries, including China and the United States, celebrated National Library Week, while many nations organised library-related activities during October and November. Explaining the concept of Green Libraries in Britain, he highlighted the importance of environmental conservation. He also pointed out that Italy gave priority to creating public awareness about misinformation and incorrect statistics.

In the present digital era, every reader had a responsibility to verify the authenticity of information before accepting or sharing it, he stressed.

Regional Commissioner Nitesh Patil extended his greetings on the occasion and explained the history and significance of observing National Library Week from November 14 to 20 every year. "Information viewed on mobile screens is often fleeting, whereas knowledge gained through reading books remains with us throughout our lives," he said.

Quoting the vachanas of Basavanna, he highlighted the importance of awareness and experience. While temples offered peace of mind, libraries provided wisdom for life, he observed, urging people to cultivate the habit of reading both classical works and contemporary literature.

As part of the National Library Week celebrations, various workshops were organised to nurture literary, artistic and cultural interests among students.

Shruthi Chinnappa and her team from the Analytical and Creative Studio, Bengaluru, conducted a vachana singing workshop for students. Librarians who had rendered exemplary service were felicitated during the programme. Certificates and prizes were distributed to students who emerged winners in various competitions. The Balya Foundation also distributed prizes and notebooks to the participating students.

MyLISA President Basappa, Balya Foundation Founder Anil and District Central Library Deputy Director Suma Kodihalli were among those present. Staff members of the City and District Central Libraries and members of MyLISA also participated.

Library Assistant Kusuma compered the programme. Suma Kodihalli proposed the vote of thanks, bringing the celebrations to a successful conclusion.

Books are not merely collections of printed words; they are guiding lights that shape lives. Programmes such as National Library Week play a vital role in drawing children and young people away from the fleeting attractions of the mobile world and nurturing a lasting culture of reading.

Karnataka air quality dips as winter sets in

CH NEWS, BENGALURU

Karnataka's latest air quality report reveals rising pollution levels across major urban centers, with Bengaluru, Bidar, and Karwar recording 'poor' Air Quality Index readings ranging from 110 to 156. Experts attribute the spike in harmful PM2.5 and PM10 particulate matter to winter weather combinations with dust and early-morning fog. Consequently, health authorities have advised individuals with respiratory issues or asthma to exercise caution during outdoor morning routines. Meanwhile, southern districts and Malenadu regions continue to enjoy significantly cleaner, satisfactory air quality compared to the state's major cities.

'Private hospitals must display treatment price lists'

CH NEWS, BENGALURU

Karnataka's health department has made it mandatory for all private hospitals to prominently display price lists for major treatments and procedures. District Health Officers are now conducting strict inspections to ensure full compliance across the state. Although hospital associations noted that showing thousands of procedures is tough, officials agreed that major rates must be shown publicly while detailed booklets remain available on request. Authorities have warned that strict legal action will follow for any non-compliance. This step aims to bring transparency, protecting patients from unexpected medical bills.

Celebrities' tobacco portrayals draw Khader's ire

At the launch of the Tobacco-Free Youth Campaign 4.0 at Arogya Soudha.

CH NEWS, BENGALURU

State health authorities have launched an aggressive public awareness push to shield adolescents from the glamorization of substance abuse. While inaugurating the 'Tobacco-Free Youth Campaign 4.0' at Arogya Soudha, Health Minister U.T. Khader voiced strong displeasure regarding the depiction of smoking by film actors, warning that cinematic glamorization routinely misguides impressionable young audiences into adopting fatal habits.

Addressing students and community members gathered at the event, the minister pointedly noted that actors who pose with cigarettes on screen are merely performing roles, often receiving commercial compensation while bearing none of the health consequences. He cautioned youth against treating celebrities as role models for lifestyle choices, warning that imitating on-screen smoking habits can severely damage personal health and ultimately lead to intensive care hospitalization, leaving grieving families to face the consequences alone. Later clarifying his remarks to media personnel, Khader explained that his critique was not targeted at any specific regional actors, but rather addressed a broader media trend across Indian and international cinema where tobacco usage is styled as a fashionable or rebellious trait.

The state-level campaign launch also served as a platform to address broader regulatory enforcement challenges concerning tobacco control within corporate and public transit spaces. Responding to queries regarding designated smoking zones within major IT and BT corporate parks, Khader acknowledged that while total bans are difficult to implement overnight in workplaces employing hundreds of thousands of people, authorities have received specific proposals to restrict or downsize these zones and are actively reviewing the matter.

Furthermore, the health minister addressed the ongoing black-market circulation of e-cigarettes despite existing legislative prohibitions. Emphasizing that eliminating any banned substance entirely is a gradual administrative process rather than an overnight transition, he issued a stern warning that law enforcement will enact strict legal penalties against any commercial entities or individuals caught selling electronic nicotine delivery systems surreptitiously. Officials also confirmed that scrutiny will be extended to address recurring concerns regarding indirect tobacco or gutkha brand advertisements appearing on public transport networks like Bengaluru Metropolitan Transport Corporation buses, reaffirming the state's commitment to rigorous public health compliance.

Health Minister U.T. Khader slammed cinematic smoking glamorization at the Tobacco-Free Youth Campaign 4.0, warning teens against imitating celebrity habits.

₹2,186 crore withheld panchayat grants: Karnataka to move SC

Karnataka targets federal authorities, preparing a high-stakes Supreme Court legal battle over withheld rural development funds.

CH NEWS, BENGALURU

Karnataka is escalating its ongoing financial disputes with federal authorities, setting the stage for a high-stakes legal showdown in the nation's highest court. State officials have confirmed that preparations are officially underway to file a Special Leave Petition in the Supreme Court against the central administration. The planned litigation stems from the federal government's refusal to release ₹2,186 crore in vital grants owed to local Gram Panchayats.

Minister for Rural Development and Panchayat Raj, Eshwar B. Khandre, issued direct instructions to Advocate General Shashikiran Shetty during a high-level consultation held at Vidhana Soudha. The withheld funds, totaling ₹2,186.20 crore for the 2025-26 fiscal year, were originally allocated under the formal recommendations of the 15th Finance Commission. According to state leadership, federal authorities have delayed disbursement citing trivial administrative excuses, despite the state government fulfilling all required documentation and procedural conditions.

The State is preparing a petition in the SC over the withheld panchayat grants.

Minister Khandre stressed that taking legal recourse has become an absolute necessity.

> "It is unjust for the Central Government to withhold funds that are rightfully due to the state."

> — Eshwar B. Khandre, Minister for Rural Development and Panchayat Raj

The state is currently grappling with severe agricultural distress and drought-like conditions exacerbated by rainfall deficits linked to the El Niño climate phenomenon. With local treasuries severely depleted, grassroots administrative bodies lack the basic financial resources required to execute routine maintenance, infrastructural repairs, and essential community services. State officials argue that withholding constitutionally mandated grants unjustly penalizes rural citizens.

Advocate General Shashikiran Shetty reviewed the legal merits of the case during the conference, which included departmental leaders such as Principal Secretary Pankaj Kumar Pandey and Law Department officials. The Advocate General confirmed that robust constitutional grounds exist for the petition, drawing parallels to previous successful legal challenges where the state compelled federal disbursement of overdue funds. In addition to the withheld grants, legal teams are reviewing pending departmental litigation concerning Panchayat Development Officer seniority lists across higher judicial forums.

'Friends offstage, divided over Cauvery'

CH NEWS, NEW DELHI

Karnataka Chief Minister D.K. Shivakumar recently stated that his state will continue to honor its legal obligations to release Cauvery river water to Tamil Nadu as mandated by the Supreme Court, while strongly questioning neighboring political parties over their persistent opposition to the proposed Mekedatu balancing reservoir project.

Speaking to reporters following a high-profile meeting with Tamil Nadu Chief Minister C. Joseph Vijay during the memoir launch of senior Congress leader Sonia Gandhi in New Delhi, Shivakumar remarked on their personal rapport while firmly defending Karnataka's regional interests. "Of course, we are friends. They have their own political problems," Shivakumar noted.

Chief Minister D.K. Shivakumar and Tamil Nadu Chief Minister C. Joseph Vijay at the memoir launch in New Delhi.

He challenged regional parties across the border by highlighting judicial directives, asking whether critics had reviewed the Supreme Court orders that outline water-sharing frameworks and revision petitions.

The encounter highlights ongoing geopolitical friction between the neighboring states regarding the contested Mekedatu project. Karnataka consistently maintains that the 67.15 tmc ft storage reservoir is fully within its legal rights to construct, arguing that it will effectively regulate water flow during distress years. Conversely, Tamil Nadu fiercely opposes the initiative, contending that the dam could severely restrict its entitled share of Cauvery waters and impact downstream agricultural communities in the delta region.

This inter-state dispute has also created intra-party friction. Tamil Nadu Congress President Manickam Tagore recently voiced sharp opposition to Shivakumar's continued push for Mekedatu, warning that the dam could dry out parts of the Cauvery delta.

Citing the 2018 Supreme Court verdict and the Cauvery Water Disputes Tribunal award, Tagore stressed that Tamil Nadu is guaranteed 177.25 tmc ft annually including unregulated catchment flows and urged legal escalation to block construction. Despite these political divisions, Shivakumar maintains that Karnataka can successfully build the reservoir while ensuring downstream releases comply with all judicial mandates.

Hydroponics farming draws visitors at GKVK Krishi Mela

CH NEWS, BENGALURU

Modern soilless cultivation techniques have emerged as a primary attraction at the ongoing Krishi Mela 2026 hosted at the Gandhi Krishi Vignana Kendra (GKVK) campus in Bengaluru, drawing enthusiastic crowds of agriculturalists exploring resilient solutions to climate unpredictability and water scarcity.

As Karnataka grapples with severe agricultural deficits and drought conditions across multiple districts, the exhibition of hydroponics technology has provided visiting farmers with a compelling vision of alternative crop production. Organized under the auspices of the University of Agricultural Sciences (UAS), the three-day agricultural exposition is heavily spotlighting sustainable, resource-efficient methodologies designed to maximize output while minimizing environmental footprints.

Hydroponics eliminates traditional soil dependencies entirely, relying instead on precision-engineered nutrient solutions delivered directly to plant roots via specialized pipe networks and controlled irrigation systems. Agricultural experts at the mela demonstrated how leafy greens and high-value vegetables such as lettuce, spinach, coriander, cabbage, and mint can be successfully cultivated using minimal water volume.

