Kasturirangan report dominates Karnataka Assembly session

Karnataka legislators called for scientific assessment, public consultation and safeguards for livelihoods while addressing ecological concerns in the sensitive region.

BENGALURU

The Karnataka Assembly witnessed sharp exchanges over the Kasturirangan report on Western Ghats, with both ruling and opposition sides seeking safeguards for farmers and local communities.

The special discussion on the report began amid a brief dispute over the description of the proceedings as a “special session”. Bengaluru Development Minister Krishna Byre Gowda said the reference in the list of business was an error and would be withdrawn.

Chief Minister DK Shivakumar urged legislators to keep politics aside and jointly decide the state’s position before communicating it to the Centre by September 27. He said farmers’ interests must be protected and called for a high-level technical committee and a Kerala-like approach.

Shivakumar said people in the Western Ghats had expressed apprehension over the report and that thousands of petitions and suggestions had been received. He also proposed taking an all-party delegation to the Centre.

Ashoka backs all-party delegation plan

Opposition Leader R Ashoka supported an all-party delegation but sought a physical survey and legal action before the Supreme Court. He said better coordination between the Revenue and Forest departments was necessary.

A separate exchange occurred when Rural Development Minister Eshwar Khandre sought to offer suggestions. BJP members questioned whether ministers could participate in the discussion. Speaker GS Patil said ministers could offer suggestions during the special discussion.

Focus on ground realities

The Assembly discussion focused on balancing environmental conservation with the concerns of people living in the Western Ghats. The Chief Minister sought a united position, while the Forest Minister ruled out displacement of local communities. The Opposition called for physical surveys, legal preparedness and better departmental coordination. Members also discussed safeguards for farms, homes, roads, schools, hospitals and other essential infrastructure in the region.

VANDE MATARAM ROW

Cong cuts stanzas as BJP sings full song

Bengaluru: The BJP legislators recited the full version of Vande Mataram at the beginning of the Legislative Assembly and Council proceedings on Monday, when the recording that was officially played in the House ended after two stanzas.

The Karnataka government convened a three-day special legislative session to discuss severe drought prevailing in the state as well as the implications of Dr Kasturirangan report on Western Ghats.

The session at the Legislative Assembly started with Vande Mataram but it ended after rendering two paragraphs.

Soon after that, Speaker G S Patil allowed condolences to the prominent people. Subsequently, Chief Minister D K Shivakumar started paying tribute to former MLA R B Shiriyannavar who died on August 27.

Agitated over the issue, the BJP MLAs raised slogans and started reciting the full version of Vande Mataram.

BKH calls for state-level expert assessment

Bengaluru: Legislative Council member BK Hariprasad on Monday questioned the satellite-based mapping used for the Kasturirangan report and called for a state-level expert assessment.

Speaking during the special session on the Western Ghats Ecologically Sensitive Area (ESA) draft notification, he said satellite imagery showing green cover did not necessarily mean an area was forest. He suggested that Karnataka constitute its own expert committee, prepare a report and submit it to the Centre.

The Western Ghats issue concerns six states, from Gujarat to Kerala, and that the implications of the report should be examined across Karnataka’s affected districts, he said, adding that 1,576 villages covering about 20,668 sq km have been proposed under the ESA.

He said concerns included the lack of survey-number-based boundaries and the possibility of residential, agricultural and forest areas being placed in the same category. He also cited possible implications for land values, bank loans, roads, public facilities, livelihoods and homestays.

Hariprasad said agriculture and horticulture were not proposed to be banned under the Kasturirangan report, while restrictions had been recommended on quarrying and industries harmful to the environment.

He called for an expert committee on the Kerala model to prepare Karnataka’s own recommendations. Environmental protection, he said, should be balanced with the interests of farmers and forest dwellers.

SC orders reprobe into Soujanya rape-murder case

NEW DELHI

The Supreme Court on Monday ordered a thorough reinvestigation by the Karnataka police into the 2012 rape and murder case of 17-year-old Soujanya in Dharmasthala, bringing the focus back on the demand for justice in what remains one of the state’s most disturbing unsolved crimes.

A bench of Justices Sanjay Kumar and Sanjeev Sachdeva passed the order, also seeking compliance report within three months.

After the acquittal of the accused despite the case being handed over to the CBI, the court had previously come down heavily on the agency for its “poor” and “non-independent” handling of the case. The court had on July 22, 2026 reserved its judgment on a plea seeking a de novo probe.

The court had expressed strong displeasure over the CBI officers’ failure to even visit the crime scene or record the statement of the victim’s mother.

Senior advocates Shobha Gupta, Anand Sanjay M Nuli, and Shekhar G Devasa, appearing for the petitioner, the victim’s mother Kusumavathi strongly pushed for a fresh investigation by an independent SIT, preferably headed by a former Supreme Court judge. They highlighted serious lapses by the state police, CID, and CBI, which respectively handled the probe.

Karnataka Additional Advocate General Avishkar Singhvi had agreed to carry out the reinvestigation by constituting a SIT on the court’s suggestion. The CBI counsel, opposing it, had argued that the agency took over the case in 2013, filed a chargesheet in 2015, and that a fresh probe after the completion of the trial would unsettle criminal jurisprudence.

I have been waiting for justice for the past 14 years. The Supreme Court’s order has given me renewed hope that I will finally get justice in the case.

- Kusumavathi, victim’s mother

CASE BACKGROUND

Crime (Oct 2012): Soujanya, a 17-year-old student at SDM College in Ujire, went missing while returning from college. Her body was found the next day with signs of severe sexual assault and murder.

Probe: The case was handled first by local police, then transferred to the Karnataka Criminal Investigation Department (CID), and finally handed over to the Central Bureau of Investigation (CBI) in 2013.

Acquittal (June 2023): A special CBI court acquitted the lone accused, Santhosh Rao, holding that the prosecution failed to prove the charges beyond a reasonable doubt. The trial court also criticized the initial handling of evidence by investigators.

SC directive (Sept 2026)

Order: Acting on a plea by Soujanya’s mother, the Supreme Court criticized the earlier CBI investigation for being weak and non-independent.

New SIT probe: The apex court directed the state to constitute a fresh Special Investigation Team (SIT) to conduct a thorough reinvestigation.

Exclusion of old officers: The court ordered that police or investigation officers involved in the flawed original probes must not be part of the new team.

Timeline: The authorities must file a compliance report on the steps taken within three months.

The case has gained renewed attention amid the broader Dharmasthala controversies, though the SIT probing alleged mass burials has largely found those claims to be fabricated.

'Hope renewed': Soujanya's mother welcomes SC order

Mangaluru: Welcoming the Supreme Court’s order directing a reinvestigation into the 2012 rape and murder of 17-year-old Soujanya in Ujire, the victim’s mother, Kusumavathi, on Monday said the decision had rekindled her hope of securing justice after 14 years of wait. “I have been waiting for justice for the past 14 years. The Supreme Court’s order has given me renewed hope that I will finally get justice in the case,” she said. Thanking activists who had supported her family throughout their fight, she said she wanted justice for her daughter’s brutal rape and murder and demanded that the culprits, whoever they may be, be identified and punished.

Air Marshal Jeetendra Mishra (retired) on Monday formally took charge as the first chief executive officer (CEO) of the Shri Ram Janmabhoomi Teerth Kshetra Trust, which manages the Ram temple here.

Mishra, who arrived in Ayodhya on Sunday, offered prayers at the Ram temple on Monday morning before reaching his newly constructed office on the temple premises to assume charge.