Hydroponic racks of leafy greens on show at the Krishi Mela at GKVK.

By precisely regulating nutrient delivery and hydration levels, the technique optimizes growth rates and enables continuous, year-round harvesting. Furthermore, because plants are raised in controlled environments devoid of native soil pathogens, cultivators experience drastically reduced weed management challenges and lower vulnerability to soil-borne crop diseases.

A major advantage highlighted during the demonstrations is the spatial flexibility of hydroponic systems. The technology allows urban residents and small-scale growers to produce fresh vegetables in restricted spaces, transforming residential rooftops, balconies, and compact backyards into productive micro-farms.

Farming delegates attending the exhibition expressed strong optimism regarding its economic viability. Thimmesha, a progressive farmer from Turuvekere, noted that adopting such technology during acute dry spells or drought conditions offers a reliable pathway toward enhanced profitability with minimal initial capital investment.

As agricultural scientists continue to promote climate-smart innovations throughout the GKVK event, the widespread interest in hydroponics signals a growing paradigm shift toward water-conscious, technology-driven farming practices across the region.

HC MANDATES MAGISTRATE'S PERMISSION FOR NCR PROBES

CH NEWS, BENGALURU

In a significant legal ruling reinforcing procedural safeguards under criminal jurisprudence, the Karnataka High Court has clarified that law enforcement agencies must obtain explicit prior permission from a Magistrate's Court before initiating investigations into non-cognizable (non-serious) offenses.

A single-judge bench presided over by Justice Suraj Govindaraj delivered the ruling while allowing a criminal petition filed by Akhil Achyuth and two other co-accused individuals, who sought the complete quashing of a First Information Report (FIR) registered against them by the Chitradurga Rural Police.

A receiving stamp from the magistrate does not satisfy Section 174(2) of the BNSS, the court ruled

The underlying dispute arose from a criminal complaint alleging cheating and inducing the dishonest delivery of property, offenses categorized under Section 318(4) of the Bharatiya Nyaya Sanhita (BNS) as non-cognizable. Court records revealed that local police registered the formal FIR at 7:30 PM on the day of the complaint, while the paperwork was only forwarded to the jurisdictional Magistrate's Court shortly afterward at 8:05 PM.

Crucially, investigators failed to secure any judicial order or prior authorization from the Magistrate empowering them to probe the allegations, merely obtaining an administrative acknowledgment of receipt.

The High Court firmly ruled that simply dispatching a complaint to a magistrate and securing a receiving stamp does not satisfy the statutory mandate stipulated under Section 174(2) of the Bharatiya Nagarik Suraksha Sanhita (BNSS). The bench observed that the law requires a substantive judicial order granting permission to investigate, rather than a passive notification. Allowing an investigation to proceed under such flawed circumstances, the court noted, would permit executive authorities to bypass fundamental legislative safeguards.

Consequently, the bench declared the contested FIR and all subsequent investigative proceedings legally void, ordering them quashed. However, the court clarified that this judgment does not bar law enforcement authorities from approaching the concerned Magistrate's Court to seek proper statutory authorization. If the magistrate subsequently grants formal permission in accordance with the law, police remain at liberty to recommence lawful inquiry procedures.

Legal experts have welcomed the judgment as a vital check against arbitrary police actions, ensuring that mandatory procedural checks governing non-cognizable criminal complaints are strictly maintained across all judicial districts in the state.

TRANSIT BEATS TRAFFIC

Pink Line sees high response, relieves Bannerghatta traffic

CH NEWS, BENGALURU

Bengaluru's newly inaugurated Namma Metro Pink Line recorded an enthusiastic response on its first working day, drawing heavy commuter footfall and visibly easing vehicular traffic congestion along the vital Bannerghatta Road corridor.

33,400+

riders in the first weekend; weekday numbers expected to scale toward 100,000

Following its formal launch by Prime Minister Narendra Modi, the initial 7.5-kilometer elevated operational stretch spanning from Kalena Agrahara to Suddagunte Palya (S.G. Palya) across six new stations witnessed a massive influx of residents abandoning personal automobiles in favor of rapid transit. Bangalore Metro Rail Corporation Limited (BMRCL) officials reported that heavy commuter preference for the new route has created a multiplier effect across connecting corridors, triggering sharp spikes in passenger volume and interchange activity on the Yellow, Green, and Purple Lines.

The multi-level interchange facility at Jayadeva Hospital station which bridges the Pink Line with the Yellow Line, alongside the R.V. Road station connecting toward the Green Line, experienced intense passenger traffic throughout morning and evening peak hours. Commuters traveling from southern residential layouts such as Hulimavu, IIM Bangalore, and JP Nagar 4th Phase utilized the seamless connectivity to bypass traditional bottleneck zones, routing directly toward major commercial hubs like MG Road, Whitefield, and Challaghatta.

Having debuted over the weekend with an initial weekend ridership exceeding 33,400 passengers, transit authorities anticipated weekday figures to scale toward 100,000 users. To accommodate the surge, BMRCL operated train fleets at a high-frequency interval of every 8 minutes during peak hours and every 10 minutes during non-peak windows.

The immediate shift toward public transport brought noticeable relief to motorists navigating Bannerghatta Road. Traffic police and urban planners observed a measurable reduction in vehicular density, validating long-term infrastructure projections that mass transit integration can successfully alleviate chronic surface congestion on south Bengaluru's primary arteries.

Tender procedures and material procurement should also be completed by the end of January.

MLA G.D. Harish Gowda said poor road conditions in rural areas had become a major concern, while a shortage of funds was making development works difficult. He added that only small projects were being taken up with the limited funds available.

Speaking after performing the groundbreaking ceremony for ₹33 lakh asphalt-laying work on the road connecting Kalegowdanakoppal and Hagaranahalli Mantikoppal, the MLA said the state's financial condition had worsened due to expenditure on various guarantee schemes.

He alleged that insufficient funds were being released for infrastructure and development projects. However, he said he was continuously approaching officials to secure funds for essential works, including road repairs and school improvements.

Chitradurga orders all departments to register construction workers

Commissioner Kumaraswamy urged local bodies to enforce mandatory worker registration and labour law compliance in all development tenders.

CH NEWS, CHITRADURGA

Additional Deputy Commissioner B.T. Kumaraswamy has directed all government departments and local bodies to ensure that construction workers employed in their projects are registered with the Karnataka Building and Other Construction Workers' Welfare Board.

He issued the direction while chairing a District-Level Cess Monitoring Committee meeting at the Deputy Commissioner's office on Tuesday. The meeting reviewed the collection and transfer of construction cess to the Welfare Board.

Kumaraswamy said mandatory worker registration and compliance with labour laws were already included in the tender conditions for development projects. Engineering departments, City Municipal Councils, Town Municipal Councils and Gram Panchayats must ensure that all workers engaged in their projects are registered.

He warned that contractors failing to follow these conditions would be violating the tender rules. He directed the concerned departments to monitor registration and take the necessary action.

Crumbling classrooms at Shirola school raise safety fears

The Government Higher Primary School at Shirola, Mundargi

MALINGARAYA PUJAR, MUNDARGI

The poor condition of the Government Higher Primary School at Shirola, within Mundargi municipal limits, has raised concerns among parents and residents, who say the building needs urgent repairs.

The school caters to children from farming and daily-wage families who cannot afford private education. According to information provided by the school community, 122 students from Classes 1 to 7 are enrolled. Parents fear that the damaged building could put children and teachers at risk.

Of the school's six rooms, four are reportedly in a dilapidated condition. One of the other rooms is used as the head teacher's office, while the remaining room stores old materials. As a result, classes are being conducted in the four damaged rooms, residents said.

The roof concrete has reportedly fallen away in several places, exposing steel reinforcement bars. Cracks are visible on the walls, and rainwater seepage has further weakened parts of the structure. Parents and teachers are concerned that pieces of the ceiling could fall during lessons.

The school also faces a shortage of teachers. The community says only five teachers are available for the 122 students, with no dedicated teachers for mathematics and science. This, they say, is affecting the quality of education.

Basic facilities are also lacking. Students reportedly have no desks and sit on the floor during lessons. The school lacks a supply of clean drinking water, and its toilets are said to be unusable. There is also no playground for students.

Villagers and School Development and Monitoring Committee (SDMC) members say they have repeatedly raised the issues with officials. They submitted a written request to the Block Education Officer on June 29, 2024, seeking repairs, and also approached Shirahatti MLA Dr Chandru Lamani.

Residents allege that no effective action has followed. They have appealed to Primary and Secondary Education Minister Madhu Bangarappa and the education department to arrange an immediate safety inspection, repair or replace the unsafe classrooms, restore basic facilities and fill vacant teaching posts. They warned of further protests if their demands remain unaddressed.

Devappa Itagi, a resident of Mundargi, said: "How much do Education Minister Madhu Bangarappa and the department officials care about government schools? The department should wake up before a major disaster occurs. If a building collapses and children suffer, the education department officials will be directly responsible."

SAVE ANTI-CONVERSION LAW

VHP, Bajrang Dal warn govt against repealing laws

CH NEWS, CHIKKABALLAPURA

The Vishva Hindu Parishad (VHP) and Bajrang Dal have urged the Karnataka government not to repeal or weaken the state's anti-conversion and cattle protection laws during the upcoming Belagavi legislative session. They have also demanded the cancellation of a tender issued for separate military-style training for minority students.

A delegation from the Chikkaballapura units of the organisations submitted a memorandum addressed to the Governor, Chief Minister and Chief Secretary through the Deputy Commissioner.

Bajrang Dal district coordinator Vinod said the organisations opposed demands made by minority groups at a protest held at Freedom Park in Bengaluru seeking the repeal of the two laws. He criticised statements by KPCC president B.K. Hariprasad supporting changes to the anti-conversion law.

Vinod argued that the Karnataka Protection of Right to Freedom of Religion Act, 2022, was intended to prevent conversions through force, fraud, inducement or misrepresentation. He also referred to the Supreme Court's 1977 judgment in the Rev. Stanislaus case.

Religious leader Siddalingayya defended the Karnataka Prevention of Slaughter and Preservation of Cattle Act, 2020, saying it protected farmers' interests and livestock. He warned that weakening the law could create social tensions.

Bajrang Dal leader Deepak also opposed a reported tender by the Directorate of Minorities for 60 days of military-style training for minority students during 2026–27. He questioned the use of public funds for training restricted to one community and raised concerns about equality under Articles 14 and 15 of the Constitution.

The delegation also questioned the involvement of private organisations in conducting such training without direct Army supervision.

VHP and Bajrang Dal leaders warned of a statewide protest if the government decided to withdraw the laws. Gangadhar, Munindra, Naveen, Nagesh and other religious leaders attended the programme.

Madhu Bangarappa targets BJP leaders over Yediyurappa

Minister Bangarappa blamed Raghavendra for an arecanut farmer's destroyed plantation, alleging his associates' involvement and previous government title delays

CH NEWS, SHIVAMOGGA

Karnataka School Education Minister Madhu Bangarappa launched a sharp attack on BJP state president B.Y. Vijayendra, MP B.Y. Raghavendra and former MLA Haratalu Halappa, challenging the two BJP leaders to explain their father B.S. Yediyurappa's imprisonment.

Speaking at a press conference in Shivamogga, Bangarappa questioned Vijayendra's remarks against Congress leaders, including calling them "sons of thieves" at religious programmes. He alleged that such statements reflected the BJP's political approach and would continue until the elections.

Referring to the destruction of an arecanut plantation belonging to farmer Devaraj in Soraba, Bangarappa questioned Raghavendra's response to the incident. He alleged that the previous Basavaraj Bommai-led government had withdrawn the process of issuing land title deeds to the farmer. He also questioned the MP's visit to the plantation and alleged that people associated with him could have been involved in the damage. These allegations were made by the minister and were not independently established.

Bangarappa criticised Raghavendra, saying that as a four-time MP, he should speak responsibly. He also referred to the firing on farmers in Haveri during Yediyurappa's tenure as Chief Minister, when they were demanding fertiliser.

The minister further accused Vijayendra and Raghavendra of being uncomfortable with his political activities in Shikaripura. He referred to Vijayendra's remarks in the Legislative Assembly about political activities in the constituency.

Targeting former MLA Haratalu Halappa, Bangarappa described him as a political leader who frequently changed his position according to convenience. He also recalled his family's earlier association with Halappa and criticised him for removing a photograph of former Chief Minister S. Bangarappa from his residence.

The minister said supporters of his father would respond to the matter.

Shivamogga District Congress Committee president H.C. Yogesh, former president R. Prasannakumar, Vijayakumar (Dani), Shweta Bandi, G.D. Manjunath and several other party leaders and representatives of various boards and corporations attended the press conference.

RECLAIM ELEPHANT CORRIDORS, NOT RELOCATE ELEPHANTS

Translocation is only a temporary remedy; restoring traditional migration routes is the key to ending man-elephant conflict

SHYAM SUNDAR VATTAM

Man-elephant conflict in the southern districts of Karnataka is neither new nor an isolated phenomenon. For several years, villages bordering forests have been bearing the brunt of frequent elephant incursions, resulting in damage to crops, destruction of houses, loss of livelihoods and, tragically, human casualties. Despite repeated interventions by the Forest Department, the problem continues unabated. It is time the government recognised that the solution lies not in capturing and relocating elephants but in restoring their traditional corridors.

Whenever a wild elephant kills a person or goes on a rampage in a village, angry residents naturally demand that the offending animal be captured and shifted to another forest. Under pressure to pacify the affected villagers, the Forest Department swings into action, deploying trained kumki elephants to track, capture and drive the rogue pachyderms into distant forest areas. While such operations may temporarily ease tensions and restore a sense of security among villagers, they hardly offer a permanent solution.

Experience has repeatedly demonstrated that elephants relocated to distant forests often find their way back to their original habitats. Radio-collared elephants have returned to their familiar territories even after being shifted hundreds of kilometres away. This clearly establishes that relocation is, at best, a short-term intervention. It does not address the underlying reasons for elephants straying into human settlements.

Elephants are creatures of habit, with remarkably strong memories of their traditional movement routes. Their migration paths, feeding grounds and water sources are deeply embedded in their behavioural patterns. Relocating them without restoring these natural pathways merely displaces the problem from one location to another. Sooner or later, the animals attempt to return to their familiar terrain, often passing through villages, agricultural fields and expanding urban settlements.

The recent incident in which a wild elephant entered the outskirts of Bengaluru and killed a morning walker should serve as a serious warning. The issue is no longer confined to remote forest villages in districts such as Mysuru, Chamarajanagar, Hassan and Kodagu. The growing intrusion of human settlements into traditional elephant habitats is bringing the conflict dangerously close to major cities.

There was once a natural elephant corridor extending from the Cauvery Wildlife Sanctuary towards Savandurga, passing through the Bannerghatta National Park region and the Bengaluru-Mysuru landscape. Over the years, however, encroachments, construction activities and expanding human settlements have fragmented these traditional movement routes. As their natural pathways have been obstructed, elephants are left with little choice but to enter human-dominated areas in search of food, water and passage.

The situation near Kumbalgodu on the outskirts of Bengaluru is a telling example. An ashram in the area has constructed a compound wall, but elephants reportedly demolish it whenever they attempt to move through the stretch. The reason is not difficult to understand. The wall stands in the path of a traditional elephant corridor. To humans, it may be a boundary protecting private property; to elephants, it is an obstruction across a route they have followed for generations.

An elephant does not recognise the boundaries created by human beings. Nor does it readily abandon a familiar route simply because buildings, roads or compound walls have come up along the way. Its memory of the traditional corridor remains strong. Unless these pathways are restored or made accessible, attempts to keep elephants away from human settlements will continue to prove ineffective.

The foremost responsibility of the State Government, therefore, is to take a comprehensive policy decision to restore and protect elephant corridors. This requires identifying traditional migration routes, removing illegal encroachments wherever legally possible, securing critical stretches of forest land and ensuring that developmental projects do not further fragment wildlife habitats. Where the restoration of a corridor involves private or occupied land, the government must explore transparent mechanisms such as negotiated land acquisition, compensation and voluntary relocation.

It is understood that the Forest Department already has reports and recommendations highlighting the need to restore elephant corridors. Unfortunately, these proposals appear to have remained largely on paper, with successive governments failing to demonstrate the political will required to implement them. The scale of encroachment on forest land and the competing interests involved may make the exercise difficult, but administrative inconvenience cannot be an excuse for continued inaction.

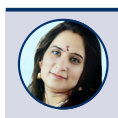

The government must also recognise that human safety and wildlife conservation are not competing objectives. Both can be achieved through scientific habitat management, restoration of corridors, early-warning systems, community participation, protection of vulnerable villages and effective compensation for crop and property losses. Relocation of individual elephants may still be necessary in exceptional circumstances, particularly when an animal poses an immediate and continuing threat to human life. But it cannot become the standard response to every conflict.

The Forest Department, too, must communicate the ground realities to the government without hesitation. Capturing elephants after every fatal incident may offer political and public relations relief, but it cannot substitute for a long-term conservation strategy. The department should place before the government a time-bound action plan backed by scientific studies, corridor mapping and clear priorities.

Ultimately, the question is not how many elephants can be captured and shifted from one forest to another, but how many traditional corridors can be reclaimed and protected. The government must stop treating the symptoms and start addressing the cause.

Reclaim the paths, not relocate the pachyderms. Until elephants are given the freedom to move through their traditional corridors without being forced into human settlements, man-elephant conflict will remain an unresolved and recurring tragedy.

THE MOBILE WORLD AND THE DETERIORATING BEHAVIOR OF CHILDHOOD

Before giving smartphones to children, it is important to instill values, communication and sensitivity.

The news of alleged brutality against a six-year-old girl by an eight-year-old Class 3 student at a Panchkula school has shocked society. The events revealed in the news and the details of the violence on school campuses have raised serious questions about the safety of children, their behavior, and our upbringing. How are such violent tendencies developing in childhood? Are children losing sensitivity and empathy? Are the mobile world, violent content available on the internet, and changing family environments having any impact on their behavior? These questions can no longer be evaded.

It would be unfair to conclude, based on a single incident, that mobile phones are the sole cause of increasing violence among children. Each incident can be influenced by numerous factors, including personal circumstances, family environment, peer influence, mental state, and social environment. Nevertheless, it is true that the digital world now at the disposal of children has increased the responsibilities of parents more than ever before. Monitoring children can no longer be limited to their behavior after returning from school. It is also essential to know what they watch on their mobile phones, who they interact with, what games they play, and what ideas they are absorbing from the internet.

Smartphones are becoming an integral part of children's lives today. Technology has opened up new learning opportunities through online learning, educational videos, and informative content. However, this same medium also provides easy access to violent images, abusive language, dangerous challenges, and harmful behavior. The problem lies not in the technology itself, but in its uncontrolled use, access to inappropriate content, and a lack of understanding of its effects. Children often view content in the name of entertainment, but are not mentally and emotionally mature enough to understand its consequences.

Childhood is a period of imitation. Children learn language, behavior, and reactions by observing those around them. They are influenced by their parents' conversations, family members' behavior, friends' behavior, and activities seen on digital media. If a child is repeatedly exposed to scenes that normalize violence, humiliation, revenge, and aggression, it is likely to influence their behavior. While not every child becomes violent after viewing such content, it is crucial to select age-appropriate content and discuss its implications.

In this context, the role of parents is paramount. Often, busy schedules lead to children being given mobile phones to keep them quiet. From feeding to keeping them occupied, screens have become a convenient solution. Gradually, this habit becomes a part of children's daily lives, and parents lose sight of what their children are actually watching. A child sitting quietly with a mobile phone isn't a sign of their safety or healthy development. It's essential to stay informed about their activities in the digital world, set age-appropriate limits, and maintain regular communication with them.

Monitoring children doesn't mean constantly suspecting them or completely taking away their privacy. It means being vigilant about their safety and creating a trusting environment where they can talk openly about their problems, curiosities, and mistakes. Parents should ask children what games they play, what new things they see on the Internet, and what their understanding is of a video or event. If a child gets excited by watching a violent scene, talks about hurting someone, or has a sudden change in behavior, instead of simply scolding them to silence them, one should try to understand the reason.

Schools have no less a responsibility. The purpose of education is not simply to complete the curriculum and achieve good exam scores. Schools also serve as a means to develop children into sensitive, responsible, and socially aware citizens. Teachers should pay attention to unusual changes in student behavior. Schools should promote counseling, emotional well-being, peaceful conflict resolution, and respect for the dignity of others. Dismissing incidents of physical violence, threats, insults, or targeting of vulnerable students as simple pranks can lead to serious problems in the future.