He had stayed overnight at the Trust’s Teerth Kshetra Bhan in the Ramkot area after arriving in the city. Mishra (62) was appointed the Trust’s first CEO on September 2 as part of an administrative restructuring aimed at strengthening its functioning amid allegations of theft of donations.

The Trust had selected Mishra following a multi-stage process for which 5,585 applications were received.

Sixteen candidates were shortlisted for face-to-face interactions in Ayodhya on August 11 and 12.

The Trust had also clarified last week that Mishra had personally appeared for the interview on August 11, following remarks by former IPS officer Rajesh Pandey that had raised questions over the selection process.

The Trust said Mishra participated in the first session of interviews on August 11 and

Italy plans burqa, niqab ban in schools

Rome: Italy is preparing to ban face coverings in schools and to cap the number of foreign students per class, Prime Minister Giorgia Meloni said as she played up her right-wing credentials at a youth event organised by her party.

Italy is among the European countries most exposed to migrant arrivals because of its central Mediterranean location, making migration a hot-button issue and a major challenge for successive governments. “A measure will soon be presented to a Cabinet meeting to legally establish a maximum number of foreign students per class. It also requires parents of foreign students facing serious difficulties integrating into the school system to learn Italian and bans burqas and niqabs in schools,” Meloni said.

2 Indian students killed during flight training in Canada

OTTAWA

Two Indian students have died in a tragic aviation accident while undergoing flight training in Canada, according to the Consulate General of India in Vancouver.

The deceased students have been identified as Manoj Sivakumar, who hailed from Tamil Nadu, and Srisaran Thiruganasambantham, from Puducherry.

The Consulate General of India in Vancouver confirmed their demise on the social media platform X on Sunday (September 20). The exact cause of the accident is still emerging, while local reports and aviation officials indicate the incident took place during a routine training exercise. Canadian search and rescue services, along with local law enforcement, have opened a probe into the accident to figure out the exact sequence of events that lead to the tragedy.

In a post on X, the Consulate General of India said, “The Consulate General of India, Vancouver, expresses its deepest condolences on the tragic demise of Shri Manoj Sivakumar and Shri Srisaran Thiruganasambantham, two Indian students from Tamil Nadu and Puducherry, who lost their lives in a tragic air accident in Canada during their flight training.”

As per the CBC, citing Harv’s Air president Adam Penner, the two pilots had rented the aircraft to log flight hours toward their commercial pilot licences. The plane was reported to the Transportation Safety Board of Canada after it failed to reach its intended destination.

ISRO-ESA widen space collab

New Delhi: Reaffirming Europe’s and India’s commitment to expanding cooperation in space, the European Space Agency (ESA) and the Indian Space Research Organisation (ISRO) signed an exchange of letters extending their long-standing Cooperative Agreement for five more years, until January 2032.

The exchange between ISRO chief Dr V Narayanan and ESA Director General Josef Aschbacher took place in Paris on the margins of the International Space Summit earlier this month. The renewed agreement reflects the evolving priorities of both sides in the space sector: space weather, human and robotic exploration of space, while also recognising the growing importance of sustainable outer space activities. This comes as India is expanding homegrown spacecraft tech as part of its Gaganyaan Mission.

PUTIN SWEEPS DUMA POLLS!

MOSCOW

Vladimir Putin’s United Russia party won a record supermajority in the Duma, authorities announced on Monday after a tightly controlled three-day election without parties critical of the Kremlin or the war in Ukraine.

Electoral chief Ella Pamfilova said preliminary results showed United Russia - which has dominated Russian politics for 25 years - won 355 of the Duma’s 450 seats.

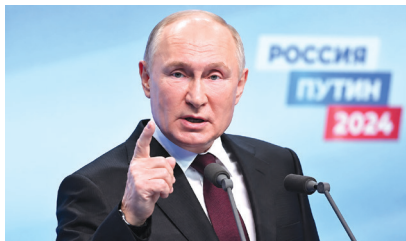

The result handed Putin’s party an increased supermajority and beat its previous record of 343 seats. The supermajor-

Despite the lack of alternatives to United Russia, the Kremlin had positioned the vote as a chance for residents to have their say since the invasion of Ukraine in 2022 and amid economic hardship.

The Kremlin said the result of the first parliamentary election since Moscow sent troops to Ukraine in 2022 showed Russians were united around Putin, who has been in power since New Year’s Eve 1999.

The conflict has killed hundreds of thousands, displaced millions and hit ordinary lives in Russia more than ever this year. Moscow has banned criticism of its military campaign and the only party that called for an end to the war was removed from the election.

“These indicators, of course, point to the highest level of consolidation within Russian society around the head of state,” Kremlin spokesman Dmitry Peskov told mediapersons.

Remove one toll plaza, say commuters

CH NEWS, BENGALURU
Residents and commuters want one of two toll plazas removed, citing duplicate charges on a short stretch. The Electronic City and Attibele toll plazas are just 14 km apart, prompting motorists to question toll collection at both points. The demand gained momentum after the Electronic City elevated road's 20-year concession ended on September 10 and the facility was transferred to NHAI. Citizens for Citizens convenor Rajkumar Dugar said NHAI should ensure a transparent post-concession arrangement. NHAI officials said toll arrangements are under review.

Under-16 social media ban faces reality check

CH NEWS, BENGALURU

Karnataka's proposed under-16 social media restriction has renewed calls for digital literacy, parental guidance and school-based awareness. The State announced plans to prohibit social media use among children below 16 in its 2026-27 Budget, but the measure is yet to be fully implemented. Child Online Protection (COP), which conducts digital-parenting programmes, has so far covered 10 schools and signed agreements with two institutions to introduce its school model from the next academic year. ASER data shows 82.2% of children aged 14-16 know how to use smartphones, with 76% using them for social media and 57% for education. Experts caution that restrictions alone may not work. Three held for investment fraud using mule bank accounts

CH NEWS, BENGALURU

Police have arrested three men accused of supplying mule accounts and routing cyber-fraud proceeds through digital platforms. The accused have been identified as Amit Mishra of Jharkhand and Bengaluru residents Tausif Ahmed and Parashuram Sadanand Kannannavar alias Pavan Kumar. The arrests followed a complaint filed by a Bengaluru resident on April 29, who alleged that he was lured into an investment scheme through a WhatsApp link. He was subsequently added to a group called “EL Investment Strategies Discussion”, where messages promoting trading investments were posted daily. The complainant was allegedly asked to open a demat account and initially invested ₹50,000. The accused allegedly provided bank account details and induced him to invest ₹93.58 lakh in instalments. However, neither returns nor the invested amount were provided, police said. A case was registered under relevant provisions of the IT Act and Section 318 of the Bharatiya Nyaya Sanhita. Police said the accused were arrested at a hotel in Kasavanahalli based on technical information. Investigation allegedly revealed that they procured current, corporate and trust bank accounts, net-banking credentials and linked SIM cards from individuals by promising commissions. According to police, account holders were accommodated in hotels, where an application called ZNPAY and SMS-forwarding malicious files were installed.