Furthermore, while it is essential to hold a child accountable for their behavior when they commit a serious offense, it is equally important that investigations and actions are based on facts. Rushing to label children as criminals, publicly humiliating them, or exposing their identities on social media is not appropriate. The safety, dignity, and mental health of the victimized child must be a top priority. If a child's behavior shows signs of violence, unusual aggression, or emotional distress, parents and schools should not hesitate to seek the assistance of a qualified child psychologist or counselor.

The role of digital platforms and the government also needs to be considered. Continued efforts are needed to prevent children from accessing inappropriate content, simplify parental control tools, and ensure age-appropriate digital safety. Internet companies should also prioritize child safety. However, relying solely on a single technological feature will not be enough. Digital literacy means not just learning to use a mobile phone, but also understanding that not everything you see on the internet is accurate, safe, or worth emulating.

The most important thing is that children are taught not only by rules but also by examples. If, at home, abusive language is used in anger, disputes are resolved through violence, and disrespectful behavior toward others is considered normal, it will be difficult to expect children to behave in a completely different way. An environment of communication, patience, empathy, and respect must be fostered in the family. It is also important to spend time with children, providing them with opportunities for sports, reading, creative activities, and social interaction.

The questions raised by the Panchkula incident aren't limited to just one school or one family. They serve as a warning to society as a whole. Instead of keeping children away from technology, we must teach them how to use it safely and responsibly. Besides knowing what they're viewing on their mobile phones, we also need to understand what's going on in their minds. Are they struggling with loneliness, stress, neglect, or some other unspoken problem?

The need of the hour is to empower children with discretion before handing them mobile phones, to teach them responsibility before granting them freedom, and to provide affection along with discipline. The responsibility to ensure a safe childhood lies not only with parents or teachers, but with society as a whole. If we want our children to become sensitive and responsible citizens, we must pay attention to their digital activities as well as their emotional world. After all, children's futures are shaped not just by screens, but by the values they learn from their families and society.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Make Footpaths Safe Again

The ongoing civic drive offers a chance to make walking safer. Broken pavements and parked vehicles force pedestrians into traffic, putting children and older residents at particular risk. Municipal officials should repair damaged stretches, keep footpaths clear and install ramps at crossings. Weekly inspections after the drive ends would help keep these routes safe and accessible throughout the entire year. – Velu

Make Waste Collection Reliable

Clearing roadside garbage during the current civic drive is welcome, but waste will pile up again if collection remains irregular. Municipal authorities should publish collection schedules, provide separate pickup for wet and dry waste and give residents a simple way to report missed rounds. Households can help by sorting their waste and setting it out at the scheduled collection times. – Muthu

SHOULD CINEMA IMPROVE SOCIETY OR SPOIL ITS THINKING?

DR. SATYAVAN SAURABH

Indian cinema is not merely a source of entertainment, but a powerful cultural force that influences society's thinking, sensibilities, beliefs, and behavior. In a multilingual, multi-religious, and diverse country like India, cinema plays a vital role in building social consciousness, strengthening cultural identity, and shaping public opinion. The stories portrayed on screen sometimes challenge societal stereotypes, and sometimes inadvertently reinforce them. Therefore, cinema should be evaluated not solely on the basis of its popularity or commercial success, but on the basis of its broader impact on society.

The most positive role of cinema is to bring social issues into public discussion. Many problems exist in society that people perceive as personal experiences, but fail to understand their broader social implications. Films highlight these issues through human stories and inspire reflection. Aamir Khan's film Taare Zameen Par played a significant role in increasing sensitivity towards learning difficulties like dyslexia in children. It sent a message to the education system that every child has a unique ability and learning style. It is important to recognize children's unique talents rather than compare them. Similarly, Padman played a role in breaking the social silence and raising awareness on issues like menstrual hygiene.

Indian cinema has also made significant interventions in the areas of women's dignity, equality, and rights. The film Pink focused on the question of consent, making it clear that a woman's clothing, social behavior, or presence in a given space cannot substitute for her consent. Similarly, Thappad raised questions about domestic violence and the importance of respect in marital relationships. Such films challenge social notions that expect women to endure injustice in the name of family prestige. While films cannot bring about social change on their own, they can certainly lay the ideological groundwork for change.

Cinema also plays an important role in raising awareness against caste discrimination and social inequality. Anubhav Sinha's Article 15 effectively presented caste discrimination, social deprivation, and institutionalized inequalities. It allowed audiences to understand that despite constitutional equality, the challenges of discrimination in social behavior can persist. When films feature the struggles, aspirations, and experiences of marginalized communities, they also bring voices to a wider audience, often lacking adequate representation in mainstream discourse.

Cinema is also an effective medium for strengthening national unity and collective identity. Chak De! India conveyed the message of cooperation, discipline, and national pride through a team of women athletes from diverse regional and cultural backgrounds. Rang De Basanti inspired youth to reflect on issues such as civic responsibility, corruption, and democratic participation. Such stories demonstrate that patriotism need not be limited to slogans, but also manifest through raising voices against injustice and taking responsibility in public life.

Regional cinema is also important in this regard. Kantara brought coastal Karnataka's local traditions, folk beliefs, and cultural connections with nature to a wider audience. This could increase interest in regional languages and folk cultures.

But the other side of cinema is equally serious. In the pursuit of entertainment and commercial success, some films replicate social prejudices rather than challenge them. One-sided portrayals of caste, religion, region, and communities can reinforce misconceptions in the minds of viewers. Associating an entire community with crime, violence, or backwardness can increase social distrust. One-sided portrayals of particularly sensitive religious and political topics can fuel social polarization. While portraying controversial topics is not inherently inappropriate, ignoring historical facts, social context, and human complexities can become a serious problem.

The glorification of violence is also a concern. When films repeatedly portray revenge, the use of weapons, taking the law into one's own hands, and aggressive behavior as heroic, they risk desensitizing some viewers to violence. Teenage viewers, in particular, may try to imitate the characters or idealize their behavior. This does not mean that everyone who witnesses violent scenes becomes violent, but rather that repeated messages can influence social behavior and perceptions.

Objectification and stereotypical portrayals of women also weaken the social fabric. In many productions, female characters are reduced to instruments of success, attraction, or entertainment for the male protagonist, rather than independent individuals. Trends such as stalking, pressure despite repeated refusals, and presenting jealousy as proof of love can harm a healthy understanding of love and consent. Furthermore, portraying a luxurious lifestyle, expensive objects, and instant success as the ultimate achievement in life can foster consumerism and unrealistic expectations. This can lead to increased social comparison, financial pressure, and exhibitionism among young people.

The solution to this situation lies not in imposing unnecessary restrictions on cinema, but in striking a balance between creative freedom and social responsibility. Filmmakers should prioritize sensitivity and research when portraying diverse communities, women, rural society, and marginalized groups. It is also essential to develop media literacy among audiences so that they can distinguish between the story depicted on screen and real life. Films can be used in schools and colleges to foster dialogues on social issues. Furthermore, age-based categorization, transparent regulation, and respect for freedom of expression should be ensured. For positive change, stories that reflect India's diverse social realities, not just those confined to metropolitan areas and influential classes, should also be encouraged.

Ultimately, cinema cannot, on its own, redeem society or be held responsible for every social ill. Its impact can vary depending on the age, social background, education, and personal experiences of its audience. Nevertheless, it is undeniable that cinema has a remarkable ability to initiate social dialogue, cultivate sensitivity, and question established beliefs. What is needed is a cinema that values conscience alongside entertainment, responsibility alongside popularity, and human dignity alongside creative freedom.

"Only when screen stories unite society rather than divide, challenge discrimination rather than normalize it, and promote empathy rather than violence, will cinema truly play its role in transforming India's social fabric into a more inclusive, just, and sensitive one."

GOOD FASHION SENSE IS FOR EVERYONE

Fashion is often treated as a subject women are expected to care about and men are free to dismiss. That double standard does both a disservice. It places an unfair burden on women and leaves men with fewer opportunities to develop a skill they can use every day. Both men and women benefit from knowing what fits well, what suits their needs and what feels like their own. Getting dressed is already part of daily life. Knowing how to do it with confidence makes that part of life easier.

Good fashion sense begins with attention. Fit, proportion, colour and fabric all influence how comfortable we feel in our clothes and how easily we can get on with our day. These are practical considerations, and anyone can learn to judge them. With time, those judgments make shopping less uncertain and getting dressed less frustrating. They also give us a firmer basis for deciding which trends deserve our attention. A trend can be appealing in itself and still have little to offer the person considering it.

The social side of dress deserves a more honest discussion. People do notice how others present themselves, sometimes before they have heard a word from them. Their impressions can be hasty and unfair. Even so, understanding the expectations of a setting gives us some say in the impression we make. Dressing with care can express respect for an occasion and the people who share it. The same care should extend to how we judge others, whose clothing may reflect demands on their time, money or health that we know little about.

Women have particular reason to resist the idea that good dress requires constant effort. They are often expected to look polished and are then criticised for spending time or money on doing so. Men face a different pressure. Showing an interest in clothes can be taken as a sign of vanity, which discourages them from learning about fit and developing their own tastes. Both attitudes keep arbitrary expectations alive. The freedom to take an interest in clothes, and to decide how much of an interest to take, should belong equally to everyone.

Fashion sense can also make us more deliberate consumers. When we understand what works for us, we are better equipped to pause before a purchase and consider how often we will use it. The cost of clothing matters, as do the time and attention required to care for it. A garment earns its place in a wardrobe through the use and enjoyment it provides. That principle holds at every budget and gives us a reason to value what we already own.

There is pleasure, too, in developing a sense of style. Clothes can express something about our temperament and tastes, and those tastes can change as we do. A person should be able to enjoy that process at any age and with any body shape. Too much fashion advice assumes the purpose of dressing well is to correct the body or draw attention away from it. A better starting point is to ask how we want to feel in the clothes we put on. Comfort and ease are worth taking seriously.

The case for good fashion sense is ultimately a case for giving people more freedom in an ordinary part of life. Men should feel free to take clothes seriously. Women should feel free to give them as much attention as they choose. Both should be able to develop their taste without treating every decision as a test of their worth. When that freedom of dressing is shared, getting dressed can become a small but genuine source of confidence.

TAKING CARE OF TEETH DESERVES PRIORITY

Teeth are easy to overlook when they are doing their work well. We eat, speak and smile without giving them much thought. That ease is worth preserving. Yet dental care often slips down the list of priorities until discomfort forces it back up. We should give our teeth the same steady attention we give to other parts of our health. Their importance is best judged by how much they allow us to do each day.

There is a quiet loss of freedom when eating becomes uncomfortable. Choices that once depended on appetite can come to depend on what feels manageable. Speaking and smiling can also feel more self-conscious when we are worried about our mouths. Public discussion tends to dwell on how teeth look, perhaps because appearance is the easiest thing for others to see. But the strongest argument for taking care of our teeth is the comfort and independence that come from being able to use them with ease.

Daily care asks for a modest amount of attention at times when attention is often in short supply. The temptation to hurry through it is understandable. What makes a routine valuable is that it carries us through the days when we are tired or distracted. That is worth remembering when we talk to children about their teeth. The habits they learn are more likely to feel natural if the adults around them make time for their own care and explain why it matters.

Preventive care has a harder case to make than urgent care because its benefits are often invisible. When we feel fine, a dental visit is easy to postpone. Pain, by contrast, can dictate the terms of an entire day. Giving ourselves a chance to discuss concerns before they become urgent can make decisions feel less hurried. It also makes room for a conversation about what we can reasonably do to look after our teeth over time.

Of course, people have very different opportunities to act on that advice. Cost, working hours and the availability of appointments all shape when someone can seek care. Fear can be a barrier too, particularly when a person expects to be judged for the condition of their teeth or for the time since their last visit. A serious discussion about dental health has to recognise those realities. It should be easier to ask for help, and people should be able to do so with dignity.

This is where personal habits and public priorities meet. We can take responsibility for the care within our reach while expecting health services to take dental access seriously. Affordable care and appointments people can realistically attend matter to any effort to encourage prevention. Advice carries more weight when people have a fair chance to follow it. If getting help requires taking on costs or losing time at work that someone cannot afford, postponement can be a practical decision even when the person understands the consequences.

The reasons to care for our teeth change in emphasis over a lifetime. Early on, we are learning habits that will eventually become our own responsibility. Later, keeping the ability to eat comfortably can become an important part of maintaining independence. At any age, it helps to think of dental care as an ordinary part of looking after ourselves. It deserves a place in our routines and in conversations about health, even during stretches when our mouths give us little reason to think about them.

— A. JAIKUMAR

"The case for taking better care of our teeth comes down to the quality of ordinary days. Eating without hesitation, speaking comfortably and smiling freely are pleasures we can easily take for granted. They deserve our attention while we can still enjoy them."

— A. JAIKUMAR

THE VALUE OF ONE LIFELONG FRIEND

School gives friendship something adult life rarely offers so freely: time together without much planning. In those years, when belonging can feel especially uncertain, one loyal friend can make it easier to be yourself. Over a lifetime, the same friendship can serve a quieter purpose. It gives you someone with whom you can speak plainly about who you have become, because you share a memory of who you were before you had much say in the matter.

Being known over time has a particular value. In much of adult life, people encounter us through the roles we occupy. They may know our abilities, our obligations or our views, and their knowledge of us may be genuine. An old friend carries a longer account. That friend remembers the uncertainties that preceded our convictions and the effort behind accomplishments that may now look inevitable. With such a person, there is less need to explain why something matters before we can talk about it.

Loyalty is often understood as taking a friend's side. Its deeper value lies in caring enough to speak honestly, even when agreement would be easier. A true friend can take our feelings seriously while questioning our judgment. Hearing an unwelcome opinion from someone who has shown goodwill over many years can make it easier to consider. That kind of candour requires restraint as well as courage. A friend who knows where we are most vulnerable has a responsibility to handle that knowledge with care.

An old friendship can also hold a part of our history that is hard to recover alone. We all revise the stories we tell about ourselves as our circumstances change. Someone who knew us at school may remember ambitions we have forgotten or qualities we have come to undervalue. Their recollections can widen our understanding of our own lives. In return, we hold some of that history for them. The value of shared memory lies partly in this exchange.

The difficulty is that the conditions that helped the friendship take root eventually disappear. Adult commitments make time together harder to arrange, and two lives that once followed a similar rhythm can move at different speeds. A friendship can accommodate long intervals between conversations if both people keep making room for each other. The effort need not always be equal. It does need to be mutual over time. When one person is always responsible for keeping in touch, even genuine affection can begin to feel like an obligation.

Long friendship also asks us to grant each other the right to change. There is affection in remembering someone as they were at school, but there can be a small cruelty in insisting they remain that person. A friend deserves to be heard afresh, especially when their choices unsettle our picture of them. Curiosity matters here as much as memory. The relationship has a future when each person takes an interest in the life the other is living now.

There is no reason to measure our friendships by their age alone. Trust can begin at any stage of life, and the fact that two people went to school together gives neither an automatic claim on the other. The case for taking care of a good school friendship is that its history took years to make. When affection and honesty have survived that long, they deserve some of the time we are so ready to give to more urgent demands.

One lifelong friend cannot meet every need, and it would be unfair to expect it. What one person can offer is the reassurance of being known through change and still being worth knowing. That reassurance is easy to take for granted while it is quietly there. Giving it back may be the most enduring promise two friends make.

ONLINE SCAMS ARE EVERYONE'S BUSINESS NOW

An online scam can cost someone money in a matter of minutes. The loss of confidence can last much longer. A person may begin to doubt their judgment, hesitate to use services they depend on, or keep what happened to themselves for fear of being blamed. That private aftermath deserves more attention. When we treat fraud as a simple failure of common sense, we make it harder for people to ask for help and easier for the conditions that enable it to persist.

Much of daily life now depends on making decisions through a screen. We are expected to respond promptly, manage our affairs remotely and trust that routine instructions are genuine. Most of the time, getting on with the task is the sensible thing to do. Fraud takes advantage of that ordinary willingness to cooperate. It can also take advantage of fatigue, distraction or the desire to resolve a problem quickly. None of those states is unusual. A sensible public response starts by accepting that anyone's attention can fail under pressure.

Individuals still have an important part to play. Taking a moment to verify an unexpected request through a channel we already trust can give us time to think. The same goes for talking openly about uncertainty. People should feel able to ask someone to look at a message with them without worrying that the question will sound foolish. That willingness to ask is a habit worth encouraging at home, at work and wherever people learn to manage their affairs online.

The organisations through which we conduct our daily business have responsibilities of their own. They decide how their communications look, how easy it is to verify a request and how quickly a customer can reach someone when something feels wrong. Those choices affect how much work an individual must do to stay safe. A clear route to assistance is especially important when someone is distressed. At that moment, making help easy to find is part of providing a service people can trust.

Public education would also benefit from a change in tone. Warnings that tell people to be vigilant can be difficult to act on when they offer little sense of what to do with a doubt. It is more useful to give people permission to pause and to make verification straightforward. That message should be repeated in plain language. Familiarity with digital services varies widely, and asking for help should feel as ordinary online as it does in any other part of life.

We should pay particular attention to what happens after someone realises they may have been deceived. Shame can make a person put off reporting what happened, even though they may urgently need support. The first response they receive matters. A patient hearing and clear information about the next steps can help someone act when they are still trying to understand what took place. Reporting should be simple enough to use under stress, with a clear explanation of what will happen next.

There is a broader question of trust at stake. If using ordinary services demands constant suspicion, people with the least time, support or confidence bear a disproportionate share of the burden. The organisations that benefit from moving their services online should make those services easier to verify and safer to use. That work deserves the same attention as making a transaction faster or an interface more convenient.

We will always need to exercise judgment online. We can make that judgment easier by allowing people time to check, offering help they can reach and responding with respect when they come forward. The way we treat someone who reports a scam will shape whether the next person feels able to speak up.

STREET FOOD BELONGS IN PUBLIC LIFE

Street food is often praised for what it brings to the palate. It deserves equal attention for what it brings to public life. It makes a prepared meal available to people who may have little time or money to spare, and it gives vendors a way to earn a living through their own work. Yet when decisions are made about who may use public space and on what terms, these contributions can be overlooked. Street food should have a secure place in those decisions.

Affordability is part of its public value. A meal bought on the street can fit into a tight budget and an irregular day. The convenience matters because people have different amounts of control over when they can stop to eat. That flexibility is easy to take for granted when it is available. Any discussion about the future of street vending should account for what customers would lose if convenient, affordable food became harder to find.

For vendors, the work calls for judgment that customers rarely see. Income depends on balancing the cost of ingredients against what people can afford, anticipating demand and making good use of limited space. There is skill in earning the trust of regular customers while keeping a business viable. Vendors deserve a voice in decisions affecting their livelihoods because they understand how those decisions will play out during an ordinary working day.

Food safety is central to that trust. Customers should be able to expect care in the preparation, storage and handling of what they buy. Vendors, in turn, should have access to the conditions that make those expectations possible. Clean water and dependable waste collection are part of the basic infrastructure of a well-managed street. When these services are inadequate, telling vendors to raise their standards addresses only part of the problem. Public authorities have a role in making safe practices practical.

The use of shared space requires care as well. People need to move along streets easily, and those who live or work nearby have a legitimate interest in how the area is maintained. Vendors have an equally legitimate interest in being able to reach customers. These needs have to be considered together. Rules are more likely to work when they are clear, consistently applied and informed by the people who use the street. A workable arrangement should give vendors enough certainty to plan their working lives.

Street food also helps keep culinary knowledge in everyday use. The skills involved are refined through repetition, judgment and the response of the people who eat the food. Over time, this exchange allows traditions to adapt to changing tastes and circumstances. There is something worth protecting in the fact that such knowledge remains part of daily commerce. People can participate in a shared food culture simply by buying a meal they can afford and want to eat.

There is a danger in celebrating street food while taking the people who sell it for granted. Public enthusiasm can make vending more visible, yet visibility alone does little for someone who cannot be sure of a place to work. If we value what vendors contribute, that regard should carry through to the practical terms on which they operate. This means giving their experience due weight when setting fees, deciding where vending is permitted and planning the services that keep streets usable.

The future of street food should be judged by whether customers can buy a meal with confidence, vendors can earn a living with dignity and the street works for everyone who uses it. Each of those aims depends on the others. The decisions that shape them deserve the same public attention as the food itself.

Rahul Gandhi hits back at BJP-RSS over trolling

Rahul Gandhi

Rahul Gandhi accused the BJP and RSS of promoting hatred, saying anger prevents their supporters from understanding and expressing love.