INVESTIGATION WIDENS

Police said the accused allegedly used Binance wallets to receive crime proceeds and Botim for communication. Technical analysis of Telegram and WhatsApp data indicated IP or network locations associated with Kolkata, Hong Kong and California. Police are verifying the information with service providers. Investigators are also trying to identify intermediaries who allegedly supplied mule accounts and other key persons linked to the wider cyber-fraud network.

saying their work promotes both artistic traditions and awareness about environmental conservation. She said the artists who create idols of deities worshipped by people deserve respect and encouragement. Naik added that she would make efforts to introduce a monthly pension for Ganapati idol artisans when her government comes to power. Dharwad protest over removal of Siddaramaiah statue

Members of the Krantiveera Sangolli Rayanna Geleyara Balaga staged a protest in front of the Dharwad Deputy Commissioner's office on Monday, opposing the removal of a statue of former Karnataka Chief Minister Siddaramaiah that had been installed near Court Circle in Kalaburagi. The protesters expressed their displeasure over the removal and demanded that the statue be reinstalled at the same location. They said Siddaramaiah is regarded by his supporters as a leader of the AHINDA communities and the Halumatha community. They argued that the statue had been installed by people as a mark of their admiration and affection for the former Chief Minister. The statue was installed overnight near Biddapur Cross in Kalaburagi on September 17. According to Public TV, supporters installed the statue without obtaining permission from the city corporation. Corporation officials later removed it under police protection, stating that it had been installed without authorisation. The Dharwad protesters criticised the manner in which the statue was removed and objected to it being taken away in a municipal vehicle. They said the action had hurt the sentiments of people who support Siddaramaiah and demanded that the authorities reconsider the decision. The issue had also involved competing claims over the naming and use of the circle. Public TV reported that members of the Koli community had sought permission to name the circle after late leader Vitthal Heroor, while Siddaramaiah supporters had earlier put up a board referring to it as Siddaramaiah Circle. The corporation had not granted permission for the statue installation. During Monday's protest, the organisation warned that a larger agitation would be launched if the statue was not restored at the same location. The protesters called for the authorities to address the issue and respect the sentiments expressed by Siddaramaiah's supporters. The protest remained focused on the demand for reinstallation of the statue.

Jokumaraswamy tradition continues across North Karnataka

A unique folk tradition known as Jokumaraswamy is being observed across parts of North Karnataka following Ganesha Chaturthi. As part of the ritual, women carry a clay idol of Jokumaraswamy in a basket and visit farmers' homes while singing traditional folk songs. According to local belief, Jokumara is born under the Moola star on Ashtami, five days after Ganesha Chaturthi. Legend says the idol is made from soil collected near an Arali tree grove and is carried by members of the Barkera community across seven villages over seven days. The tradition is closely associated with rural communities and agricultural life. During the visits, women place the idol at the doorstep of farmers' houses and sing songs dedicated to Jokumaraswamy. Families offer sorghum, rice, rotli, chillies, tamarind, vegetables and other grains. In return, the women carrying the deity distribute ambali, a nutritious ragi porridge, and kadige, traditional kohl. Farmers traditionally take the ambali to their fields and scatter it as a ritual offering, believing it will support a good harvest. Kaadige is also applied to doorframes and, in some areas, to agricultural fields. Jokumaraswamy is also associated with marriage, fertility and cattle. Devotees believe that praying to the deity can help unmarried people find spouses and childless couples have children. Families whose wishes are fulfilled may make offerings such as a cradle, sacred waist cord or other ritual items. Butter is traditionally smeared on Jokumara's mouth, with a belief that cows will subsequently produce more milk. Local women say the tradition also brings together different communities, as Jokumaraswamy visits households belonging to farmers and families from various social groups. Shaila, a member of the Barkera community, said the clay idol is prepared on Tumbida Ashtami and worshipped as a son before beginning its seven-day journey. Families prepare food offerings and provide grains during the visits. The ritual concludes on Ananta Chaturdashi, when the idol is taken to a pond as part of the traditional ceremony. Locals also regard Jokumaraswamy as the brother of Ganesha. Another belief holds that after travelling through the villages, Jokumara tells Lord Parameshwara about farmers' hardships, lack of rain and crop problems. Devotees believe that rain follows this appeal. The tradition remains an important expression of North Karnataka's folk culture, linking religious beliefs with farming, community relationships and hopes for rain, prosperity and family well-being.

kote were migrating in search of employment. Ramachandrappa questioned the exclusion of Jagalur from the drought-hit list and called for a field-level assessment of the situation. He argued that officials should visit farms and assess crop conditions rather than relying only on satellite-based reports. He also referred to an earlier project intended to supply water to 57 lakes in the region, for which he said Rs 777 crore had been provided. He demanded that Jagalur be declared drought-affected and said protesters would continue their satyagraha until their demand was addressed. The protest comes amid a wider debate in Karnataka over the number of taluks facing drought conditions. The state government has said drought assessments are being carried out according to prescribed criteria and that areas facing genuine drought conditions will be examined.

Karnataka has been dealing with rainfall shortages and dry spells across several regions. The government had earlier said more than 100 taluks had been identified for drought-related assessment, with further reviews continuing based on field reports and technical criteria. The Jagalur protest is expected to keep pressure on the administration to review the taluk's status and assess the reported impact on farmers, crops and rural livelihoods.

DAVANAGERE

BJP workers called for a bandh in Jagalur on Monday, protesting the taluk's exclusion from Karnataka's drought-affected list. The protest disrupted vehicular movement and brought business activities at the Jagalur Agricultural Produce Market Committee (APMC) to a halt. Protesters stopped vehicles on roads, while students and members of the public were seen walking as buses remained off the roads. Agitators also staged a protest outside the APMC gate, demanding that the government recognise the drought situation in the taluk. Former BJP MLA S.V. Ramachandrappa said farmers in Jagalur depend heavily on rainfall as the region has no major river or water source. He claimed that crops sown after receiving some earlier rainfall had dried up because of the subsequent dry spell. He also said people from Bili-chodu hobli and Basavana-

He met with various community forums, women's councils, and youth wings to raise awareness about official welfare measures. ing appeals to the government, an additional five crore rupees was granted, enabling support for over 1,700 applicants. Prasad commended beneficiaries for maintaining an impressive eighty-five percent repayment rate, which ensures revolving funds for future applicants. He pointed out that the rise of multinational corporations has severely impacted traditional small merchants, causing financial distress for many households. Because self-reliance often prevents struggling families from seeking public aid, reliable poverty data remains scarce. To address this, the corporation is conducting statewide surveys alongside local councils to identify underprivileged households and extend timely support. Educational development remains a top priority, with over three crore rupees distributed directly to eligible students via transparent bank transfers. Anjaneya alleges crores looted in Holalkere funds

CH NEWS, CHITRADURGA

Former minister H. Anjaneya alleged massive financial misappropriation across Holalkere constituency on Monday, demanding a comprehensive probe into crores of rupees sanctioned for rural irrigation and community development since 2018. Addressing reporters at the local tourist hall, Anjaneya stated that funds released across diverse departments, including water resources, mineral foundations, and rural engineering units, were severely looted. He pointed out that mandatory public display boards specifying contract sums, vendor names, and project details were deliberately ignored at worksites to hide irregularities. Citing specific instances, the senior leader claimed that when a conscientious engineer refused to clear an incomplete thirty-crore irrigation bill, the administrative file was abruptly transferred to Hiriyur division for unauthorized approval. He cautioned government personnel that yielding to unlawful political pressure would ultimately invite severe criminal prosecution. He alleged that local administrators bypassed transparent procedures during lake dredging, open well restorations, and check dam construction across the entire region. Furthermore, Anjaneya highlighted gross violations in allocating special welfare grants and housing schemes without statutory village assembly approvals. He announced plans to submit a formal memorandum to the deputy commissioner seeking complete documentary verification. Once concrete paperwork is obtained, he vowed to launch an anti-corruption awareness march and approach the Lokayukta, investigation agencies, and the Governor. Former district vice-president H.N. Tippeswamy criticized officials for falsely branding school transport purchased through foundation funds as personal legislative contributions. Several local party leaders, including Shivakumar, Krishnamurthy, Lohit Kumar, and Chetan Borenahalli, attended the press conference in support of the allegations. Demanding administrative accountability, Anjaneya affirmed that public funds meant to alleviate agricultural distress and rural hardship must never end up lining corrupt pockets. BANKS PREPARE FOR 3-DAY STRIKE

The Finance Ministry has called a meeting with chief executives of public sector banks, regional rural banks, the Indian Banks' Association and NABARD to review contingency plans ahead of a proposed three-day nationwide bank strike beginning September 28. The meeting, chaired by the Secretary of the Department of Financial Services, will focus on ensuring continuity of banking operations and essential customer services during the proposed strike. Officials are expected to

China economy faces mounting growth pressures

BEIJING

China's economy is facing persistent pressure from weak domestic demand, a prolonged property downturn and high debt, even as industrial output continues to expand. A recent report published by Kathmandu-based Hamrakura.com has questioned the strength of China's official economic growth figures and highlighted concerns over property, consumption, debt and employment. The report argues that the country's headline growth figures do not fully reflect economic conditions on the ground. Those claims, however, differ from assessments by international institutions. The International Monetary Fund projected in February that China's economy would grow 4.5 per cent in 2026, while warning that risks included a deeper property-sector contraction, high debt, weak domestic demand and continued reliance on exports. The IMF also said China's growth model faces longer-term challenges from an ageing workforce and slower productivity growth. Recent data show a mixed picture. China's industrial output grew 5.2 per cent year-on-year in August, accelerating from 4.5 per cent in July. However, retail sales growth slowed to 0.4 per cent, while fixed-asset investment declined 7.2 per cent during the first eight months of the year. The property market remains a major concern. It was reported that residential sales by floor area fell 12.1 per cent during the first eight months of 2026, while around four million homes remained unsold. Beijing has introduced reforms aimed at stabilising the sector, although the measures could put further pressure on local government finances in the short term. China's central bank has also acknowledged the challenge of weak demand. A policy adviser recently warned that strong supply alongside subdued consumption could deepen economic imbalances and called for measures to strengthen household income and domestic spending.

The unions are also demanding improved pension benefits, a uniform dearness allowance formula for pensioners and an option for employees covered under the National Pension System to move to the old pension scheme. Wall St futures rise as AI stocks rally, crude prices fall

NEW YORK

US stock futures were higher on Monday, driven by gains in AI shares as Treasury yields took a beating and oil slid 2% to hit an 11-day low on signs of progress in Middle East talks. While Washington and Tehran continued to exchange new threats through the weekend, US President Donald Trump said he would be Iranian President Masoud Pezeshkian, who is expected in New York this week for the UN General Assembly. Doomsday calls from bosses at top AI companies a week ago had sparked a rout, but those concerns seemed to dissipate on Monday as investors focused on indications spending on developing the technology was still expanding. Chip companies such as Intel rose 5.3%. Marvell added 2.2%, Meta climbed 2.6% and Dell advanced 2.3%. Accenture also gained and was up 6.1% after parting with Anthropic to invest $2 billion in AI evaluation. "We are past the local peak in (Middle East) tensions, and we should see some move towards normalization in the coming weeks. Our theory remains that the first couple of weeks of October could be a sweet spot for some sort of fudge between (the) US and Iran," said Mohit Kumar, an economist at Jefferies. A fall in oil prices eased the pressure on equities as the 10-year US bond yield slipped below the keenly watched 5% mark. Energy-price-sensitive airlines such as Delta and American gained more than 1.5% each.

Tesla faces major trial for 'bias' against black workers

CALIFORNIA

A California agency's lawsuit accusing Tesla of allowing rampant race discrimination at its flagship assembly plant is set to go to trial on Monday, one of a series of similar lawsuits being faced by the electric vehicle maker. Lawyers for Tesla and the California Civil Rights Department will square off in Oakland before state Superior Court Judge Peter Borkon, who has scheduled the trial to run until October 30. In the lawsuit filed in 2022, the California Civil Rights Department claims Black workers at Tesla's Fremont, California plant were subjected to pervasive harassment by other employees, including racial slurs and graffiti, and Tesla failed to prevent or stop it. Tesla is also accused of paying Black workers less than others and depriving them of opportunities for promotions. Tesla and its lawyers did not respond to requests for comment. The company has denied wrongdoing and said that it does not tolerate discrimination and has fired workers found to have engaged in misconduct. The California Civil Rights Department's director, Kevin Kish, in a statement said the agency looked forward to holding Tesla accountable. Tesla's high profile and the thousands of workers involved in the case make it among the most significant involving employment discrimination claims against a major US company to go to trial in recent years.

No cap on damages

Borkon has scheduled a bench trial, meaning that he and not a jury will decide whether Tesla is liable for violations of California civil rights laws. Unlike federal law, the California law barring workplace discrimination does not cap the damages a court can award to affected workers, and Tesla could be on the hook for many millions of dollars if it loses the case. Tesla has for the last decade been dogged by claims that it fostered a climate at the Fremont plant and other facilities that was extremely hostile to Black workers. The company is also facing a lawsuit from the US Equal Employment Opportunity Commission alleging racial harassment, and dozens of lawsuits by individual workers making similar claims.

AI boom drives semiconductor market surge

SEOUL

The global semiconductor market is projected to exceed $1.6 trillion in 2026, driven by rapidly rising investment in artificial intelligence infrastructure and growing demand for advanced memory chips, according to a report by the Korea Eximbank research centre. The latest projection represents a sharp upward revision from forecasts made earlier this year. Until 2025, the global semiconductor industry had been expected to cross the $1 trillion mark only around 2030. However, major US and Chinese hyper-scalers have significantly increased spending on AI infrastructure, accelerating demand for chips used in data centres. Memory chips manufactured by Samsung Electronics and SK hynix are expected to account for more than half of the global semiconductor market as AI systems process increasingly large volumes of data. Prices have also surged. By the end of August, DRAM prices had risen 4.4 times from a year earlier to $25, while NAND flash memory prices increased ninefold to $30.50. Although memory prices are expected to stabilise from next year, the broader semiconductor market is forecast to continue expanding and could reach around $2 trillion by 2030. The report said long-term supply agreements between major technology companies and memory manufacturers could provide greater stability to the industry. Employment in South Korea's chip industry has also increased. The sector employed 174,000 workers during the first quarter, up 15 per cent from 2018. Average monthly wages reached 4.32 million won during the first half of this year, rising 3.1

per cent annually. The expansion comes even as parts of the AI industry debate whether development should slow because of concerns surrounding the technology's risks and control. "Big tech companies are pursuing long-term supply agreements with memory chipmakers such as Samsung Electronics and SK hynix, which will help stabilise the semiconductor industry compared with the past," the Korea Eximbank research report said. Industry sources said continued investment by major technology companies in AI infrastructure and the wider adoption of AI services could keep memory-chip demand strong in the near term.

The Price Of Freebies In Indian Democracy

Election season in India has become a festival of freebies. Free electricity, free laptops, Rs.1000 per month, free bus rides every party promises something more attractive than the last. While welfare is the duty of the state, converting it into competitive charity is damaging our democracy and economy.

There is a fundamental difference between welfare and freebie. Building a government school that provides quality education is welfare. Distributing free gadgets to students of a failing school is a freebie. One empowers, the other bribes.

The economic cost is staggering. The RBI itself has warned that several states are spending more than 15% of their revenue on subsidies and freebies. This money comes from cutting capital expenditure the money that should build roads, hospitals, cold storages, and irrigation canals. In the long run, we are sacrificing future growth for present votes. Punjab, with its free electricity for years, is now burdened with massive debt and a failing power infrastructure. It is a classic case of short-term populism leading to long-term pain.