NEW DELHI

Congress MP and Lok Sabha Leader of Opposition Rahul Gandhi on Tuesday criticised the BJP and RSS following online trolling over his remarks about the affectionate relationship between his parents, former Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi and Sonia Gandhi. His comments came after he spoke at the launch of his mother's memoir, Belonging: A Journey of Love, in New Delhi.

In a post on X, Rahul Gandhi said anger and hatred prevented supporters of the two organisations from experiencing and expressing love. "Fear, anger and hatred have woven a web in the hearts of BJP and RSS supporters that stops them from experiencing and expressing love," he wrote.

He further said, "As a true Hindu, it is my duty to free them from this web, so that they too can start to experience the breathtaking beauty and joy of love and belonging in their lives. Satyam Shivam Sundaram."

At the memoir launch, Rahul recalled the deep bond between his parents and how Rajiv Gandhi's assassination in 1991 changed his mother's life. He said his mother could not remember the events surrounding his father's death, and that parts of the account in the book had been reconstructed with the help of his sister.

Recalling his childhood, Rahul said his parents shared an unusual closeness, often sitting together during meals.

Revanth Reddy (right) with Vishnu Deo Sai in Raipur

RAIPUR

Telangana Chief Minister A Revanth Reddy on Tuesday sought Chhattisgarh's No Objection Certificate (NOC) for the Sammakka Sagar project on the Godavari River during a meeting with counterpart Vishnu Deo Sai in Raipur. Accompanied by Irrigation Minister N Uttam Kumar Reddy, he requested permission to store water in the barrage and cooperation in securing statutory clearances.

According to the Telangana Chief Minister's Office, Sai assured the delegation that the NOC process would be completed at the earliest.

The barrage was shifted to Tupakulagudem in Mulugu district. An IIT Kharagpur study estimated that about 33 acres in Chhattisgarh would be submerged at the Full Reservoir Level.

Revanth Reddy said construction had been completed. The barrage can store 6.94 thousand million cubic feet at a Full Reservoir Level of 83 metres. The project aims to provide irrigation and drinking water to drought-prone, backward and tribal regions of Telangana.

A Chhattisgarh government officer said the state would survey four affected villages in Bijapur district before issuing the NOC. "We will conduct a survey of four villages in Bijapur district that will be affected by the project. The compensation amount will be assessed thereafter and taken up at the appropriate platform. The NOC will be issued subsequently," the officer said.

UP draft roll adds 18.8 lakh voters

LUCKNOW

Uttar Pradesh released its draft electoral roll on Tuesday under the Special Summary Revision (SSR), recording nearly 13.59 crore voters ahead of the Assembly elections scheduled for early 2027. Chief Electoral Officer Navdeep Rinwa said the list contains 135,868,905 electors: 7.38 crore men, 6.20 crore women and 4,042 third-gender voters.

The draft adds 18.8 lakh voters since the previous final roll was published on April 10, including nearly 11 lakh women. It also includes 11.83 lakh electors aged between 18 and 19, Rinwa said.

Below the SIR count

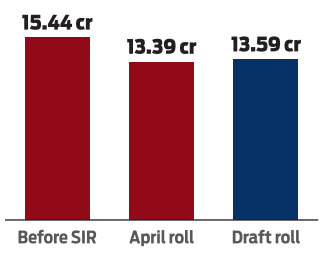

Despite the increase, the electorate remains around 1.85 crore below the 15.44 crore voters recorded before the Election Commission of India conducted the Special Intensive Revision (SIR). That exercise reduced the roll to 13.39 crore in April and triggered disputes over deleted names. Rinwa said the draft covers about 84 to 85 per cent of the state's projected adult population.

Claims till December 16

The claims and objections period will run from November 17 to December 16. Eligible citizens can seek inclusion through Form 6, object to an entry through Form 7, or request corrections using Form 8. Rinwa said, "The claims and objections period will remain open from November 17 to December 16." Unlike SIR, SSR does not verify every existing voter; only applications for changes are examined.

Chief Minister Yogi Adityanath had claimed that 1.27 crore Hindu voters' names were missing and Muslim voter numbers had increased. Rinwa declined to comment, saying the commission does not track voters by religion or caste. He said the state's projected adult population is 16.16 crore, leaving around 2.58 crore people yet to be enrolled.

SC agrees to hear INDIA bloc's 48 questions to EC on SIR

The INDIA bloc has challenged the Election Commission's claims on electoral roll revisions, prompting the Supreme Court to examine the matter.

NEW DELHI

The Supreme Court on Tuesday agreed to hear an application filed by Leader of Opposition in the Lok Sabha Rahul Gandhi and other INDIA bloc leaders, who have submitted 48 "interrogatories" to Chief Election Commissioner Gyanesh Kumar, Election Commissioners Sukhbir Singh Sandhu and Vivek Joshi, and senior Election Commission officials. The questions concern the Special Intensive Revision (SIR) of electoral rolls and seek explanations from the poll body on its claims about the exercise.

The application challenges what the leaders described as "bare assertions" in an institutional affidavit filed by the Election Commission of India on October 26. The interrogatories are directed at the senior officials and seek to examine the basis of the Commission's statements regarding the nationwide revision.

One key issue concerns the Election Commission's assertion that the decision to conduct a nationwide SIR was unanimous. The applicants have questioned this claim and sought responses from the Chief Election Commissioner and other officials.

The controversy centres on the scale of the electoral roll revision. According to the report, approximately 13 crore voters were excluded during the SIR exercise. The INDIA bloc leaders have raised questions about the process and the statements made by the poll body in its affidavit. Their application places the Commission's explanation under scrutiny and asks the senior officials to respond to the 48 questions.

Controversy Moves From Polls To Courts

The Special Intensive Revision (SIR) of electoral rolls began in Bihar in June 2025, when the Election Commission launched a house-to-house exercise to verify voter details and remove duplicate, deceased and ineligible entries. It was later expanded nationwide. The process became contentious as opposition parties and civil society groups raised concerns about large-scale deletions, documentation requirements and short deadlines. They argued that poor, migrant, elderly and marginalised voters could struggle to establish eligibility. The Election Commission maintains that the revision aims to improve voter-list accuracy, and that many names marked for removal belong to people who had died, shifted or appeared more than once.

Chouhan announces Rs 254 crore farmers' aid

Chouhan announced Rs 254 crore in farmer assistance, while highlighting crop diversification, green ammonia, stubble management and agricultural innovation.

CHANDIGARH

Union Agriculture Minister Shivraj Singh Chouhan on Tuesday announced that approval letters for Rs 254 crore allocated under various schemes would be presented to farmers in Punjab. He said he would hold discussions with the farming community on crop diversification, stubble management and measures to improve agricultural income.

Chouhan said he had come to serve farmers and would attend an event in Badarpur, where demonstrations would showcase agricultural innovations, including green ammonia as an alternative to urea. He said the substance could be produced using solar energy and could benefit crops. "If green ammonia is used for crops instead of urea, it proves to be more beneficial; and the best part is that green ammonia can be produced using energy from the sun," he said.

The minister said discussions would also focus on the 'Khet Bachao' campaign and integrated farming. He stressed the need to diversify crops, manage stubble more effectively and identify ways to raise farmers' earnings. Punjab Agriculture Minister Gurmeet Singh Khudian is accompanying him.

The union minister will visit Abohar and Fazilka, where farmers have reported damage to kinnow orchards and other crops due to rising groundwater levels. He said he would meet affected farmers and discuss their difficulties.

The plan will focus on improving infrastructure at the temple and along pilgrimage routes, providing professionally managed facilities and smoother access to darshan. Satheesan said the improvements could increase the number of pilgrims by up to 50 per cent. The government is also considering a connected pilgrimage tourism initiative encouraging visitors to explore other temples across the state.

India invites investors for shipbuilding push

NEW DELHI

Union Minister Sarbananda Sonowal on Monday invited global shipbuilders, shipping companies and financiers to invest in India's maritime sector, highlighting an estimated $10 billion opportunity across five proposed greenfield coastal shipbuilding clusters. Speaking at the India Shipbuilding Investment Conclave 2026 in New Delhi, he said India aims to become one of the world's top 10 shipbuilding nations by 2030 and among the top five by 2047.

Five coastal clusters

The clusters are proposed at Dugarajapatnam in Andhra Pradesh, Kuchhadi in Gujarat, Dighi in Maharashtra, Kendrapada in Odisha and Thoothukudi in Tamil Nadu. Sonowal said they would create opportunities in manufacturing, technology, employment and exports. Domestic demand covers more than 400 vessels, representing an investment opportunity of nearly $24 billion. The order pipeline includes over 150 vessels valued at more than $1.7 billion, with exports accounting for over 80 per cent of its value.

"India is ready to build the ships of the world," Sonowal said. "Build in India, for India and for the world." The conclave builds on the government's $8 billion shipbuilding financial package approved last year. Damen Shipyards and Cochin Shipyard signed a memorandum of understanding to collaborate on future projects.

A one-stop portal

Sonowal launched Naukosh, a digital portal developed by the Directorate General of Maritime Administration. It brings policies, approvals and investment opportunities onto one platform, alongside industry directories, shipyard data, financing information, training and regulatory guidance. Sonowal said the five coastal states would work with the Centre to provide investors land, approvals and policy support.

Murmu calls for stronger efforts to eliminate malaria

NEW DELHI

President Droupadi Murmu on Tuesday inaugurated the Golden Jubilee celebrations of the Indian Council of Medical Research–National Institute of Malaria Research (ICMR-NIMR), marking 50 years of the institute's contribution to malaria research and public health. She congratulated scientists, researchers and healthcare workers associated with the organisation and highlighted India's progress in controlling the disease.

Murmu recalled how malaria had affected rural and tribal communities, damaging livelihoods, education and people's futures. Drawing from her experiences of witnessing the disease in villages, she stressed public awareness and urged patients to complete prescribed medication to ensure effective treatment and prevent recurrence.

Cases down nearly 80 per cent

The President noted that malaria cases and deaths in India declined by nearly 80 per cent between 2015 and 2025. The number of high-burden districts also fell from 155 to 33, while 160 districts reported zero indigenous malaria cases between 2022 and 2025. She appreciated India's exit from the World Health Organization's High Burden to High Impact group in 2024.

Murmu called for stronger diagnosis, treatment, surveillance, mosquito control and research into new medicines and vaccines. The draft has been shared with the Ministry of Petroleum and Natural Gas (MOPNG) for its comments.