More dangerously, it degrades the voter. It assumes the voter is not a citizen seeking development, but a beneficiary who can be bought. It shifts the debate from important questions about jobs, inflation, education quality, air pollution to who gives more free.

The Supreme Court has asked the Election Commission to frame guidelines on this, but political will is missing. The solution is not to ban welfare. We need targeted, direct benefit transfers for the truly needy like free food grains for the poor, which is essential. But universal freebies for all to win an election must be accounted for. Every manifesto should have a budget page where will the money come from?

A developed India by 2047 will not be built on free power, but on empowered people who have the power to earn and grow.

Coaching Centres Are Killing Real Education

A 16-year-old girl in Kota jumped from her hostel building last week. Her note said: "Sorry, Papa, I cannot do IIT." This is the 27th student suicide in Kota this year alone. We have built a Rs. 58,000 crore industry that thrives on the anxiety of parents and children, and we call it education.

The coaching centre model has completely distorted learning. School education, which should be about curiosity, understanding, and all-round development, has become irrelevant for many. Students enrol in dummy schools where they never attend, and spend 12-14 hours in coaching institutes mugging up formulas and tricks. They are trained to crack an exam, not to understand science.

This creates two problems. First, it kills innovation. An IIT-JEE or NEET topper may be excellent at solving multiple-choice questions under time pressure, but does he have the creativity to invent? Our education system is producing great test-takers but not great thinkers, researchers, or entrepreneurs. Second, it creates deep inequality. Only families who can afford Rs. 2-3 lakhs per year can send their children to Kota or Hyderabad. A brilliant child from a poor family in a village is out of the race before it even starts.

The government's new guidelines to regulate coaching centres no enrolment below 16 years, no false promises are a welcome first step, but insufficient. We need to fix the root cause: the nature of our entrance exams. Why does a single three-hour exam decide a child's entire future? Why can't we have aptitude tests spread over time, and give weightage to school learning and projects? Parents must also introspect. Is your child's dream to become an engineer, or is it your unfulfilled dream? A child who loves history and is forced into science will fail in both. Let schools be schools again, and let children be children.

Bangalore Traffic: A City Choking Itself

It takes 90 minutes to travel 10 kilometres in Bangalore. This is not a joke anymore; it is the daily reality for millions. The city that was once called the Garden City and Pensioners' Paradise is now the world's second slowest city to drive in. Bangalore's traffic is no longer a civic issue; it is an economic and mental health crisis.

The problem is simple to diagnose but hard to cure. In the last 10 years, Bangalore's population has grown from 8.5 million to over 14 million, but its road length has grown by less than 10%. Over 2,000 new vehicles are registered every single day. Our public transport carries only 40% of commuters, while in a city like London or Mumbai, it carries over 70%.

What makes it worse is unplanned growth. Tech parks are built on the outskirts with no metro connectivity. Footpaths are encroached or non-existent, so even a 500-metre walk requires a two-wheeler. A 30-minute rain floods underpasses because lakes that should have absorbed water have been built over.

The cost is enormous. A recent study estimated that Bangalore loses Rs. 20,000 crores every year in productivity due to traffic. That is fuel wasted, business meetings missed, and family time lost. More importantly, the stress of honking, pollution, and unpredictability is causing a rise in anxiety and road rage.

What is the way out? We cannot build more roads; we need to move more people in less space. The full completion of Namma Metro Phase 2 and 3 cannot be delayed any further. We need a unified metropolitan transport authority that integrates Metro, BMTC buses, and suburban rail with a single ticket. We need to make footpaths walkable and introduce congestion pricing in central areas like in Singapore.

Bangalore gave India its IT future. If it cannot fix its traffic, that future will move to another city.

JUSTICE DELAYED IS JUSTICE DENIED AGAIN

A man in Uttar Pradesh spent 20 years in jail as an undertrial for a theft he did not commit. When he was finally acquitted, he was 58, his parents had died, and his children did not recognize him. His story is not an exception; it is the norm in India.

India has 5.1 crore cases pending in courts. If no new cases are filed today, it will still take our courts over 300 years to clear the backlog at the current pace. For a common Indian, going to court means entering a black hole where dates after dates are given, lawyers charge by appearance, and life goes on hold.

Who suffers most? The poor. A rich person can hire a top lawyer and get bail in days. A poor person cannot even get a copy of the chargesheet and languishes in jail for years as an undertrial. Over 75% of our prison population are undertrials people who are legally innocent but are treated as convicts.

Why is this happening? We have only 21 judges per 10 lakh people, while the Law Commission recommends 50. Our courts still work with paper files and manual summons in the age of AI. Vacancies for judges remain unfilled for years due to tussles between the government and collegium.

The reforms are well known but not implemented. We need to double the number of judges, create special fast-track courts for cases older than 5 years, and make e-filing and virtual hearings the norm. Most importantly, we need to decriminalize petty offences and promote mediation and Lok Adalats for civil disputes. Not every fight needs to go to the Supreme Court.

A nation where it takes 20 years to prove you are innocent cannot claim to give justice. Speedy justice is not a luxury; it is a fundamental right under Article 21 the right to life with dignity.

Why India Must Save Its Lakes

Bangalore once had 1,452 lakes. Today, less than 200 remain, and most of them are sewage tanks that occasionally catch fire. Hyderabad's Hussain Sagar is choking. Delhi has lost 21 lakes in the last decade. We are witnessing the systematic murder of our lakes in the name of development, and we will pay for it with our water security.

Lakes are not just beautiful spots for evening walks. They are the kidneys of a city. They recharge groundwater, prevent floods, cool the city by 2-3 degrees, and support biodiversity. When we build an apartment complex on a lakebed, we are not just destroying a lake; we are inviting floods into our own homes, as we saw in Chennai in 2015 and in Bangalore in 2022.

Who is responsible? A nexus of encroachers, indifferent civic bodies, and us. The original lake maps are tampered with, buffer zones are violated, and untreated sewage from apartments and industries is let directly into the water. A lake needs 75 metres of buffer, but we build right up to its edge and then complain about mosquitoes.

The revival is possible and has been proven. The Jakkur lake in Bangalore was revived through a community-government partnership that used constructed wetlands to treat sewage naturally. Today it is full of birds and clean water. The same model can be replicated.

What we need is a strong Lake Protection Authority in every state with satellite mapping to stop encroachments in real-time. Every citizen living within 1 km of a lake should be its guardian. And most importantly, we must stop treating lakes as real estate and start treating them as infrastructure as critical as a flyover or a metro line.

If our lakes die, our cities will die of thirst.

The Silent Epidemic Of Diabetes Among Youth

Ten years ago, diabetes was considered a disease of the 50-plus, slightly overweight uncle. Today, in clinics across India, 25-year-olds are walking in with blood sugar levels of 300. India has 101 million diabetics, and the most alarming trend is that it is getting younger, faster, and more aggressive.

We are the diabetes capital of the world, and we earned this title with our lifestyle. The culprit is a deadly combination of bad diet, no movement, and chronic stress.

Our diet has undergone a complete westernization. We have replaced traditional breakfasts like ragi mudde, millets, and poha with sugary cereals, white bread, and packaged juices that claim to be healthy but are loaded with sugar. A single bottle of cold drink has 9 spoons of sugar. Our lunch is often a biryani from Swiggy, and dinner is at 11 PM. Our bodies were not designed for this constant sugar overload.

Second, we have stopped moving. 12 hours, commutes for 2 hours sitting, and then watches OTT for 3 hours sitting. His only exercise is walking from his desk to the coffee machine. Muscles that do not work become insulin resistant, which is the first step towards diabetes.

What makes youth-onset diabetes more dangerous is that it is more aggressive. It damages kidneys, eyes, and heart much faster. A person who gets diabetes at 25 is likely to need dialysis at 45, during his prime working years.

The solution is not in more medicines but in our kitchens and colonies. We must bring back millets and fibre into our diet and tax sugary drinks like Mexico and the UK have done. Schools and offices must mandate 30 minutes of physical activity daily. Most importantly, we need annual screening for everyone above 25, because diabetes has no symptoms for years.

Sugar may taste sweet, but its bill is very bitter.

LETTER TO EDITOR

FIX OUR BROKEN POTHOLES

The terrible condition of our local roads has become a daily hazard for commuters. Potholes are damaging vehicles and causing unnecessary traffic jams across the neighborhood. Despite repeated complaints to the municipal corporation, no concrete repair work has been initiated. We urge the authorities to take immediate action and repave these neglected streets before a major accident occurs.

STOP EXCESSIVE PLASTIC WASTE

Plastic pollution continues to choke our environment, threatening both local wildlife and public health. Despite existing bans, single-use plastics remain widely available in neighborhood markets and grocery stores. Citizens must consciously shift to eco-friendly alternatives like cloth bags and reusable containers. At the same time, the local administration needs to strictly penalize violators to protect our natural surroundings.

ON GLOBAL TRADE VOLATILITY

The rapid restructuring of international trade agreements highlights a deeply unpredictable economic environment. Exporters cannot construct long-term strategies when duty structures fluctuate based on judicial rulings and shifting political levers. Treating trade policy as a continuous negotiation undermines supply chain stability. For sustained growth, governments must prioritize regulatory clarity and long-term economic certainty over brief diplomatic victories.

ON AI AND THE FUTURE OF WORK

The rapid integration of autonomous AI systems into corporate workflows demands critical attention. As digital tools take over entry-level tasks, the transition from higher education to professional careers is breaking down. Simply adding certificates to traditional degrees will not fix this structural deficit.

Rahul Gandhi seeks POCSO action in Jamui harassment case

Rahul Gandhi demanded swift POCSO action after a teenage girl was allegedly harassed and molested by men in Bihar's Jamui.

Congress leader Rahul Gandhi on Monday demanded swift action under the Protection of Children from Sexual Offences (POCSO) Act against those allegedly involved in the reported harassment and molestation of a teenage girl in Bihar's Jamui.

The remarks came after a video purportedly showing the incident surfaced online. According to media reports, a Class 10 boy and girl returning from coaching classes in Jamui on Saturday evening were allegedly stopped by a group of men, surrounded and questioned. The teenagers were also allegedly assaulted and the girl was allegedly molested during the incident.

In a post on X, Gandhi described the reported incident as disturbing and questioned who had given the men the authority to stop and harass the students. He said the incident should not be described as culture and alleged that it reflected patriarchal attitudes towards women and girls.

Gandhi demanded that every person allegedly involved in the incident be identified and prosecuted under the POCSO Act. He also questioned why the alleged perpetrators had not been arrested if the incident took place on September 19.

"Every individual in that video must be identified and prosecuted under POCSO, and justice must be swift," Gandhi said.

He also questioned the Bihar government over the safety of girls travelling on public roads in the evening.

"Why is a girl not safe on a public road at 7 PM?" he asked.

According to the report cited by Deccan Herald, Bihar Police have identified seven alleged perpetrators in connection with the incident.

The video has triggered attention and calls for action, while police continue to investigate the circumstances surrounding the reported incident.

The case has also brought renewed attention to allegations of vigilante-style moral policing and the safety of minors in public spaces.

Further legal action will depend on the ongoing police investigation and evidence collected in the case.

Supreme court agrees to clarify stray animal directions

NEW DELHI

The Supreme Court on Monday agreed to consider a plea by the National Highways Authority of India (NHAI) seeking clarification on directions issued in its May 19 judgment concerning stray animals on national highways and expressways.

Solicitor General Tushar Mehta mentioned the application before a bench headed by Chief Justice of India Surya Kant, seeking urgent listing. The Chief Justice agreed to place the matter before the special bench that had passed the original directions.

The NHAI has sought clarity on whether the primary statutory responsibility for removing, impounding and sheltering stray animals rests with state authorities, local bodies and designated Highway Administrations rather than independently with the highway authority.

The plea relates to the Supreme Court's May 19 direction requiring NHAI to coordinate with states and Union Territories and establish measures to deal with stray cattle and other animals on highways. These measures included specialised vehicles, holding facilities, shelters and arrangements with animal welfare organisations and gaushalas.

NHAI has argued that its statutory responsibilities under the National Highways Authority of India Act, 1988, and the Control of National Highways (Land and Traffic) Act, 2002, primarily involve the development, maintenance and management of highways.

The authority also referred to Section 37 of the 2002 Act, which provides for the removal and detention of animals causing obstruction on highways. It said District Magistrates were notified as Highway Administrations for relevant stretches in October 2025 and are therefore the primary field authorities under the statutory framework. NHAI said it is willing to coordinate with states, local bodies and gaushalas to facilitate the removal and transportation of stray animals. However, it argued that it should not be required to independently establish or operate shelters, gaushalas or transport fleets across the national highway network.

9 foreign nationals held over visa violations

NEW DELHI

Delhi Police detained nine foreign nationals for allegedly overstaying in India or lacking valid travel documents during a verification drive in North Delhi, officials said on Monday.

Police conducted searches in areas including Baba Colony, Chandan Vihar, Pragati Enclave and Maurya Enclave. Officials said several individuals were found with expired visas, while others allegedly failed to produce valid passports or immigration documents. They were produced before the Foreigners Regional Registration Office (FRRO) and transferred to restriction centres for deportation proceedings.

Delhi govt to install solar panels free for 2.25 lakh homes

NEW DELHI

Delhi Chief Minister Rekha Gupta on Monday announced a dedicated portal for residents to register under the PM Surya Ghar Muft Bijli Yojana, with the Delhi government set to bear the full cost of installing rooftop solar panels up to 3 kW. The initiative will cover 2.25 lakh homes across the national capital for eligible households across the national capital at zero cost to selected Delhi residents.

Gupta said installations will be carried out on a first-come, first-served basis. Eligible residents can register online through the newly launched portal to avail themselves of the scheme. The government said consumers will not have to pay anything for solar panels installed up to the specified capacity.

Describing the programme as a major step towards promoting green energy in Delhi, Gupta said it would directly benefit residents. She also criticised previous governments, saying they had followed the "politics of freebies", while the current administration was pursuing the "politics of development". She said the solar initiative would contribute significantly to green energy generation in the capital.

Tamil Nadu CM reviews free bus scheme ahead launch

CHENNAI

Tamil Nadu Chief Minister C Joseph Vijay on Monday chaired a review meeting on preparations for the "Vettri Payanam" free bus travel scheme for women, which is scheduled to be launched on October 2. The scheme was announced in the Assembly on August 24 and will expand the existing free travel facility for women to additional categories of buses operated by the state's seven transport corporations. Currently, women can travel free in ordinary city buses and ordinary hill-area buses for journeys up to 40 km. Under Vettri Payanam, the facility will cover Express, LSS and Deluxe buses in metropolitan and urban areas, as well as Mofussil Ordinary and Ghat Ordinary buses operating beyond 40 km in hill areas. A total of 12,692 buses, or 69 per cent of the 18,413 scheduled buses operated by the seven transport corporations, will be covered under the scheme. Of the 1,65,312 scheduled single services, 1,65,312 singles, or 85 per cent, will operate under the programme. Around 84.32 lakh women are expected to benefit from the scheme every day, according to the government.