Amazon plans $7 billion renewable energy investment

NEW DELHI

Amazon on Tuesday announced plans to invest an additional USD 7 billion in renewable energy projects in India by 2030, strengthening its commitment to clean energy and sustainability.

The investment will be in addition to the USD 4 billion already committed to renewable energy projects in the country, the company said.

Amazon also announced four new wind and solar projects with a combined capacity of 934 megawatts across Karnataka, Madhya Pradesh and Rajasthan. These include a 234 MW wind project and a 200 MW combined wind and solar project in Karnataka, a 300 MW solar project in Madhya Pradesh and a 200 MW solar project in Rajasthan.

The projects have been secured through power purchase agreements and form part of the company's existing USD 4 billion investment portfolio. Once operational, Amazon's contracted renewable energy projects in India will have a combined capacity of more than 2 gigawatts, generating electricity equivalent to the annual needs of over 3.5 million households.

Union Minister for New and Renewable Energy Pralhad Joshi welcomed the investment, saying it would support India's clean energy goals, strengthen energy security and promote economic growth.

Amazon Chief Sustainability Officer Kara Hurst said the additional investment reflected the company's long-term commitment to expanding wind and solar power in India.

The company currently operates 14 large-scale wind and solar projects and 43 rooftop solar installations in India. It also plans to achieve net-zero carbon emissions across its global operations by 2040.

Bird flu scare hits Namakkal egg exports, prices

COIMBATORE

Egg exports from Namakkal have fallen sharply following a bird flu outbreak in Cuddalore, leading to order cancellations and a steep decline in procurement prices. Poultry farmers are now selling eggs below production costs, industry representatives said.

Importers in the UAE, Oman and South Africa have reportedly cancelled orders over concerns about the outbreak, although Namakkal's poultry farms remain unaffected. Higher freight charges and transport disruptions have added to the industry's difficulties.

According to the Tamil Nadu Egg Poultry Farmers Marketing Society, Namakkal was exporting around 25 crore eggs every month six months ago. Exports later declined to 15 crore eggs and have now dropped by another 50 per cent.

The National Egg Coordination Committee has reduced the procurement price to Rs 6 per egg from Rs 6.70. Farmers estimate the production cost at around Rs 6.50 per egg, resulting in losses.

Namakkal has more than 1,000 layer farms and produces approximately six crore eggs daily. Industry representatives said there was no accumulation of unsold eggs at farms so far.

The committee also attributed weaker domestic demand to Sashti fasting and the Sabarimala pilgrimage season. Meanwhile, farmers have increased biosecurity measures, including regular disinfection of poultry sheds, restrictions on visitors and sanitisation of vehicles entering farms.

Farmers said the affected birds in Cuddalore were broiler chickens, while Namakkal mainly raises layer birds for egg production. They expressed confidence that strict hygiene measures would help protect the region's poultry farms.

DAIRY MARGIN OUTLOOK

Dairy margins set for improvement in H2FY27

NEW DELHI

Profit margins of Indian dairy companies are expected to improve in the second half of FY27 as milk procurement cost increases appear to have peaked and price hikes support earnings, according to a Yes Securities report.

The report said the second quarter of FY27 marked the start of recovery for dairy companies. Revenue growth remained strong, while operating margins were stable or improved from the previous quarter, despite higher procurement costs.

Several companies increased selling prices. Dodla Dairy raised prices by Rs 2.50 per litre, while Milky Mist introduced hikes of around 10 per cent. However, only 1.5 to 2 per cent of the increase was reflected in Milky Mist's second-quarter earnings, the report said.

Cooperative dairies raised prices. Aavin increased the price paid to farmers by about Rs 6 per litre in August. The Karnataka Milk Federation raised consumer prices by Rs 8 per litre from November 1. Amul increased milk prices by Rs 2 to Rs 4 per litre from November 12.

Yes Securities said procurement prices were stabilising rather than falling. This is expected to help companies reflect the impact of selling price increases in the coming quarters, making H2FY27 an important period for margin recovery.

The report pointed to opportunities for organised dairy businesses. Most of India's dairy market remains unorganised, leaving room for growth in branded and packaged products and cold-chain services.

Festive demand for ghee and milk fats could provide support, while improved supply during the flush season may offer additional benefits.

Zurutuza warns of risks for Balochistan reporters

Spanish journalist Karlos Zurutuza told a conference in Germany that threats against journalists help keep Balochistan out of international news.

GERMANY

Spanish journalist Karlos Zurutuza told a conference in Germany that Balochistan rarely makes international news and that reporting on the region can put journalists and their families in danger.

Speaking at an event held by the Baloch National Movement to mark Baloch Martyrs' Day, Zurutuza said he can no longer visit Balochistan and rarely has a chance to meet Baloch people in Spain. He plans to keep covering the region through phone interviews and meetings at conferences. He said international news outlets often cover armed groups active in the area, while the experiences of Baloch communities in the region receive little attention.

He told the audience that if he were able to return, he would still have to weigh the risks to the people helping him. Because he does not speak Balochi, Urdu or Farsi, he would need local guides and interpreters. He said they could face harassment or jail for helping a foreign reporter.

An attack in Quetta

In a 2023 report for Inter Press Service, Zurutuza described the assault of New York Times correspondent Carlotta Gall in Quetta in 2006. He reported that the men who attacked her claimed they were police officers and accused her of being in the city without permission.

At the conference, Zurutuza cited figures from Freedom Network that put the number of journalists killed in Balochistan over the past two decades at 40 or more. He said reporters have faced threats against their families and that pressure on editors can lead journalists to leave sensitive details out of their stories.

Zurutuza urged journalists to help local reporters protect their messages and find editors willing to publish their work. He said those connections could give stories from Balochistan a better chance of reaching readers abroad.

Shafi Burfat calls for Sindh to secede

Burfat said Pakistan's policies threaten Sindhi identity and urged residents to unite over control of their land, water and resources.

GERMANY

Shafi Burfat, chairman of Jeay Sindh Muttahida Mahaz (JSMM), has called for Sindh to break away from Pakistan and become an independent state called Sindhudesh.

In a statement on X, he argued that staying within Pakistan threatened the Sindhi people's identity and the unity of their homeland.

Burfat traced his grievances to 1947, when British rule ended and Sindh became part of Pakistan. He pointed to the One Unit scheme, which grouped the provinces of West Pakistan into a single administrative unit, and the changes that followed.

He argued that government policies over the years had weakened Sindh's ability to govern itself and protect its language and culture.

He also accused authorities of making decisions about the Indus River, the province's coastline and islands, and the Karoonjhar mountains without the consent of people in Sindh. He said disputes over how water is shared and who controls farmland and other resources were among the reasons he was pressing for independence.

Burfat claimed that settlement from outside Sindh had been used to weaken the political influence of Sindhis in the province. He warned against any move to divide Sindh into separate administrative units and dismissed promises of greater provincial control.

Invoking the ideas of Sindhi nationalist leader GM Syed, Burfat urged people across the province to organise around the demand for independence. He said his movement's vision for Sindhudesh included rights and security for all communities living in Sindh. He ended by calling on supporters, including young people, to take part in a political campaign that he said would protect the province's unity, preserve its culture and give residents control over their own land and water.

Rights group demands answers in girl's death

ISLAMABAD

A rights group has called for a prompt, independent inquiry after a 13-year-old girl died at an official residence in Islamabad's Police Lines in Sector H-11. The Human Rights Council of Pakistan-occupied Jammu and Kashmir said investigators should examine allegations that she was subjected to violence and made to do housework.

In a statement on X, the council said the girl's father filed a complaint and that officers at Shams Colony Police Station registered a case. The council said the police report recorded signs of violence on her body. It urged investigators to review the autopsy findings and medical records to determine how she died and whether any injuries contributed to her death.

The council asked Pakistan's Interior Ministry to appoint investigators with no personal or professional ties to the officials involved. It also urged them to examine claims that the girl's family was pressured to drop the case in exchange for money.

The group called on authorities to keep evidence safe, protect the family and witnesses from threats, and tell the family how the investigation is progressing. It said anyone found responsible should face legal action, regardless of their position.

The council also asked the federal government to strengthen oversight of domestic work involving children and make sure complaints are handled quickly. It said children should be able to live safely and go to school, and urged authorities to act on complaints before more children are harmed.

What the council wants

1. Investigators with no ties to the officials involved
2. A review of the autopsy and medical records
3. Protection for the family and witnesses

China seeks equal footing with US in Shenzhen talks

HONG KONG

Beijing wants to be seen as Washington's equal

Chinese President Xi Jinping is preparing to host US President Donald Trump in Shenzhen this week, with Beijing keen to be seen as Washington's equal in talks on trade and global security.

Trump is due to arrive on Wednesday for the Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation summit and is expected to meet Xi and Russian President Vladimir Putin together.

Tariffs, access to advanced computer chips and efforts to curb the spread of nuclear weapons are among the issues facing the leaders. In September, China's Foreign Ministry said Beijing and Washington had agreed to seek a more stable relationship based on respect, fairness and a willingness to respond in kind.

Fu Xiaoqiang, head of the China Institutes of Contemporary International Relations, argued in an October article that the approach could set limits on competition while protecting China's main interests and leaving room for cooperation. Analysts J. Michael Dahm and M Reece Breaux wrote that Beijing sees Washington's apparent acceptance of that approach as a diplomatic gain.

The planned meeting with Putin would also give Xi a chance to discuss security with both leaders at the same table.

Dhaka garment workers rally for higher pay

Garment workers protest for higher pay

DHAKA

Garment workers in Dhaka's Mirpur area protested to demand a minimum wage of 30,000 taka a month, more than twice the current rate of 12,500 taka.

Police stopped demonstrators from blocking roads in Mirpur as workers in other industrial areas also pressed for higher pay.

In Hemayetpur, in the nearby industrial area of Savar, a group of workers gathered at Padmar Mor at about 3 pm on Monday, according to reports. Police asked the workers to leave the road, and the group dispersed without further incident.

Industrial police said about 40 factories in Savar and Ashulia were closed on Monday. Of those, 27 were shut under a provision of Bangladesh's labour law, nine were closed with no reopening date, and the rest were observing general holidays.

The protests are part of a wider wage dispute in the garment industry. Workers have repeatedly raised concerns about both pay and working conditions. The Minimum Wage Board has postponed its meeting to Nov. 23, leaving workers waiting for further talks on the proposed increase.