The linking of Electronic Ticketing Machines with buses covered under Vettri Payanam has been completed. Testing and verification are scheduled to be completed by September 25, followed by a trial run on September 27.

The government said the scheme is intended to improve access to public transport for women across the state.

Orange alert issued in Kerala as flash floods kill 5

THIRUVANANTHAPURAM

The India Meteorological Department (IMD) on Monday issued an orange alert for six districts in Kerala, warning of heavy to very heavy rainfall, even as five people were killed in flash floods in Malappuram's Nilambur area.

The orange alert covers Pathanamthitta, Alappuzha, Kottayam, Idukki, Ernakulam and Thrissur. The IMD forecast rainfall between 115.6 mm and 204.4 mm over 24 hours in these districts, with thunderstorms and surface winds of up to 40 kmph likely at isolated places. The remaining eight districts are under a yellow alert.

The weather warning comes a day after a sudden flash flood swept through the Kottapuzha River near the TK Colony eco-tourism centre in Nilambur.

YSRCP seeks CBI probe into Mega DSC sports quota recruitment

VIJAYAWADA

YSRCP leaders and workers staged a protest near the Sports Authority of Andhra Pradesh office in Vijayawada demanding a CBI investigation into alleged irregularities in Mega DSC-2025, particularly recruitment under the sports quota.

The protesters also sought the resignation of Andhra Pradesh Education Minister Nara Lokesh. Police erected barricades to prevent the demonstrators from reaching the SAAP office, leading to tense scenes in the Labbipet area. Police used a lathi-charge while dispersing the protesters and detained several leaders and activists.

According to a statement issued by the YSRCP, its leaders questioned the use of police force during what they described as a peaceful protest and demanded an independent investigation into the recruitment process. Party PAC member and former Vinukonda MLA Bolla Brahmanaidu called for a comprehensive CBI probe to establish the facts and ensure justice for deserving candidates.

The party also alleged that people linked to the Telugu Desam Party entered the SAAP premises posing as teachers and attacked YSRCP activists and student-wing leaders with sticks. The allegations could not be independently verified from the report.

YSRCP leaders further alleged that police failed to prevent the clashes and instead used force against their workers. Police also stopped several party leaders travelling to Vijayawada from different districts.

Former minister Ambati Rambabu and other leaders were intercepted near Kaza Toll Plaza and taken to Pedakakani Police Station, while Jakkampudi Raja, Perni Krishna Murthy and others were detained at Krishnalanka Police Station, according to the party.

YSRCP reiterated its demand for a CBI investigation into the sports quota selections and called for the recruitment process to be examined to ensure qualified candidates receive justice.

The controversy has involved allegations of irregularities, bribery, nepotism, paper leaks and opaque evaluation, which remain subject to investigation.

GANESH IMMERSION DISPUTE

Protesters demand water for Ganesh idol immersion

KARIMNAGAR

Tensions surfaced at the Chintakunta canal in Telangana's Karimnagar on Monday after BJP workers and members of Hindu organisations staged a protest demanding the release of water for Ganesh idol immersion.

The protesters raised slogans against the state government over the shortage of water at the designated immersion point. The situation escalated after police intervened to disperse the demonstrators. Police detained several protesters and shifted them to nearby police stations. Visuals from the spot purportedly showed police personnel using force against some protesters. Further details on whether anyone was injured were awaited.

The protest came amid concerns over water availability at the Chintakunta canal ahead of Ganesh idol immersion. The issue has already prompted political leaders and local representatives to call for the release of water into the canal to ensure adequate levels for the immersion of a large number of idols.

Earlier on September 15, Karimnagar MLA Gangula Kamalakara inspected the Chintakunta immersion point and urged authorities to release water from the Sri Ram Sagar Project (SRSP). He said around 700 to 800 idols were expected to be immersed at the location and suggested that water be released in advance.

Union Minister of State for Home Affairs and Karimnagar MP Bandi Sanjay Kumar had also inspected immersion arrangements earlier this month. He directed officials to ensure sufficient water availability and urged them to release water several days before the immersion.

The Chintakunta SRSP canal has been among Karimnagar's designated immersion points for several years, along with Manakondur and Kothapalli water bodies. Authorities have previously installed cranes, barricades and lighting and arranged sanitation facilities, police personnel and swimmers at the immersion locations.

The issue has gained urgency this year amid reports of low water levels in canals and water bodies in Karimnagar and neighbouring areas. The shortage has raised concerns about the safe immersion of hundreds of Ganesh idols.

Karimnagar Police Commissioner Gaush Alam also inspected immersion points earlier this week and directed municipal, revenue and electricity officials to coordinate preparations and prevent untoward incidents.

Police action during Monday's protest and the water arrangements for the immersion are now being monitored as authorities prepare for the festival.

DMK MLA Markandeyan alleges neglect of public welfare

THOOTHUKUDU

DMK MLA from Vilathikulam GV Markandeyan on Sunday accused the Tamil Nadu government of neglecting public welfare works and alleged that greater priority was being given to entertainment, tours and leisure activities.

Speaking to reporters in Vilathikulam, Markandeyan said adequate precautionary measures had not been taken despite a recent review meeting on preparations for the northeast monsoon. He alleged that sluice gates of irrigation tanks and breaches in village water bodies remained unrepaired, potentially affecting livelihoods during the monsoon.

The MLA also claimed that only 10 to 20 per cent of the required water was being supplied under the combined drinking water scheme, resulting in shortages in several areas. He further alleged that frequent power cuts and low voltage were damaging electrical appliances in households. Markandeyan said the government was not paying adequate attention to electricity, roads, highways, irrigation, rural development and drinking water supply.

KTR calls congress dangerous over Telangana water crisis

HYDERABAD

Bharat Rashtra Samithi working president KT Rama Rao on Monday demanded that the Telangana government announce a clear schedule for releasing irrigation water from the Jurla project, alleging that farmers were facing distress despite water availability. Rao accused the Congress government of mishandling water resources and claimed that Telangana received 250 TMC of Krishna water this year but used only 28 TMC. He alleged that more than 100

KTR accused the Telangana government of water mismanagement, demanding irrigation water release and additional supplies to protect farmers' crops.

TMC flowed downstream to Andhra Pradesh, while farmers in the Jurla command area struggled to protect their crops. Rao also said water was available upstream at Almati and Narayanpur in Karnataka and urged Telangana to seek additional supplies. He claimed that around 150 TMC was stored there and said securing 5 to 10 TMC could help protect farmers' October crops. He also demanded efforts to obtain water from Karnataka. The BRS leader further alleged that several party leaders were arrested or placed under house detention after seeking water release from Jurla. He claimed farmers attempting to open project gates were booked in cases and that barricades and police personnel were deployed around the project.

Rao said around 9 TMC of water was available in the Jurla project and questioned why it was not being released for the ayacut. He argued that about 2 TMC was needed for drinking-water requirements and said the remaining water could support irrigation needs and help protect crops in the region during the current crop season directly there. The Telangana government's position on the allegations was not included in the material provided. Rao urged the administration to address the issue and focus on protecting standing crops.

Allahabad HC orders probe into NLU allegations

PRAYAGRAJ

The Allahabad High Court has ordered an independent inquiry into allegations of caste-based humiliation and discrimination against students at Dr Rajendra Prasad National Law University, Prayagraj, and directed the re-evaluation of certain answer sheets. A single-judge Bench of Justice Vinod Diwakar issued the directions while hearing a writ petition filed by a PhD research scholar and a fifth-semester B.A. LL.B. (Hons.) student. The petitioners alleged that academic and administrative authority had been used by the Head of the Department of Law and the Warden of the Boys' Hostel for caste-based humiliation and retaliation. The court directed the university Vice-Chancellor to constitute an independent committee to re-evaluate the answer sheets of the fifth-semester student in subjects taught and evaluated by Dr Deepak Sharma, along with any other subjects identified by the student. The identities of the student and original evaluator must be masked, while the original marks will not be disclosed to the committee.

The committee has been directed to complete the re-evaluation and submit its report to the Vice-Chancellor within one week. The Vice-Chancellor must then place the report before the High Court at the next hearing. For examining the allegations, the court appointed Archana Singh-I, Judge, Small Cause Court, District Court, Prayagraj, and Arun Kumar Yadava, Special Chief Judicial Magistrate, Prayagraj, to conduct an inquiry. They will examine whether Scheduled Caste and Scheduled Tribe students faced caste-based humiliation or discrimination and whether their complaints were handled according to applicable regulations. The inquiry officers can record statements from the petitioners and other persons, including Dr Sharma, and seek university records. The Registrar was directed to provide full cooperation. Before making any adverse finding, the officers must give the concerned person an opportunity to explain. The court also ordered protection of the identities of students giving evidence amid concerns about possible retaliation.

Delhi court revives complaint against Sonia Gandhi

A Delhi court on Monday set aside a magistrate's order dismissing a complaint against Congress leader Sonia Gandhi over allegations concerning her inclusion in an electoral roll in 1980, three years before she acquired Indian citizenship. Special Judge Vishal Gogne of the Rouse Avenue Court directed the matter to be heard afresh by the magistrate and ordered that a police status report be called for. The next hearing has been scheduled for September 29. The complaint, filed by Vikas Tripathi, alleges that Gandhi's name was included in the electoral roll in 1980 and subsequently deleted in 1982 before being re-entered in 1983. Tripathi has alleged that forged documents were used in connection with the voter registration. Gandhi acquired Indian citizenship on April 30, 1983, according to the complainant's submission. The allegations have not been established in court. The magistrate had dismissed the complaint earlier this month, citing a lack of cogent evidence to establish that Gandhi had forged documents to enrol herself as a voter. The magistrate had also questioned the legal basis of the complaint. Judge Gogne, however, found shortcomings in the earlier order, describing it as "non-speaking" on whether the allegations disclosed a cognisable offence. The court said the magistrate had not adequately considered the documents presented by the complainant or obtained a status report from the investigating officer. The court also held that the Election Commission's role in preparing electoral rolls does not automatically prevent police from investigating allegations involving possible fraudulent inclusion or forged documents. Gandhi's lawyers rejected the allegations, describing the complaint as politically motivated and lacking documentary evidence of manipulation or forgery. They argued that electoral-roll matters fall within the Election Commission's statutory functions. The court's order does not determine whether the allegations against Gandhi are true. The matter will now return to the magistrate for fresh consideration.

Nepal's Gen Z demands climate accountability

KATHMANDU
Nepal's young generation is increasingly raising its voice against countries and companies it believes have contributed heavily to global climate change, as the Himalayan nation faces growing disasters linked to a warming planet. Gen Z activists are demanding greater responsibility from industrialised nations and calling for climate reparations to help vulnerable countries deal with mounting losses.Nepal is highly exposed to the effects of climate change despite contributing only a small share of global greenhouse gas emissions. Rising temperatures, changing rainfall patterns, floods, landslides, glacial lake outbursts and other climate-related events are placing pressure on communities, infrastructure and livelihoods across the country. Young activists argue that countries with long histories of high emissions should provide financial assistance to nations suffering the consequences of climate change. Their campaign reflects a wider global debate over climate justice, in which developing countries seek support for both adaptation and recovery from climate-related losses.However, persuading industrialised powers to accept climate reparations remains difficult. There is no international consensus on which countries should be responsible for payments, how contributions should be calculated or which climate-related losses should qualify for compensation. Wealthier countries have also faced questions about the legal and financial implications of establishing such a system.Nepal's Gen Z movement is therefore seeking to bring greater public attention to the issue, using youth activism to connect local climate disasters with the wider global emissions debate.

Meloni plans burqa ban in Italian schools

ROME

Italian Prime Minister Giorgia Meloni has announced plans to introduce measures that would restrict the wearing of burqas in schools and limit the number of foreign students in individual classrooms.

Speaking at the annual gathering of the youth wing of her Brothers of Italy party, Meloni said her government would soon present the proposed measures to the Cabinet. The announcement comes as her administration continues to focus on immigration, integration and national identity.

Meloni administration's ongoing focus centers heavily on immigration, social integration, and strengthening national identity.

The proposed restriction on burqas would affect face-covering garments worn by some Muslim women. Details of the planned measure, including how it would be enforced and whether it would apply to all educational institutions, are expected to emerge when the government formally presents the proposal.

Meloni also announced plans to introduce limits on the number of foreign students who can be placed in a single class. The government has argued that managing the concentration of pupils from different linguistic and cultural backgrounds is important for schools and educational outcomes.

The proposals are likely to generate debate in Italy over immigration, religious freedom, integration and the role of schools. Supporters of restrictions on face-covering garments have previously cited security and communication concerns, while critics have raised questions about religious rights and discrimination.Italy has experienced continuing debate over immigration as the country remains an important entry point for migrants arriving in Europe. Meloni's government has pursued policies aimed at tightening migration controls while also addressing integration and demographic challenges.The latest proposals underline the government's broader approach to immigration and cultural integration. However, the measures will need to go through the Cabinet and any required legislative or administrative procedures before becoming effective. Further details on their scope and implementation are expected after the government formally considers them.

Typhoon Dujuan brings heavy rain across Japan

TOKYO

Heavy rain and strong winds battered parts of Japan on Monday as Typhoon Dujuan moved toward the country's eastern Pacific coast, prompting warnings of flooding, landslides and dangerous weather conditions.

Japan's Meteorological Agency said Dujuan was located about 100 km west-southwest of Hachijo Island in the Izu Island chain near Tokyo at 10 a.m. local time. The typhoon was moving north at 25 km per hour, with a central atmospheric pressure of 960 hectopascals and maximum gusts of up to 198 km per hour.

The year's 25th typhoon was forecast to pass near the Boso Peninsula in Chiba Prefecture, east of Tokyo, from Monday evening into late night. Heavy downpours had already affected the Kantō-Koshin region in eastern Japan and the Tokai region in central Japan. Several cities in Chiba reported road inundation, while the weather agency issued a level 4 landslide alert for parts of the prefecture.

The agency forecast up to 350 mm of rainfall in the Tokai region and 300 mm in the Kanto region and Izu Island chain during the 24 hours through 6 a.m. Tuesday. Up to 200 mm of rain was expected in the Tohoku region in north-eastern Japan.

The typhoon also disrupted transportation across affected areas. Some highways were closed, while bullet train services between Tokyo and western Japan faced possible delays and cancellations. Authorities urged residents to monitor weather updates and take precautions, particularly in areas vulnerable to flooding and landslides.

The storm's arrival coincided with a five-day holiday period in Japan, raising concerns over travel disruptions. Authorities advised people to consider postponing travel plans in areas facing severe weather.