Manila Sikhs welcome Modi's support for rebuilding gurdwara

MANILA

Prime Minister Narendra Modi laid the foundation stone for the rebuilding of Manila's Gurdwara Khalsa Diwan on Tuesday. The head of the Sikh place of worship's committee welcomed the visit and said it showed Modi's support for the Sikh community in the Philippines. Modi met members of Manila's Sikh community there.

Manjinder James Kumar, the committee head, told ANI that Modi asked how long the work would take and whether the committee needed help. Kumar said he expected the new building to take two years to complete. He also thanked the Indian Embassy for helping the committee.

Oldest in the Philippines

India's Ministry of External Affairs said the institution dates to 1901 and is the oldest gurdwara in the Philippines. It was officially registered as Khalsa Diwan in 1924. The gurdwara has served as a place for worship, cultural activities and charitable work in Manila.

The committee plans to replace the current building with a five-storey complex. The plans include parking, a hall for community events and space for the langar, a kitchen that serves free meals. The main prayer hall will be on the top floor.

Demolition and construction are expected to cost about 305 million Philippine pesos. The committee expects donations from Sikh and Indian communities to cover most of the cost. When the work is finished, the new building will give worshippers a dedicated prayer space and provide rooms for the meals and gatherings that bring people together.

ASEAN AI DECLARATION

ASEAN backs affordable AI for small businesses

MANILA

Southeast Asian leaders have agreed to help smaller businesses use artificial intelligence by making tools more affordable and giving owners and workers a chance to learn how to use them. Leaders adopted the declaration on Nov. 15 at the 49th summit of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations in Manila.

The Philippines led the effort, which covers micro, small and medium enterprises. The declaration asks member countries to work with technology firms, startups and universities to offer lower cost AI tools, online computing services and training in digital skills. It also calls for better internet access in places where weak connections make it harder for businesses to use online services.

For a shop owner, AI could help track stock or answer common customer questions. An online seller could use it to reach more buyers. But many smaller firms lack the money or technical skills to get started. The declaration gives special attention to businesses run by women and those in rural areas and other communities with limited access to digital services.

Leaders also called for safeguards as more firms use the technology. They urged businesses to protect personal information, keep their systems safe and be clear about how they use AI. The declaration stresses that people should still oversee the tools and the decisions they help make.

The Philippines will work with other member countries and the ASEAN Secretariat to report on progress under a related action plan.

Chennai Super Kings (CSK) confirmed on Tuesday that the 45-year-old will take up the role of Team Mentor ahead of the 2027 season. Dhoni began his IPL journey in 2008 and became one of the tournament's most influential players.

CSK owner N Srinivasan praised Dhoni's contribution to the franchise, saying, "There is no CSK without MS Dhoni." He recalled insisting on signing Dhoni during the inaugural auction in 2008 and described it as one of his best decisions. Under Dhoni's captaincy, CSK won five IPL titles in 2010, 2011, 2018, 2021 and 2023, along with two Champions League T20 trophies.

During his IPL career, Dhoni played 278 matches, scoring 5,439 runs at an average of 38.30 and a strike rate of 137.45. His record includes 24 half-centuries and 264 sixes. He also played two seasons for Rising Pune Supergiant in 2016 and 2017, when CSK was suspended. He returned in 2018 and led the team to another title.

Dhoni handed over the captaincy to Ruturaj Gaikwad before the 2024 season but continued playing. His last IPL appearance came against Gujarat Titans in 2025. A calf injury kept him out of the 2026 season. His new role will see him guide young players and support CSK's coaching team led by Zaheer Khan.

Beyond the IPL, Dhoni led India to three major ICC titles: the 2007 T20 World Cup, 2011 ODI World Cup and 2013 Champions Trophy. Though his playing career has ended, his journey with Chennai Super Kings will continue in a new role.

Dhoni takes over as CSK mentor

11 academy players earn India U17 Call-Ups

NEW DELHI

Eleven players from the AIFF-FIFA-Odisha Talent Academy in Bhubaneswar have earned places in India's squad for the AFC U17 Asian Cup 2027 Qualifiers, highlighting the academy's growing role in developing young footballers. The Blue Colts have made a start to the campaign, winning both their opening matches and scoring 16 goals, according to the All-India Football Federation.

The selected players are goalkeepers Maroof Shafi and Newtan Irengbam; defenders Jinesh Thoudam, Lawmsangzuala, Leo Thongbam, Maldino Singh Yumnam and Malsawmtluanga; midfielders Henthoiba Keisam and R Lawmsangzuala; and forwards Kamgouhao Doungel and Felix Meitei Saikhom. Their selection reflects the academy's progress over the past two seasons. Three academy players represented India at the FIFA U15 World Cup and Festival in Azerbaijan in 2026. Six featured in the SAFF U17 Championship in Sri Lanka last season, while four later played at the AFC U17 Asian Cup in Saudi Arabia.

The academy operates through a partnership between the AIFF and the Odisha Government under FIFA's Talent Development Scheme. After an initial two-year agreement, the partners renewed their collaboration for another five years. The programme combines football coaching with residential and educational support, access to natural grass pitches and sports science services at the Abhinav Bindra Targeting Performance Centre. Competitions such as the Kalinga Arrows Cup and the state government's CM Trophy also help identify promising players and provide match experience.

Bhupendra Singh Poonia, Commissioner-cum-Secretary of Odisha's Department of Sports and Youth Services, said the players' progress showed the value of sustained government support and institutional cooperation. AIFF Deputy Secretary General M Satyanarayan also thanked the state government, saying such partnerships were essential to building a strong pathway for the next generation of Indian footballers.

Alonso Returns To Dakar With Aston Martin

NEW DELHI

Fernando Alonso will return to the Dakar Rally in January 2027 with Aston Martin. The two-time Formula One champion will drive the Aston Martin Dreadnought, making his first appearance in the rally since his 2020 debut. The event runs from January 9 to 23, starting in Portugal before crossing Morocco and the Sahara Desert. The rally is among motorsport's toughest off-road tests worldwide.

Alonso will compete alongside nine-time World Rally Champion Sebastien Loeb and reigning World Rally Raid Champion Lucas Moraes. Marc Coma, a five-time Dakar motorcycle category winner, will again serve as his co-driver. Coma partnered Alonso during his first Dakar appearance, when the Spaniard finished 13th overall.

Alonso said he considered the challenge after deciding to continue in Formula One with Aston Martin. "In the end, the decision became simple. I wanted to embrace the challenge completely and take on both Formula 1 and the Dakar Rally in the same year," he said. He described his 2020 participation as one of the most challenging and enjoyable experiences of his career and praised its highly experienced specialists.

The Spaniard said having Coma alongside him again was important and praised the team assembled by Aston Martin, Prodrive, Loeb and Moraes. He also said Formula One would remain his priority. Alonso will return to preparations for the 2027 F1 campaign after the rally, with pre-season testing scheduled for February and the season beginning in March.

Alonso competed in the Dakar during his two-year break from Formula One between 2019 and 2020. During that period, he also took part in the Indianapolis 500 and won the World Endurance Championship. His return will see him balance two racing programmes in the same year.

Sachin Tendulkar donates 25 iconic bats to museum

MUMBAI

Cricket legend Sachin Tendulkar has donated 25 of his iconic cricket bats to the MCA Sharad Pawar Cricket Museum at Wankhede Stadium, Mumbai. The collection, presented on Monday in the presence of Mumbai Cricket Association president Ajinkya Naik, traces important moments from his 24-year international career. The bats include one he received as an unexpected gift during childhood, a brand-new bat he used to score a double century in Gwalior and the one from his final Test innings against the West Indies at Wankhede Stadium in 2013.

Calling the bat an extension of his body, Tendulkar said, "I've said that it (the cricket bat) is an extension of my body. So, I'm giving you a part of my body. Please take care of it." The display, titled Bharat Ratna: A Batography, preserves the memories and stories behind his treasured cricket equipment.

Manu Bhaker Elected To ISSF Athletes Committee

NEW DELHI

Double Olympic medallist Manu Bhaker has been elected to the International Shooting Sport Federation (ISSF) Athletes Committee for the 2026–2030 term, giving India representation in the global shooting body's athlete leadership. The National Rifle Association of India (NRAI) confirmed her election after receiving an official communication from the ISSF. The election followed online voting among active international shooters during two major competitions: the ISSF World Championship 300m Rifle in Cairo, Egypt, and the World Championship for Rifle, Pistol and Shotgun in Doha, Qatar. Bhaker was among six athletes selected from 22 candidates representing 20 national federations. Two representatives were elected from each of the three disciplines: rifle, pistol and shotgun. The ISSF Executive Committee will nominate the remaining members to complete the committee.

Bhaker expressed gratitude to fellow shooters for placing their trust in her. She said her experience as an athlete had helped her understand the challenges faced by competitors, including the need for clear rules, proper schedules and stronger support systems.

"With this new responsibility, I'm committed to ensuring the voices of all athletes are heard, grooming talent at the grassroots level, and working together to take our entire shooting fraternity to greater heights," she said.

The NRAI welcomed her appointment, stating that it would strengthen India's voice in international shooting and athlete representation.

Alcaraz Opens ATP finals with dominant victory

TURIN

Spanish tennis star Carlos Alcaraz began his ATP Finals campaign with a commanding 6-2, 6-2 victory over American Frances Tiafoe in their opening round-robin match in Turin on Monday. The second-seeded player needed just 69 minutes to secure the win and take an early lead in the Ivan Lendl Group.

Alcaraz started strongly, racing to a 4-0 advantage in the opening set. He maintained his momentum in the second, saving three break points at 3-2 before closing the match comfortably on serve. The victory extended his head-to-head advantage over Tiafoe to 3-1.

Speaking after the match, Alcaraz said he was feeling better than ever at this stage of the season. "I would say this is the best I have felt so far in my career at this part of the season," he said. He added that time away from competition had helped him return with renewed energy and ambition.

The 23-year-old is making his fourth appearance at the year-end championship. His best result came last year, when he finished runner-up to Jannik Sinner. Alcaraz entered this year's tournament after winning consecutive titles in Paris and Vienna. He is now chasing his 30th career tour-level title and sixth championship of the season.

After missing four months due to a wrist injury, Alcaraz returned at the US Open in August and has won 20 of his 22 matches since then. He will next face Daniil Medvedev and Flavio Cobolli in the group stage. Meanwhile, Tiafoe is making his debut at the ATP Finals after a strong season that included a title at Halle.
